A large percentage of graduating Science Majors further their college education, and 1962 is no exception. Geology Major Leo Hickey will study at Princeton, and Physics Majors Michael Cambria and Edmond Jensen attend Penn State and Connecticut respectively. Chemistry Major James O'Malley will be found at Syracuse University's State College of Forestry. Other graduate Chemists include John Meehan (Carnegie Tech) and Michael Stemniski (Fordham).

Arts Majors who will supplement four years at Villanova by attending Ivy League Colleges include Francis DeFabbio (Cornell); Dominic Minerva (Columbia); and Joseph Massey (Yale). John Simone (Catholic U.); Joseph Zawacki (Temple); Thomas Morre and Richard Martin (Pittsburgh); Anthony Coccia (Delaware); and Eugene D'Aquili (Penn).

These round out the list of those certain of the grad schools they will attend at the present time.

The Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President confers nursing pin on senior nurse Mary Fay at Pinning Ceremonies held last Sunday.

Graduating Nurses Honored At Second Pinning Ceremony

The Second annual Pinning Ceremony of the Division of Nursing was held on Sunday, May 20, in the University Chapel.

The ceremony, initiated last year by Miss Marian Schrum, Dean of the Division of Nursing, is held to confer university pins to the graduating nurses. Formerly, nursing students were honored at the beginning of their sophomore year by the presentation of caps, rather than at the end of their senior year, when pins are conferred.

The program began with a processional into the Chapel at 2:30 p.m. The seniors, forsaking their blue Villanova nursing student uniforms, were dressed in the white dress symbolic of their profession. They wore the Villanova nurses' caps which along with the pin, is part of the permanent uniform.

The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, blessed the pins, and then placed one on each senior's uniform. The Villanova Singers sang for the occasion.

Seniors receiving pins were: Mary Louise Antonini, Florence Irene Benas, Josephine Morello Carmosky, Sandra Mary Cowhig, Judith Ann DiStefano, Patricia Louise Duffey, Mary Rosetta Fay, Joan Catherine Gadren, Mary Elizabeth Gamber, Patricia Ann Heap, Judith Mary Jones, Mary Frances Kleha, Judith Althea Koscielniak, Mary Elizabeth McConaghy McGinnis, Anne Mary McCrea, Edith Rose Mihaly, Janet Amelia Pomponio, Marilyn Rushin Roszkowski, Catherine Anne Rucker, Mary Louise Scanlan, Margaret Jane Sharkey, Phyllis A. Taylor, Constance Mary Vivino, and Johanna Augusta Yahner.

the student body. I would like all students interested in NFCCS to contact me by placing their names in the NFCCS mailbox in the Student Council office in Dougherty Hall."

New business was for the most part an aftermath of the NFCCS debate of the previous meeting. Defeated were motions that the NFCCS be responsible to the Vice President for Student Affairs or that it be directly responsible to an advisory committee consisting of several of the various chairmen in the congress.

Monthly Report

Passed was a motion to require NFCCS to submit a monthly report to the Congress on its activities.

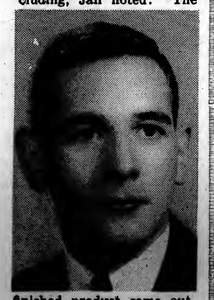
Other major business included the announcement of the executive vice-presidents for next year's Congress. James McErlane will be VP for Educational Affairs, James Howley for Student Affairs, and Bill DiPaolo for Student Government.

Chairman Announced

Jim McErlane announced Al LaMastra as chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, Peter Theiss and John Smock as Religious Affairs Co-chairmen, and John Gallante and Dick McIntyre as Cultural Affairs Co-chairmen.

The chairmen under Bill DiPaolo will be Bob Mairone and Fran Kelleher, Social Affairs Committee, and Jim Tate, Elections Committee.

Working under the Vice-President for Student Affairs will be James O'Conner and Neal Stoneback, Students Activities Co-Chairmen, Rich Connors and Tom Furst, Publicity and Special Problems co-chairmen, and Rich Billon, and Art Christiano Movie Committee chairmen.



Portrette

The publication of this year's Belle Air, on May 25th, will mark the realization of a long sought goal for the yearbook staff members. A host of contributors have spent countless hours in compiling this record of the Class of 1962, but one individual stands out as the coordinator and director of all their efforts. He is the editor-in-chief of the Belle Air, Jan Garigliano. His enthusiastic leadership and untiring efforts in this important and time consuming activity, give promise that this year's Belle Air will be one of the finest Villanova has seen.

Rifle Team

Besides his position as editor-in-chief of the yearbook, Jan is a member of the highly rated Varsity Rifle Team. Recently he was awarded a trophy for high average on this year's team. Garigliano is also captain of the Navy Rifle Team, treasurer of the Semper Fidelis Society, and a member of the Executive Council of DPM fraternity.

Commenting on the Belle Air, Jan said: "The campus reaction to the yearbook will be very good. No one will say that this is just another yearbook. It's the type of book that people will like or they won't like. The general theme will be the three seasons at Villanova. Each section will include the events and activities which occur during one of the seasons. There will be a special six page section on Homecoming and the class history will be recorded on gatefold pages. The sports coverage is exceptionally good because we've had a lot to write about and some excellent pictures." In concluding, Jan noted: "The finished product came out very well and we think the campus will receive it well."

Psychology Major

Jan, a native of Bedford Hills, New York, is a psychology major. He plans to enter the Aviation Marine Corps at Pensacola Florida on June 20. After the service, Jan eyes a return to school for graduate work in psychology.

Post Graduate Aid Lectures Junior Class On Grad Fellowships

Dr. B. J. Bedard, Advisor for Post Graduate Study at Villanova, last week addressed prospective graduate students concerning the opportunities which are open for graduate study.

At the lecture Dr. Bedard expressed his desire for closer student-faculty relations. He explained that the opinions of the individual faculty members carry considerable weight in applying for graduate study courses.

Post Office Annex Opens In Tolentine; Two Daily Deliveries

The United States Post Office has recently opened an annex in the basement of Tolentine Hall. This new annex is maintained as a distribution outlet for the mail of the University students. The Post Office Boxes which were formerly located in the Post Office in the Pennsylvania Railroad Station are now in Tolentine Hall.

Regular Hours

The new facility is open for the duration of regular postal hours and deliveries of mail are currently being made at 9:00 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. with the opening of the annex students are no longer able to have boxes at the main office but only at the annex. Window service is available from 8-9:30 a.m. and 3-4 p.m.

"Well, they've finally achieved total disarmament!"

Power Wins Out

Last Tuesday the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in its primary elections nominated two men for its governorship post. The outcomes of the primaries clearly illustrate the demonstrative power of the political machines.

Some time ago the men who wield the power in both parties had settled upon the candidates who would be supported by the party machine. William Scranton, a relative new-comer to the political scene, handily defeated his two Republican opponents who did not have the assistance and support of the state organization.

Richardson Dilworth, former Democratic Mayor of Philadelphia, in his third bid for the gubernatorial position did likewise, despite previous opposition of the Philadelphia party boss William Green. In the primary election, the results gave Scranton an approximate 100,000 vote margin.

This fact can possibly be attributed to a split within the Republican ranks. There was as a result more effort to bring the Republican voter to the polls for the election.

Nonetheless, Scranton seems to have an advantage over his opponent in the fall election. Dilworth's personality and name-calling has helped to alienate several sections of the state.

For example, Dilworth uttered several inconsistencies and remarks which, in all probability, damaged him politically. The citizens of Scranton's home-county have been labeled "serfs" on one occasion by the former Philadelphia mayor. He has also reversed his stand on the admission of Red China into the United Nations Assembly.

Scranton, however, has had little experience in government other than the last two years as a congressman.

At this early date, it appears that Scranton has the edge. This conjecture is merely speculation. The campaign from now until the election could very well either turn the tables or widen the gap between the two.

"War Is Peace"

by Frank Quattrone

What is all this nonsense about disarmament? about the need for an effective checking system? Who needs it? Could it be that the leaders of the two great super-powers of our advanced age fail to see the necessity for continuing the armaments race? the necessity for accelerating it?

Don't they realize what a blow to their sound economies disarmament would be? Just imagine, in both nations in the millions of laborers thrown out of good-paying jobs, the number of heavy industries folding due to the relaxation of tensions, the utter boredom of peace itself!

Ever since Prometheus rebelled against the gods and presented his epochal gift of fire to mankind, nothing has so fascinated and delighted man as his own genious in devising newer and quicker means of destroying his neighbor and himself.

And now . . . now that he is at the threshold of his most delightful, most ingenious, most powerful, and most destructive discovery . . . the leaders of these great powers decide to sit down at some smoky conference table to indulge in their most frivolous of pastimes.

What has happened to logic? to the reason that supposedly distinguishes man from less intelligent though more fortunate animals? It is so clear. As the prophetic writer, Eric Blair, once noted in one of his more profound novels, "War is Peace!"

What could be simpler? Cut the disarmament talks . . . up the arms race. Then we could completely eliminate the need for one nation to maintain a system of checks upon another. We could eliminate unemployment, recession, insecurity, boredom, and unhappiness.

But the moment for decision — for action — is now. Let us not wait and learn only when it is too late the meaning of Thomas Paine's words: "Time makes more converts than reason."

Counterpoint

Unfortunate Destruction

by Joseph A. McCarthy II

Recently, the Junior class held its annual Dinner-Dance as the highlight of its Junior Week Activities. This year the officers of the class and chairmen for the event secured The Downingtown Motor Inn for the Dinner-Dance. The Inn is a plush, expensive motel designed to accommodate the best.

And for once, the Inn satisfied almost everybody. There were no complaints about its food, service, accomodations etc. It had appeared that the Junior Dinner-Dance had been a qualified success.

Letter Received

All seemed well, that is until the receipt of a letter by the President of the class indicating that some thoughtless members of his class had taken advantage of the Inn's hospitality. The letter was very polite, it seems, but nevertheless, firm in expressing the management's viewpoint that they be reembursed for the damage done to their rooms.

Although concealed by the officers of the class for probably valid reasons in the long run, the letter is said to contain various allegations of damage done to the individual rooms of the motel and of questionable behavior by those having parties after the Dinner-Dance was completed.

Ice Picks

Some of the concrete accusations made were ice picks being thrust in the doors, various damage done to the wall-to-wall carpeting, and the complaints of other guests staying at the motel concerning parties that went somewhat beyond the normal bounds of ordinary intelligence and decorum.

Also an approximate three hundred dollars worth of incidental destruction was noted by the motel management to the ballroom in which the dinner and dance were held. This expense must be borne by the class treasury.

Initiative

The other expenses to the individual rooms, amounting to about two hundred and fifty, has been supposedly collected by the President of the class from the parties involved. Could it be that he felt this action was necessary since there was apparently a lack of insight into the possible developments.

Notice should have been given to the class that the reserving of rooms in that motel would be forbidden. This would serve to alleviate the close proximity of parties and the freedom from the obligation of driving to a more distant get-together in which case one would find it much more necessary to be in a sober state.

Future Events

Although the letter did not put off the chances of having future events at the Inn in the future, it certainly does not help the future classes of Villanova when they are in a position to seek someplace for their own activities. In all there should have been some thought given to the situation before again tarnishing Villanova's reputation at affairs of this type.

Otherwise Successful

It might also be mentioned that an otherwise successful evening could be marred by some irresponsible few is but a sad eulogy for Villanova as a while. True, next year's activities for the juniors will need and might even get the guiding hand that is needed from their own officers in future events.

Letters To The Editor

To the Students of Villanova:

The National Federation of Catholic College Students is a union of students in Catholic colleges. It was organized by a group of student goverments. When a student government of a school affiliates with the Federation each student in that college becomes a member of the Federation. The objectives of the Federation are to contribute to the social and intellectual development of the whole and complete individual, to develop a competent, vocal Catholic laity, and an active Apostalate among its members.

The Federation, working through the student councils in member schools, seeks to achieve its goals by involving students in intellectual dialogues and public service projects of a practical nature.

During the coming year NFCCS projects will include work with the Casa del Carmen and Big Brother programs, and a series of panel discussions, debates, and seminars on the Social Teachings of the Church.

As well as implementing the Federation's programs, the campus unit hopes to further strengthen the NFCCS nucleus at Villanova next year and create a better appreciation of the Federation among the general student body. Any student who is interested in the administration of NFCCS on the campus, regional, or national level, is encouraged to discuss the opportunities in the NFCCS with the Senior Delegate who may be reached in the Student Council office.

Next year NFCCS will seek the cooperation of the campus organizations in implementing its programs. NFCCS is a valuable service provided by the Student Council for the benefit of the Student Body. Its effectiveness will depend upon the readiness of the Student body to take advantage of the programs the Federation offers.

John Neary
Senior Delegate

To the Editor:

In your editorial headed "Volley Balls and Telephones" which appeared in the VILLANOVAN of May 16, you paint a rather drab portrait of the Villanova student. Let us examine the lighter side of the issue.

At the same time that the volley ball court was erected between Sullivan and the Annex, a similar one was set up alongside Fedigan. Since that time, you state that certain vandalism has occured on the Sullivan court. Meanwhile, here at Fedigan, the ball is intact and the court is just as it was, save for the grass which has been trampled by many feet.

Consider the second part of your indictment! There are four telephones located in Fedigan. All were in working order in September when we moved in, and all are still in working order now that we are about to move out. There are no smashed or missing receivers, no broken phones.

In the light of this evidence is your condemnation proper? Isn't it just possible that a few are creating the damage and participating in the vandalism? All too often, a group is blamed for the actions of some of its members. Let's not be so hasty to condemn all Villanovans.

Alumni Association Notes

AA Activities Varied

by Jim McMonagle

Among the varied activities of our Alumni Association, there are several which directly affect the undergraduate students. These have come about with the Association's increasing awareness of the importance of preparing the student for active membership in his Alumni Association.

Presently, the newly formed Student-Liason Committee of the Alumni Association is actively engaged in initiating many of these new ideas which will make the transition from student to Alumnus a pleasant one. This committee is made up of three members of the Alumni and two student members, Marty Whelan and Jim McMonagle.

The first affair sponsored by this committee was a social gathering at the Alumni House, attended by members of the Senior Steering Committee and by officers of the General Alumni Association, including Frank Solis, President. At this meeting the Seniors were given the opportunity to examine the Alumni Association and its functions.

Ideas

It also gave the Alumni Officers the chance to find out many of the constructive ideas and complaints that were readily offered by the Seniors. The amiable atmosphere was maintained by the consuming of a liberal amount of refreshments.

Some of the proposed activities, which are up before the Board of Governors for approval, include the following:

1. An Alumni sponsored luncheon every April for all the

The Last Lap, Look Back, And On We Go.....

By Adam Wright

We are about to leave Villanova. We shall leave, no doubt, with mixed emotions. For along with the joy we feel upon completing this task of our college years, we look back with nostalgia at friends gained and tasks undertaken. We wonder whether we shall see the old friends as time goes on, and we wonder how those who come after us at Villanova will cope with those tasks of student life which we have undertaken. Looking back on our college life and especially at those positions of responsibility which we have held in the student community, we recognize both the mistakes and the contributions we have made. We hope that those who come after us will continue the traditions which we have carried on and helped to build. And we hope that they will recognize and profit by our mistakes.

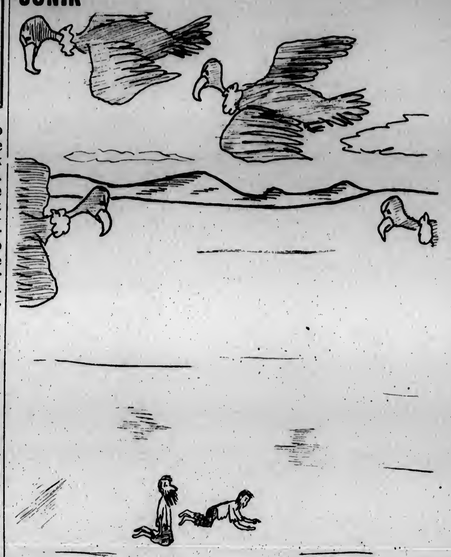
Learning by Mistakes

In contemplating our mistakes, we recognize them as part of our education. The right to act has been the right to make mistakes. The right to make mistakes has been the right to learn. The prerequisite to both of these rights is the freedom which the University has both permitted and moderated.

This leads us to ask another question: What have we gained in our years at Villanova? For each of us who are about to leave the answer to this question will differ. But for all, this answer may apply.

We have accumulated a small degree of factual knowledge. Somewhat to our surprise, we do not profess to know as much now as we did as Freshmen. We have learned to know how much we do not know.

Reference and Values



But perhaps most important of the things we have attained at Villanova are these: a frame of reference and a Christian sense of values. The two go hand in hand. They provide us with a basis on which to evaluate the conditions and situations which will confront each of us throughout his life. They enable us to judge and act correctly. They are a source of enrichment to each of us, a framework within which each day may become meaningful.

We have been in the Liberal Arts division, and have had the greatest opportunity which Villanova can afford to develop sound human values. But we are certain that each of our classmates has had this opportunity to a sufficient degree for his own purposes. Whether all of our classmates have made use of this opportunity, or whether all will apply this knowledge, we do not know. We can only hope that they will,

A Campus Newspaper

For four years we have been connected with the VILLANOVAN. We have seen it under the direction of the unbounded energy of Larry O'Rourke, the quiet efficiency of Tom Wolf, the dry humor and penetrating perception of Jim McAteer, and inimitable rascality of Dan Grove. We leave as the direction of the VILLANOVAN passes to Ed Farrell. We feel confident in promising Villanova an efficient, objective, and perhaps immovable VILLANOVAN in the year to come.

New Expanded Lynx Shows Quality In Stories And Promise In Poems

by Paul DeMuro

The Spring edition of the Lynx arrived on the campus this week. Due to the unusually, and refreshingly, large number of contributions it is impossible to comment on each piece. Omissions are not indicative of a slighting opinion of the work. Rather, those works have been mentioned which together provide an idea of the scope of the issue.

I-Poetry. The poetry of the Lynx falls generally into three classifications. First there is a type of poetry which displays light ideas set down in more or less poetic fashion. This classification might be given the heading of verse, since it is lacking that unique depth of thought and feeling which ultimately separates good verse from poetry.

Under this heading one could list such poems as "The Zoo" by Daniel Martin, "Growth," and "On Me" by Brian McCarthy. These poems echo thoughts all of us have felt at some time or another, and they are enjoyable to read.

The second class of poetry is delineated from the first group by a certain depth of perception displayed by the poet. Daniel Martin's "Aquilo Stridens," although its meaning at times becomes veiled, seems to achieve this more demanding standard of poetry. Leonard F. Galiulo also displays a sensitive and perceptive awareness in his poem "Blues for Parker." Before judging this work I suggest that it be read aloud, for then it is very effective. If one receives any aesthetic pleasure from Bill Huttanus's "Dead 'Til Spring" it will be a minor miracle, since numerous printing errors occur throughout the poem. This is unfortunate, for these errors really hurt the value of the poem. In its corrected version "Dead 'Til Spring" belongs to that class of poetry which exhibits some measure of true poetic warmth.

The final classification of poetry in the Lynx is concerned with the highly imitative, impressionistic poems. Not that imitation, in itself, is wrong; most art of necessity must have some imitative element inherent in it. I speak, however, of the "hip" poems which have for their form disconnected prose statements scattered on the page in the manner of a Norman Mailer or an e e cummings. True, the form is striking, but is this poetry? To use an analogy from music —does the high "C" above high "C" that Maynard Ferguson hits constitute modern Jazz?

In the same vein words oddly placed on a page do not make a modern poem. Unfortunately the Lynx has more than its share of this type of "poetry."

II-Prose. Heenan's "A Quiet Shout" is in a class by itself. If its author considers this piece a poem, then it falls under the third catalog of poetry. On the other hand, if Mr. Heenan considers it prose, then I ask only one favor of him—please punctuate!

Mr. Welch's "Voices in the Night" is an interesting and different story of night life in a hospital. Frank Murphy's Spy Wednesday" and William Cercone's "The Window" both lack the concise isolation of a human emotion which is necessary for a dramatic short story.

Kane, Voelcker, MacDonald

An effective characterization of a type person we all know is successfully conveyed by Richard Kane in his "King Cool"; "Marquis" by Sorenson MacDonald is perhaps the best story in the Lynx. Its higher individualized style and structure render it highly readable and enjoyable.

H. Patrick Voelcker's "Logan" suffers from its positioning as the last story of a trilogy in which youthful male heroes kill a schoolmaster ("Spy Wednesday"), a prostitute ("The Window"), and a parent ("Logan"). As always Mr. Voelcker's lyric style flows effortlessly and, in justice, it must be said that he has more meaning in his work than most student authors.

On the whole the Lynx leaves one with the impression of a college literary magazine whose content shows signs of talent—granted an underveloped. imitative talent, but more importantly a highly promising one.

"Pseudo-Niks" In The Coffee Houses

By Art Molitierno

A funny thing happened to me while walking around town last weekend. I met a middle-aged Negro who told me, as he put it, "I play the blues."

I met Williams outside a coffee house in downtown Philadelphia. We just happened to strike up a conservation while standing outside listening to the music. He told me of his plans for playing and singing the blues in other cities in the United States and how the people generally accepted his type of "old blues." This conversation went on outside while numbers of "pseudo-niks" were entering and leaving the coffee house. Later on one of the biggest "pseudo-niks" I've ever seen came up to us and told Williams, not me, not to loiter around the place. Williams just kind of shied away, but I felt only indifference. The entire incident of the "pseudo-niks" on both the inside and the outside of the place made me sick.

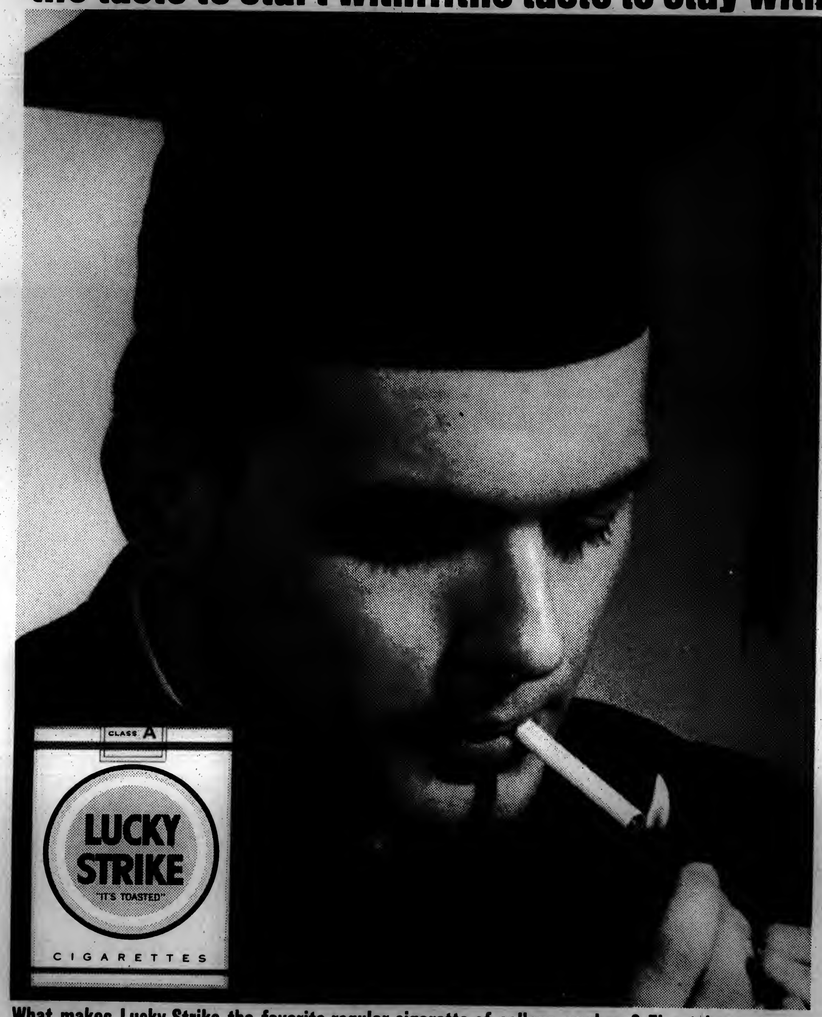
Blues For Hypocrites

Here was an indigent blues player trying to make a living—playing for these false people. Here was a poor man who had been taken advantage of in the prime of his career. He had made records and, at the time they were "cut" there were no such things as royalties. All Williams received for his "cutting" of the record was a paltry fifty dollars. Here was a musician playing the type of music he loved, enjoyed, and lived for. And who was he giving his performance for—a group of people who are nothing but hypocrites.

These "pseudo-niks" I have mentioned, are the people who like to go to coffee houses, jazz concerts, etc., etc. The ones frequenting the coffee houses are particularly pathetic. You can usually find them sitting at a table drinking a cup of espresso, listening to some type of "beat" poetry, or listening to an artist such as Williams perform. They will do all this, and all you will ever here from their lips is, "Man, it's cool." And in actuality they detest espresso, can't stand the sound of some Negro playing "old type blues," and loathe anyone standing in front of an audience and reciting esoteric poetry.

Beer and Concerts



The "pseudo-niks" attending jazz concerts are an altogether different story—they drink. You can always spot this type of hypocrite with the greatest of ease—he is nearly always drunk. It seems a real shame that the only true American form of art that the United States can boast of has to be subjected to such falsity. This condition—drunkness—at jazz concerts is particularly prevalent among the younger set of "pseudo-niks." It seems that every open air concert that is given is merely an other opportunity to drink beer in the "open". The fact is, that these people come to these concerts for the sole purpose of drinking. It is probably too taxing for their educated minds to sit and listen to the performance.

Campus Traveler Flustered By Intramural Time Zone

by Jan Dyroff

Contrary to the beliefs of contemporary cartographers, the International Date Line does not run down the middle of the Pacific Ocean. Quite the contrary is true. It takes a hiatus and zig-zags through the campus here at Villanova University.

If you doubt me, take a close look at the clocks in the buildings. That is, if you are lucky enough to be in a building that has clocks. The clocks in Tolentine Hall say one time, and as you travel north to Mendel Hall you run through at least three different time zones — the Chemical Engineering Building Time Zone, the John Barry Hall Time Zone, and the Mendel Hall Time Zone.

Meridian Time

The same situation exists in all the different buildings. It has been suggested that the time be calculated by noting when the sun passes over each building and take it from there. It is thought that if the Naval Observatory can get the time from when the sun passes over the meridian, it can be done here by taking the time when the sun passes over the roof.

Now this method seems logical and sensible enough, but there is a disadvantage to this. The sun reaches one part of the building before it reaches the other. Perhaps that explains why the clocks at one end of Dougherty Hall don't quite agree with the clocks at the other.

Disastrous Disparity

The problem of disparity among the local time-pieces might not seem too serious at first consideration; in fact it almost seems comic because it's so trivial. But consider what would happen if the clocks in C&F used short minutes and the clocks in Mendel Hall used long minutes (if there are long and short tons, why not long and short minutes?). At first there would only be a small time lag, but, like Topsy, it would grow. From seconds, to minutes, to hours it would grow. Do you realize what could possibly happen? How do you explain to a prof that you are a day or so late for his class because you believed in the wrong clock?

It would seem that there should be some sort of summit conference where all the different parts of the campus would send representatives and hash out this problem. They could go by some standard like a centrally located gigantic hour glass or by an illuminated dial combination sun and moon dial.

Until such a time comes about, there is little that Walter Fe-Heser, average student, can do except maintain the local tradition of a good track team by running to his classes.

'Round Midnight

Stream of Thought

by Joe Zawacki

It begins to tell . . . 'Round Midnight, 'Round Midnight,
I do pretty well . . . til after sundown
Suppertime I'm feeling sad,
But it really gets bad 'Round Midnight.
Memories always start 'Round Midnight . . .

This is where it ends, in the same place it started: 12 o'clock on a warm evening, riding around by your lonesome looking not so much for a story but rather an idea. And what better time to do it than in the hours between 12 and 6.

You think I'm kidding? Try it some time, especially on a Saturday night. People are never so human, so real. You can be happy or sad. It doesn't matter. You'll never feel lonely.

Small World

A ride through center city is the set for the first act, the streets littered with lovers and dates; arm in arm, thought in thought, their whole world consisting of no one but themselves. Krushchev doesn't exist in their minds. He's for other people to worry about.

The cop on the midnight shift knows what it feels like, a vast myriad of images passing by like reflections of light. It used to bug me at one time when I saw a pretty chick in the 18-21 age bracket with either an engagement or wedding ring on her hand. What I mean is, I couldn't see all that beauty going to waste so soon, when there's so much world to see and so little time. Anyway, it doesn't matter. Chicks dumb enough to get married that young wouldn't appreciate anything beautiful!

High and Mighty

Cutting off Walnut Street and down the expressway, you head toward the airport. If you're lucky, you can see the 1:30 plane leaving for K.C. "It's a he'luva sight". I'm not much for envying other people, but it wouldn't take much prompting for me to change places with the pilot. Titov says that he didn't see God when he was orbiting. If you've ever flown at night, you know that he's blind.

Speaking of blind people, one feature I always wanted to do and never got around to was on Sid Mark. For those of you who don't know Sid, he's THE disc jockey on WHAT-FM, the AM-Jazz station. And because I have to tell you who he is, is why I never did the feature.

OT Time

It's about 2 a.m. when you pass the Bulletin on the way back. The last edition has been put to bed and a lot of people will roll out of bed in the morning to read Charlie Brown or Drew Pearson and never know all the work that went into it. "There's a Plymouth in the parking lot with two lovers sharing a smoke. Love works overtime at the newspaper too."

Going up the expressway toward Montgomery Drive, there's a real sweet view of the Art Museum and behind it, the heart of town. It reminds me of the time I met this stewardess, a real introverted chick. She dug the sight almost as much as I dug her. Have you ever met someone and in one night you know all there is to know without her telling you? I don't know what frequency it is, but if Philco ever finds out, they could make TV a thing of the past.

Cutting up the boulevard, it isn't long before the Taconny-Palmyra bridge comes into view. The guy that takes your nickel when you cross into Jersey knows, just like the cop in town.

If I had my way, I'd take Pat Landon's Last Dance segment on WRCV and run it from 12 to 6. The city would make a fortune in one year on the issuing of marriage licenses. "The funny part is that anyone can play mood-type music but not anyone has Pat Landon's taste."

A little after four and the first sign of red is sneaking up on the East side. The same time tomorrow would find the milk man's matinee in progress. They would dig the scene too but when you cop out of bed at the hour they do . . . well, you know.

If there wasn't anything else nice to say about the two years that these scripts have been hacked out, it would still have been worth it just for the people I met. Like the regular Sunday night meeting of the "Unholy Five" at the Red Hill. There's Phil, Hank, Adolph and Joe the owner. To look at them, you wouldn't see anything special, but if you were in a poker game and got dealt four aces, you'd have the pot. Dig? And whoever said that nightclub owners are all jerks has obviously never met the DeLuca's.

There's a 5:30 Mass at our parish. Its a show in itself, the last act for the night owls and the first set for the early birds. I guess you think it's crazy to get up at that hour, but don't knock that kind of crazy until you've tried it. It's 6:00 now and the sun is up.

Catholic Alumni Club Fullfills Obligations For College Grads

Seniors take note of the existence of the Catholic Alumni Club of Philadelphia, an organization for single, Catholic college graduates.

The original idea for the club was inspired by a nun, a history teacher at Immaculata Heart College in Hollywood, California. Great success in the western part of the country stimulated the organization of other clubs throughout the country.

The Alumni Club was approved by the Chancellery Office in 1958. Its constitution recognizes: "a need to increase our knowledge and practice of the Catholic religion; an obligation to be of service to the Church and the community; a desire to better prepare ourselves for our roles in life as members of society; a basic interest in becoming associated with other single Catholic men and women of similar educational background."

Pastor's Approval

Approval of application for membership is subject to affirmation by an applicant's Pastor that he or she is a practicing Catholic and free to marry in the Catholic Church, as well as verification by the college that he or she is a graduate.

Any seniors on the east coast interested in seeking further information should contact Irene C. D'Amato, 8415 Bustleton Avenue, Philadelphia 15, Pennsylvania.

Captain John Boyle, USN, commanding officer of the Villanova NROTC Unit climaxed Armed Forces Week here with an open house at Commodore John Barry Hall this past Saturday.

Under the direction of the Armed Forces Day Project Officer, LCdr. C.R. Stamey, USN, the visitors were able to visit the various classrooms and the armory between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. In keeping with this year's slogan—"Military Power for Peace"—the Naval weapons in the armory were manned by Midshipmen who explained and demonstrated the varied components and their capabilities.

"Le Bistro," a poem by Sophomore Barry Thornton, was chosen by the American College Poetry Society for its spring anthology. Thornton's poem appeared in the Fall issue of the Lynx. This was the first time Villanova was accorded such an honor. Villanova was one of the six Catholic colleges so acclaimed this year. Thornton is Associate Editor for Copy on the Lynx staff.

Mr. Stephen J. Carroll, Assistant Professor of Industrial Management at Villanova, delivered a lecture on "Management and Motivation" Tuesday, April 15th at the C&F School. Introductory remarks were made by Dr. Buford of the English Department.

In summarizing the important theory, research, and thinking in worker motivation, Mr. Carroll discussed the Economic and Psychological - Sociological Concepts of man. He stated that the needs of the worker and management attitudes have a direct influence on productivity. Mr. Carroll made reference to several recent surveys regarding worker motivation. He noted, however, that work in this field is relatively new and that further research should bring more conclusive results.

Booters End With Win Blank Cavalry 3-0; James Lone Scorer

Villanova's rugby team closed out the spring segment of its schedule on a winning note by defeating the Philadelphia City Cavalry team by a 3-0 count on May 12.

Considered to be a rebuilding year, the team wound up the season with a 4-4-1 record and bright hopes for the future.

The only tally of the game was pushed across at the 25 minute point of the first half for a thirty yard scoring jaunt down the right hand side. The extra was missed from the right side but the lone marker was made to stand up the rest of the when Tom James carried the ball away with a fine defensive effort.

The team takes the field again on June 9 to play the Philadelphia AC as part of the Alumni Weekend festivities.

Captain Ralph Lewis leads the four seniors to graduation. All eleven other starters are slated to return and bolster future prospects.

Softball Playoffs And Track End Intramural Activities

With the end of the school year rapidly approaching, the Intramural Department is ending its activities with the softball playoffs. Unfortunately, the results of the playoffs were not, as yet, available, but round two held on Tuesday, May 15, went as follows: at 4:30 on Austin Field the winner of the 4:30 Mendel league played the winner of the 6:00 Monday Mendel league. At 6:00 on Austin Field, the winner of the Monday 4:30 Austin league played the winner of the 6:00 Simpson league.

Mendel Field Games

Over on Mendel Field, the winner of the Monday 3:00 Austin league played the winner of the Monday 3:00 Mendel league. At 6:00 the winner of the Monday 6:00 Austin league played the winner of the 4:30 Simpson league.

Round three was held on Thursday, May 17. At 6:00 on Austin Field the winner of the Tuesday 6:00 Austin league played the winner of the Tuesday 4:30 Austin league. The winner of the Tuesday 6:00 Mendel league played the winner of the Tuesday 4:30 Mendel league on Mendel Field at 6:00. The final game was played last Monday at 6:00 on Austin Field.

Track Meet Held

On Thursday, May 17, a track meet was held which was open to all classes. The results were unable to be had but a large number of students were seen going in the direction of the Field House. The track events included a 100, 220, 440, 880, and a mile run.

The field events included a shot-put, broad-jump, and high jump.

Golfers Win Last Two, Season Record 11-4, 1963 Captain Named

The 1962 season saw the Villanova golf team finish on a highly successful note. West Chester was overpowered 6-1 on Monday, May 14, and in their last outing on May 18 the Wildcat golfers swept a triangular match from Delaware 9½-8½ and Temple 13½-4½. This brings the season record to 11-4.

Seeing their last year of competition were Joe Bilder, Tom Cook, Charles Barr, Fred Mazzi, and Dick Thomas. Next year's squad will be built around newly elected captain John Driscoll and sophomore Bob McMahon.

Over the past four years the golf team has compiled one of the most impressive of V. U. varsity records. Since 1959 Villanova golfers have won 47 matches and lost only 11.

Trackmen Take Three Seconds During L. A. Coliseum Meet

By Lois Greyson

Last weekend's Coliseum Relays provided perhaps the most spectacular track exhibition ever seen outside the Olympics. One American and two world records were set along with 7 additional new meet records.

Villanova Disappointing

The nine Villanovans who traveled to Los Angeles, however, had a rather disappointing trip as they managed to take only three seconds, in the 100 meter, the 200 meter and the 3000 meter steeplechase, and failed to place in any other event. Paul Drayton took a close second to Charles Frazier in the 200 meter while Pat Traynor ran a 9:23 steeplechase in losing to George Young.

Both Traynor's second place clocking and Young's winning time of 9:16.9 were far off Traynor's best effort in this event. To further add to Villanova's misfortune, Frank Budd placed second to Robert Hayes in his first defeat in a 100 race since tre 1960 Olympics in Rome.

World Records Set

The two world records were turned in by Dallas Long in the shot put with a heave of 65' 10½", and Al Oerter, who hurled the discus 200' 5½". Peter Snell contributed to the excitment by setting an American record in the mile while easily outdistancing a talent-laden field which produced two other sub-four minute clockings to provide the day's most thrilling race.

Arizona State climaxed the day's events by winning a sensational mile relay in 3:06.1. Both Arizona State and USC bettered the existing American Collegiate record of 3:07.6 set by Abilene Christian.

'Cat Diamond Squad Finishes Season With West Chester Win

The Villanova baseball team closed out its 1962 season with twelve wins and eight losses. A .600 season is good considering the strength of this year's opposition. Next year the team will be without the services of Don Melega, Danny Renn, Al Wiegand, Phil Fidalgo, and Hank David. Next year's returnees will include Mike Kiley, Rich Richman, Jack Lynch, Joe Farber and Pete Sapnar.

Last week the team won two out of three games. On May 16 the Wildcats overpowered the University of Delaware 8-5 in a game which featured the hitting of Jack Lynch and Phil Fidalgo. Fidalgo picked up three RBIs with two triples and a double while Jack Lynch picked his first pitch and drove it over the right field fence with a man on, to provide the margin of victory. Bruce Howard went the distance to pick up his sixth win of the season.

Army Wins In Heat

On last Friday, which was the hottest day of the year, the Cadets of West Point proved to be too much for the 'Cats to handle. Villanova could only manage to come up with four safeties while Army hit four home runs to win it going away at 7-3.

Starting pitcher, Mike Kiley was taken out in the fifth inning due to heat exhaustion as Pete Sapnar finished the game. While Kiley was in he gave up four runs, two of them unearned.

Beat West Chester

After taking a 15-2 drubbing by the Rams of West Chester two weeks ago, Villanova responded by beating them 8-2 in one of their best games of the year last Saturday. This was only the second loss of the season suffered by West Chester in sixteen games.

Phil Fidalgo went the distance while Richie Richman contributed four RBI's with a triple and a home run. Don Melega finished his career with the 'Cats as he led the team with a .364 average.

The loss of last year's star second baseman Dan Baier to the Baltimore Orioles last summer really must have meant a lot to the team's outcome this year . . . Baier batted .384 in leading the club . . . Al Weigand also caught some damage to his leg and failed to see action in the last ten or so games . . . "Scarface" had just started to lay the ball with authority too.

Sun Bowl Victory Climaxes Year As Bell's Grid Charges Finish 8-2

by Tom Finan

This year, in terminating with a 7-2 record and a post season bowl-bid, Villanova enjoyed one of its most successful football seasons in recent years. Coach Alex Bell's pre-season prediction, calling for a 5-4 slate, proved to be the understatement of the year, as the Wildcats' overwhelming offense and impressive defense garnered victory after victory.

A look at the statistics for offense gives an indication of the Cats winning and agressive football. 6-2, 195 lb. Larry Glueck was the leading ground gainer this season with a total of 400 yards in 60 attempts for 6.6 yds. average. Richie Richman and Billy Joe with totals of, 305 yards in 85 attempts, and 267 yards in 57 attempts for a 3.5 and a 4.6 average respectively, were next in that category.

In pass receiving, again Glueck led the team with 19 caught for a total of 318 yards and 2 touchdowns. Ron Meyers, with 9 caught for 147 yards and 3 touchdowns, was next in overall pass receiving. Joe Cutroneo was third in that category with 9 caught with a total 99 yards gained.

Richie Richman was the top quarterback this year with 27 completed for 438 yards and 2 touchdowns out of 72 passes. downs.

Ted Aceto was next in the aerial department with 30 completed passes out of 63 attempts for a total of 386 yards and 5 touch-

The Cats with 25 returning lettermen scored impressive victory over Miami of Ohio in their firstgame of the 1961 season. The game got off to a surprise start as Larry Glueck took the opening kickoff and raced back 67 yards, to the Miami 31, where he was finally brought down. Soon the Main Liners led 8-0. Scoring in every quarter thereafter, the win-hungry eleven rolled up a '3-0 score.

Travelling to Worcester for their first of three games in Massachusetts, the Villanovans were eager to revenge their 20-0 loss to the Crusaders in 1959. Facing the double threat of quarterback Pat McCarthy and speedster Tom Hennessey, the Cats were said to be up against their toughest game of the season. Overcoming a bleak start, the Wildcats soon showed their stuff and came from behind to score a 20-6 upset over the hapless Crusaders, who as Fate would dictate, had scheduled V U for their season opener.

The Red Men of the U. of Massachusetts were the next victims of the surprising Wildcats. The 33-13 victory thoroughly substantiated the pessimistic quip of Dick Fusia, U. of Mass. coach, "Villanova has nothing to worry about".

The University of Buffalo, in their football debut on the Main Line, suffered ignominious defeat at the hands of the 'Cats on a rainy Homecoming Day. The 10,000 soggy and sniffling fans on hand, saw the Bulls of Buffalo play a plugging game, but the valiant Wildcats proved to be too much for the New Yorkers.

The West Chester game proved to be one of the years biggest excitements, and enthusiasm was so wide spread, WFIL-TV, broadcast the game over the entire Delaware Valley area. Revenging the 13-7 defeat suffered in 1959, the Cat's roared over the Rams before a standing room only crowd of 15,000.

An ominous cloud of despair was almost visible over the Main Line campus, after the 20-6 loss to the Titans of Detroit. All thoughts of bowl-bids were hastily shelved, after the squad suffered their second defeat.

Still, rumors persisted about possible bowl-bids for Villanova. Just seven days after the disasterous encounter at Detroit, V U officials accepted their first bowl invitation since 1949.

The rest is history. V. U. triumphed to a 17-9 win over the scrappy Shockers of the South, in a game which brought widespread recognition to the University and to Alex Bell's electric eleven.

NCAA Regionals Highlight Courtmen's '61-'62 Season

by Jack Duffy

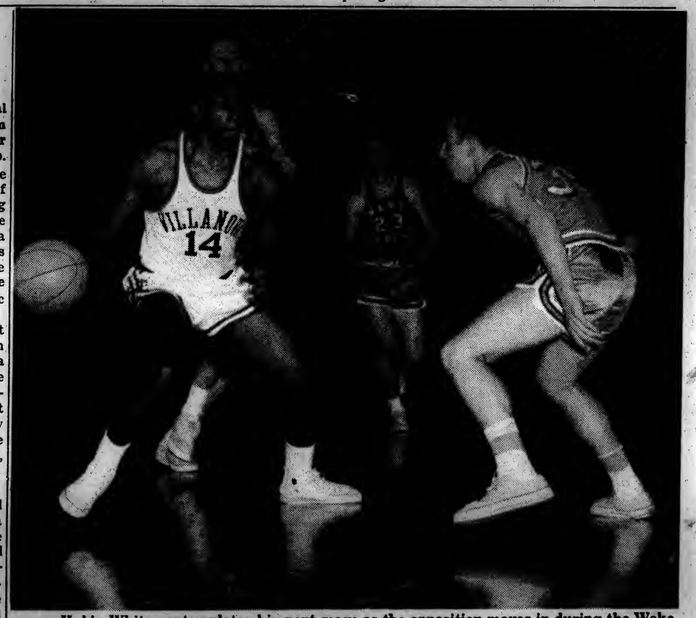
Spirit, hustle, determination; what do these words mean? To the basketball fan they usually signify the text of some long winded master of ceremonies at someone or other's basketball banquet. This year these words proved to be the main ingredients of a very successful basketball season at Villanova University.

The so-called basketball experts of the country were giving the Wildcats as much chance for success as an engineer in an English Course. Some preseason guessers didn't think the Mainliners would win eight games. But the Wildcats fooled them all.

In any sport when a team goes bad the blame is laid at the door of the Coach, whether he is guilty or not. So when the team succeeds, the Coach receives his shade of the accolates. So let it be with Jack Kraft. When pre-season practice began Coach Kraft assessed his talent and knew just what he was capable of doing. He set about doing it and in the process made a name for Villanova and himself.

Fantastic

The season itself was a fantastic success. The Cats broke fast and before they could be caught they were up to fifth in the national rankings. Who will ever forget the twelve straight victories that made the season. Included in these wins crucial road victories over Princeton and Niagara and tremendous triumphs over national powers Duquesne and Iowa on the victory trail to the Quaker City Tournament championship.



Another championship the Cats brought home was that of the Big 5. Just remembering those nail biting, edge of the seat victories over Temple, La Salle, and St. Joe's starts one's heart to racing. The big one came on March 3, when the Cats clawed St. Joes, and "The Hawk was finally dead."

At home the Cats could not be touched and won all sixteen games, fourteen in the Palestra and two in the Field House. The road was the great equalizer unfortunately and the Cats went down in 7 of 12 games away from home. Only once were they ever thumped, however, that being at Xavier.

Road Contest

The most memorable road contest was the West Virginia game when the Cats twelve game winning streak and national ranking were on the line. Despite a hostile crowd and incompetent officiating the Cats were in the game until the end and only costly mistakes in the final seconds prevented them from victory.

The Wildcats obtained a chance for revenge when they were matched with West Virginia in the opening round of the N.C.A.A. Touranment. Playing before a capacity crowd and a television audience the Wildcats put on one of the greatest second halfs of the college season to wipe out a half time deficit and eliminate the taller mountaineers.

Hubie White contemplates his next move as the opposition moves in during the Wake Forest NCAA regionals in March.

In the Eastern Regionals at College Park Maryland the Cats reverted to their cliff handing tactics in their games with N. Y. U. and Wake Forest.

In the N.Y.U. game the Cats came from behind time and time again, the last time in the last minute of play on 5 straight points by Hubie White, to defeat the Violets and meet Wake Forest in the Eastern Championships. The Deacons who had led a charmed life in the tourney proved too much for the suddenly cold shooting Cats and the Wildcats had come to the end of the trail with a record of 21 and 7.

Bright Spots

The season had many individual bright spots for the Cats. Hubie White played a consistent and at times brilliant brand of ball in leading the team. Wally Jones immerged as a future All-American and along with his sidekick George Leftwich, gave the Wildcats a backcourt that was equal to any one's. Kraft's two little Irishmen Jim O'Brien, and Jim Monagle, proved that class and effort can accomplish much again even the greatest odds.

IC4A All Fall To Rampaging 'Cats

Outdoor Season Still Bright Despite Several Key Injuries

by Lois Greyson and Carol Burton

In keeping with the winning spirit of Villanova teams this year, the always successful Wildcat track team has turned in an especially impressive record this season. The 'Cats captured both the National AAU and the IC4A Indoor Championship as well as dominating competition in all the meets in which they participated.

During this indoor season Billy Joe set a new school record of 5" 58' in the shot put, Frank Budd extended his unbeaten streak in the 50 and 60 yard dashes, and the mile relay team of Paul Drayton, Carl Wagner, Alan Jackman, and Bob Raemore went undefeated until anohorman Raemore pulled a muscle in the New York A.C. meet.

Freshmen Contributed to Team's Success

The freshmen, too, contributed to the team's achievements both through outstanding individual performances and as members of various relay teams. Don Webster began the season by beating Olympian Jack Yerman to win the 600 at the Coliseum Relays and Tom Sullivan took an extremely close second to Jim Grelle in the 1000 yd. This same meet also saw Frank Budd and the varsity mile relay team emerge victorious, while Rolando Cruz placed 2nd in the pole vault.

At the Indoor National AAU meet Villanova barely edged the New York Athletic Club to win 18 to 17. Winning performances were tallied by Frank Budd in the 60 yd. dash and by the sprint medley team of Carl Wagner (440), Alan Jackman (100), Frank Budd (220), and Paul Drayton (300). Valuable points were contributed by Billy Joe, finishing 3rd in the shot put, and the two mile relay team's second place finish, while Rolando Cruz made the deciding 3 points by virtue of his second place vault of 15'4."

Villanova Captures IC4A Title

As a fitting climax to the indoor season, Villanova far outdistanced the nearest competition in the IC4As, capturing four first places and an amassing 31½ points. The "World's Fastest Human," Frank Budd, stole the show twice in the same day, equalling the world record of 6 seconds flat in the 60 yard dash.

Other first place finishes were turned in by Vic Zwolak, running a crowd-pleasing 4:09.3 mile; Rolando Cruz, setting a new IC4A record of 15'4" in the pole vault; and two mile relay team of Pat Nicastro, Al Adams, Jon Donte, and Gerry Hackett, winning in 7:45.2. Other point scorers were Leon Pras, second in the 60 high hurdles; Paul Drayton, third in the 60 yeard dash; Billy Joe, second in the shot put; Pat Traynor, fifth in the two mile; and Carl Wagner, tied for fifth in the 600.

In this meet the freshman medley relay team of Kozlowski (200), Ferko (880), Webster (440), and Sullivan (1 mile) set a new world collegiate record of 7:18.4 showing excellent promise for next year's squad.

Outdoor Season Exciting

The outdoor season thus far has been equally spectacular despite numerous injuries to key men. After a disastrous opening meet at Quantico, Villanova managed its usual winning performances in the Queens-Iona and Penn Relays, although due to injuries, Villanova was not able to compete for their 8th straight mile relay title in the Penn Relays. They were successful capturing two relay titles, however, producing the meet's most valuable performer, Pat Traynor. The distance medley relay team of Al Adams, Al Jackman, Gerry Hackett, and Pat Traynor began well on Friday afternoon by registering a surprise victory in the event. Villanova was able to forge ahead after Hackett's spectacular 3/4 mile leg in which he closed a 35 yd. gap before handing off to anchorman Traynor. On Saturday, after a heartbreaking loss in the 440, Villanova's 880 relay team of Pat Nicastro, Paul Drayton, Bob Raemore and Frank Budd surged back to take this event successfully defending the title. Earlier in the day freshman Marshall Uzzle, Noel Carroll, Stan Koslowski, Don Webster scored by easily beating Morgan State for the freshman Mile Relay championship. Pat Traynor climaxed the day's events by winning the college division of the 3000 meter steeplechase to earn his MVP award.

In two dual meets the 'Cats outscored St. Joseph's, 109-49 and the Quantico Marines 78-62. In the St. Joseph's meet Doug Kerr set a new stadium record of 226' 11½" in the javelin barely missing his all time VU record of 227'1" while Rolando Cruz also set a Villanova record of 15'5½"in the pole vault, with his best vault to date. Double winners in this meet were Leon Pras, 120 high and 220 low hurdles, Frank Budd, 100 and 220 yard dashes, and Pat Traynor, one and two mile runs. At the Quantico meet Budd stole the show by accomplishing the fantastic feat of running the 100 in 9.3 and then coming back to win the 220 in world record time of 20 secs flat to equal the time for the fastest sprint double ever run.

Cross Country Team Undefeated

For the second straight year the Villanova cross country team, captained by senior Ang Sivieri was undefeated in regular season meets. Led by All-American Vic Zwolak's third and Pat Traynor's tenth place finishes Villanova took the IC4As. Zwolak won further distinction by finishing fourteenth in the NCAA cross country championships to cap a highly successful season.

Under the direction of perhaps the two finest track coaches in the world, Villanova's amazing track team now looks forward to victories in the IC4A, NCAA, and National AAU championships to become only the second team in history to capture every major indoor and outdoor track championship, a feat accomplished by Villanova's 1957 team.

Diamond Men Suffer Ups And Downs With Fidalgo And Weigand Hampered

by Bob Burke

With the season over except for games with Army and a rematch with West Chester this Friday and Saturday, the understatement of the semester would be to say that the record will not be what was expected by many campus critics. Going into these two games, their record is an above par (but not for the Wildcats) 11-7, but the 'Cats had already been shellacked by a powerful West Chester squad and Army always shows up with a contender.

Reflecting on the waning season, Coach Mahan felt that there is nothing to be ashamed of in the record compiled by the baseballers, despite the fact that they fell way short of many expectations.

As in any league, there are no concrete answers to the usual questions of why? What happened? Everyone knows that the team had the goods, but in a twenty game season, you need more than your share of the breaks to run up a string that looks like a basketball season.

On several occasions, the team showed its potential. For instance, on opening day when they shone against an admittedly weak Philadelphia Textile team to rack up a 22-0 victory and twice more in smashing St. Joe's 18-7 and LaSalle 12-5.

Errors and Injuries

Probably remembered by baseball bucs from last year is the day that Phil Fidalgo acquired arm trouble. This has been one of the biggest headaches that Coach Mahan has had to contend with. Fidalgo has never been quite the same as a pitcher, but he makes up for what was lost on the mound with his sparkling play in the field and in the batter's box.

Also missed from the lineup for several of the big ones, was starting catcher Al Wiegand, who was out with a leg injury. Although Joe Farber did an excellent job of taking over for Al, it just wasn't the same.

Indisputably, the team did its share of handing games to the opposition with sloppy field play. Take the Rutgers game. The final score was 6-3 but each of the squads had seven hits. The answer to this one is the three errors committed by the 'Cats.

Big Five Runnerup

Although the squad downed the Hawks twice and LaSalle once, they couldn't make it against either Temple or Penn. Penn outscored VU 15-9 while Temple took an 8-5 decision to move into first spot in the competition for the Big Five title.

Another result of the squad's failure to pull out of the tight ones, was their loss of a chance to return to the NCAA tournament. Their hopes remained alive until the day of the Seton Hall game when they were shut out 7-0.

Good Prospects

Although Villanova will no longer have the services of Phil Fidalgo, Dan Renn, Al Wiegand, and Don Melega, Coach Mahan expects to field another contender.

Returning will be such stalwarts as Rich Richman, Joe Farber, who did an excellent job in relief of Al Wiegand, Bruce Howard, Mike Kiley, Pete Connors, Bill Smith, Jack Lynch, a likeable candidate for next year's Captain, Gerry Harrington, a Sophomore center fielder, and the manager, Tom Redmond. With this material, Art Mahan may very well produce a team of calibre equal to or even surpassing this year's squad.

Bowling, Swimming Golf, Rugby Pace Lesser Varsity Sports

The Villanova varsity Bowling team ended a successful season under the direction of captain Sal Rico. The team won the Philadelphia division Championship and placed in the Penn State Tournament. Sunday, May 6, Sal Rico finished second in the Eastern Collegiate Match Games Championship held in New York.

The varsity swimming team, coached by Ed Geisz, brought Villanova the first swimming team championship in its history. They captured fourth place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships under the leadership of senior Don Reed, and two sophs Jack Geoghegan and Dick McDonough.

The Villanova Golf Team, captained by Joe Bilder, began the season with a series of disappointing defeats, but roared back with eight wins against such strong opposition as Rutgers, St. Joe's, Seton Hall and Penn. Joe Bilder set a school record against Georgetown, registering a 68 which broke the old mark of 70.

The pistol and rifle squads continued on their annual winning paths this year. The pistol team, with a 4-2 varsity record and 12-5 overall in the Delaware Valley League, finished second in the National Rifle Association sectional competition. Joe Bader and Carl Ackerman finished second and third respectively in the individual competition. The rifle squad ended with a 10-4 record and likewise came in second in the NRA sectionals.

The lacrosse team, only in its second year of competition had rough sledding. The 'Cat stickers finished the season with an 0-9 slate but are looking forward to better days with both high scorers, Soph Dave Dunn and Freshman Bill White, returning next year.

The rugby team was faced with a rebuilding year but managed to come out with a winning record. The team's overall record was 10-8-2, with a 4-4-1 mark being made in the spring section of the schedule. With only four men graduating, including Captain Ralph "Pig-Pen" Lewis, bright days loom on the horizon for Villanova's rugby future.

The Last Round

Everything Happens To Villanova

by Joe Zawacki

Once a guy said something to the effect that "everything happens to Villanova at one time or another". After two hours looking at some of the back issues of the VILLANOVAN for the past four years, it would seem pretty hard to disprove those words of wisdom. If you seniors have a minute between finals, give a look and see if you remember . . .

1958 — Quite a football team that year, so good that it brought a football rarity to the campus . . . a winning season. It looked like a great one for awhile. At one time, Frank Reagan's Wildcats were 5-1, with convincing victories over Boston College, Detroit, Wake Forest, Richmond, and a little place named West Chester.

Big Boys

Even though the team faded toward the end at 6-4, guys like Jim Grazione, Dave Intrabartolo and Gene Paja made things pretty interesting on Saturday afternoons. Besides, it wasn't hard to slough off losses to Army and Wichita when you could sneak in names like Pete Dawkins and Ted Dean in the same breath.

The basketball team wasn't supposed to be much that year, mainly because four of the starters had no experience. But January found them with a 9-0 record and if you overlooked the fact that the victims were named Le Moyne, Textile, Siena, etc., you could brag about it. Of course, St. Joseph's had to spoil it again and run all over them.

Still, the Huggard, Ryan, Kenny Co. wound its way into the NIT which is always something to write home to mother about, and since St. John's eventually won the tournament, it didn't seem so bad getting knocked off in the first round.

What, Again?

It was an odd year for the track team too . . . they only finished 4th in the IC4A indoor meet, even though Ed Collymore and Charley Stead won the 60 yard and high jump, and the mile relay team finished 2nd to highly regarded Pitt. Of course, the Penn Relays were a different matter as VU won their 5th Mile Relay in a row.

The baseball team won the Big Five that year, paced by guys like Frank Kreutzer, Lee Parry, Joe Michell and a catcher named Jack Fahey who batted over .400. He didn't have a scholarship, which makes for an interesting story later.

Jack Kraft

1959 wasn't too happy of a year football-wise. From week to week, you didn't know who was going to get hung in effigy. After 4 losses, Frank Reagan called it quits and Joe Rogers finished out the season which read 1-9, the lone win coming over an awful Dayton team.

With Hubie White and Jim Huggard leading the way, the basketball team took some of the sting away and rushed off to a 14-1 record. During the string, Al Severance recorded his 400th victory, a testimonial to his coaching or recruiting genius, or both. An NIT bid came early although a sports-writers' luncheon in New York erupted into gales of laughter when someone said that VU's 14-1 record had come off major opposition. The wise guys looked pretty smart too, when the 'Cats lost 5 of their last 7 to the likes of St. Bonnies, NYU, St. Joe. Detroit fell to them in the first round but a hustling Utah State team took the Main Liners measure in overtime two days later.

Jumbo Elliot had another boring year, both indoor and out, winning the IC4A, a 6th Mile Relay at Penn and developing a sprinter named Budd.

How?

A bizarre touch was added in typical Villanova fashion on the first day of baseball practice that year when Jack Fahey, the previous year's .400 hitter (sans scholarship) was benched in favor of Al Weigand (with scholarship). No one ever bothered to explain the logic. Wiegand, a capable receiver, batted .200 but the rest of the team performed to the tune of a 14-4 record and an NCAA bid, proving that Al Severance wasn't the only good recruiter on campus.

1960 is when things started to happen. Alex Bell was the new coach and he used the misfortune to have to install his system on a team without benefit of spring practice. The spirit of the team was willing, but the record was 2-8 with the only victories coming over Xavier and Rutgers, the latter knocking the Scarlet from the unbeaten.

Capable Man

A new athletic board was in the process of being formed, under the capable hands of Rev. John Curran. Beside his natural love for the school, the good father was also a first-class pragmatist and it didn't take long before a tighter hand was being felt. For example, student-athletes were being forced to toe a tight line scholastically if they wanted to be admitted to VU.

The basketball season was a farce and it was a shame because it was Severance's 25th year, and he deserved a better fate. The tip-off came at the start when unheralded Buffalo knocked off the 'Cats in the Palestra in their second game. Nobody mentioned it openly, but there was too much dissension and too little discipline, aided in no small manner (according to one player), by a well-meaniny, but nevertheless interfering alumnus. The same man, incidentally, paid for the game films and scouting reports . . . when the team was winning. When they started to lose, the reports and films disappeared "because they're ungrateful". When we were kids, we called it front-running.

A Real Ace

The final record was 11-13 and the Squire had retired. No matter what you said about him, you knew the game would not be the same. He was, and is, a gentleman.

Everyone expected Ed Scullin, successful high school coach in the Philly area, to be named as Al's successor. So did Scullin, since he had come to VU as Frosh coach under that assumption. However, in the interim, the new athletic board had come into power and they didn't want Scullin. Which was fine, since the school has the right to hire whoever it wants. Only no one bothered to tell Scullin.

Using a local reporter as contact man, Ed Donovan of St. Bonaventure visited the campus and liked what he saw. However, the scandals broke and he got skittish. After Jack Mc-

Art Mahan

Closkey and others were screened, the dust settled and VU came up smelling like the proverbial rose. The new coach was Jack Kraft, a man very much like Scullin in background, temperment, and talent. Everyone knows the job he did this year.

Smart Move

Another addition, (and a smart one, too) in the broom-sweep was the hiring of Ken Mugler to Sports Information director. A former writer for the Bulletin, Mugler knew enough people in the trade to make sure that VU got more newspaper space than any other two local schools combined.

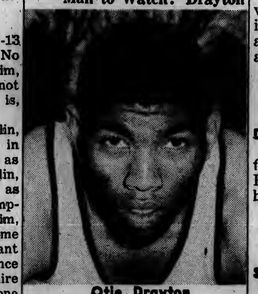
Ho-hum. The track team won the Penn Relay mile event again for the 7th year in a row. A disqualification cost them the indoor IC4A by a point, but they came back strong to win the outdoor and then place 3rd in the NCAA. That Budd fellow ran the 100 in 9.2, which caused a few headlines.

This year, you all know about it. It was one of the most successful years any college could have. However, all the years won't be like this and then it won't be so easy to root for dear old alma mater. This school never has to worry about the players though. They don't know how to quit.

IC4A Outlook

by Tom Bruderle and Vince Kennedy

100 Yard Dash



That's right, Frank Budd. In his only "100" this year Frank has a 9.3. Paul Drayton might catch Budd.

Our Pick: Budd

220 Yard Dash

Budd again but Drayton will press even harder. John Fernandez of Manhatten (21.) will make his presence felt.

Our Pick: Budd (20.0 with a pulled muscle)
Man to Watch: Drayton

Otis Drayton

440 Yard Dash

Peter Weiss of Fordham has a 47.3 this year. Bob Mottely has a 47.4 also. Hubert Brown, Mike Radov, John Sullivan and Villanova's Bob Raemore round out the field. . .

Our Pick: Weiss
Man to Watch: Raemore a sentimental favorite

880 Yard Dash

Howie Deardoff of Penn State has a 1:50.6 this year. Maryland's Dick Smith has a 1:51.6 to his credit. Defender Jon Dante may run.

Our Pick: Deardoff on his time
Man to Watch: Dante if he runs.

Mile

John Reilly of Georgetown has a 4:01.9 mark. Mark Mullen has a 4:09.6. The winner will be one of these two.

Our Pick: Reilly
Man to Watch: Mullen

Three Miles

Gerry Norman of Penn State has a 14:03.8, the best time in the field. Joe McGovern has come in at 14:31.

Our Pick: Norman with a possible record
Man to Watch: McGovern

120 Yard Hurdles

Villanova's Leon Pras' best time is 14.3 with Jay Luck close behind with a 14.4. They should finish this way.

Our Pick: Pras
Man to Watch: Luck

440 Yard Hurdles

Luck has a 51.8 and he will be followed by Frank Stauffer with a 53.2 time. Boolaboola Luck.

Our Pick: Luck
Man to Watch: Stauffer

3000 Meter Steeplechase

Pat Traynor pulling away. Moorehead of Penn State will make it interesting.

Our Pick: Traynor
Man to Watch: Moorehead could spoil things

High Jump

John Thomas will be back Saturday to defend his title. Jerry Wettstone, Penn State, who has done 6-6¼ is in strong contention for second along wtih Hartnett of Princeton.

Best Bet: Thomas
Man to Watch: Wettstone

Broad Jump

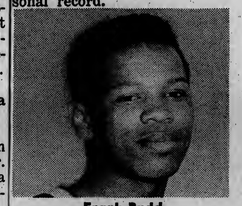
All contestents have jumps near 24 ft. Jim Axtell of Yale won the Heps last week. Others are Bowie, Morgan State, and Cooper, St. John's.

Best Bet: Axtell, go Ivy
Man to Watch: Thomas, always exciting

Hammer Throw

Ed Bailey won the Heps with 186-2. His best this year is 200-01. Other strongmen are Kilgallen, Holy Cross, 181; and Dyer, Brown, 180-6.

Best Bet: Bailey, a consistent winner
Man to Watch: Dyer, could finish first



Discuss

Kohler is the best in the field with 178-11½ this year. Bob Batdorf of Penn is a dark horse.

Best Bet: Kohler, Fordham
Man to Watch: Gubner, if only his size

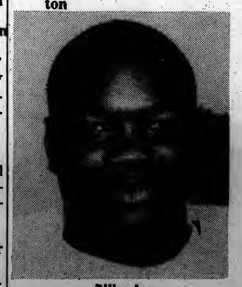
Shot Put

This is everyone's chance to see NYU's Gary Gubner as he could push Billy Joe to a personal record.

Frank Budd

Best Bet: Gubner
Man to Watch: Joe, a great athlete

Pole Vault



Although Maryland's Belitza has the highest mark, 15-6½, Cruz could break his stadium mark of 15-5¾ to win.

Best Bet: Cruz
Man to Watch: Belitza

Javelin

A strong field competes this year with Livingston of Yale and Kerr the top performers.

Best Bet: Kerr
Man to Watch: Livingston

Billy Joe

Hop-Step-Jump

Winston Cooper of St. John's far outclasses the field. Hubie White will be a noticeable absentee.

Best Bet: Cooper, 50' 11¼"
Man to Watch: Ellington, closest with 47' 7½"

Bishop Leech, James H. Tate To Receive Honorary Degrees

The Most Reverend George L. Leech, Bishop of the Harrisburg Diocese, and James H. Tate, Mayor of Philadelphia, are among four who will receive Honorary Degrees during Villanova University's Summer Commencement exercises on Saturday, the fourth of August.

Three hundred and twenty-five degrees in course will be conferred during the morning exercises at the University Field House. This ceremony marks the closing of the institution's forty-fifth summer session.

Other Doctorates will be awarded to the Rev. Henry A. Evans, Pastor of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church in Morten, Pennsylvania, and to Mother Mary Immaculata, Mother General of the Society of the Sisters of St. Joseph in Watertown, New York.

Bishop Leech

Bishop Leech will receive the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws, and a Doctorate in Public Administration will be conferred on Mayor Tate. Father Evans will be awarded the Degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, and Mother Mary Immaculata will receive a Doctorate of Religious Education.

Mayor Tate

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova's President, will present the Degrees. The Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, OSA, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, will preside.

In addition to receiving a Degree, Bishop Leech will deliver the graduation address. The Graduation Exercise will be preceded by a colorful academic procession from Dougherty Hall, the student union building, to the Field House.

Catholic, Protestant, and Jew Unite At Conference To Discuss Problems

Sister Francele, SSND

A member of each of the three major faith groups in the United States participated in a religious symposium at Villanova University on July 10, 11, and 12. The three day conference, held in conjunction with the Villanova summer session, was co-sponsored by the University's Institute of Church and State and the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Sessions were held in Vasey Hall Auditorium each afternoon beginning at 2:00 p.m. An extension of time was needed each day. The group re-convened informally in the evening in Dougherty Hall for discussion and to ask questions of the speaker.

Mr. James A. O'Gara, managing editor of COMMONWEAL Magazine, spoke at the opening session on Tuesday, July 10. COMMONWEAL is a weekly journal on public affairs, literature, and the arts, edited by Catholic laymen. Mr. O'Gara outlined both strong and weak points of the Catholic "point of view." He stated that Church and State should not be viewed as enemies, and pointed out that one hundred years ago our country had "Protestant, not Public Schools!" He criticized the weakness of many religious departments in colleges and universities, and in the light of the Supreme Court decision he remarked that the Catholic reaction was "too strong." Mr. O'Gara concluded his remarks with an appeal for "increased lay activity."

On July 11 The Rev. Dean M. Kelly represented the Protestant viewpoint. Rev. Kelley is present Director of the Department of Religious Liberty of the National Council of Churches and Past Director of the Research Consultation on the Church and State of the New York East Conference of the Methodist Church. He stated that although "95% of Americans believe in God today, yet crime is flourishing," and admitted that to many Protestants, separation of Church and State simply means "Stop the Catholic Church." He said that we are better "known for what we are against, rather than what we are for." Dean Kelley remarked that neither Church, or State should rely on the other. His comments on the question of Federal Aid for religious schools reflected a need for "sacrifice rather than ease", and in concluding he said, "True Christianity needs no help, but can give help." "Much more can be done by parents and churches for religion than schools," he stated, and "Religion can be learned on one's own time."

The Jewish spokesman was Mr. Arthur A. Cohen, Director of the Religious Department of the publishers, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc. An outstanding authority on Religious Pluralism or "Plurality" as Mr. Cohen prefers, Mr. Cohen spoke during the third session on Thursday, July 12. In his opening remarks he said that "Jews are not 'theologically' competitive with Christians" but that we are "'sharing two motifs of salvation." "Although Judaism is a major faith in the United States, it is not a major factor in politics," expressed Mr. Cohen's feeling on current issues. However, he felt that "persons, not institutions, must bring religion to the public order." If the latter tries to do so, it is merely a "facade," he said. Although admitting that he does not like "Shared Time" he remarked that it is "progress" and shows "recognition of a problem." In closing he reminded his audience that "Christians and Jews are never better than when they are under attack." "When all goes well, corrosion is just around the corner," he said.

The religious symposium was intended for members of the student body attending the Villanova Summer Session. Mr. Charles P. Bruderle is Director of the Villanova Summer School.

Villanova University Hosts Modern Language Institute

Sister Mary Borromeo, RSM

The Institute of Modern Languages was sponsored at Villanova University on Saturday, July 14, by the Department of Modern Languages and the Department of Education under the joint chairmanship of Doctor L. Wilson Frescoln, chairman of the Modern Languages Department and Professor George A. Harris, chairman of the Education Department. The general topic of the Institute was "The Teaching of Modern Languages." About two hundred people attended the sessions.

Reverend Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Vice-President for Academic Affairs at Villanova University, opened the session fith a brief talk welcoming the guests to the Institute. Then Brother E. Anthony, FSC, La Salle College High School, spoke on "Foreign Languages in Education," and brought out the importance of the study of languages in the national defense program.

The second morning session offered two symposia. Those attending the Institute could participate either in "The Role of the Laboratory," conducted by Professor Max Kirch, University of Delaware, or "Language and Literature," conducted by Doctor Robert K. Bishop, University of Pennsylvania, and Doctor Victor Krupitsch, Villanova University.

Fr. Klekotka Address

Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, addressed the members of the Institute at the end of the luncheon which was served in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Following Father Klekotka's address, Doctor Lawrence Poston, Jr., Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D. C., spoke on "Help To and From the Government."

The first afternoon session offered two symposia: "Problems and Methods," conducted by Doctor Donald F. Brown, Villanova University, and Reverend Char-

Rev. Thomas M. Mahoney, OSA, rector, Monsignor Bonner High School, Drexel Hill. Rev. Charles R. Flynn, OSA, Vice-Rector, Monsignor Bonner High School.

Very Rev. John J. Daley, OSA, professor, Villanova University, to Prior, Malvern Preparatory School. Rev. Joseph D. Keffer, OSA, from Archbishop Carroll High School, Washington, D. C., to Master of Professed, St. Mary, Villanova. Rev. William J. Krupa, OSA, from Master of Professed Clerics, St. Mary, Villanova, to Master of Novices, Good Counsel Novitiate, New Hamburg, N. Y.

Rev. Thomas J. Kelly, OSA, from Assistant, Our Mother of Good Counsel Church, Bryn Mawr, to Lawrence, Mass. Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, OSA, chaplain, Villanova University, to assistant, St. Thomas of Villanova, Rosemont.

Rev. Patrick X. Nidroff, OSA, from Monsignor Bonner High School, Drexel Hill, to St. Augustine's High School, San Diego. Rev. James R. Thurman, OSA, from Monsignor Bonner High School, Drexel Hill, to St.

Rev. James A. Donnellon

Augustine's High School, San Diego.

Rev. Edwin E. King, OSA, vice president for Development and Public Relations, Villanova University, to Biscayne College, Miami.

Alumni Group Chooses Active Villanovan Dohahue As President

Edward J. Donahue, of North Andover, Massachusetts, has been elected President of the Villanova National Alumni Association.

A native of Lawrence, Massachusetts, Donahue graduated from Lawrence High School and received his degree from Villanova in 1933. While at Villanova he starred in Football, Baseball and Track. He captained the track team in his senior year. He also was a member of the Ring Committee and the Villanova Glee Club.

Donahue, the President and Treasurer of the Andover Country Club, has been active over the years in Villanovan and civic activities in the Lawrence area.

Active Alumnus

He has served Villanova through the Alumni Association on both the local and national level. He is a past President of the Lawrence Villanova Club, a past Vice-President of the National Association. He is a Director of the Villanova Alumni Foundation and is a member of the Board of Governors of the Alumni Association.

In civic activities he was past President of the Kiwanis, Elks, Gridiron Club of Boston, Men of Merrimack, Chairman of the Boston United Fund and Director of the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce.

Donahue is married to the former Ruth Collins and they have four children, Edward, Jr., Mary Lou, Susan and Ruth Ann.

High School Teachers In Sciences Aided By Villanova NSF Grant

Villanova has received a grant of $14,270 from the National Science Foundation for the purpose of conducting courses in mathematics, chemistry and geology for high school teachers this Fall.

Participants must be high school teachers (senior or junior high school) who are engaged in teaching high school science or mathematics with a minimum of three years experience. In special cases the experience requirement may be waived.

Courses will be offered on Saturday to avoid interference with the teacher's regular duties. Classes will begin on September 22. Teachers interested in participating in the Villanova Interservice Institute are refuired to make application as soon as possible.

The National Science Foundation will pay travel expense to and from the University and also finance the purchase of textbooks.

The curriculum will be under the direction of the Rev. J. Bernard Hubbert, O.S.A., of the Department of Physics.

The objective of the Inservice Institute is to improve the teaching of science and mathematics in high schools. A Villanova faculty committee will evaluate candidates and select those best qualified and who will benefit the most from the special training.

Application should be made to the Rev. J. Bernard Hubbert at Villanova University.

Three Chemistry Profs Awarded Study Grants, Attend Conferences

Three members of the Chemistry faculty at Villanova University have received National Science Foundation Fellowships to take part in special conferences during the summer.

Dr. Bernard J. Downey, Chairman of the Chemistry Department at Villanova, has been awarded a Summer Fellowship to the University of Florida to attend a conference on "Nuclear and Electron Spin Resonance."

Dr. Ivan Lichtenstein has been awarded a Fellowship to Ohio State University to attend a conference on "Advances in the Chemistry of Coordination Compounds."

Dr. Dominic Roberti will attend Case Institute of Technology to participate in a conference on "Molecular Structure and Molecular Spectroscopy."

Modern Language

les L. Knapp, OSA, Malvern Preparatory School, and "Language Laboratory Technihues," conducted by Professor Michael J. Taconita, St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia. The closing address—"The Language Teacher"—was given by Miss Annette H. Emgarth, Supervisor of Modern Foreign Languages, State of Delaware. This well-planned and well-attended Institute threw out many challenges to the teachers of modern foreign languages.

Summer Session Augmented By Vocational Institute

Sister M. Borromeo, RSM

A Religious Vocation Institute in conjunction with the Villanova University Summer School was held on Friday and Saturday, July 20 and 21.

Sessions were held in the Villanova Field House on Friday afternoon from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. and on Saturday morning from 10:00 a.m. until noon. Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova's President, opened the Friday meeting with a brief talk.

Reverend Edward T. Hughes, Superintendent of Schools for the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, opened the Saturday morning session.

The Brotherhood

"The Brotherhood: The Little Understood Vocation" was the topic for the first panel discussion. Panelists were Brother Robert Lawn, SJ, Director of Vocations, Jesuit Brothers: Brother Stephen Armstrong, FC, Director of Vocations, Brother of Charity: and Brother Paschal Breu, SA, Director of Vocations, Atonement Brothers. Panel moderator was Brother Patrick Reilly, FSCH, Principal of St. Cecilia's School, New York City.

The second half of the Friday session was devoted to a review of the subject "What One Religious Can Do for Vocations." Speakers were Sister Mary Pierre, SSND, a school principal from Hartsville, North Carolina; Sister Maurice, SBS, of the Vocations Office of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament; and Sister Bernard Anthony, CBS, School Nurse at Little Flower High School, Philadelphia. Moderating the discussion was the Reverend Alfred E. Smith, OSA, of Bonner High School.

On Parental Objections

Following Father Hughes's remarks on Saturday morning, the first session was devoted to "Perennial Parental Objections to Vocations." The Revered John J. Lawlor, CM, Director of Vocations for the Vincentian Fathers, was the Moderator. Panesists were Reverend Arthur O'Neill, SSJ, Director of Vocations, the Josephite Fathers· Sister Pieta, MSBT, of the Missionary Servant Sisters; and Brother G. Henry, FSC, Director of Vocations for the Christian Brothers.

The two day Vocation Institute concluded with a discussion of the topic "What You Should Know about the Theology of a Vocation." Father Hughes; Reverend Joseph Duffy, OSA, Director of Vocations for the Augustinian Fathers; and the Reverend Charles Coulter of the Columban Fathers were the speakers. The Reverend Norbert J. Rans, MM, Director of Vocations for the Maryknoll Fathers, moderated this final meeting. All sessions were followed by a discussion period.

The Villanova Institute was intended for the many members of religious orders attending the University's Summer Session. More than forty different religious communities are represented in the Summer Program.

Law Profs Exchanged Between Universities Villanova, Nottingham

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the School of Law, Villanova University, announced today an exchange of professors with the Law Department of the University of Nottingham, England, for the forthcoming academic year, 1962-1963. The Dean also revealed that both Professor Ernest F. Roberts of the Villanova Faculty and Professor T. Brian Hogan of Nottingham have been awarded Fulbright grants to facilitate their travel between the two law schools.

Professor Hogan was graduated from Manchester University with first class honors in 1956, was a member of Grey's Inn and was called to the bar in 1961. The winner of several scholarships at Manchester and in Grey's Inn, Professor Hogan joined the Faculty at Nottingham in 1956. A member of that faculty since, eycept for a semester as Visiting Lecturer at Adelaide University in Australia, Professor Hogan has concentrated on Tort law, and has published in that field.

Professor Roberts, a graduate of Northeastern University in 1952 and Boston College Law School in 1954, has been a member of the Villanova Faculty since 1957, is the editor-in-chief of the recently published Public Regulation of Title Insurance Companies and Abstracters and, in addition to contributions to law reviews, has served as moderator of the moot court program at the law school. At the University of Nottingham, Professor Roberts will teach the courses in Conflict of Laws and Torts. Professor Hogan will offer these same courses at Villanova.

Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, newly appointed University Librarian, and Mary Derrian, veteran Library employee, admire portrait of the late Father Daniel Falvey presented recently to the Library. Father Falvey was Librarian for nearly 30 years prior to his death in April. Father Rongione, who was Dean of the Graduate School prior to his appointment, holds a Library Science Degree and was Librarian at the Augustinian International College in Rome.

Songs Of Summer

A NUN'S LULLABY

I shall never see your pink face
nestled close to my hearts,
But that is what I understood from the very start.
I shall never clasp your tiny hand round my finger tips,
I shall never close your eyes of blue with my lips.
I shall never curl your hair
lathered in shampoo,
I shall never make a trinket of your baby shoe.
I shall never dry your tears or kiss away the pain,
I shall neve hear you make the noises of the train.
You shall never call my name or smile to see my face,
You shall never say of me that none can take my place.
You shall never bring me flowers or sing a baby song,
You shall never hold my hand
as we walk along.

Do I miss you, they must wonder, who cannot comprehend,
You are like the life I forfeit for my friend.
You are like the trust I place in God's deep mysteries,
I have lost no more than God did when He made the seas.
You are what it takes to make the lily pure,
You are why I know each day that I will endure.
You are like the breezes blowing which cannot be seen,
You are what I give my Maker for a peace serene.
Your life is the one I offer for a greater one,
You're the star I set aside that I might have the Sun.
You shall never know the price I paid; they'll not understand,
But God and I, for all the ages, shall walk hand in Hand.
Sister M. Judith, O.S.B.M.

RECOLLECTIONS

Ringlets:
Practice writing
Lessons . . . Smoke journeying
Always to heaven . . .
coiled screen
Door springs.
Sister M. Francele, S.S.N.D.

REPRODUCTION

Skylines:
Bas reliefs of Ancient times molded to Their backgrounds . . .
picturesque, solid Unreal.
Sister M. Francele, S.S.N.D.

END TIME

Violets are spring beneath the falling leaves.
Why do the little birds fly?
Apartments of ivy against the bricks,
Or swooping low just over-pass the signs
That hedge upon the rusty tracks?

The rustling creak of the vane against the old house
Casts its image on the pond,
Where swimmer once seal-
like swam, and barges
Of the doges of latter golden days
Criss-crossed and come to silent rest.

I walked my love one autumn day, while all the leaves
And star shaped patterns of glass
Lay at our feet, a tribute to the all-eclosing,
The end time of the year, a herald of
The coming time span of the dusk.
Sean McKnight

Spirit of Villanova

It answers not to any name—
No picture knows its face,
Nor words however finely set,
Its noble form encase.

It sings aloud on nature's lyre,
Sweet balm to tired soul—
Who walks the lanes of Villanova,
Finds peace on tree-capped knoll.

The kindly smile, the hand outstretched,
The head bowed down in prayer—
The gentle hyms at eventide,
More beauty than one dare

To call by name; for who can say
What is the heart of it?
Enough to feel, and know, and love
Its goodness, bit by bit.
Sister M. Catherine James, O. P.

CREATION

Total darkness;
Then a faint shadow of light,
And a ribbon of green masked in blue
Followed by radiating spokes of reds
The DAWN.
Sister Mary Borromeo, R.S.M.

UNLESS YOU BECOME AS . . .

The simple charm of children makes us glad
For we recall our youthful innocence
And Christ's Own words of truth and providence
Comes back to us and makes the memory sad.
A tiny, elflike lass in gingham clad,
Her face aglo, with no adult pretence,
A countenance untainted — confidence — you
Be skeptical — she's forty-two.
Sister Inez, O.S.F.

DESIRE OF THE EVERLASTING HILLS

What lies beyond the hills, my child,
Is yours to seek and strive;
To follow paths I made for you,
Some are narrow, some are wide.
Follow through and walk beyond
The evelasting hills,
For there you'll find my Sacred Heart,
Sister Margaret Blanche O. P.
(Newburgh, New York)

AD DEUM

The sun has sunk beyond the west,
The world in dusky silence lay,
The leaves that fall reflect the ray—
Recall to mind my ceaseless quest.

Amber, azure, sable beacons
Flash across the shield of even,
Darting, fleeting, tints bereaven,
Silent vespers, God's own deacons.

Argent orbs radiate ceaseless beams;
Thankfully terminate daytime's rules,
Emulate creation's fiery gules,
Knowingly intimate God's own schemes.

While I, poor man, behold His scope—
The day, the leaves, the stars, the cold;
And God, yet I by sight behold
That God,—His deeds, His law, —and hope.
Jan M. Dyroff

TRISTESSE

Je marche a la classe
Visage sans couleur.
Pourquoi suis-je lasse?
Un examen a neuf heures!
Sister Inez, O.S.F.

RECESSIONAL

Were you ever lost in the stacks?
The books — lined like sentries on racks
Seem ominous and tall
Can't one help me recall
The labyrinth to Sullivan Hall?

SEA-SHELL

Delicate beauty from God's own Hand
Were you cast — ocean bathed — here on the land
To preach silently of pow'r divine
Were you placed here, scalloped gift of mine?
To remind me of earth's beauty small
Compared to Him—great lover o all?

YOUTH

I have a big brother named Joe
Who charmed girls wherever he'd go
But when Katie smiled
He sure was beguiled
And now he's her steady beau.

The appointment of Richard L. Jewitt, Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering, as Associate

Rev. Joseph J. Gildea

Dean of Engineering has been announced by Father President. Professor Jewitt, who joined the Villanova faculty in 1961, is a graduate of the United States Military Academy and the State University of Iowa.

The Physics Department will sponsor a Symposium on Saturday, July 28th, beginning at 9:30 AM in Mendel Hall.

The Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean of Graduate Studies, will deliver the invocation and an address of welcome.

Dr. Jerome J. Walken, Head of the Bio-Physical Research Laboratory, School of Medicine, University of Pittsburgh, will speak on "Energy Transfer in Living Cells" in the first session. He will be followed by Dr. Stephen Shafroth, Physicist in the Nuclear Physics Group of Bartol Research Foundation, Swarthmore, Pa.

Dr. Shafroth will review the subject "Low Energy Physics" in his talk. The final speaker will be Dr. Rodney L. Cool, Deputy Chairman for High Energy

Villanova Scientists To Recieve Equipment From General Electric

Scientific equipment, evaluated by the Villanova faculty at nearly $24,000, has been given to the University by the General Electric Company, announced the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President.

The equipment, which includes closed circuit television as well as many other new and complex mechanisms, will be used in the University's new multi-million dollar science and research center, Mendel Hall.

Standards Maintained

Mr. N. L. Whitecotton, regional Vice-President of the General Electric Company, called the gift a part of "the company's long established and continuing interest in the support of education to enable institutions to more nearly maintain their laboratories at the standards required for high quality instruction and related research."

In addition to the closed circuit television, Villanova also received X-ray equipment and electrical meters as part of the General Electric Company gift.

Dr. Anderson New M.E. Head

Dr. James R. Andersen has been appointed Chairman of the Mechanical Engineering Department as of July 1, 1962, succeeding Professor Georye Auth wdo wishes to continue in a teaching capacity so that he may devote more time to research.

Summer Sports Report

—Dennis Maloney

Villanova University's Wildcats, amassing a total of 49½ points, won the 86th annual ICA-AAA Track and Field Championship held here at Villanova on May 25-26. Because this was their fifth victory in the last six years, Villanova permanently retired the Championship Cup No. 6. The runnerup for the team title was Yale with 25½ points.

The Wildcats were led by world record holder Frank Budd, who scored sweeps in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Budd's times were 9.6 and 20.6, respectively. In both races, Budd was pushed to the tape by his team mate, Paul Drayton.

Other gold medal winners for Villanova were Doug Kerr in the javelin (224 ft. 10½ ins.) Leon Pras in the 120 yard high hurles (14.2), Rolando Cruz, who tied with John Belitza of Maryland in the pole vault (15 ft. 6 ins.), and Pat Traynor in the 3,000 meter steeplechase (9:19.-1). Both Cruz and Traynor established new IC4A records while winning their events.

Cruz bettered the old mark of 15 feet set by ex-Villanovan Don Bragg in 1956. Traynor broke his own meet record of 9:25.3 which he set at Randall's Island in 1961. Pat also finished second to Mark Mullin of Harvard in the mile. Mullin's time of 4:-06.4 broke the old record of 4:-07.8 held by Ron Delany of Villanova in 1958.

Vic Zwolak, hampered all spring by a foot injury, managed to place fourth in the three mile run won by Gerry Norman of Penn State. Billy Joe and Gerry Donini placed second and fourth respectively in the shot put, which was won by Gary Gubner of N.Y.U. Joe's toss of 60 ft. 6 in. was the first time he has cleared the 60 foot barrier.

At the NCAA Track and Field Championships held at Eugene, Oregon, on June 16, Villanova finished second to a powerful Oregon squad. Oregon scored 85 points, while Villanova had to settle for 40 3/7.

Frank Budd repeated his 1961 victory with a 9.4 clocking in the 100 yard dash. Paul Drayton ran 9.5 while placing fifth.

In the 3,000 meter steeplechase, Pat Traynor erased the old collegiate mark of 9:01, by running 8:48.6. Pat beat his nearest rival by five seconds.

Paul Drayton had to be content with second place in the 220 yard dash, even though he ran the same time of 20.8 as the winner Harry Jerome, of. Oregon, did.

Other point scorers for the Wildcats were Billy Joe and Rolando Cruz. Joe placed third in the shot put with a toss of 59-11, while Cruz tied for second in the pole vault at 14-9.

Football

Once again the football season will soon be here. Coach Alex Bell and his Villanova Wildcats are hopefully looking forward to another fine season. Last year, the Wildcats had an excellent 8-2 record, which included a victory over Wichita in the Sun Bowl at El Paso.

Because of graduation, Bell was left with two problems—how to fill the gap left at center and tackle. Without centers Rege Magnus and Hank Gotard, Bell will have to rely on sophs Chappy Moore and Jack McDonald, and senior Gene Ceppetelli. At tackle, captain Charley Johnson, Jack Helm, Harry Walter, and Al Atkinson will be counted on to fill the spots left by Tom Kepner, Jack Weed, and Jerry DeBalso, However, none of these boys have the size or experience of their predecessors.

At guard, Bell will rely on veteran standouts Al Calligaris, Bob Kowalski, Dick Bertozzi, Al Reinoso, and Buddy Nask.

Richie Richman and Ted Aceto will again divide quarterbacking assignments. Also in the picture is Bill Sherluck.

Billy Joe and Lou Rettino will provide Villanova with one of the best one-two punches in the country at fullback.

At halfback, Bell will count heavily on high-scoring Larry Glueck, Bob Merenda, Jim Thomas, Jack Boyle, and Jack Gastley.

Dynamic Expansion—A Villanova Keynote

19th Century Villanova

These two air pictures typify the keynote of expansion that has characterized Villanova University from the nineteenth century until the present. A full history appears on page 5.

Fr. Appicci Succeeds Fr. Farrell As Dean Of Student Activities

The Rev. Richard D. Appicci, OSA, Father Farrell's successor as Dean of Student Activities, is a relative newcomer to the Villanova campus. This fact (he was assigned to Villanova in 1961) is belied by his activity on campus. In addition to his newly acquired duties as Dean of Student Affairs, Father will continue in his capacity as Moderator for the Class of '63 and as an instructor of Theology and prefect of the third floor in Sheehan Hall.

Father was born and spent his younger years in North Bergen, N.J. Inducted into the Navy after graduating from high school, he spent his military obligation in France before entering the novitiate at New Hamburg in 1953. Having completed his novitiate, Father was sent to Villanova where he received his A.B. in Philosophy and then on to the Augustinian College in Washington, D.C., where he was ordained in June, 1960, at the newly completed Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Asked to comment about his new position and the rapid chain of events leading up to his appointment, Father replied, "During my past year at Villanova, I have come to realize more and more the importance of extra-curricular activities in the life of a college student. With the very obviously capable assistance and cooperation of Villanova student leaders as well as the student body, I hope to continue the excellent program of activities which Fr. Farrell has developed here at Villanova."

PORTRETTE

Clancy Guides OC's

A wise man once said, "Let thy speech be better than silence, or be silent." Sophomore Class President John Clancy when speaking of his success in heading the OC's is much better than being silent. As a student of social studies, majoring in Political Science, Clancy has managed to schedule a full roster of activities—varsity rifle team, Turf 'n' Tinsel, and Semper Fidelis Society—into his work-a-day school routine.

In addition to the usual task of herding the Frosh to and fro, John has added a few innovations to the orientation period. On the religious side he introduced a reception and Benediction. More secularly speaking a number of forums were held to acquaint the neophytes with life at Villanova. Most striking among the innovations was a mixer for the Frosh, the first of its kind in the University's history.

Speaking on behalf of the Orientation Committee, Clancy delared, "As far as we're concerned, this is one of the greatest jobs we will have during our stay at the University and we have tried to make our work as spirited as possible. In trying to arouse enthusiasm we are attempting many new things, and if things go as well as we hope, this year's Orientation will be a big success."

Council To Sponsor 'Tiki Ball' As First Campus Social Event

The South Seas come to Villanova on Friday, September 28, when the Student Council puts on its annual dance. Appropriately tabbed the Tiki Ball, it will consist of dancing from nine till one in the Field House above the high water mark on Lancaster Beach. The price of admission to this Polynesian fete will be $3.00 per couple.

Last year, the Student Council set records for income from a Villanova dance with a net take upwards of $1650 from an enthusiastic attendance of seven hundred couples. The perennially large attendance at this affair speaks of good entertainment so it looks like the Kona Kai will remember this luau for many moons. However, some of the Polynesian customs have been lost in transport to Villanova and anyone with a date sporting a grass skirt will NOT be admitted.

Variety Show Feature of Parent's Weekend

A main feature of Parents' weekend this year again will be a Variety Show. In the past this show has always been a big success, but the degree of success depends on the number of people involved. Auditions for this affair will be held on Thursday, September 27 at 10:30 a.m., the activities period, and at 7:00 p.m. in the University Field House. All students are encouraged to try out, especially the Freshmen.

Farrell To Address First ASME Meeting

The first meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Villanova chapter, will be held held on Monday, October 1, at 7:30 p.m. in room 209 C+F. Guest speaker at the meeting will be Mr. Joseph R. Farrell, of the Farrell Construction Company. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

V.U. Campus To Host 5000 For Publications Conference

Nearly 5000 high school students from the eastern part of the nation will attend the 15th annual School Publication Conference at Villanova University on Saturday, October 6.

Advance registration indicates that students representing 200 high schools and preparatory schools in ten states will attend the day long meeting. Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, University Librarian, is Director of the Conference.

The Rev. Albert J. Nevins, MM, President of the Catholic Press Association, will be the chief speaker for the young journalists.

The high schoolers will hear lectures and participate in activities designed to assist them in their work on high school newspapers, yearbooks, magazines and other scholastic publications.

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova President, will deliver the address of welcome in the Field House at 10:30 a.m. Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Among those speakers scheduled are Eugene Moore, TIME MAGAZINE; James Haughton of TV GUIDE; Mr. Leonard McAdams, PHILADELPHIA INQUIRE; Msgr. Anthony L. Ostheimer, Editor of CATHOLIC STANDARD & TIMES, and John Liney, prominent cartoonist.

A host of other speakers and panelists are scheduled to participate in the conference which is the largest of its kind held anywhere in the country.

Blazer Measurements

Students, especially Sophomores, are notified that measurements for school Blazers will be taken on October 9, 10, and 11, between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Father Joseph Bartley Dead Guided C&F For Forty Years

Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, OSA, Dean of Villanova University's School of Commerce and Finance, died early Friday, September 7, in the Villanova Monastery. He was sixty-nine years of age.

Father Bartley was ordained a priest in 1919. After completing his undergraduate studies at Villanova University he went to the University of Pennsylvania to participate in graduate work.

In 1922 he received his Doctor of Philosophy in Economics at the Catholic University in Washington, D. C.

While a seminarian at Villanova he was present when the University was privileged to honor William Howard Taft, President of the United States, and Composer Victor Herbert, at the 1910 commencement.

Founded C&F School

A native of Lawrence, Massachusetts, he founded the school of Commerce and Finance in 1922. During the forty years of his guidance, he developed the school into the largest on campus and one of the largest in the East. The school's present enrollment is 1500 students.

Active Augustinian

A member of the University's Board of Trustees, Father Bartley also held memberships in many prominent organizations

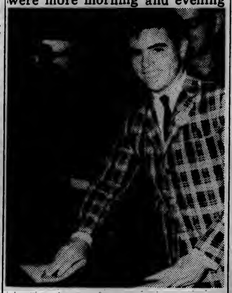
Dear Students of Villanova:

As we begin the new school year of 1962-63, we find that our beloved nation, the United States of America, is under severe challenge throughout the world. We are said to be losing our prestige and some say that we are slipping as a great world power.

It is easy to criticize our national administration, whether we place blame on the group presently in office or on those who preceded them. Certainly errors of policy, of judgement, of principle, have been made. This is human and many more blunders may be expected no matter who may be in office.

It seems to me that the most important factor in the greatness of any nation, in its real value in the world, is the moral and intellectual strength of the people of that country. Here is where we as individuals can do our part, and it is a most vital part, in maintaining and building the strength of our land. America will be as strong as we, its citizens, are strong. We will have the prestige and renown as a nation that we citizens deserve by real accomplishment in all orders of human activity.



As I happily welcome all Villanovans to this year's session of classes, I ask you to dedicate yourselves anew to work at Villanova, which is to develop your own moral and intellectual and physical capacities to the best of your ability so that you may indeed make your contribution to the continued greatness of our nation. This Almighty God asks of you in giving you the opportunity that has been provided you at Villanova. In this effort lies your true success and happiness both here and hereafter.

Sincerely yours,
Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A.

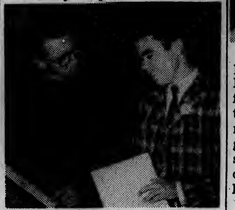
Successful Sophs Stir Sentiments Of Frolics In Floundering Frosh

by Arthur Molitierno

On Tuesday, Sept. 11, the Freshman Class of Villanova became acquainted with two of the most famous institutions of the University; orientation and the OC's. This year's orientation started with pep rallies and cheering in the morning and attendance of the entire freshman class in Vasey Hall on Tuesday night. On Wednesday there were more morning and evening classes in the art of cheering V. U. Highlighting the week's festivities was "Truth or Consequences Night" on Thursday. On Friday more pep rallies were held during the day while a torch light parade circled the campus at night. The parade ended with the singing of the Alma Mater in front of the chapel.

Matriculating freshman smiles before cracking books.

Joany Robbins



John Daly

Nearly 200 volunteer freshman stayed awake most of Friday night to guard the stadium against the Rams of West Chester. Saturday also proved to be a big day for the frosh as nearly the entire class, 1250, attended the game to cheer on the Wildcats.

Successful Orientation

From the comments of freshman and OC's it appeared that this year's orientation went off very smoothly. In an interview with Joany Robbins, Joany said that she enjoyed the orientation very much and that all the OC's were very helpful. When asked about the ratio of male to female at V. U., Miss Robbins replied, "I'm not complaining."

Frosh band aspirant enumerates qualifications.

In an effort to get a man's point of view John Daly was interviewed. John says that the week was just great. It kept his mind off home while it allowed him time to get used to the college spirit. He thinks that the spirit of the class of '66 will live on long after the orientation period is over. When asked about the freshmen nurses, Mr. Daly replied tersely, "I think frosh nurses are snobs, and once they realize that they are outnumbered by the other local girls' colleges they will either shape up or sit home on Saturday nights. As regards to their looks, no comment."

OC Charles Zaccaria said that he was very gratified with the spirit of the freshman.

U.S. Senate Nominee Donovan To Address Law Forum Friday

The first session of the Law Forum of the School of Law of Villanova University will be addressed by the distinguished New York lawyer and Democratic nominee for United States Senate, James B. Donovan, on Friday evening, September 28. He has entitled his talk at Villanova "Defending the Unpopular Defendant."

The initial Forum meeting this year is specially sponsored by the Villanova Chapter of the Order of the Coif. The members of the chapter will gather at Garey Hall for dinner preceding the lecture.

The Forum will take place at 8:30 p.m. at Garey Hall, the Law School building on the Villanova campus.

Mr. Donovan has had a most engaging career ranging from ironing out involved legal tangles for giant insurance companies to assignments tinged with high adventure in international relations. Most recently he has been trying to arrange the release of over eleven hundred invasion prisoners with the Cuban government.

Earlier this year Mr. Donovan negotiated the exchange of U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Colonel Rudolf Abel, the Soviet spy.

Mr. Donovan is a native of New York, having received his undergraduate degree from Fordham University, and his Law degree from Harvard. He served in the Navy and during World War II was general counsel to the Office of Strategic Services.

At the New York State Democratic Convention just concluded Mr. Donovan was nominated as the Democratic party's candidate for United States Senate to oppose Senator Jacob K. Javits, a previous Villanova Law Forum speaker.

Fr. Farrell Appointed As Development Head To Succeed Fr. King

Rev. William E. Farrell has been appointed by Villanova's president, the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, to head the Development Foundation.

Father Farrell succeeds Rev. Edwin E. King, OSA, who has been re-assigned to Miami, Florida, to assist the Augustinians there.

A native of Rochester, New York, Father Farrell graduated Villanova in 1945 as a naval midshipman with a degree in civil engineering. In November of the same year he was commissioned as a naval ensign.

Civil Engineer

After his discharge from the service he worked as a civil engineer until 1950 when he entered the Augustinian Monastery to study for the priesthood. He was ordained in 1955 in Washington, D.C., after which he went to the Catholic University in Washington for graduate studies in physics.

In 1956 he was assigned to Villanova faculty where he first served as an instructor of civil engineering and assistant chaplain. In the past two years he served as faculty advisor to the Villanova Alumni Association. Last year he was appointed Dean of Student Activities.

In his new post, Father Farrell will assist in directing Villanova's' expansion program.

In Memoriam

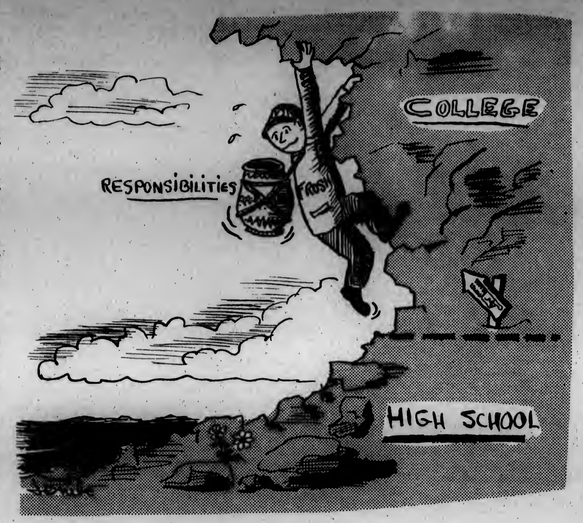
The VILLANOVAN extends heartfelt sympathy to Father President, the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, on the death of his brother, Joseph F. Klekotka.

Tread Softly, Frosh

After two weeks of dinks, OC's, pep rallys, book store lines, and the inevitable fines, the Class of '66 is well on its way to becoming a part of the traditions and campus life that are Villanova.

On the Main Line campus the frosh are discovering what is for them a totally different concept in education, both in the classroom and out. They are finding that it isn't as easy to stay ahead of the books as it was in high school.

Personal responsibility has taken over where the secondary school demerit system left off in enforcing class attendance. Teachers no longer push and nag about tests and papers. It's now solely up to the individual student.



But the student, especially the resident student, is also being educated in an entirely new way of life. His is the responsibility for getting his shirt cleaned, for getting up after a late night session with the books for an 8:30 class.

Along with this responsibility goes a feeling of newly won independence and freedom. In this respect the freshmen must act with caution.

There is a limit to the amount of liberty which can be taken with this freedom and a small amount of indiscretion on their part now can cause sorrow in future years. These responsibilities and freedoms are a part of the process of maturing and the freshmen should treat them with respect.

The Class of '66 is on the beginning of what will probably be the best four years of their lives. These years can be filled with gaiety, anxiety, or they can be a living nightmare, depending on what the frosh do now in the first semester of their college days. A little effort and the resisting of a temptation to join the boys at a local refreshment establishment will be rewarded in happier upperclass days.

The freshmen have been given a tremendous opportunity. It's up to them to use to their best advantage.

Fellow Villanovans:

On behalf of your Student Council, I am very happy to have this opportunity to welcome you as we begin the scholastic year 1962-1963.

In particular, I would like to welcome the freshmen, the class of 1966. You are now members of the Villanova family. You are enrolled in one of the finest Catholic Universities in the country. We hope that you will be here for four years, and that during these years, you will make use of the opportunity for educational and social development, which is present here.

We of the Student Council wish to make it known that the Student Government is your Student Government, and can only function properly with an active participation by the members of the student body. With this in mind, we hope that you will make use of your Student Council. Know your representatives and have them bring to us your ideas, so that we may further the interests of each and every student.

Sincerely yours,
Joseph A. Tate

Another Kennedy

Charges that the Kennedy dynasty is well on its way to being formed are running rampant after Ted Kennedy's recent victory in the Massachusetts senatorial primary. The younger brother of the President handily defeated his opponent, Edward McCormack, by a 2-1 margin.

The fact that Kennedy's position would be elected instead of appointed tends to disprove these attachments of a family reign.

Regardless of the actual amount of experience that Kennedy has or whether the Kennedy family funds were influential in the campaign, the fact remains that the people have made their choice known.

The tradition of this country has always been that no matter what charges have been hurled before an election, the people had the final say at the polls.

Thus charges and counter-charges about the dynasty are relatively foolish in view of this fact. If the people do not want a dynasty they will defeat Kennedy at the polls in November. However, if they waive this view and regard him strictly on a personal ability basis, they will elect the best man for the job.

Charges concerning this dynasty are another form of political bias and the people will show the truth of this when they cast their ballots in November.

New Orientation System Begins To Jell

After two years of operation, the combined Orientation Committees are showing that considerable success in orienting a disorganized group of freshmen into a spirited class can be achieved on the Villanova campus. This is in contrast to the organized confusion and chaos which characterized the orientation period just a few years ago. Once again this year the committees, composed of the Student Council, the Blue Key, and the Sophomore OC's, were successful to a fair degree in their tasks.

The change which has made this possible was the addition of the Blue Key to the orientation program. With the OC's and the Student Council free to indoctrinate the new students in matters of spirit and extra-curricular activities, the Blue Key devoted itself exclusively to matters of a more serious and mature nature, conducting interviews and aiding the frosh with their problems concerning campus life. The SC and the OC's successfully conducted such activities as the Truth or Consequences night and the pep rally, in fulfilling their duties during orientation. Smoothness marked the orientation program this year, something not easy to attain in a project of this type.

Few complaints were heard about this year's freshmen orientation program but among them were the lack of sufficient measures to enforce the wearing of the freshmen regs and the lack of communication to each of the various organization members who would be involved with orientation. This should be remedied by increased contact through the mails during the summer and more meetings in the spring before vacation.

Some mistakes and inconveiences marred several of the innovations made this year. Notably, the forums held for freshmen at which student leaders addressed them concerning campus life. Experience should eliminate many of these mistakes for next year's orientation program.

Expensive Surprise

A group of Villanova students, a minority perhaps but nonetheless a part of the university, had this year, as in the past, purposely staved their arrival at the university for registration.

For various reasons, this segment of the student body preferred to register late and pay the required fee for this privilege.

Their reasons ranged from acquiring one last paycheck (which would offset the late registration charges) to merely extending their vacation another week longer.

Previously the late registration fee had been set at ten dollars per student. During the past summer, however, this charge was advanced 150% to twenty-five dollars without any notification or warning to the student body.

Many of the returning upperclassmen, feeling that ten dollars could be afforded arrived anywhere from a day to a week after the announced registration times for their division and class.

The right of the administration of the university to raise its fees is not questioned nor are their reasons for the increases. The difficulty which the late registrant causes results in an increase in administrative costs and subsequently the increase in fees.

Whenever the tuition is increased, a mimeographed notification is mailed each student's parents at least several months beforehand. By all rights another notice should have been included received by all students last August indicating the increase in the late registration fee. None was received.

University's Campus History Spans 120 Years

(Compiled by Jerry Heavey)

Several times in recent years The Villanovan has published articles on the history of the University's growth and development. The purpose of these articles has been to contribute to the students's awareness of the tradition, spirit, values, and direction of the whole of which they are parts.

No words can tell a student more effectively than his own experiences what Villanova is now. But words can be effective and even necessary in telling what the University has been and what it can be.

Randolph Mansion is the building that first occupied the site where St. Rita's Hall now stands.

The story of Villanova's growth in the past has been a prophecy of what it can be in the future. Today's student is the product of past growth. He can be the nourishment of future growth.

The Beginning

Villanova began its long history with the acquisition of a country estate known as Belle Air, the property of a leading Catholic layman and Revolutionary War veteran, John Randolph, by the Augustinian community of Philadelphia on October 13, 1841. The following August, community life was established at Villanova, and a novitiate was established in December.

In keeping with the Augustinian tradition of education, the fathers were quick to open a school at Villanova. On September 18, 1843, classes were opened with thirteen "youths," probably of grade school or high school age in attendance.

Threatened with imminent danger from the "Know-Nothing" riots in Philadelphia, which resulted in the burning of the Augustinian headquarters at old Saint Augustine's Church in Philadelphia, and which threatened to involve all other Catholic establishments in the area, and under-staffed as a result of the illness of three out of four faculty members, Villanova closed its doors February 20, 1845.

In 1865, Villanova College opened its doors to lay students again with Father Ambrose A. Miller as President and a faculty of twelve.

In 1893, Villanova celebrated its Golden Anniversary. By this date the College had increased its physical size by the addition of a west wing to the old classroom building and the construction of the Chapel, which has become Villanova's greatest landmark.

First Engineering School

The Anniversary celebration past, work was begun on two gigantic new buildings, the monastery and "College Hall," under the inspiration of the then provincial Father John J. Fedigan. So far beyond the needs of the moment were these two structures, both completed in 1902, that the project was dubbed "Fedigan's Folly." The growth of the order, and the rapid expansion of the college, however soon turned the structures into monuments to Father Fedigan's foresight.

Up until 1904, Villanova had been a combined prep school and college. In that year administrative trends were begun which ultimately resulted in the removal of the prep school to Malvern.

This is an early view of Mendel Hall and the monastery of St. Thomas of Villanova. View is from the railroad. Upon close scrutiny the garden surrounding Mendel Hall may be observed.

First Commencement

Not daunted by its temporary setback, Villanova reopened in September with twenty-four students. The first public commencement was staged July 21, 1847.

A few years later, in 1855, under its newly received charter from the state of Pennsylvania, the new College granted its first baccularureate degrees.

The severe depression of the late 1850's, plus a desire to devote more time to ministering to the parishes assigned them, induced the Augustinian Fathers to close the College again, in June of 1857, the same year in which the first seminarian educated at Villanova was ordained.

Campus Chapel

Although no lay classes were taught for the next eight years, the seminary went on, producing twenty-seven clerics by the end of the period. During the Civil War Villanova devoted its facilities to the direct service of the country by converting them into a hospital.

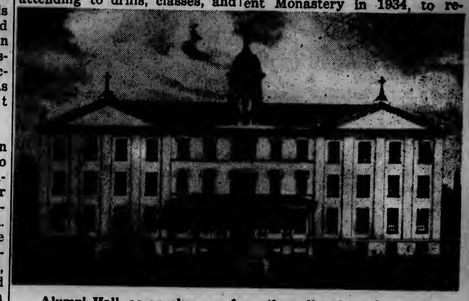
In accordance with the growing emphasis in the country on specialization, the opening of the Engineering School was announced. The idea of the new technical courses was well received, and classes in Civil Engineering were begun in the Fall of 1906.

School of Science

In 1915, the school of Science opened. Beginning with a one-year premedical program, the school rapidly expanded its curriculum to meet the increasing demands of the medical schools, until a four year course leading to the degree of B. S. in Biology was offered. With the pre-med course grew the rest of the Science School.

With the spread of the First World War to include the United States, Villanova's services were again to the colors, this time to train prospective officers. By the end of the war, the regular college students in the government sponsored Army Students Training Corps had taken their place on the battlefield.

During this period the influenza epidemic that was sweeping the country spread over the campus. To the unaffected few fell the lot of caring for the sick plus attending to drills, classes, and the other details of military life. The entire first floor of St. Mary's Hall was turned into an Infirmary.



Business School

Once the war had ended and life had returned to normal civilian patterns, expansion was redesigned to train Catholic businessmen were added to the Arts curriculum. By 1922, interest had reached such proportions that it became necessary to establish a separate School of Commerce and Finance. Father Bartley was appointed Dean of the new school. At the same time, Austin Hall was built to provide more dormitory space for the growing enrollment.

Stadium Built

In 1927, in response to the growing popularity of inter-collegiate sports, the south side of the stadium was erected, and the playing field, track, and stands transferred from the quadrangle behind the monastery. The north wing of the stadium was completed in 1929.

Two disastrous fires, one destroying College Hall in 1928, the other destroying the old monastery in 1932, did not halt Villanova's growth. Mendel Hall was built in 1929. and the present Monastery in 1934, to replace the lost buildings.

Alumni Hall, as an observer from the railroad tracks might see it, is conceptualized in this architect's sketch.

Another War

The year 1941, brought the United States into the conflict then raging in Europe. Soon after this nation's entry into the war, the President called twelve leading college presidents to Washington to formulate a training program for prospective officers.

In recognition of the outstanding tradition of capable administration leadership, the then president of Villanova, Father Stanford, was among those summoned. The "V-12" program these men formulated, combining the academic and the military lives, occupied nearly all the daytime teaching facilities of many of the largest colleges and universities in the country, among them Villanova.

Fire gutted most of the monastery in 1933. It was the second major fire on the Villanova campus blaze.

After the War

With the military in control, life at Villanova was completely transformed. Uniforms were to be seen everywhere; only a handful of lay students remained.

After the war the influx of older men returning to educations interrupted by the war was so large that a new classroom building and four new dormitories had to erected.

Shortly after a new Chemical Engineering Building, the finest in the country, was erected. Next to it rose John Barry Hall, which houses the NROTC unit, one of fifty-two in the country. A new Library to house the college's overflowing collection of books was also built.

Now A University

On Wednesday, November 18, 1953, at 1:30 a.m., by virtue of the signing of a new charter, Villanova College became Villa-

The Villanova Alchemy Department has recently announced that they have discovered a method of transmiting lead into gold. This is the first major breakthrough in this field in the last five hundred years. The department announced that this discovery came as a result of their student research program. This program was introduced in the Spring semester of 1842.

The department has also announced satisfactory progress in its other endeavors. They point out that their next triumph will either be in the field of batvenom or wolf's-bane analysis.

The department has also announced contingent plans for the first overseas expedition sponsored by the university. They plan to send a team to Greece in search of the Philosopher's stone.

The Department of Theophysical Research announced recently its plans to host the New England Chapter, Salem Village Post, for its annual cook-out. This affair is a custom dating from the high Medieval Period in Germany and other European countries and was introduced into this country by Cotton Mather in his best-seller "Witchcraft and How To Burn It Out."

The members of the department lament the fact that for the past three centuries witches have been in short supply. However, they hope to make up for this lack by a traditional ceremony known as "burning in effigy."

Festivities will begin on Thursday night with a combined Sabbat and Folk Song Festival. It is hoped that if all goes well there will be quite a display of St. Elmo's fire as aerial works, and a running barrage of will-o-the-wisps as ground works. Acrobatics at the gathering will be provided by poltergeists on loan from a Long Island haunted house. All are invited to attend.

The Cartography Department has announced plans for its annual walkaround. The purpose of this year's walkaround is to duplicate Leif the Lucky's voyage of discovery, but unlike Leif, the members of the walkaround will be on foot. Leif used a Viking war canoe, so all participants are requested to bring their own SCUBA equipment. Oxygen will be supplied by the Department, and lunches by the faculty wives.

As a result of last year's activities, the Department has been given a grant by the National Foundation. This grant will be used for an expanded research program. Included in the forthcoming projects is a toopological survey of the University parking lot. As a practical result, scientific planning of white line placement is expected to result, thereby cutting the parking lot's mortality rate.

Caught In Passing

By Jan Dyroff

"Stop The World—I Want To Get Off" starring Anthony Newley and Anna Quayle is surely one of the best musicals of the current season, if not one of the best in years. Making use of pantomime, song, and dialogue, the show revolves around the age-old theme of the selfish man. There is even a seven-girl equivalent of the ancient Greek chorus in this, "a newstyle musical."

Anthony Newley's portrayal of Littlechap is magnificent. There is a Chaplinesque aura surrounding him, in that he is able to draw emotion from the air and to magnetize the audience with it.

Quick Plot

The show is a lively one with quickly moving plot and uptempo music. The only fault, and a minor one it is, is that the first act gets off to a rocky start and the act itself is almost a little too long.

The show opens onto a circular stage with Littlechap acting out his childhood. When a problem comes up, Littlechap calls for the world to stop while he makes an aside, the problem assumingly having been cleared up by this. As a teaboy in a factory Littlechap starts on his road to advancement by seducing and marrying his boss' daughter Evie, played by Anna Quayle.

In rapid succession the couple has two daughters, played by the Baker twins, Susan and his luck in the song "Lumbered."

International Relations

While about his father-in-laws business Littlechap acquires a few attachments abroad. The first, in Russia, is a lady football player, the second, in Germany is a "typische Deutsche" fraulein, and the third, in America, is a night club entertainer, a la the late MM. These are all played by Miss Quayle. The first act ends while Littlechap is recovering from his American adventure.

Littlechap Succeeds

The second act opens and Littlechap has acquired his success and decides to stand for Member of Parliament. He is successful and as a result of his work he attains the peerage, and various questionable honors. The curtain rings down with Littlechap still trying to emerge from his egocentric cocoon.

Throughout the musical there is a running reparte between the principals and the chorus. At times it is racy, but always sharp. There is a critical tone to the work, but nothing cynical.

Show's Standouts

Included in the musical's score are a few songs that would appear to be destined for great things. Two obvious standouts are "Gonna Build A Mountain" and "What Kind Of Fool Am I." Lumbered" is a catching tune somewhat of the calibre of "Officer Krupke" from West Side. "Meilinki Meilchick" is poignant beautiful in its own way, and "Mumbo Jumbo" is the show's critical sharpness at its best.

Anthony Newley began his career in the Italia ContiSchool in London from which film producer Geoffrey de Barkus took him to appear in a number of films. After Army service, he returned to the screen and in "Idle On Parade" he was featured in his first singing role. Just prior to coming to America with this show Newley scored a big personal success on the London West End stage by appearing in John Cranko's "Cranks."

Beginning as a child star, Anna Quayle, now 26, first went on the stage at the age of three to play Little Willie in "East Lynne." Miss Quayle is established as a comedienne in London's West End theatre and she, as well as Newley, has appeared on BBC-TV.

Aside from Anthony Newley and Anna Quayle, the rest of the cast is all under twenty. Among the teenagers are Susan and Jennifer Baker who have appeared on British TV but who have had no professional stage experience prior to "Stop The World."

nova University. Signs of change were everywhere. Enrollment had tripled since the war. Sullivan Hall was already under construction. The new Nursing and Law Schools were taking their places at Villanova.

On December 9, 1953, Father Francis X. N. McGuire, President of Villanova, announced a twenty-year, $21,150,000 development program, the first goal of which, after the completion of Sullivan Hall, was a new Student Union Building, which is now Dougherty Hall. So as to be able to devote his full attention to the expansion of the University, Father McGuire was released from his duties as President, to take over the newly-created post of Director of the Development Program.

The expansion program inaugurated by Father McGuire is now under the direction of the Rev. William Farrell, OSA. Father Farrell was appointed last week and succeeds the late Father Falvey and Rev. Edwin King who directed the program last year. Father King has been reassigned to duties in Miami, Fla.

Sheehan Completed

After the completion of Dougherty Hall, Sheehan Hall took its rightful place among the other buildings on the campus. Soon afterwards two additional new buildings were to be seen on the campus, the C&F building (completed in 1958) and the new Mendel Hall Science building (completed in 1961). Although not directly connected with the university, the new Augustinian Seminary will be completed.

Through fires, wars, and "know nothing riots" Villanova has proved to be worthy of the name university. We hope and pray that the tradition that is Villanova will live on.

Some Things are Nice to Have Around

A Utility Ball Pen.

The Lindy

A good practical pen for everyone.

Everybody likes the LINDY.

It writes nice.

Lots of students buy two or three at a time.

Maybe because it's only 39¢. Maybe because there are twelve brilliant ink colors.

Or maybe they just like to have two or three or twelve around.

Also nice to have around:

STENO-PEN 49¢ ea. F.T.I. FAIR TRADED
The secretary's secretary.

AUDITOR'S PEN 49¢ ea. F.T.I. FAIR TRADED
Fine for (it figures) auditors.

"Freshman? Well, let me begin by directing you . . ."

What Is A Freshman?

By Art Molitierno

Newly acquired cap, stylish upturned tapered cuffs, executive-type name plates—these are the physical marks of a freshman. Yet, besides the bulge in his coat pocket, which most assuredly is a V. U. student handbook, there must be something else which distinguishes a freshman from all other types of students, or human beings for that matter.

Experience Helps

In my vast experience as a student, an impressive six years, I have come to the conclusion that most upperclassmen do know, in a logical sort of way, just what a freshman is. Even some freshmen in a fit of intuitive knowledge realize that there is a difference. But I for one can not see any difference. This problem is of grave concern to me since I am not a freshman and think I am being left out on an intellectual theory which I should be able to comprehend. Let me illustrate the point.

Across the tracks

Just yesterday I had one of those freshmen come up to me while a number of upperclassmen were standing around talking to me. The freshman asked very politely, though with extreme awkardness, "Where is the V. U. Field House located?" Immediately the upperclassmen broke out into a fit of uproarious laughter. For the life of me I couldn't understand their attitude. Taking him aside, I immediately told the frosh, I think that's what they called him, that the Field House is located across the railroad tracks, behind the clumps of trees and bushes which obscure its view. The freshman then started skipping across the campus, on one foot, to reach the field house. Of course I had told him that it would be impossible to reach by walking, so he very intelligently devised another means of traversing the distance.

A Helping Hand

Some time later that day the freshman managed to single me out among my friends again, only this time to ask me where he might find the swimming pool. Naturally, like any upperclassman, I was eager to help the novice. And so, I directed him to the fourth floor of Dougherty Hall which is where all the student activities are conducted, and which has been located on the other side of Lancaster Pike (at the bottom of the hill) for a number of years. My companions, who incidently were always eager to make fun of the frosh, tried to disuade him and give him false directions—saying that the swimming pool is located down the road a piece, across from the T.V. Guide Building. But sensing my superior intelligence, the frosh readily saw through their deception and followed my instructions to the letter.

Chance Meeting

I don't know whether by chance or by good fortune I happened to meet the same freshman that day. He came up to me and from the gleam in his eyes I knew that he must have found the swimming pool. He looked at me with his little rudy face and managed to bellow out in words that were supraliminal, "Did you try to trick me? I found the swimming pool but I just couldn't find Lancaster Pike."

I quickly assured him that I had no intention whatsoever of using for any means of humor. Then I directed the fresh to Lancaster Pike, which as everyone knows is straight off Ithan Ave. and has big signs all along it marked route 23.

Senior Car Privilege Continued By Council On Full-Time Basis

Through the efforts of the Student Council, administration, and the hard work of Mal Carton and Jim McErlane, the Senior Car Privilege was extended on seven day a week basis. The Student Council spent considerable time securing this privilege and every Senior is expected to cooperate fully with the necessary regulations.

The first regulation concerns the car privilege stickers, which must be displayed at all times when the car is in the lot.

The second regulation concerns the area in which the seniors are to keep their cars. This is in the rear of the main lot, opposite Dougherty and Austin Halls.

This year's Co-Chairmen Neal Stoneback and Jim O'Connor stress that to avoid confusion with the Day-Hop parking, it is imperative that this regulation be strictly observed and that resident cars be kept there at all times during the week.

The entire lot is checked every day, and even one violation of this regulation will mean that the Senior involved will lose his permit permanently.

Stoneback and O'Connor urge everyone to cooperate fully so that no revocations will be necessary.

1962 NROTC Battalion Staff Commanded By Wawrzyniak

Villanova NROTC Unit in its 17th year has announced its new battalion staff. This year's staff, as in the past, was selected from the outstanding candidates in the unit. High motivation toward the military service and a respectable academic standing are the qualities displayed by these midshipmen officers.

The Battalion Commander is Daniel J. Wawrzyniak. He attended Camden High School, graduating in the upper tenth of his class. Soon after graduation, he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps and after one year tour of active duty he came to Villanova on a NROTC scholarship. He is now majoring in Mathematics. Upon graduation he will be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps. The Commander's staff includes:

J. V. Clay, Executive Officer, J. M. Barron, Operation Officer, J. J. Pinkos, Personnel Officer, L. G. Young, Supply Officer, R. J. Rosener, Battalion Adjutant, L. E. Reynolds, Public Information Officer.

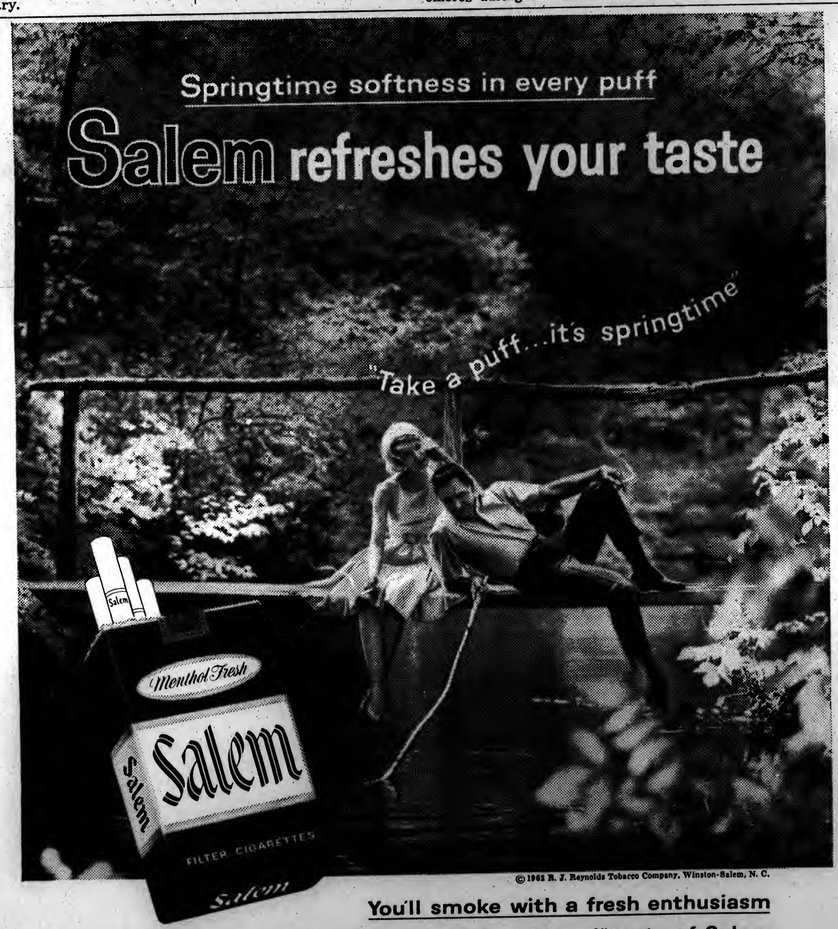
The Battalion is composed of five companies. The following midshipmen are this year's Company Commanders: C. Clark, Band, J. J. Tracy, A Co., P. W. Conners, B Co., K. O. Eastman, C Co., R. Hulit, W Co.

Frosh Nurses Feted At Sophomore Picnic, Tea and Fashion Show

As a part of their orientation the Sophomore nurses presented the annual Tea and Fashion Show on Friday, September 14, for the freshmen nurses. The show, sponsored by Pi Theta Chi, the Nursing Sorority, featured fashions supplied by Helen Caro.

The freshmen were made welcome by Mary O'Leary; following the welcome there were addresses by Justine Nebus and Meg Sullivan. The event was narrated by Lillian Lamb.

During another phase of the orientation period, the fifty-three freshmen nurses were feted at a picnic given by the sophomores during the initial week.



Student Post Office Enlarges Facilities In Tolentine Annex

The new student Post Office on the bottom floor of Tolentine Hall has enlarged its present facilities to accomodate more student mail boxes. This innovation is hoped to eliminate some of cramped situations which had been experienced in the past.

At registration, single boxes were available to all students. At present it is now necessary to double up for some students. These names must be registered at the main Post Office adjacent to the railroad tracks.

It is also urged by Post-Master Whitcroft that all students inform their correspondents of their exact address. Change-of-address cards for newspapers and magazines are available at the main Post Office.

The lobby of the student post office is now open at all times. Window service will be available from 8:00 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. Monday through Saturday, and 3:00 pm to 4:00 Monday through Friday. Outgoing mail will be collected at 9:30 a.m. Monday through Saturday, and 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Forty-Two New Professors Join Faculty For Fall Semester

New faces on campus are not the property of freshmen alone, as forty-two new instructors and professors join the Villanova faculty for the fall semester.

The Philosophy Department acquired the greatest number of new members: Dr. John D. Beach, Mr. Denis J. Corish, Dr. Francis J. Kovach, and Dr. Charles J. O'Neil. In other departments of the School of Arts and Sciences, the English Department welcomed Mr. Robert A. Kantra, Mr. Patrick J. Nolan, Mr. Gaetano N. Pastore, and Mr. Andre Turcotte. The Geology department acquired Mr. Edward S. Belt, and additions to the History Department include Mr. Anthony R. Turner and Mr. Richard J. Hopkins.

The Mathematics Department has two new instructors: Mr. David J. Sprows and Mr. Joseph T. Suchar, and Mr. Jacques Henri-Perivier joined the Modern Languages Department as an instructor. Mrs. Mary Y. Parr joined the Library Science Department as an assistant professor, and additions to the Nursing faculty include Mrs. Theresa B. Ponko, Miss Gail A. Kurtz, and Rev. George F. Riley, OSA.

New Theology teachers include Rev. Charles D. Tirrell, OSA, Rev. John P. O'Rourke, OSA; and Rev. Kevin F. Dwyer, OSA; and the Speech Department welcomed Mr. James J. O'Toole and Mr. Raymond G. Wilke. Mr. Thomas F. Nevins is new to the Theatre Department, as is Mr. Frank T. Colon to the Political Science Department. The Psychology Department's additions include Dr. Eugene H. Welsand, Mr. J. David Barcik, and Dr. Joseph R. Devane.

Engineering Instructor

In the Engineering School, the Mechanical Engineering Department has added Mr. Krishan K. Ahuja and Mr. Manuel M. Alarcon. The Civil Engineering Department has a new instructor in Mr. David J. Schorr, while Dr. Tsute Yang, Mr. T. W. Hsu, and Dr. Lucio Calabrese joined the Electrical Engineering faculty.

The Commerce and Finance School claimed four new members for its teaching staff: Industrial Administration Assistant Professor Mr. William Ruckstuhl, Economics Associate Professor Dr. Chipei P. Tseng, and Accounting Assistant Professors Mr. Francis A. Bird and Mr. Harry L. Gelman.

The Villanova NROTC unit has added three Naval Science professors: Lt. John F. Donahue, USN; Lt. Col. Thomas J. Johnston, Jr., USMC; and Ltjg. Bernard A. Ryan. A new Director of Testing Services, Dr. W. Porter Swift, has also been named.

The editors of the Belle Air have announced that all Seniors who have not yet had their Senior portraits taken should make an appointment with the Belle Air office, located on the ground floor of Vasey Hall. This appointment should be made prior to September 30 for portraits to be taken October 1, 2 and 3.

John Simone Elected National President At NFCCS Convention

John Simone, a 1962 graduate of Villanova University, was elected president of the National Federation of Catholic College Students by unanimous acclamation at its national convention. As president, Simone will travel throughout the country as a representative of NFCCS.

The main functions of his job will be the establishment of NFCCS in Catholic colleges and universities as a new activity and the explanation of the possibilities for Catholic Action in those places where it already exists.

NFCCS Purpose

Commenting on NFCCS Simone declared, "The National Federation of Catholic College Students is an organization of students on Catholic campuses. It has as its immediate goal the filling of certain needs of the Catholic college community in the co-curricular field, chiefly by providing a means whereby students can both study and act on important contemporary issues."

While at Villanova, Arts major Simone was Alternate Delegate to NFCCS in his junior year; and President of the Philadelphia Region in his senior year. He was also active in the Beta Gamma Debate Society, the Knights of Columbus, the Philosophy Club, and the Villanova International Student Association. He was also a member of the Delta Pi Mu fraternity.

An innovation to this year's orientation program was a mixer held in the Field House on Friday evening, September 21. Dancing lasted from 8:00 until 11:30 p.m., and music and entertainment were provided by The Revelers.

Sponsored by the Sophomore Class for the benefit of the freshmen, the mixer had as its primary aim the acquainting of the Class of 1966 with members of neighboring women's colleges.

Girls from Chestnut Hill, Cabrini, Rosemont, Immaculata, and Holy Family were among those in attendance.

Admission charge for boys was $.50 unless a freshman had purchased a ticket to the Student Council dance, in which case he as admitted free. All girls were admitted free.

John Clancy, sophomore class president, stated that " . . . the dance was very successful. A nearly equal ratio of boys to girls attended with the total attendance over 1300 persons. I hope that future classes continue the mixer as a part of orientation."

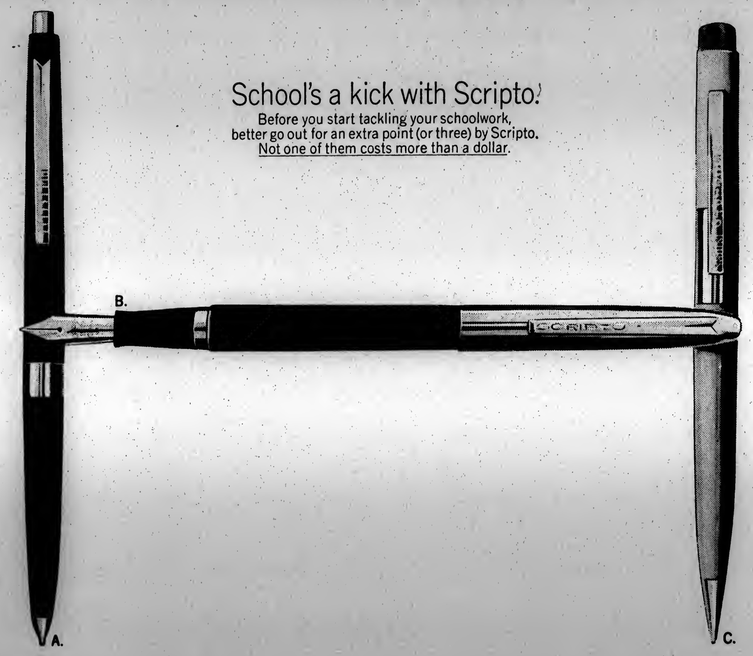
and distinguished himself by his active participation in them. They were the Foreign Trade Association, the American Management Association, the American Economic Association and the International Peace Association.

Testimonial In May

The acknowledged authority in the field of economics was honored by hundreds of former students at a testimonial dinner last May. It was held in observance of his completion of forty years as Dean of the school he founded.

In 1958 a three million dollar Commerce and Finance building was completed in his honor. The building stands today as a monument to Father Bartley's wisdom and unique ability as an administrator and educator.

He was buried in the Monastery cemetery alongside other distinguished Augustinians who served Villanova.



New Committee Heads To Be Announced By Council Chairman Tate

The initial meeting of the Student Council will take place tonight. The main order of business will be the announcing of the committee heads for the coming year.

Of interest to seniors will be a report on the senior car privilege. Joe Tate, Chairman of the Student Council, announced that there will also be a report from last year's delegate to the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Jim Howley, chairman of the Blue Key, relates that there will be a report on the tentative plans for Parents' Weekend.

Reviewing the period of adjustment for the freshmen, there will be a detailed report from Marty McGuinn on the success of Orientation Week.

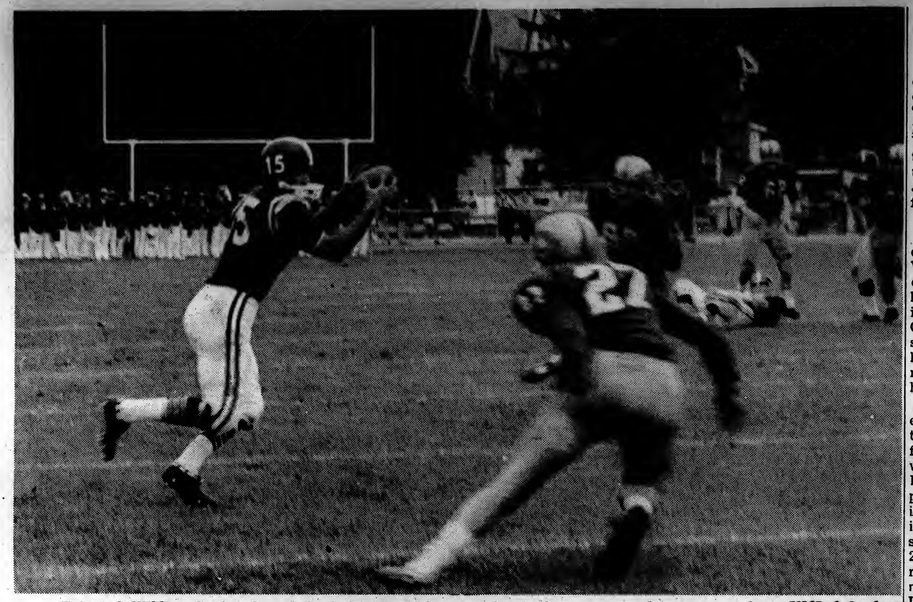
Two Villanova Seniors Garner ASTM Awards

The American Society for Testing and Materials has announced that Villanova Seniors Robert H. Hartman, Jr., C. E., and Joseph J. Minecci, M.E., will receive the Society's annual award at Princeton University on October 29.



Award certificates will be presented by the President of the Society, Mr. A. C. Webber, Assistant to Laboratory Director, Plastics Dept., Research and Development Division, E.I. Du Pont De Nemours, Inc.

The awards are made upon college engineering and science students who have shown superior scholastic ability and deep interest in engineering materials and their evaluation.

Donahue Appointed As President Of Alumni

Edward J. Donahue, Class of 1933, has been appointed to the presidency of the National Alumni Association of Villanova University. Donahue, active in Alumni activities on both the local and national level, captained the track team during his senior year at the University and played varsity football and basketball; he was also active in the Glee Club.

In addition to his contributions as a Director of the Villanova Alumni Foundation, and membership on the Board of Governors of the Alumni Association, Mr. Donahue has been very active in local civic activities.

VMI took the kick-off that opened the second half and quickly punted four plays later. Three running plays and two passes moved the ball to the VMI 8. With 5:09 gone by in the third quarter, Richman threw an eight yard TD pass to Joe Cutroneo. Barbaro's kick for the extra point was good.

The final Villanova touchdown came in the third stanza. With good protection in front of him, Richman unloaded to left end Jack Clifford. Gathering the ball in on his own 48, Clifford ran 52 yards for the six-pointer. Bill Barbaro kicked his third extra point of the afternoon and the Wildcats were home 24-0.

Spirited Frosh Drop Muff Day Activities To Sophs 105-80

The Sophomore Class overcame a nearly twenty point deficit to defeat an enthusiastic Freshman Class 105-80 last Monday in the annual Muff Day activities, sponsored by the Intermural Department.

Seeking their first win since 1957, the frosh got off to a fast start by taking four of the first five events. The Sophs then rallied and took the next five out of six contests, including the bigger point scorers, the touch football game the tug-o-war, the push ball, and the girls' basketball game.

2-0 Football Win

Captained by Class President John Clancy and Class Vice President Charlie Zaccaria, a blocked punt late in the football game gave the sophs a two point safety which wall all that was necessary to cinch victory. On a third down play, an attempted kick was fumbled and blocked by one of the frosh's own men.

The ball then bounced back into the end zone where it was recovered by the frosh thus giving the sophs the two-point safety. Several plays later the frosh almost pulled the game out by connecting on a touchdown pass that was called back on an out-of-bounds call.

Real Desire

The frosh were organized by sophs Charlie O'Reilly and Tim Driscoll before a crowd of about 500 participants and spectators. Clancy commented that "the Frosh were really up and showed a real desire to win."

Sophomore Gatton Cestone also pulled from behind to sink 23 foul shots in a row to capture the foul-shooting contest. In the girls' foul shooting, however, the sophs did not fare as well with the frosh coming out on top.

Both the girls' foul-shooting and the girls' basketball game are new features of Muff Day (Move Up Forward Frosh).

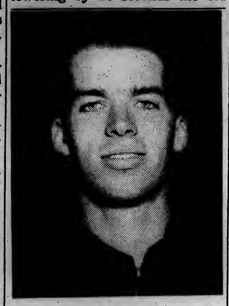
Summer Sports Scene — Satisfying

by Jack Duffy



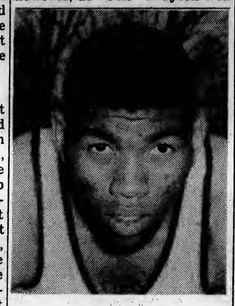
When school recessed in June, the track season was in full swing. Two of the world's top sprinters, Villanova's Frank Budd and Paul Drayton, participated in the Compton Relays. Budd swept both the 100 and the 220, while Drayton was nosed out in the 220 21.0 to 21.1.

Middle Atlantic AAU

On June 11, the Middle Atlantic AAU track meet was held at Villanova Stadium and "Jumbo" Elliott's cinder-men finished with seven first places. Drayton won both sprints, Don Webster took the 440 yard dash in 4.85, and Charlie Hammock won the 120 high hurdles. Switching to the field events, Doug Kerr captured the javelin and Billy Joe out-tossed the field in the shot-put. Rolando Cruz vaulted 15' ¼" to win the pole vault.

Meets in California

The Wildcats then traveled to the West Coast for the NCAA at Eugene, Oregon, and the National AAU at Walnut Park, California. In the collegiate championships the 'Cats took two Gold medals. Budd won the 100 in 9.4, but Pat Traynor was the big noise. He won the steeplechase with a time of 8:45.6, lowering by 16 seconds the old meet record set by John Lawler of Abilene Christian last year. Billy Joe was third in the shot-put, while Drayton was second in the 220 and 100. Cruz scored by placing fifth in the pole-vault. With a total of 48 points, the 'Cats finished second to powerful Oregon. One of the big disappointments of the meet was the failure of Budd to place in the 220.



Pat Traynor

AAU Meet

The following meet in Walnut Park, Cal. was one Frank Budd won't forget for a long time. In the finals of the 100 yard dash, he was running alongside of the other co-holder for the 100: Bob Hayes of Florida A and M. Typically, Frank got off to a fast start from the blocks and, just as he was about to pull away, he stopped short with a severe muscle pull. This marked the end of one of the most spectacular track careers in the past decade. It could be the start of a new career, as Frank can now be seen scampering up and down the football fields of the NFL wearing the Green of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Drayton ties record

The meet wasn't a total loss, however, as "Otie" Drayton won the 220 and tied the world's record around a curve in 20.5. This mark broke the old American mark of 20.6. Drayton along with distance star Pat Traynor were chosen on the American track team that faced the Poles, Russians, and later toured Europe.

Otie Drayton

McDonough stars

Track was not the only sport in which Villanovans were involved. Villanova's top swimmer, Dick McDonough, saw to that. In the Eastern District Championships held on August 1, Dick won the 100 meter freestyle in :56.6. In the Men's National AAU Outdoor Swimming Championships held at Akron, Ohio, he placed fourth in the butterfly and fifth in the 200 meter freestyle. In a men's invitational meet held in Philadelphia on August 18, McDonough won the 100 meter freestyle in 0:54.6. Later in the event McDonough was presented with the Sackett Award, the oldest individual swimming award in the country.

Leftwich hurt

"Into each life a little rain must fall" or so the man says and Villanova was no exception this past summer. George Leftwich, while traveling to visit relatives, was injured in an automobile accident on August 5. The ligaments in his right knee were severely torn and he is wearing a cast. He hopes to have the cast off by Christmas and return to school in February. Fortunately for opponents, George will be out for the year. He'll return for the 1963-64 season.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

After last year's 12-3 season, the Villanova Varsity Rifle Team is counting on new recruits to equal their record this year.

To fill the gaps left by graduating seniors, the team will begin recruiting new candidates, with tryouts scheduled for today and tomorrow.

Master Sergeant J. J. Reilly, USMC, coach of the team, expects the freshmen class to be well represented among the new candidates since no previous experience is needed to join the team. The necessary instruction will be given to those individuals who display any aptitude or the sport.

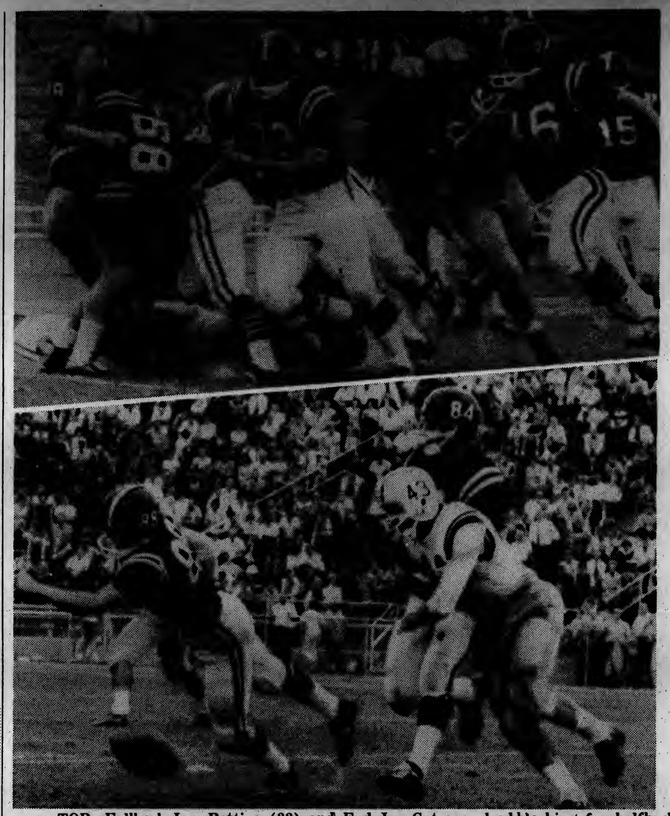
Wildcats To Face BC Eagles; Miller Boasting 34 Lettermen

by Tom Finan

The Wildcats face one of their toughest opponents of the present season this Saturday afternoon when the Eagles of Boston College descend on the V. U. campus. Coached by Jim Miller, who last year guided the Titans of the University of Detroit to 5-4 season, the B. C. eleven has lost only 6 men from last year's powerful squad. With 34 lettermen returning, and several talented soph prospects on the scene, Boston College could be one of the leading powers in the East.

But a demanding schedule faces Boston this year, in the form of Syracuse, Navy, Vanderbilt and Texas Tech. Though both dropping their openers against Oklahoma and Penn State, respectively, Syracuse and Navy will certainly prove rugged and talented opponents against the Eagles. The tally of this 26 game rivalry between Villanova and B.C., first started in 1922, remains 10-15-1, with V.U. on the deficit side.

Offensive Strength



Quarterback John Concannon, a junior will be the offensive nucleus while John Barrett will occupy the halfback position and Harry Crump will be fullback. Barrett is the son of formes big-league pitcher Charles (Red) Barrett. The line will be fortified with guards Dave Yelle and Lou Cioci, tackle Dave O'Brien and captain-end Art Graham.

Clash With Detroit

In last week's debut with Detroit, Boston College triumphantly overcame the deadly accurate passing of All-American Jerry Gross, the former prize student of ex-coach Jim Miler. With several fumbles and interceptions destroying the Titans' offense, the Eagles capitalized on these mistakes and romped to a 27-0 victory, before a disappointed Motor city crowd.

Eagle sophomore Bob Shann proved to be one of the game heroes, as he played a rugged defensive game in setting up one touchdown and providing for another by re-capturing one of Gross' fumbles. A third TD resulted from another interception of a pass of Gross'.

Scoring single touchdowns in the first and second quarters, BC broke loose to score two more in the fourth quarter. Definitely this show of strength, skill, and power against such a capable and competent team as Detroit, backed up by a very highly-rated All American signal caller, indicates that a fierce and bitter struggle will be waged this Saturday in Goodreau Stadium.

'Mural Season Opens With Touch Football And Muff Day

The Intramural Department has planned many activities to add to the 1962-63 school year. Ranging from the annual "Muff Day" to homecoming decorations, all students are given a chance to display their individual talents.

"Muff (Move Up Forward Frosh) Day", held this past Monday, pitted the Sophomore class against the best of the Freshman class in a variety of athletic events. The last time the Freshmen beat the Sophomores was in 1957. The score last year was Soph 90-70 over the Frosh.

Touch football starts

Touch football also begins this week. Seventy teams have been entered in this year's competition. All games will be played at 2:30, 3:30, and 4:30 on Mendel and Austin Fields.

A cross-country meet will also be held on Wednesday, October 3. The meet will start in the stadium and the runners will circle a route that will be mapped out throughout the campus.

Sometime in the middle of October, preparatory meetings will be held for the annual Nick Basca Homecoming Weekend. This year the decorations should be bigger and better than ever, with a new award given by the Alumni Association to provide added incentive.

New Office

As if in anticipation of another outstanding year, the Intramural office will be spotted in a new location. The new site will be in the basement of Alumni Hall, adjoining the gym.

'Cats Open '62 Season On Hot Note As Rams, VMI Crumble 31-6, 24-0

by Tom Bruderle

Before 13,000 fans and an area-wide television audience, Villanova opened its 1962 season by drubbing West Chester 31-6.

Neither side scored in the first quarter but the Rams came close twice. They drove to the Villanova six by way of a Terry Eberley to Joe Iacone pass but were halted. A field goal attempt was missed. A West Chester interception brought the ball down to the Villanova 13 but again the defense tightened.

Rettino Scores

Villanova scored the next time they got their hands on the ball. A 90-yard drive was capped by a plunge from the two by fullback Lou Rettino. The try for two points was missed. Taking the kick-off, West Chester could move only 18 yards and were forced to punt. Villanova took over and tried to find a hole for Billy Joe but the nine-man West Chester line would not open. At the half the 'Cats led 6-0.

Rams Threaten

West Chester recovered a Wildcat fumble on the Villanova 35; however, they were unable to take advantage of it. The Rams punted and the 'Cats began to move. Richie Richman tossed one to Larry Glueck who caught it on the West Chester 43 and scored. Bill Barbaro's extra-point try was no good.

West Chester's first TD was set up by way of two long passes from Eberley to Max Micsin. Joe Iacone cracked over from the five. The try for two was missed but it was brought back following a Villanova penalty. The extra point try was also missed.

At this point Villanova proceeded to score three touchdowns in five minutes ten seconds. Following a recovered fumble by Mike Strofolino, Bob Merenda scored with 13:11 to go in the game. The try for two was stopped. Merenda recovered a fumble and Billy Joe scored. Again the try for two more was missed. West Chester tried to punt but a poor snap from center plus fine rushing by the VU linemen gave Villanova the ball on the Ram 12. Two plays later Richman scored and the extra point attempt was good. At the time of the final TD, there was 8:10 left in the game. These three touchdowns iced the game for the Wildcats.

Rough Keydets

For the second time in two years VMI was picked to give Villanova a rough time. And for the second time in two years the Keydets were shutout, this time 24-0.

The lines of both teams were going to be the deciding factors according to some crystal-ball gazers, and how right they were! Villanova went through, over, and around the VMI line for 27 first downs and 539 total yards. The Keydets were only able to collect 2 first downs and 61 yards against Coach Alex Bell's stingy defense.

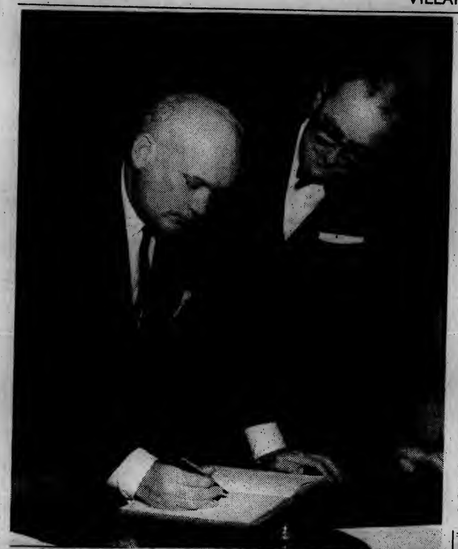
Merenda Scores

After the ball changed hands twice, Quarterback Richie Richman threw a 25 yard pass to Bob Merenda who caught it on the VMI one and stepped over. Bill Barbaro's extra point try was good.

Following the Villanova TD, neither side was able to score, and the quarter ended with the Cats up 7-0.

Ground Game Moves

The 'Cats began another drive midway in the second period. Running most of their plays on the ground, Villanova advanced from their own 12 and drove deep into VMI territory. Twice the Wildcats were faced with fourth down situations and both times they elected to go for the first down and were successful. With fourth down and four to go, Billy Joe tried left end but was nailed and Villanova gave up the ball on the VMI 17 yard line.



Field Goal Good

Following VMI's punt after four plays the Bell-men took to the air. Ted Aceto passed to Larry Glueck and three to Richie Richman, who was used as a flanker, and moved the ball to the Keydet 17. With two seconds left in the first half, Barbaro booted a 25 yard field goal.

Mr. James B. Donovan is seen here signing the official Law Forum Log. Harold G. Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School, watches as the signature is made.

Lawyer James B. Donovan Featured At Initial Session Of Law Forum

by William S. Gross

The first session of the Law Forum of the School of Law at the University was addressed by the distinguished New York lawyer and Democratic nominee for the United States Senate, Mr. James B. Donovan, on Friday evening, September 28. His talk was entitled, "Defending the Unpopular Defendant".

Mr. Donovan opened his talk by stating that in a free society it is a privilege to defend the unpopular defendant. Qualifying this statement, Mr. Donovan went on to explain that in a monolithic totalitarian state there is no equal justice for the unpopular defendant, since the executive leaders rule over the Bar for the best interest of the state rather than the individual.

Greatest Obstacle

Expanding his opening statement, Mr. Donovan observed that the greatest obstacle to good council, or any at all, in the United States is a lack of understanding by the United States citizenry and some members of the Bar for defense of "The Weak, The Poor, and The Unpopular". As a partial solution to this problem Mr. Donovan proposed that the "Adversary System should be known and taught to every school child". Clarifying the Adversary System he explained that both defense and prosecution should

SC Committee Chairmanships Made Known At First Meeting

New committee chairmen of announcements and the promulgation of the enforcement regulations regarding campus organizations and their activities were the dominant notes of last Wednesday's Student Council meeting, its first of the semester. All the new regulations are itemized towards the end of this article.

Announced by Vice President of Student Government Bill Di Paolo as the new chairmen are: Social Affairs, Bob Mairone and Fran Kelleher; Elections, Marty Whelan and Jim Tate and Ways and Means, Joe McCarthy.

Appointed by Vice President for Educational Affairs Jim McErlane are: Academic Affairs, Al LaMastra; Cultural Affairs, Dick McIntyre; Religious Affairs, John Smock and Peter Theiss.

And appointed by Vice President of Social Affairs, Jim Howley are: Student Activities, Neil Stoneback and Jim O'Connor; Publicity, Tom Furst and Richard Connors; Spirit, Roger Bride and Bill Spelimeyer; Student Union and Special Problems George Borosa and Dick Belon.

Following a welcoming address by Chairman Joe Tate, reports on individual progress on their committees were given by the Vice Presidents and the officers.

A few of the more important reports voiced were the approval of 80 seniors out of ninety applicants for the Senior Car Privelege. Stickers and permits are now being handed out pending the approval of some seniors, who are to see the Chaplain regarding their chapel attendance.

The public address system will also be used three times nightly for announcements while changes will be made on the Council bulletin boards on Monday and Wednesday. The Spirit Committee has scheduled a rally in the quadrangle the Thursday evening previous to the Buffalo game.

Moving into New Business, four noteworthy motions were presented to the assembly and all received approval.

The first concerned the erection of a sign advertising Villanova athletic endeavors on the

Villanova Press Conference Hosts Eastern High Schools

Villanova University will hold its fifteenth annual Publications Conference on Saturday, October 6. Nearly 5000 high school students from the eastern part of the nation are expected to attend.

Advance registration indicated that students representing 200 high schools and preparatory schools will attend the day long meeting. Director of the Conference will be Rev. Louis A Rongione, OSA, who is the VILLANOVAN moderator and the University Librarian.

The Rev. Albert J. Nevins, MM, President of the Catholic Press Association, will be the chief speaker to address the young journalists in the Field House.

The high schoolers will hear lectures and participate in activities designed to aid them in their function on high school newspapers, yearbooks, magazines and other scholastic publications.

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova President, will deliver the address of welcome in the Field House at 10:30 a.m. Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Among those speakers scheduled are Eugene Moore of Time Magazine: James Haughton of TV Guide: Mr Leonard McAdams of the Philadelphia Inquirer: Msgr. Anthony L. Ostheimer, Editor of the Catholic Standard and Times: and John Linev, a prominent cartoonist.

A host of other speakers and panelists are scheduled to participate in the Press Conference which is the largest of its kind held anywhere in the entire country.

Cotillion Weekend Plans Include Dance, Early Mass, And Game

Tickets will go on sale this week for the Sophomore Cotillion to be held the weekend of October 19. The Class of '65 is elaborating on the attempts of previous sophomore classes to have a weekend scheduling a full list of events exclusively for members of the Sophomore Class. At this date, however, most details are tentative.

The first event on the agenda is the Cotillion, itself, which will run from nine to one o'clock Friday night with music to be supplied by Maurice Scott and his orchestra. The evening will feature the crowning of the Sophomore Cotillion queen.

Queen Contest

The method by which the Queen will be selected is not definite at this time, but Don Pellecchia, Cotillion Chairman, stated that "the method of selection will probably be the same as that followed in the selection of last year's Queen. The details have not been decided yet, but

Freshmen Retreat Next Week Has Father Duffey As Master

The annual Freshman Retreat will be held next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, October 10, 11, and 12, in the University Field House. Retreat cards can be picked up Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday, October 9 and 10, in the center lounge, Dougherty Hall.

The Opening Exercises begin Wednesday evening at 7:30, and will be followed by a conference, benediction, and confessions. The Retreat Master will be Fr. Joseph Duffey, Director of Vocations for the Province of St. Thomas of Villanova.

Thursday's full schedule opens with an 8 a.m. Mass for both resident and day students. Conference will be conducted at 9:30, 11:00, and 1 p.m. Confessions will be heard immediately after the second and third conferences. The 3 p.m. Holy Hour closes out the afternoon exercises but residents must return at 7:30 for night prayers and confessions afterwards.

Blessed Sacrament

Nocturnal adoration has been a tradition during the Villanova Annual Retreat. All retreatants are urged to spend an hour before the Blessed Sacrament; it will be exposed after the Holy Hour. Day-hops may bring their family and friends on Thursday evening to join them in their period of Adoration.

On Friday conferences will be held at 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. The Retreat will close with Mass and general Communion at 12 noon.

NROTC Staff Replacements Include Marine Lt. Colonel

This year five replacements have joined the staff of military personnel of the Villanova NROTC Unit. The five changes include three officers and two enlisted men.

New Executive Officer

Lt. Col. T. J. Johnston USMC is the new Executive Officer of the unit. Lt. Col. Johnston was graduated from V.M.I. in 1947 with a B.S. in Civil Engineering. Before his present assignment as Executive Officer of the NROTC Unit, he was Battalion Commander in the 10th Marines, 2nd Marine Division, Fleet Marine Force. The Colonel's combat operations include the Pacific campaigns on Palelia and Okinawa.

Naval Operations

Lt. John F. Donahue a graduate of the Naval Academy is another new officer of Villanova's NROTC detachment. He replaces Lt. jg. Thompson as Assistant Professor of Naval Science and will be teaching Navigation and Naval Operations.

Other Changes

R. E. Larson, USN S.K.C. and F. J. Rodrick, USN YNI are the other men among changed personnel in the Unit. Chief Larson comes to Villanova after just completing a tour of duty in Greece with the U. S. Military Aid Group. Rodrick, YNI comes to the Unit after serving on the USS Neosho.

On-Campus Recruiting Reported Successful By Director Moritz

The 1962 on-campus recruiting season was one of the most successful ever to be held, reported John A. Moritz, Director of Placement at Villanova. Five hundred and twenty-six seniors and 8 graduate students registered with the Placement Office, whose purpose it is to assist seniors and graduates in their selection of employment in their respective careers. Of the 526 offers from 138 companies 179 were accepted, 82 entered military service, and 98 pursued graduate studies.

As in previous years the average salaries were 3% to 5% higher. Engineers' salaries ranged from $430 to $680 per month with an average of $553 a month. For Commerce and Finance majors, the range was $350 to $560 per month, with Accountants and Industrial Administration showing averages of $499 and $467 respectively.

The returns from Arts and Science majors were too scattered to furnish valid data. Details on these and other salaries are displayed on the bulletin board in the Placement Office, which is located in the east wing of Sheehan Hall.

Seniors are urged by Mr. Moritz to visit the Placement Office to secure their resumes in preparation for the 1963 recruiting season extending from January 4 through April 14, 1963.

Three Plays Slated For Epic Presentation By Graduate Theatre

The Graduate Theatre Department has announced its plans for the forthcoming season. Three plays are to be featured, "Coriolanus" by William Shakespeare, "Enchanted" by Jean Giraudoux, and "Private Life of the Master Race" by Bertolt Brecht.

The first of these, "Coriolanus," will be presented in a split week performance series on December 6, 7, and 8 and December 14, 15, and 16. This season is to be one of experimentation. In addition to the split week performances, an innovation on this campus, all three productions will be done in the "epic" style of theatre.

Epic Style

The "epic" style of theatre is a controversial form in which an attempt is made to rid the production of excessive realism. In an effort to emphasize the beauty of simplicity of story, the playwright makes use of mechanical devices such as projected images and speakers.

The "epic" style dates from the post-World War I period from dramatic experimenters in the United States and Germany. Bertolt Brecht has been called the father of the "epic" style.

Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" will be done in this style. The play will be updated with modern dress and will be placed in a setting of contemporary Algeria.

Tryouts for "Coriolanus" were held on September 25 and 26.

Delany Seeks Interest

Spearheading an important drive to interest the student body in the work of the Student Council is John Delany, current Secretary of the Council and Senior Arts and Sciences Representative.

Ired by the continual complaints and the crass complaisance of the studentry, Delaney has organized a person-to-person campaign to present his plea. Saieth the Secretary: "Students can speak before the Council at their meetings to bring their ideas directly home. The whole student body can bring up motions!"

The prospective law student from Flushing, New York, acknowledges the relative limitation of the Council representatives themselves to originate and execute all proposals. Yet he pointed out the concrete effects of active student interest directed towards their Council members. For the tireless efforts of certain Council-men enabled the procurement of the senior car privilege and the alteration of the retreat schedule.

Delany, known to friends as Jay, will be graduated from Villanova with a bachelor of science degree in psychology. In addition to his duties with the Council, Jay exercises executive leadership with the Senior Steering Committee, and supplements his studies in psychology through participation in the Villanova Psychological Society.

In connection with campus social activities, Delaney has worked on the Shamokinaki Dance.

WWVU Readies To Begin Operations "Variety Is Our Keynote": Sauers

Station WWVU, the radio voice of Villanova, resumes its campus music and news broadcasts at 2 p.m. this Sunday, October 7. "Variety is our keynote," said Program Director Frank Sauers, as he announced the format changes for the coming year.

Sole program returnee from last semester is the 2-5 p.m. popular music show, which accents the "swinging sound" and features pop vocalists such as Frank Sinatra and Ella Fitzgerald and big bands such as Les Brown and Si Zentner.

Classical music selections from both famous and lesser-known composers will be played each day from five to six.

Nightly Specials

The evening spotlight from 6:30-7:00 will focus on vocalists on Mondays and Fridays, instrumentalists on Wednesdays, and music from the Broadway shows on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Following the spotlight, one or two artists from the field of jazz will be featured for one hour nightly. Study, or mood, music will be broadcasted from 8:00-9:30 p.m. Big bands and pop vocalists can again be heard till the 11 o'clock closing signal, with a sharper focus on jazz.

Musical programming innovations include a three-hour Sunday digest primarily of folk music, beginning at 7 o'clock, and featuring two of Villanova's Troubadours Three, Tom Picardo and Tim Hauser; and sporadic music specials, highlighting such artists as Sinatra, Kenton, and Ray Charles.

Information Central

The WWVU News Department announces late news on the hour from the wires of United Press International. From 6:00-6:30 p.m. listeners can tune in Information Central. Sauers describes it as "a comprehensive coverage of international, national, and local news, including commentary on news, sports, and the entertainment world."

"Emphasis," a bi-monthly intercollegiate discussion program, is to be continued this year. Besides this, the News Department has expanded to include interviews with important personages who may visit the campus, as well as with professors of Villanova to interpret news developments.

Station Manager Mark Devaney announced that Villanova athletic events are to be broadcasted through the facilities of station WWVU whenever possible.

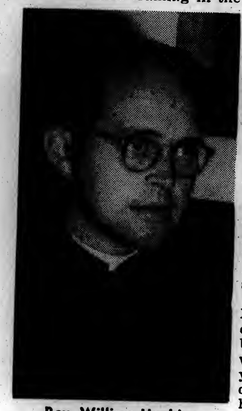
Tiki Ball Starts New Season

Villanova's social calendar was initiated last weekend when approximately 700 couples attended the Tiki Ball, the annual Student Dance, on Friday, September 28 in the Field House.

Benecke Blasts

Highlighted by Harry Benecke's Orchestra in unusual iridescent costumes, and including several exotic numbers, the dance was enthusiastically attended by a large group of Freshmen.



A Hawaiian Atmosphere was created with an abundance of well-planned decorations, and intermission entertainment was provided by Chris Clark and his quintet.

Co-Chairmen Bob Mairone and Fran Kelleher expressed thanks to all those who made the Polynesian affair a success. Special mention is due the Sophomore O. C.'s and also Belle Masque, who devoted their time, effort, and ability to the South Seas decoration.

Fathers Hopkins, Tirrell Assume Chaplains' Duties

The Rev. William I. Hopkins, CSA, Father Norbert Whitley's successor as chaplain, came to Villanova in 1961. Concomitant with his duties as chaplain, Father Hopkins will be a prefect for freshmen in Good Counsel Hall.

Father Hopkins was born in and attended secondary school in Philadelphia. Inducted into the Army in 1950, he received basic training in the United States before his tour of duty in Japan and Korea. He was a sergeant with the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team.

Rev. William Hopkins

Thereafter he was graduated from St. Mary's Hall, Villanova, and continued his studies at the Augustinian International House of Studies in Rome. He was ordained in July of 1960 and celebrated his first mass at St. Peter's Basilica in Rome.

Assisting Father Hopkins is Father Charles D. Tirrell. A former student at Villanova, Father Tirrell entered the Augustinian seminary in New Hamburg, N.Y. at the close of his sophomore year.

He was graduated from St. Mary's Hall at Villanova and continued his studies at Catholic University of America. Father was ordained in February of this year. Presently he hopes to complete the necessary work for his master's degree in psychology and counseling.

Belle Masque Slates William Saroyan Play As First Production

Mr. Thomas Nevins of the Speech and Graduate Theatre Department has announced that the first Belle Masque production this year will be "The Time of Your Life" by William Saroyan. The play will be held in Vasey Hall Auditorium, November 14 through 17.

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. for all performances except for a Saturday matinee scheduled for 2:00 p.m. Tickets for all performances will be on sale in the Pie Shoppe starting November 2, and can also be purchased the night of the performance.

Belle Masque will also present a one act play on Friday night of Parents' Weekend, October 27. Other plans for the Drama Society include tentative arrangements for a Christmas show for the children of faculty members. If the special Christmas show is realized the same performance will be given at Holy Family College in Philadelphia.

Surprise from the Belle Masque Society this year will be the entrance of a float for the Nick Basca Weekend float competition.

Progress is obvious on St. Mary's Seminary, located across from the Law Building, on Spring Mill Road. Completion is scheduled for sometime in 1963.

Parents' Weekend Activities Announced For Oct. 26-28

The annual Parents' Weekend, beginning with a Variety Show Friday evening, October 26, and closing with Mass in the Field House Sunday, October 28, will surpass all previous ones in events and activities, announced Blue Key Secretary Tom Semmer.

Rev. Joseph A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, will open the weekend activities with an address preceding the Variety Show at 8:30 Friday evening in the Field House. Registration of parents will take place Saturday morning from 9:00 to 10:00 a.m. at the guard house, imme-

Winter LYNX Plans

The Lynx, Villanova's student literary publication, is scheduled to appear on campus late in the first semester. Frank Murphy, editor of this year's Lynx, expressed hope for a large winter edition.

Much material is still needed and any one may submit his or her material to the Villanovan office or room 311 Sullivan Hall.

Dance, Game, Concert Comprise Nick Basca, Homecoming Events

Nick Basca Weekend, commonly known as Homecoming, will be held this year on November 2, 3, and 4.

The weekend will officially start with a dance Friday night in the Field House, at which time the Homecoming Queen will be chosen. Music will be provided by Al Raymond and his ten piece combo.

The floats submitted by the different organizations will be paraded around the field at half time of the Detroit game on Saturday.

Co-chairmen of the weekend, Bob Coogan and Ralph Saviano, have announced that there will be a concert Sunday afternoon in the Field House at which the Four Freshmen will perform. Intermission entertainment will be provided by the Troubadours Three, formerly known as the Criterions.

AUTO INJURIES

Prayers are asked of all Villanovans for the speedy recovery of James Howley and James Feller, now recuperating in Bryn Mawr Hospital. Both were injured last Saturday night in an auto accident.

dained in June of 1953 in Washington. After his ordination he obtained his M.A. in Accounting in 1954 from the Catholic University of America.

Navy Intelligence

Previous to his entering undergraduate school at Villanova, he had worked as an expediter for the Bendix Aviation Corp. between 1940 and 1942. In November 1942 he entered the U. S. Navy (Intelligence Division) and was discharged in November of 1945.

After his graduation from Villanova Father Barrett taught Accounting at Kings College in Wilkes Barre. Following his ordination and graduate study he taught bookkeeping and religion at Archbishop Carroll High School in Washington. Five years later he was named rector of the High School.

In 1961 he was assigned to Merrimack College in Andover, Mass., as a professor of Theology and Dean of Men. During this period he began the planning and supervision of a new Augustinian High School in Reading, Mass. The new institution will be known as Austin Repararatory School.

Incongruities

With the second session of the Democratic 87th Congress coming to a close, its accomplishments are due to be evaluated by both major parties. Bi-partisan observers feel that this was not a very productive congress.

It seems incongruent that the same congress could pass 33 major laws during its first session (compared to 12 passed under President Eisenhower) and then only succeed with 15 major laws in its second session. What changed this progressive congress? The answer lies in the relationship which exists between the Administration and the Congress.

The Democrats had few major victories in this session which would aid their re-election. They can admirably point to the Reciprocal Trade Bill as a milestone which gives the President tremendous economic power.

Other Administration successes were in the Defense and Space Budget, the Drug Act, and the Manpower Retraining Bill.

With the major Democratic defeats, the Republicans have a lot of political ammunition for the oncoming election. The defeats, which were part of Kennedy's campaign promises, include Aid to Education, Medical Care for the Aged and the Urban Affairs Plan.

The Democratic Congress has been rough on President Kennedy (apparently) for four major reasons. First, the Democratic majority appears large on paper, but does it actually exist? In reality, the conservative elements from both parties have united to almost a majority during this session. After record spendings the last session, these conservatives tried to hold down the budget and therefore limited such important expenditures as Foreign Aid and Aid to Education.

Secondly, President Kennedy does not have enough enthusiastic supporters from his own party. Few liberal democrats take an active part in the crucial debate and their help has to be solicited from the President if he wants his program defended.

Third, Kennedy trailed most of his Democratic Congressmen in popular votes; and, as a result, they feel that they do not have to win the President's assistance in their efforts to be re-elected.

Finally, Kennedy's liason men between the White House and Congress are using high pressure methods to secure votes for his program.

But President Kennedy seems partly to blame also. He rarely went before Congress directly to gain support for his program. Usually he commented to them through nationally broadcast press conferences and didn't get very effective results. Perhaps the President is trying to please too many people, if that's a mistake in a democracy.

It remains to be seen if with the 88th Congress Kennedy will step off "the middle of the road" into the "New Frontier."

A Sweet Dream

The Editor's Readout from DATAMATION'S October 1961 issue states, "In an industry still in its infancy but feeling the potential of manhood, dreams have valuable functions." They are speaking of automation, but the dream they talk of is a nightmare to many.

The reason for their troubled sleep is that there is an ever increasing fear that a machine will take a man's job, and the man will be left penniless. Or that the machine will be a "superior" to man, and the man will be humiliated. There is even a fear that machines will someday "think" and do away with the need for man entirely.

Such fears, however, are groundless. Technological advances open up new industries and provide more work, not the contrary. In highly mechanized processes, the only way a machine can get the upper hand and be "superior" is when it is allowed to do so by a non-thinking man, no better than a machine. It is unlikely that machines will "think" and do away with man, for who but man designs and builds the machines to begin with?

DATAMATION further declares on automation as serving as "creative respite from practical labor, a sometimes impressive vehicle for progress, and as candied delights to manufacturers rationalizing the daily pains of financial loss."

This is a sweet dream and not a nightmare!

Easter Vacation Realignment

One of the most intriguing, if not considerably intelligent, motions to emanate from Villanova's student legislators is a petition that seeks a complete realignment of the vacation schedule for the coming year.

The motion received a substantial majority in both the Student Senate and the Student Congress during its first meeting held last week. Many undergraduates here at Villanova have at one time or another voiced strong disapproval of the present schedule.

As pointed out by the motion's maker, Jim Howley, there is the utmost necessity to communicate with the Administration immediately. In this way there will be no need for tabling the request because it has been suggested too late in the year. This was the case late last winter.

A Committee-of-One, Marty McGuinn, was appointed to handle the motion. It is hoped that some arrangement can be reached with the Administration whereby a longer Easter vacation can be granted this school year.

At present the school calendar includes as the Easter vacation only a five day break between classes. And, it might also be noted, that this is the only actual break that occurs during the entire second semester. During the past, the vacation had covered ten days. The apparent reason for it being shortened last year was the new "during class-times" retreat schedules.

With the present arrangement, there is little opportunity to really accomplish anything substantial during the break. The resident student contends that he has a very limited amount of time to spend at home. This is especially true of those who might live at a distance. For them, about two days of their vacation will be spent traveling unless they travel by expensive jet.

Likewise the possibility of gaining work while home is equally remote, both for the resident and for the day-hop. Study time is also at a minimum. If a student wishes to catch up with his work and return to class in good shape for the remainder of the semester, he finds that, in addition to a scarcity of time, libraries are simply not open most of the latter part of Holy Week. Any extensive work on term papers or the like is therefore prohibitive before it is time to return to class. Easter is also highly regarded by students as an opportunity to just rest and relax.

The break between semesters, however, constitutes some eight days in which there is no obligation to one's studies. Three more days of registration time can also be included in this period.

The Christmas vacation this year also gives Villanovans almost three weeks of off-time. Looking at the situation from another point of view, as mentioned during the Council meeting, two of the regular holydays, which are ordinarily off-days, fall on weekends this year.

It is therefore suggested that, if necessary, several days be taken from one of these vacation periods and added to Easter.

Even if the present calendar can be amended to give the student body one full week off (an addition of two days), a definite improvement will have taken place.

But no real objection can be foreseen concerning a realignment, especially if the students are willing to yield some of their own time off their vacations for a somewhat lengthier Easter break.

The Administration and Mr. McGuinn, as the student body's representative, are urged to reach some mutually agreeable solution.

Out Of A Hat?

Action, Now!

President Kennedy's "Let's not get tough policy" in Cuba is being felt by all freedom loving persons around the globe. No little talk was given to the possibility of Communist interest in Cuba as being decoy for aggressive Communist moves in Berlin. Now both territories are matters of grave concern.

In the past, the President voiced an opinion of Cuba's economy claiming that because of its sluggish and sickly forecast, Cuba could pose no serious threat to the free world. In mid-July Communist interest increased; latest Naval intelligence reports showed the arrival of some 800 Russian ships and tankers.

The Cuban situation grows worse. Proposals of a 30 million dollar "fishing port" and converting the Isle of Pines to a missile base are now being considered. If completed, these bases will be used for surveillance of our shores.

Conditions in Berlin grow more intense. Communist MIG fighters are now harrassing the air corridors of commercial flights to Berlin.

Still the President waits, pencilling proposals, wishing away action. Experience has taught us that an agreement to negotiate does not always lead to negotiated agreements. It is time for action, not only defensive but offensive.

Bartley Hall?

Another motion worthy of note which the Student Council produced last Wednesday night was one which would change the name of the Commerce and Finance building to Bartley Hall, in honor of the late dean of the Commerce and Finance School, Rev. Joseph Bartley, OSA.

The Villanovan endorses this motion with enthusiasm and hopes the administration will receive it favorably. This would be a wonderful tribute to a man who gave his life to Villanova University and the School of Commerce and Finance.

A Correction

The VILLANOVAN has been informed by the Administration that an error appeared in the editorial concerning the late registration fee in last week's issue. The fee was raised last February, instead of last summer, as noted by the editorial. Notice was given through an interoffice memo to the various departments. The change also appeared in the 1962-1963 UNIVERSITY BULLETIN and appears in the current edition of the student handbook.

NFCCS Duties Outlined

By John Neary,
Senior Delegate N.F.C.C.S.

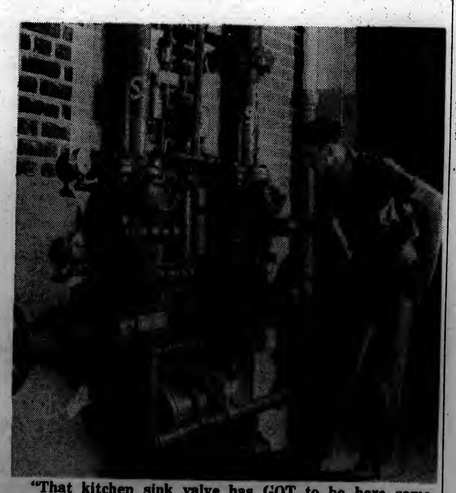
Some students have fundamental misconception concerning the essence of the National Federation of Catholic College Students on our campus. NFCCS is not a club or a campus organization. It is a committee or commission of the Student Council.

The NFCCS commission does not directly implement the programs it receives from the national or regional offices as a club would do. Instead it recommends these programs to the Student Council in the form of motions which present the program and a method whereby the program can be effectively implemented.

In the sense then that the NFCCS committee will be responsible for the implementation of its recommendations, it will do nothing. NFCCS is, then, a liason or communication link between the other Catholic colleges and our own.

Supplies Council with Information

The NFCCS commission supplies the Student Council with material it could not get on its own. The commission also represents Villanova in both regional and national bodies, thus fulfilling a representative as well as a service function.



During the past summer I attended the NFCCS national congress as a representative of Villanova. In addition to passing legislation we also acquired a great deal of information with regard to our recommendations for the year, 1962-1963.

Those interested in learning more about the NFCCS commission should get in touch with me through the NFCCS in the Student Council office.

Racial Problems

For those who are interested in racial problems, there will be a regional seminar held at Rosemont College, October 7, at 1:30 p.m. Students from all the area colleges are invited to attend. The program will include a study of the racial problem and the initiation of a regional program for action in this area.

From time to time NFCCS will be making recommendations for the student body as above. The potential good that can be obtained from these recommendations is limited only by the effectiveness of this communications link and the maturity of the student body to use wisely the information gained. How well this liason works is up to you.

Worth The Price Of Admission

By Art Molitierno

If you happen to be driving along Eight Street late at night you could easily miss it. Not located as its name suggests, in the one of the so-called finer sections of the city, the Society Hill Playhouse stands out as one of the all too few theatres that are left.

True Acting

The movies and television have all but replaced that happy medium where ability and acting skill are the things to watch. People now-a-days seem more concerned with sitting down and watching, what might be termed synthetic acting on a screen that is either half the size of a footabll field or half the size of a small dining room table. They would rather see people who can always, through the use of film, be at their best than exercise their intellect and see what true and un-edited acting can be..... or for that matter, not be.

Necessary Decor

Again, if you are looking for a beautiful theatre, with gold leaf and plushness and a stage on which "Aida" could be performed in all its magnificence, don't go to the Society Hill Playhouse. All you can expect to find there is a small theatre and stage that can only boast of a decor whose main attribute is necessity. All you can expect to find is an audience that loves and appreciates the stage. All you can expect to see there is acting.

Neither will you find big name actors and actresses who have a big fan club. You will find, however, people with fine acting ability performing for a small audience on a stage that can boast of few props or set designs. Nor should you expect to hear a full pit orchestra if a musical is currently on the bill. All you will be able to hear is a piano, a drummer, and a few other essential instruments, and people with exceptionally fine voices.

This in essence is how I saw and heard it and enjoyed it when I attended the Society Hill's Production of "The Three Penny Opera." The theatre is small, the stage is small, the sets are small or totally non-existent. The only thing that is big is the acting and singing qualities of the performers.

In my opinion it was great, wonderful. To see veteran and new performaners putting forth such an effort is most gratifying. The actors and actresses must work with, as I said before, hardly any scenery, with imagination, and even with their

The Villanova Band

Much has been heard about them but little has been written about them. Such is the story of the Villanova Band. Always there at the rallies, football games, basketball games, and other student and university activities the band is the focal point of spirit on the Villanova campus. When asked to participate in any function the band is always present to give of itself and its time, that most precious commodity to any college studen, unselfishly.

Off to Buffalo

This year's band, consisting of fifty members, is considered to be the best sounding band within the last four years. It will play at eight out of nine football games scheduled for this season. Included in this schedule will be a weekend trip to the Buffalo game. Also, on October 14 the Villanova marching society will play in the Passaic and Clifton Holy Name Society Parade.

Modern Sound

In keeping with the modern trend of music the band will feature a new repertoire for its listening audience. Included in the new sound are such songs as the "Theme from Peter Gunn", "Theme from Exodus", and "Rebel Rouser".

Not many people seeing the fast and high stepping music makers on the field realize the fact that this straw-brimmed band also doubles as a concert band after the excitement of that great college game has worn off. As in years past the band will make a tour of girls' colleges and nursing homes within a hundred mile radius from Villanova.

Nottingham University Loans To Law School British Scholar Hogan

This year the Villanova Law School is pleased to welcome through its exchange program, Professor Brian Hogan from Nottingham University, Nottingham, England. Professor Hogan is here in place of Villanova Professor Ernest Roberts, who went to Nottingham.

Professor Hogan was born in England and was graduated from Manchester College. He has been teaching at Nottingham University since 1956. This is his first visit to America, but in 1960 he taught for two terms as a visiting teacher at Adelaide University in Australia.

One of his favorite hobbies is acquiring and reading books, mainly in the field of history. He enjoys football but states he doen't really understand it. To his suprise, he finds American beer rather good but dislikes American cigarettes.

"Soberly Dressed"

As compared with English students, he says, "Americans look better fed and more soberly dressed." The extreme politeness of our students amazed him, but he felt this may be due to the age difference of his British students. In England his pupils were between 18-21, while here he is working with graduate students 21-24 The British students perform antics just as our students do. They have a "rag day" in which they perform stunts comparable to our telephone-booth-stuffing or bed-rolling activities.

Professor Hogan feels that the American and English students tend to look at college as a hurdle to jump over rather than a means of education and that they concentrate too much in one field of study instead of being well versed in many fields.

The British Professor feels that Villanova leaves nothing to be desired materially. "It has first class facilities, a first class library, and a first class staff."

He says that he is perfectly content here and would someday like to come back.

own two hands. They themselves move around the sets, and the props.

"The Three Penny Opera" had only three pieces of scenery, at the most, and the barest essentials of tables and chairs. It was only because of the fine abilities of the performers that the imagination which they displayed could be experienced by the audience.

It has been said that a critic should only go so far as to say whether a play is worth the price of admission; it doesn't take one to see that the Society Hill's production of "The Three Penny Opera" was well worth the price of admission.

Letters To Home

Dear Kitty,

Can you imagine my surprise when I saw the strange appearance of a number of students on campus? Everywhere that I wandered I found the usual suit, shirt, and tie, but there were exceptions. Some students wore loose or tight fitting clothes which did not cover their knees, so that when they walked or stood one could see those . . . KNEES! Of course, there is a possibility that those students are so poor that they cannot afford longer materials.

But aside from the scanty coverings, if one looks upward to the head, there are students who look like either sex; that is, there are some whose hair is cut in the usual mannish styles and there are a few lazy ones whose hair shows a definite craving for a visit to the nearest friendly or unfriendly barber shop. One wonders if all that hair is real or store-bought.

When the attention is turned downward, past certain antiseptic knees, to the pointed shoes on the feet of some students, then it becomes possible to feel a pang of pity for them. How those shoes must pinch! No wonder they change to the comfortable, but ugly, loafers to give their corns room.

Then there are some students who carry enormous suitcases. One supposes that they do not trust anyone or are in dire need of all that those cases contain. Wherever they go—classes or lunch—their cases and half the contents are spread out to give a minimum of space to everyone else.

Donovan Weighs Judiciaries

have skilled argument from thier respective sides, presented before an impartial judge.

Mr. Donovan next made a comparison between British and American judicial systems, especially with reference to the manner in which cases are presented in court. Mr. Donovan explained that the British system uses Barristers as representatives of Solicitors in court by presenting the Solicitor's brief, thus the Barrister never meets or sees the client he represents in court. Advantages of the British system then are two; first it provides for an abstract justice, and second allows the lawyer to be free from branding by the public as a defender of criminals, etc.

Mr. Doovan however, went on to state that although there are certain weaknesses in the United States judicial system we do have a proud tradition of defending, "The Weak, The Poor, and The Unpopular", which is essential to the maintainance of a free society. Mr. Donovan feels that lawyers should take the case of an unpopular defendant at regular intervals, consider this type of case as a, "Great Challenge", and finally have the humility to understand that he is only part of the judicial process in which he should not pass judgements.

In conclusion Mr. Donovan expanded his talk to the international scene where he stated that we must hold forth to the Communist and Neutral nations that we defend, "The Weak, The Poor, and The Unpopular". If this is accomplished Mr. Donovan feels that when according to his prediction the United States and Soviet Russia become allies due to nuclear capacity in Red China, that the Russians will understand fully our way of life.

The nuestion and answer period that followed Mr. Donovan's talk included the following questions; Should Red China be allowed membership in the United Nations?, What is Castro really like?. Answers to the questions respectively were, "It will not aid us if we allow Red China to enter the United Nations", and "This man is more Cuban than Marists".

Original Dixieland Jazz Band

By Jan Dyroff

The story of recorded jazz in America began one February day in 1917. Towards the end of that month the Original Dixieland Jazz Band gathered in the Victor studios to make their historic recordings.

The story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band begins with "Papa" Jack Laine, the Grand Old Man of New Orleans jazz. He was born there in 1873 and had his first band there in 1891. He was responsible for training the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, or ODJB as they are usually known nowadays.

Dixieland Band

As the Dixieland Band, they were formed in 1908 and were booked for Chicago's Booster Club in the Hotel Sherman in 1914, where they were billed "Original Dixieland Band."

It was at that time when a straight local musician tried to smear them by using an obscene word to describe their music. They cleaned up the word and worked it into their title, thus becoming the Original Dixieland Jass Band. The spelling was later changed to jazz.

The word "jazz" was new and electrifying and it caught polite society by the ear. A comment of the day on their music was that it would "inject new life into a mummy, and keep ordinary human dancers on their feet until breakfast time."

Famous Quintet

The great comedian, Al Jolson, heard the ODJB in Chicago and arranged for the quintet, Nick LaRocca on cornet, Eddie Edwards on trombone, Pat Shields on clarinet, Henry Ragas on piano, and Tony Sbarbaro on drums, to be booked in Reisenweber's Cafe in New York. They ran there from January, 1917 until March, 1919.

In March of that year the group sailed for England. But Henry Regas wasn't there, he died the preceeding month. The ODJB took England by storm, playing at the Palladium, the Hippodrome, the Savoy Peace Ball, Rector's Club, and Hammersmith's Palais de Danse. They recorded while in England. Punch commenting on the report that the Original Dixieland Jazz Band was in England declared, "We are grateful for the warning."

In the late summer of 1920 they returned to America, introduced a saxophone into their instrumantation, featured more commercial numbers and eventually, their mission of introducing Negro jazz in the white manner to the world fulfilled, they disbanded in 1925. On November 10, 1936 these men who first caused a international jazz sensation held a recording reunion for Victor.

Special Appeal

If you ever heard any cuts by the ODJB, it would be obvious why they are so special. Technically the music they played was no more than an involved counterpoint, carefully balanced and well integrated. The cornet leads with a beautifully solid base, the clarinet provides an octave to octave spanning thread of melody, the trombone provides a firm harmonic walk, and the piano and drums provide an unique rhythm impetus. Modern dixieland sounds anemic in comparison to them.

The ODJB is important not only for its bold improvisations but also for the effect that it has had on the American musical tradition. There is a story that Bix Beiderbecke, the greatest jazz cornetist, practised by imitating Nick LaRocca in the ODJB's "Tiger Rag" when he was young. This may be true or not, but the LaRocca influence is definitely there in the sides Bix and his Wolverines made in Richmond, Indiana in '26. Bix cut the "Tiger Rag" in those sessions and sounds a great deal like LaRocca. Through influences such as this, that original five had a great shaping force on jazz for the next few generations of musicians.

Jazz Classics

In addition to playing their "jass" the ODJB also wrote and arranged their own numbers. As work of the entire ODJB group we come to enjoy today such traditional favorites as "Dixie Jass Band," "Tiger Rag," and "Sensational Rag." Working as a team Nick LaRocca, Pat Shields and Henry Regas have handed down "Fidgety Feet" and "Lazy Daddy." Others composed by members of the band are "Bluin' the Blues," "Mornin' Blues," "Skeleton Jangle," and the famous "Clarinet Marmalade Blues."

The ODJB produced music that is wild and beautiful and haunting. At first it sounds strange to the modern ear, but it is unforgettable. It is the music of the soul of America.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Last week under the direction of Grand Knight, Stanley Zak, the formal membership campaign of the Knights of Columbus commenced on September 26. During Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday interviews were held between 10:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. in the Belle Air office for prospective members.

Grand Knight Zak announced at the campaign that Mass would be held at St. Mary's Hall Sunday, October 28, at 10:00 p.m. Following Mass, Communion Breakfast will be held at 10:00 a.m. in the Commerce and Finance cafeteria, at which time First Degree ceremonies will take place, in conjunction with the installation of officers.

Zak stated that Homecoming Buffet will be Saturday, November 3. A band is to be present at the Buffet, with facilities for the dance donated by the Ardmore Council of the Knights of Columbus.

Villanova University has received an unrestricted direct grant of $2,400 from the Eastman Kodak Company under the company's educational aid program for 1962.

Villanova is one of 58 privately supported colleges and universities to receive direct grants from the company this year. The grants are based on the number of graduates from these institutions who joined Kodak five years ago and are presently employed by the company.

Kodak has contributed $14,800 in direct grants to Villanova since 1955.

The direct grants, which amost almost to $240,000, help schools to compensate for the difference between the actual cost of educating graduates now with Kodak and the amount that these individuals may have paid in tuition and fees.

Council Proclaims Regulations facing of the football stadium.

Another petitioned the general realignment of the vacation schedule with particular emphasis on the grevity of the Easter vacation. The third motion requested the University administration to contemplate the changing of the name of the Commerce and Finance Building to Bartley Hall in honor of its founder who has recently died. The last was a request for the investigation of the possibility of acquiring another live wildcat as a mascot.

Also constituting part of the evening's conclave was the presentation of Rev. Richard D. Appicci. OSA, the Council's new moderator, reports on NFCCS by Senior Delegate John Nearv, on Freshman Orientation by Vice-Chairman Marty McGuinn, and on the present status of the Student Council Treasurer by Leo Ratigan.

The following regulations with immediate application are expected to tighten up Council control over the organizations on campus.

1. Functions in public buildings or public places, which have not received proper approval, are not to be held by any group of Villanova students. This includes all groups that in any way will be "carrying the name of" or "will be associated with Villanova." Example: A party following a Villanova function, which has been pre-arranged with the proprietor of a public place, is considered to be associated with Villanova.

2. No social event of any nature is permissible without previous application to the Social Affairs Committee of the Council. This must be strictly enforced as noted in the Constitution.

3. This application must be received by the committee no later than two weeks prior to the planned event. If applications are late it will be up to the discretion of the committee to honor them or not.

4. This committee together with the Executive Vice President of Student Government and the Dean of Student Activities will have the power to halt any function delinquent in application or reports.

5. If the committee feels that expenditures are too high for the importance of the event or do not approve of the organization's choosen location, the Executive Vice President of Student Government will be thus notified and will in turn discuss it with the committee and the Student Activities Dean.

6. Within 30 days after the activity, a complete statement of moneys received must be presented to the Social Affairs Committee. It shall include an itemized statement of expenditures including receipted bills (By-Laws of the Constitution).

7. If a report has not been received from an organization, the application for another social activity will not be honored.

8. A committee or group which has failed to comply with the outlined procedure may be declared ineligible to act for any activities whatsoever; members of such committees may also be barred from holding office in any organization for one year. The respective class or organization may lose the right to future social events for one year.

9. Each fraternity will be allowed to hold three off-campus functions each semester in addition to their annual dinner dance.

10. These functions are to be open only to organization members and their dates. No outsiders will be admitted to these functions except cultural affairs.

11. These functions are not to be held without previous application to and permission from the Dean of Student Activities. This permission must be sought at least two weeks prior to the date of the affair.

12. The moderator of the fraternity, a member of the administration, or a faculty member is to be present at each function.

13. If intoxicating beverages are to be served, the function must be held only in an establishment licensed to do so, and the distribution of such beverages must be under the supervision of the proprietor and/or the agent of said establishment.

14. It is understood that these functions are to be conducted in a manner befitting the students of a Catholic university. The Administration of Villanova reminds each student that the law of the state prohibits the selling, furnishing, or giving of any liquor, or malt beverage to anyone under twenty-one years of age.

ICG Chapter Begins Twenty-Ninth Year On Villanova Campus

The Villanova chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government began its twenty-ninth year of activity with its first executive meeting of the year last Thursday. The objects of the club continue to be the same, to further the name of Villanova in both the region and statewide conventions while also giving its members an operative knowledge of parliamentary procedure and practical politics.

The club is open to any student of Villanova. As one of its objects for the coming year, President Phil Bronzi and Parliamentarian Tom Burke hope to increase its membership to a solid group of working participants. All Villanova students are asked only to attend one meeting, the next one tomorrow at 10:30 in Room 106 Vasey Hall. Anyone will be considered for final membership.

Preparations for the regional convention and the three-day state convention in Harrisburg will begin sometime during the next month. Besides Bronzi and Burke, the officers of the club are Jerry Cardamone, Vice President, Harry Klemm, Treasurer, and Mike Coll, Secretary.

Debate Society Meeting Held Novice Division Formulated

Beta Gamma Debate Society held its first meeting last Thursday, September 27. The primary purpose of the meeting was to organize its new members into a novice division.

Last year the team, moderated by Richard R. McDonough, scored an impressive record in ninety rounds of intercollegiate debate. They placed first in the University of Pennsylvania Tournament and third in the second Annual Debate Tournament here at Villanova.

Preparations for the Third Annual Tournament, which will be held on December 8, have already begun under the supervision of Terence J. Cooney, President of the Society.

Through the expansion of its membership and this year's programs, Cooney hopes to obtain greater recognition for Villanova on a national level.

Gross Plans Meeting Of Literary Society

Literary Society President, William Gross, announced that the Society will hold its first scheduled meeting Thursday, October 4, 10:30 a.m., in room 204 Vasey. Purpose of the meeting will be to register new members from the freshmen class, discuss this year's speaker and symposium agenda, and appointment of committee members and chairmen. President Gross urges all members from last semester to attend this first meeting so that they might help formulate the policies for the forthcoming fall and spring semesters.

Novena For Council Held During Chapel

Evening chapel for resident students began last night at 7 p.m. Chapel erercises will regularly begin at 6:45 p.m. But due to a special novena in preparation for the opening of the Vatican Council, the time change was effected and will be in effect tonight and tomorrow night.

There will be no 5 o'clock Mass on the First Friday of this month, October 5. Instead, Mass will be said at 7 p.m. in conjunction with the novena.

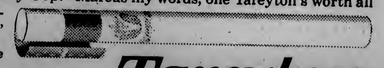
For the first time in the history of Parents' Weekend, students and their parents will have an opportunity to meet the deans of the various divisions, and there will be open house of campus facilities. Favors will be distributed to the parents, and a luncheon will be served from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the Field House.

Parents are urged to come early Saturday so no activities will be missed, and also to enable them to park free for the football game at 1:30, when Villanova hosts Xavier University. Students are reminded they must pick up tickets for the weekend in advance.

Planetarium Shows



The Astronomy Department announced the first in a series of monthly planetarium shows for area residents, faculty, and students to be held in room 455, Mendel Hall, on Friday, October 5, at 8:00 p.m. No one will be admitted without a reservation. Reservations may be made by calling LA 5-4600, Ext. 401, or at the Astronomy Department office, room 456, Mendel Hall any day, Monday through Friday, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Season Set For 'Flag-A-Tag' Swimming Meets Scheduled

By Jack Duffy

A new innovation to Villanova has made its way into intramural football on the Villanova campus. This year the intramural department, under the direction of Ed Geisz and Jack Lumsden, is running what they call "flag-a-tag" football. Each of the nine players will wear a belt with two clip-type flags attached. The flags are 12 inches long and afford the defensive player ample opportunity to detatch the flag from his opponent and stop the play.

Mr. Geisz believes that the flags will put a stop to many disagreements over whether or not an offensive player was tagged. It will also aid the official in his decision.

60 to 70 Teams

The intramural department has announced that from 60 to 70 teams will participate in this year's activites. There will be four leagues starting at 10:30, 2:30, 3:30, and 4:30. They will make use of three fields: The one in front of Mendel Hall, and the two in front of Austin Hall. The rule concerning End-Zones will be strictly enforced this year.

Swimming Championships

This afternoon at 4:30 in the swimming pool, the intramural Swimming and Diving championships will be held. Each year this event produces plenty of excitement and top match competition.

Another intramural event which produces much competition is the cross-country championship. This contest will be held tomorrow afternoon, October 4, at 4:30. The race will begin in the stadium, cover the entire campus and wind up in the university stadium.

Former Stars Pursue Careers In Sports, Business, Teaching

By Roy Baron

Checking up on the athletes from the class of 1962, we find them pursuing many different interests. Many of last year's gridiron stars are still connected with the sport. Most prominent among these is Sam Gruneisen, who is starting at center guard for the San Diego Chargers of the A.F.L. His knee is sound once again following an operation.

Nick Russo is back at Villanova working on his degree and assisting Eddie Michaels with the freshman eleven. Tom Kepner and Ron Meyers are playing semi-pro football in New Jersey.

Mike Pettine and Bob Capone are teaching and coaching, the latter at Father Judge. Jack Weed is going to graduate school, while Richie Phillips is studying at Villanova's law school. Tom O'Rourke is selling insurance.

Hubcaps Playing Again

"Mr. Basketball," Hubie White, is embarking on what promises to be an extremely successful career with the San Francisco Warriors of the N.B.A. Joe Walsh has entered the service as an officer candidate. Also waiting to enter the same program are swimming team co-captains Don Reed and Don Boechmcke.

Baseball pitcher Phil Fidalgo is teaching and has also opened a bakery in Garrett Hill. Captain Danny Renn is with Johnson and Johnson. Don Melega rejected a couple of pro offers to begin a career in industry.

Track star Frank Budd is now a reserve halfback with the Philadelphia Eagles. Bob Raemore is a medical student at the University of Pittsburgh. Weightman Jerry Donini is attending graduate school evening classes here at Villanova.

The Forgotten All-American

By Tom Bruderle

This past summer has seen three Villanova All-Americans in the news. Paul Drayton and Pat Traynor represented the United States in the track meets against Poland and Russia, and Drayton later traveled with the American team that toured Europe. Needless to say, nearly everyone knows who the third Villanovan was who gained national prominence—Frank Budd. After pulling up lame in the finals of the NCAA 100 yard dash, Budd, who has to be one of the greatest athletes ever to come to the Main Line, signed a contract to play football for Vince McNally's Philadelphia Eagles.

All-American In Background

Yet, in the background, there is another All-American who competed last summer. As will happen in almost any school that has at least two major sports, there is always someone who has not received the recognition he deserves. That "someone" at Villanova is Dick McDonough of the swimming team.

Freshman Records

McDonough began his assault on the record-books in his freshman year. New records were set in the 100 and 220 yard freestyle and in the 200 yard butterfly. He was also a member of the record setting 400 yard medley relay team. Not only did he perform well at home, but he also had the distinction of setting at least two pool records every time the team competed in an away meet.

The North Orange, New Jersey Junior has varsity records that read like fiction. He has five individual and two relay records out of a possible eleven. Five Villanova Pool records are also claimed by McDonough.

Social Studies Major

His ability is not limited to swimming. Dick is a Social Studies major who has made the Dean's list and hopes to go into law after graduation. Assistant Coach Jack Lumsden thinks that McDonough could have a crack at a Rhodes Scholarship.

In regard to McDonough as a swimmer, Lumsden says, "Dick is in the same category as Ron Delaney. He'll work out with the team and come back again for additional practice. He's a work-horse, a fast-learner, and extremely coachable."

Although he is adept at freestyle and butterfly, Dick prefers the latter. He is so quick and strong in this stroke, that he won the Junior National 220 yard butterfly in his Freshman year. However, Lumsden says, "He has tremendous concentration and a easy style that enables him to perform well at any distance. It's funny, he likes the butterfly more. yet he does so well in the freestyle that he has to devote equal time to that."

Pan-American Games

Like most swimmers nowadays, Dick has set his sights on the Pan-American Games next spring and the Olympics in 1964. At the present time he is in a ten-month program that includes several workouts a day.

Greatest Year

This past year was perhaps McDonough's greatest. Last March he set an NCAA record of :52.5 in the 100 yard butterfly during one of the qualifying heats at the NCAA Championships held at Ohio State University. In the finals Ed Spencer of North Carolina State College tied the record. It is ironic that Spencer defeated McDonough by two-tenths of a second in these same finals.

Last April he made the cover of "Swimming World Magazine" for his performance at the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships held at Yale University in New Haven, Conn. Here he captured two first places and barely missed being a triple winner. It was at New Haven that Villanova, with only four men in competition, finished fourth behind Princeton, Yale, and Harvard.

Middle Atlantic Record Set

During the summer Dick set three Middle Atlantic AAU district records in three individual events and shared three relay records. He, along with fellow Villanovan Rick Girdler, were among a team of Eastern All-Stars that faced a team from West Germany. This was one of McDonough's better days. He won the 100 meter freestyle in :55.8 breaking the old Middle Atlantic mark by two-tenths of a second. He won the 100 meter butterfly with a posting of 1:00.7 and teamed with Girdler and two other All-Stars to take the 400 meter freestyle relay. The time in the relay lowered the district record from 4:03.6 to 3:49.4. In this meet Dick was the only men's triple winner.

Sackett Award

In addition to NCAA and National AAU All-American honors, McDonough received the William P. Sackett Award. The oldest individual swimming award in the United States has been givn to such performers as Buster Crabbe and Johnny "Tarzan" Weissmuller. Coach Lumsden also received the award in 1939. The trophy and a medal are given to the recipient, and, after a year the trophy is returned.

Approximately seven years ago, a fourteen year old Dick McDonough "went out for swimming and stuck with it." His sole swimming ambition was to compete in the Olympics. He has attained part of his goal by being named an All-American, any bets on the rest?

Rugby Squad Begins Season; St. Onge Named New Captain

By Tom Finan

Rugby has once again returned to the Villanova campus, with the official season beginning next Saturday, October 13 against Penn State. The team, under the guidance of Captain Luke St. Onge, has been practicing daily since the first week of school. Unofficial scrimmages have been held with Penn and St. Joseph's College, during the past few weekends, and the squad is expected to be in top shape for the season's opener.

Rugby is a comparatively new sport at VU, having been started only three years ago. Under the direction of coach Francis A. Coghlan, of the History Department, Rugby has enjoyed great popularity on campus, as is evidenced by the large turnout of candidates each season. With two seasons a year, one in the Fall and one in the Spring, the sport has attracted large crowds at almost every game.

Mr. Coghlan has stated that "I am particularly pleased with the enthusiasm displayed by the Freshman and Sophomore classes, who have indicated their interest in rugby, and have shown that they are desirous of playing the sport."

With 15 returning players from last year's team, there are places open for qualified players. The 10 game schedule has not definitely been completed yet, but tentative opponents will include Princeton, Notre Dame, the New York Rugby Club, and the First Troop of the First Philadelphia Cavalry.

There are daily practices held on the Lancaster Avenue field, opposite the Field House and anyone interested should attend these sessions.

WILDCAT

'Cats Head North, Face Bulls In First Away Tilt Of Year

By Richard Pazdan

After spending three weeks in the cozy confines of Villanova Stadium, the Wildcats finally hit the road. With three home games under their belts, the weekend warriors of Coach Alex Bell head to Buffalo, New York to take on the Bulls of the University of Buffalo.

This year's edition of the Bulls doesn't promise to be easy pickings. Last year Villanova manhandled them by a 28-6 score, holding them to the total of three yards net rushing. But don't look for an easy win, because this could be the first winning season Buffalo has had since they decided to move in on a big time schedule three years ago.

In all, Offenhamer builds his squad around 23 returning lettermen from a team that won four of nine games last year. Another junior, Gerry Philbin, leads the parade of returning linemen. Fourteen linemen return from last year's squad and should give the Bulls that much needed defensive shot-in-the-arm.

Buffalo is two deep at every position except guard. They lack overall speed, but Stofa's passing coupled with depth and experience can't do anything but help the Bulls improve on their '61 record.

Eagles Strike First On Long Pass As Wildcats Tripped Up By BC, 28-13

By Tom Bruderlo

Villanova played one of its finest games last Saturday against Boston College. For sixty minutes they tackled, blocked and ran with a ferocity that hasn't been seen in quite a while. The Wildcats had 22 first downs while giving up only nine. They gained 288 total yards on the ground and yielded 136. Villanova's total offensive output topped that of the New Englanders, 348-302. Yet, with all these glowing statistics, the Main-Liners came out second-best, 28-13.

Eagles Lead Early

Boston College opened the game a la Sonny Liston. With first and ten on their own 22, quarterback Jack Concannon tossed an 18 yard pass on the Villanova 40 and scored. The extra point attempt was not good. With only fifty-seven seconds gone by, the Eagles led 6-0.

'Cats Roar Back

Villanova didn't waste much time either. Bob Merenda took the kick-off on his own 10, and handed off to Larry Glueck who scampered to the BC 41 yard line. Four plays brought them to the Eagle 9, Billy Joe hit the middle but fumbled on the 7 and the Eagles recovered.

After a Villanova drive and two BC drives stalled, the 'Cats again moved. With Ted Aceto at the helm, the Main-Liners moved from their own 42 to the Eagle 16. The drive was stalled on the Eagle 11 when an Aceto to Glueck pass went incomplete. At the first quarter BC led 6-0.

Merenda Scores

Villanova scored on their next series of downs. With fourth and four on the Eagle 8, Richie Richman tossed to right-halfback Bob Merenda who outjumped Boston College's John Barrett for the ball. Bill Barbaro's kick for the extra-point was good and Villanova led 7-6 with 3:13 of the second period gone by.

Both sides punted twice before Villanova could get another sustained drive. Six plays later found them on the BC 12 yard stripe. With a fourth and four situation, Richman threw a screen pass to Glueck that fell two yards short of a first down. At the half Villanova led 7-6. Aside from their TD pass, Boston College invaded Villanova territory only once and then to the 'Cats 31.

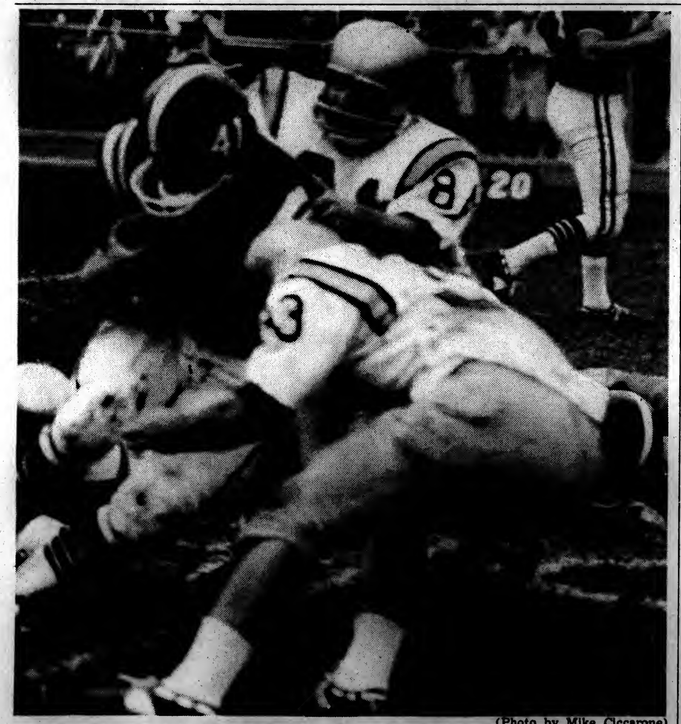
Big Second Half

With the opening kickoff of the second-half, the Wildcats Glueck fumbled the third of six Villanova fumbles and Jack Clifford recovered, the drive was put into second gear. After clawing their way to the BC 8, the Eagles were penalized for having 12 men on the field. With the ball on the Eagle 4, Richman and Joe were stopped on three line plays. On last down the drive stopped when a Richman to Joe Cutreneo pass was ruled incomplete.

Eagles Strike

The Eagles took over after the ball changed hands once. On his own 38 Concannon unloaded to right-end Jim Whalen who scored after catching it on the Villanova 25 yard line. Concannon's two extra points made it 14-7 with the Eagles out in front.

Villanova scored their second and final touchdown late in the third quarter. On the BC 14 Richman fumbled but alert John McDonnell recovered the loose pigskin on the Eagle 4. Jim Thomas and Lou Rettino hammered to the one where Rettino hit left-tackle for the score. Rather than go for the extra point and tie the game, the Wildcats went for two and were halted.



Turning Point

Now comes what appears to have been the turning point of the game. A Villanova drive ran out of gas on the BC 19. Bill Barbaro's attempted field goal was short and Jack McGann scooped up the ball and raced for a TD. The play was called back, however, because of a clipping penalty against the Eagles. Harry Crump and Concannon moved the ball to the Wildcat 19. Jack Clifford then made a timely interception of an Eagle pass and the 'Cats took over on their 12 yard line. On the very next play, McGowan grabbed a Richman aerial and scored from the 20 yard line. The kick for the extra point was good and the score read 21-13 in favor of BC.

The Wildcats still had 8:19 in which to score but they could only move the ball three yards. That just about did it, and it didn't make too much difference when Concannon scored with one second left in the game.

As in the past two games Villanova dominated the game in plays run, against BC it was 81 to 55 . . . There was the general consensus among the

Wildkittens Feature Speed; Face Bullis Prep Saturday

By Roy Baron

Coach Eddie Michaels' freshman eleven is preparing to take on Bullis Prep at Delaware this Saturday with hopes for success based on a fine array of fast, talented backs behind a corps of big linemen. The schedule has been increased from three to five games in order to give the players a greater incentive by letting them show their ability more often in competition.

The coaching staff concentrated on recruiting fleet backs from the high schools last fall. Four halfbacks who show a great deal of potential are Joe Santamauoro of Scranton; Don Hartlaub, a product of De Lone Catholic, Mc Sherrystown, Pa.; Tom Brown, a 188 pounder from Bishop McDevitt; and Rudy Jugo, a California import. Mike Guerri, although small for a fullback (5'10", 175), has been switched from halfback in order to keep speed in all positions.

Aerial Support

A pair of smart quarterbacks are expected to support the running game with their effective passing. From Bonner High comes 6'1", 195 pound Dave Connell who spent last year at Malvern Prep. The other is Dan Koshlop (5'11", 175). He has showed especially fine passing ability since coming out for the team.

Connell and Koshlop will be throwing to ends Dick Rosensteel, another De Lone Catholic product; John McAdams, a second Bonner grad; Dick Fabrizio from Archbishop Carroll in Washington; Vic Bialous from Roman Catholic; and John Kelleher, a 198 pound prospect from Lawrence, Mass.

The interior line is big but it lacks the mobility of last year's line. The biggest of the linemen are tackles Jerry Strid from Worcester Prep in Massachusetts and Larry Jones, who hails from Baltimore. Both stand 6'3" and weigh 220 pounds. Another big tackle is 6'2", 215 pound Jay Curry from St. Peter's Prep in Jersey City.

Other linemen who figure prominently in Coach Michaels' plans are Roger Agin, a center from La Salle, and a pair of 5'10", 215 pounders from Memorial High in West New York, New Jersey. They are Dave Capozzi, a guard and center, reputed to have been the best lineman in New Jersey last fall, and tackle Al Becker. Behind these men, however, there is a serious lack of depth. A few key injuries could spell disaster.

Soph's Cotillion October 19 Weekend Plans Include Game

By Bill McCloskey

Tickets are now available for the Sophomore Cotillion, scheduled for Friday night, October 19. Committee chairman, Don Pellecchia, announced that the Orientation Committee collected, over $350 from the freshmen. This money will be used to finance the Mardi Gras decorations that will garner the Field House. Tickets are $3.00 each.

Also planned as part of the sophomore weekend is a trip to the Delaware game by bus and private car: it will originate from the parking lot at 11:30 a. m. Saturday. Price of the bus tickets has been cut to $4.00 a couple. The buses will be decorated before their departure. Tickets for the buses may be purchased in the Pie Shoppe along with the tickets for the dance itself.

Pictures Available

Pictures will be taken at the dance and will cost $2.50 and $3.50. The small package will have two mounted 5x7 pictures and two wallet size shots. The larger packet will have the two mounted shots and four of the wallet size.

The weekend will get under way with a pep rally in the quad, shortly before the dance, sponsored by the Spirit Committee. The dance is scheduled to get under way at nine with the music of the Maurice Scott Orchestra.

The highlight of the evening will be the selection of the Sophomore Cotillion Queen, which will take place in stages during the evening.

Pellecchia will introduce the five semi-finalists to the dancers a short time after the start of the affair; voting will begin in the Blue Room next to the stage after the introduction. The winner of the crown will be announced during the last intermission at 11:30. Also to be announced at 11:30 is in the top OC of 1962.

Pictures of girls that are to be entered in the contest must be received by Sophomore Class President, John Clancy, in Room 47, Sullivan Hall today, Wednesday, October 10. The picture must be 5x7 and must include the girl's name and school or occupation and the student's name and division.

Committees To Select Who'sWho Candidates From Eligible Seniors

The Student Council of Villanova University has announced the procedure in selecting the nominees from the Senior Class for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

There will be three selecting committees. The first is composed of the Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student Activities, Joe Tate, President of the Student Council, plus five other members, who will submit a list of fifty names as nominees. The Deans of the various schools will comprise the second committee, and will submit a second list of nominees. The third selecting committee will be the moderators of each recognized campus organization who will nominate two senior members of their organization.

Selection Committee

The final selection will be made from these lists of nominees by the final selection committee composed of five faculty members and two students.

In order to be eligible the nominees must have a minimum

Parents' Weekend To Feature Variety Show, Band Concert

An address from the University's President, a Variety Show, a band concert, an afternoon reception with the deans of the various departments coupled with a campus open house, a football game, and a closing Mass are the prime attractions of the forthcoming Parents' Weekend, October 26, 27, and 28. Sponsored by the Blue Key, the Parents' Weekend has become a tradition at Villanova University.

The weekend will begin officially at 8:30 Friday evening in the Field House, with an address by Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President. Immediately following the address, the Variety Show will be staged. Registration of all parents will be held Saturday morning at the Guard House from 9:00 to 10:00 a.m. Following this preliminary detail, the concert on the green will be held in front of Dougherty Hall.

Innovations This Year

This year an innovation has been incorporated into Parents' Weekend, an informal reception where students and their parents will have an opportunity to meet the deans of the various divisions of Villanova University. Throughout the entire day, there will be an open house of campus facilities. Also, favors will be served to parents during the morning, and following this

Rev. John J. McShea, OSA

Rev. John McShea Elected To Board Of School Trustees

By Frank Quattrone

Recently elected to membership on the Board of Trustees of Villanova University and as Secretary of the Board is the Reverend John J. McShea, OSA. The announcement was made by the office of the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, President of the University.

He fills the vacancy created by the death of Father Joseph C. Bartley, OSA, a member of the Board since 1944.

Born in 1908, Father McShea is a native of Philadelphia where he attended St. Rita's parochial school. He continued his secondary education and religious training at Augustinian Academy, Staten Island, New York, and Our Mother of Good Counsel Novitiate at New Hamburg, New York.

Father was graduated from Villanova with a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1930. He received his Master of Arts degree in 1933 from Catholic University.

Ordained on June 14, 1932, Father McShea observed his twenty-fifth anniversary in the Field House in 1957. He celebrated his jubilee with five other Augustinians: Fathers John R. Dunne, Robert E. Regan, Richard M. Plunkett, Robert M. Sullivan, and James A. Donnellon.

Father continued his advanced studies at Oxford University, receiving an A.B. in 1937 and an M.A. in 1946.

After a brief period of teaching at the Augustinian College in Havana, he was assigned to the faculty of Villanova University in 1937, and has been with the faculty ever since. He is now associated with the School of Arts and Sciences as an English instructor.

Father McShea's family now resides in Sharon Hill, Pennsylvania.

Fifteenth Press Conference Features Rev. Albert Nevins

By Jan Dyroff

The fifteenth annual Publications Conference for Catholic Schools was held at Villanova on Saturday, October 6. The Conference was held under the auspices of the BELLE AIR and the VILLANOVAN and was dedicate to Father Daniel P. Falvey, OSA. the founder of the conference.

The main address of the day was delivered by the Reverend Albert J. Nevins, MM, president of the Catholic Press Association and editor of Maryknoll Magazine. Father Nevins declared that "Editors have the power to influence and develope opinion and this power must be used wisely."

Rounded Editor

The theme of his discourse was that publications should do more than merely entertain, they should share in the teaching power of the Church. The editors of the publications should be complete persons in order to set a good example for their readers. He maintained that editors should be 25% creativeness, 25% awareness, 25% originality, 15% knowledge of the grapic arts, and 10% possive of literary qualities.

Father also maintained that Catholics suffer from an inferiority complex due to their humble beginnings in America and that the inferiority complex carries over into the journalistic field. This should not be so, he pointed out, and that the Catholic press is the equal of the secular press on all counts. The truth is that Catholic editors have a freedom comparable to secular editors and moreover that the Catholic editor has the advantaye over his secular counterpart in that he has a definite moral platform from which to work.

In decrying Catholic intellectual ghettoism, Father Nevins called for a greater awareness on the part of Catholic publication especially on the elementary level to whom his remarks were expressely directed.

The conference was a collection of various panel discussions on the various problems of literary publications, touching on the needs of newspapers, yearbooks, and literary magazines. The day was highlighted by special meetings held by prominent local men in the graphic and journalistic arts.

The afternoon's activities encompassed the contination of the panels, with a mixer for the participants following on the close of the panels. The day was concluded by solemn Benediction after the mixer.

Approximately 5,000 students attended this year's conference as compared with a mere 600 at the initial conference.

Masterful Music Man

No Villanovan has shown as much active interest in, nor utilized his talents so well in, music, as has Tom Picardo, station WWVU's Personnel and Public Relations Director.

On campus, Tom is Student Director of the Villanova Singers and Musical Director of the Parents' Weekend Variety Show and of the Student Council Variety Show. On stage, he is familiar to fans of folk music as one of the Troubadours Three, formerly known as the Criterions.

His singing group has done extensive nightclub engagements and concerts and has appeared at many of the leading colleges on the east coast.

Senior Picardo is now on the air twice weekly. He is a bulwark of the afternoon popular music corps and, along with second Troubadour Tim Hauser, is originator and announcer of the new Sunday night folk music spectacular.

Neptune, New Jersey's, native son intends to pursue a career in some aspect of show business, preferably radio. But the political science major, who has already done some artist's and repertoire work in the past is not averse to continuing this in the future.

When asked about the apparent apathy of the Villanova studentry concerning the campus station, Tom replied: "It's unfortunate that a great part of the student body indiscriminately throws labels on different types of music, without first listening and then evaluating what they have heard. This is what I call 'musical prejudice.'"

Tom's solution: residents should listen with open mind to what WWVU has to offer, and then form their opinions.

Latin-American Class Addressed by Dr. Rivas On Present Day Cuba

Villanova Foreign Student Advisor, Professor Daniel J. Rivas, addressed the Latin-American History Class on September 27, at the request of the section's teacher, Dr. Francis J. Manno.

The students, the majority seniors, stayed after dismissal to ask questions of Dr. Rivas, who outlined his experiences as an impartial professor from Cuba. The professor had been jailed by the communists in 1960 for his former pronouncements against Marxist-Leninism, in support of Catholic social doctrine.

Professor Rivas has recently been invited to discuss Cuba at the dinner meeting of the Central Baptist Church in Wayne, and for the Spanish Club meeting on campus next Thursday.

Bonfire, Parade To Commence Annual Homecoming Events

Villanova's annual Homecoming will begin Friday night, November 2, with a bonfire and parade through campus to view the dormitory decorations. This will be followed by a dance in the Field House at 9:00 p.m.

The dance will feature the crowing of the Homecoming Queen, and dancing music will be supplied by Al Raymond and his orchestra, announced dance so-chairmen Bob Coogan and Ralph Saviano. Intermission entertainment will be provided by the Troubadors Three, formerly known as the Criterions a folk-singing group of Villanova students who have performed in public many times this summer.

Floats submitted by various organizations will be paraded around the field at halftime of the Villanova-Detroit game on Saturday. Joe Ruggiero and Jim Shields will be in charge of the senior float, and dormitory decorations will be the responsibility Paul Fenice and Tony Frate.

Pre-Game Luncheon

Marty Whalen, Alumni Representative, has announced the possibility of the Senior Class being invited to a pre-game luncheon hosted by various alumni clubs. Marty also announced a plan by the alumni to provide 5,000 shakers to de distrubuted to the ladies attending the game.

Last, but certainly not least, Sunday afternoon will once again witness a jazz concert, which, though traditionally a part of Homecoming weekend, was missing from the activities last year. Co-chairmen of the concert, Jim Tate and Dick Novian, have announced that the Four Freshman will perform in the Field House.

The homecoming weekend is known as the "Nick Basca Weekend," named in memory of the Villanova athlete who was killed in the War. Announcements for entries in the Homecomng Queen contest will be posted soon, and students are urged to enter their dates' pictures as soon as possible.

Literarians Club Announces Subsidy For Coming Season

On Thursday, October 4, the Literary Society held its initial meeting for the current scholastic year One of the mos controversial topics of the initial business meeting was the proposal to charge dues and in recompense for the dues to attempt to gain open stack privileges in the library for the members. As a reciprocal gesture the society would use the collected dues to buy sets of special volumes for the library.

As a part of the general programing committees were chosen to augment the society's upcoming activities. They were organized to handle the specialized functions necessary for a successful season, and they are the publicity committee, the symposoia committee, and the guest speaker's committee.

Operating under a budget granted by the Dean of Student Activities, the society plans to sponsor a series of lectures featuring prominent men and women in the literay world. These lectures will be open to the student body at large.

In addition to the schedule of guests outside speakers, the society has also planned an intramural series. The first of the lecturers announced for this series is Dr. Neil F. Brennan, Literature at Villanova. Dr. Brennan will speak on problems contemporaneous with his field of endeavor.

Campaign Clean-Up Needed

At the present, a battle is being waged, the outcome of which will determine who will hold the reins of government in Pennsylvania. Like most political campaigns in a democratic society, the weapons are not guns and artillery, but rather handshakes, debates, speeches, tea parties, and rallies. However, there is another weapon widely used in America, one whose use our own state of Pennsylvania excels in, that is, "mud-slinging."

The ball started rolling in the gubernatorial campaign when the people of Lackawanna County were termed "serfs" of Republican William Scranton by the ex-mayor of Philadelphia, Richardson Dilworth. In turn, Democratic Dilworth has been accused by his opponent of covering up Philadelphia City Hall scandals.

Scranton, a compromise candidate of the Republican Party, has said that Dilworth is backed by power politics and that if his opponent is successful, Pennsylvania will be ruled by "Boss" Bill Green, Democratic Chairman of Pennsylvania.

Not to be outdone, Dilworth implied that Scranton would use the governorship as a stepping stone for higher offices. In reverence to this it might be mentioned that Mr. Dilworth has consistently been retiring from one public office to another in order to seek a higher position.

Bickering between the candidates has not confined itself to state issues. Mr. Scranton was happy to inform the public that a few years ago Mr. Dilworth was in favor of admitting Red China to the United Nations.

We are grateful to Mr. Dilworth, however, for bringing to light the fact that some years ago Bill Green said that he thought Russia would be a long-time ally.

It is time for the voters of Pennsylvania to demand that their candidates discuss the issues and free our elections from such name-calling.

Demand Outstrips Supply

With the seasonal change of semesters the University Shop seems to be faced with a problem of supply and demand.

There are more students requiring books than there are books to supply the student. As economically promising as this situation may be, it has no place at Villanova.

All too familiar is the scene of students queueing up at a special counter in the University Shop hopefully trying to obtain ordered textbooks after the semester's classes have begun.

It would seem logical that a professor who teaches a course would be the best judge of the number of texts and supplementary books needed for that course.

Some courses on the campus are not scheduled according to the professor's syllabus but according to the expected date of arrival for the various books necessary for the course. This is unfortunate, but wherein lies the blame?

Efforts should be made in the future to ascertain the approximate number of students needing particular books and to order them accordingly. If this were done the process of book supply would no longer be the unpleasant thing it is.

A possible solution to the present dilemma could be to check with the Dean's offices prior to ordering and to base the book orders on the numbers obtained from the pre-registration lists. This would be a step toward the elimination of much unnecessary grief.

Guest Tickets

A curious custom has arisen amoung Villanovans. Many students, when they take a date to a home football game, use other students' matriculation cards to get free tickets for their dates. This practice has been especially prevalent during the present home season. Realizing the situation, the University threatened to check matric cards at the Boston College game but did not carry out the threat.

Students who are guilty of this practice feel justified for two reasons. First, when added to other weekend expenditures, $3.00 for a date's ticket is rather expensive for the average student. Secondly, they reason, that these tickets were meant for free students' seats anyway.

Their points are well taken; but, nevertheless, the practice is contrary to University regulations. However it is impractical for the University to enforce this regulation since the ticket collectors are kept too busy with the crowds to check matric cards.

The University could settle this dilemma with a compromise. A practical solution to the problem would be the sale of "guest" tickets for the reasonable fee of one dollar. With each student ticket, the student would be allowed to purchase one stamped "guest" ticket, and the guest would have to accompany the student to the game. By initiating this reasonable program, the University could eliminate the justified dishonesty.

As The Smoke Clears

It is now nine days since the smoke cleared over the battleneid at Oxford, Mississippi. Casualties: two dead, more than two hundred wounded.

But why all this needless rioting, rebellion and bloodletting? Had not the first American Civil War caused enough suffering and pain for a nation renowned for its democratic principles?

Governor Ross Barnett, who more than once has vowed his preference for prison over surrender of his ideal, maintains he is fighting for States' Rights — a horribly misconstrued concept. For him States Rights means the deliberate denial of freedom of education and the dignity of the human individual.

But the issue is not "States' Rights" — rather human-rights! Southerners must realize how close the Mississippi governor is to "Der Ruhrer," the most notorious racist of history. The sole difference between their ethnic ideologies is that the former asserted the superiority of the Germanic race, while the latter asserts, at least implicitly, the inferiority of the Negro, a proven fact in the primitive South.

Reviewing the principles on which this government was founded, any thinking man would today question their practical veracity. Freedom? As long as you are white! Justice! As long as the State approves! Pursuit of happiness? As long as it is not pursued in the South! Seventeen seventy-sir is again forgotten.

A reincarnation of 1861 takes its place. Confederate flags again flying . . . skirmishes in the deep South . . . racism rampant. War cries such as: "We will never surrender . . . I will never yield a single inch," pervade the tensely-strung atmosphere.

Headlines of the world press scream out the gross injustice and hypocracy of the nation known as the Cradle of Democracy. American prestige diminishes proportionately to the tenacity with which such Southerners as Governor Barnett cling to their inhuman beliefs.

Viewing the problem rationally, how can one seriously maintain that the pigmentation of a man's skin and his chance origin in the African tropics has anything to do with his scaled rung on the social ladder? More specifically, has the American Negro any less right to live, learn, and believe where he pleases than had the unhappy Jews of the Third Reich?

True, the martyred Barnett — at the risk of fine and imprisonment—has allowed James H. Meredith to enroll at the University of Mississippi. Yet a few days later another Negro is denied admission to Clemson. The situation is grave, and a heavy cloud of foreboding hangs low over the Union. The effects of the Civil War and the Carpetbaggers linger on.

Through foreign eyes, the contempory unwritten Jim Crow laws of the South are a veritable blot on record of the nation which apparently cares more to finance the sagging economies of anti-Western neutral countries than to settle its own sectionalist conflicts.

Projecting the current overseas image of the once mighty, feared, and respected Union even further, we find Mississippi students hurling insults and, in some cases, even rocks at federal troops, especially the Negro soldiers in the ranks. In the process, the commander-in-chief of the Union forces and father of his limping nation receives a smarting backlash across the face.

A gigantic fissure analogous to that of the House of Usher originates out of the State of Mississippi. Human dignity can stand so much crushing. Increased pressure brought about from within could quite probably result in the fall of another great House; for many occupants of this part of the House are enduring the unbearable strain of a psychological Auschwitz and, acting as a conscious or unconscious catalyst, could very well bring the roof crashing down about its foundations.

The Department of Esoteric Languages announced that as a result of a recent meeting they would host the first word-wide conference on the Indo-Yiddichurkish tongue. The conference will be held February 29 through 31, 1963.

It is hoped that as a result of much press coverage this conference will stimulate renewed interest in the Indo-Yiddichurknish literature. It is even more fondly hoped by the department that some Indo-Yiddichurk will write something between now and next February so that there will be some Indo-Yiddichurkish literature and the conference will be a success. To date no one has located any Indo-Yiddichurkish literature and this presents a problem.

A highlight of the conference will be a recital by the Indo-Yiddichurkish Symphony Orchestra in the western hemisphere's priemiere of Boom-boom Smoyer's Sonata in High flat for yak-belly bagpipe and stone drum. Both instruments are native to the Indo-Yiddichurks.

The Department of International Diplomacy has announced plans to send a student on an plants to send a student on an assistanceship to Yago. The student is expected to spend a year in Yago studying the local customs and artifacts. The student will also perform the same duties as performed by the members of the Peace Corps. The reason this is so is that the Peace Corps refuses to send anyone there.

The student, according to a recent Radio Yago broadcast, will be welcomed in true Yogoan style. He will be welcomed at the airport by charming native girls brandishing poison dart guns in the traditional attitude of welcome. He will be the guest of honor at a feast to celebrate his arrival.

Students need not apply immediately as there is some doubt as to the exact location of Yago. The United States State Department, foreign aid division, is working on the problem.

In the event that the student fails to return from Yago it is reported that the administration will name a building after him.

Letters to Home

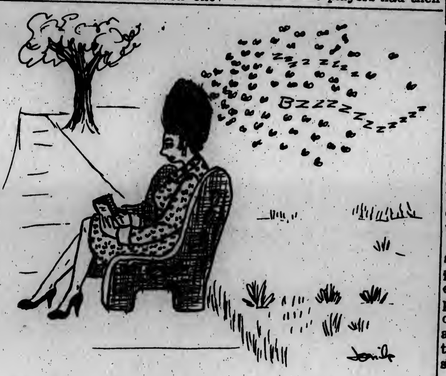
Dear Kitty

The other day I went to my first football game. Everybody sat on perches like we have for the chickins at home. These perches—they call them bleachers—were on both sides of a purty green field which had a bunch of white lines on it and some funny posts on each end.

As I was lookin' around, all of a sudden everybody started jumpin' up an' down. Screamin' an' singin' an' whoopin' an' a hollerin'. It turns out that they're doin' all this cause a bunch of husky lookin' fellers, in outfits that look liike the things our men folk wear under their britches in the winter, ran out on the field.

Then these fellers—half of them wearin' one set of colors and the others wearin' another set—started runnin' all over the field kickin' and chasin' a ball that looks like an overgrown rotten egg. When the fellers couldn't git a hold of the ball then they started kickin' the nearest things—each other.

While they were doin' all this I looked around me an' on one end of the field there was a big board. On the board it told who was winnin' an' there were a bunch of other numbers an' letters but I couldn't tell what they meant. In the middle of the perches was a little sun porch an' there were a lot of people up there with cameras, microphones an' notebooks. These people were reporters and' they took pictures, yelled through microphones an' wrote down what happened at the game.



Every once in a while some body said that there would be a cocktail party after the game. It really wasn't necessary to do this cause everyone brought their own bottles an' had little cocktail parties right during the game. There was one feller who had to push his date up the steps cause she couldn't walk alone. (Now I think I know what dilated pupils look like.) Sometimes a feller would stand up an' holler to another one for the bottle he lent but didn't get back.

Turning back to the game, I found that the players had their suits all dirty an' the people watchin' them were yellin' things like; "Break their craniums." an' "Let's go team." an' some unmentionables. But I really don't think that the players heard all that or at least they didn't seem to follow the orders.

Half time was the point in the game when the players ran off the field an' got told off by the coach. Also there are always some kinds of entertainment which nobody pays attention to cause everyone is too busy gettin' food an' drink.

On the whole, a football game is not merely the meetin' of two teams for a legalized (nice word huh?) fight but also a time to eat, DRINK, an' BE MERRY!

Your loving friend,
Joanie Podunk.

Cuba Si — Yankee Maybe

By George Welch

Test your knowledge of American History and see if you can guess who the President was when:)1 The United States was gravely threatened bf a foreign power which had its eye on certain regions in the south; 2) Who had to fight growing public and Congressional pressure to go to war; 3) Who disliked the military except as an instrument for diplomatic and political effect; 4) Who came from Massachusetts; 5) Who squelched a burgeoning effort to involve the United States in South American Revolution.

If your answer to these questions was John Kennedy, then you are only partly right. There is another whom I had in mind. It is true that President Kennedy must deal with the threat of Russian influence in this hemisphere, particularly in view of the incidents that have occurred recently in Cuba. It is also true that the President has squelched the cries for war that have arisen out of injured pride and frustration.

John Adams

Whom did I have in mind then? I was thinking of John Adams, but before too many accuse me of equating the present president with a revered giant of our patriotic past, let me say I merely found the idea entertaining, and a fairly good device with which to introduce the subject of Cuba. As to the comparison, you may draw your own conclusion as to any similarity of the living with the dead.

Force In Cuba

The first point about the Cuban situation that concerns me is, "Why is there any need to defend the President's decision not to use military force on Cuba?"

This question alone indicates one of the dangers of this problem as far as the United States is concerned. I do not think that the memory will soon be erased of a former Army general leading a group of students and others against the Federal marshall on the University of Mississippi campus. The mix of American political attitude contains an element of this kind of radical. Fortunately for now their bite has not proved very harmful, but their barking keeps many awake at night. If there is even the mention that a Russian may be near the coast, the 'Patriots' start to arm themselves for invasion, and say their prayers for the holocaust to come. There is the definite and frightening possibility that some may soon come to believe that, because these people scream the loudest (in red, white, and blue), they are right. Not so!

The threat that Castro, Cuba, and the Russians have is not immediate. Cuba is not another Taiwan, and it is not likely that there will be much immigration to Havana as a haven.

Power Threat

Communism is not a threat to the United States, but Russian power is. The arms sent into Cuba are not sufficient to attack the U.S. . . . We are told that they are defensive, and there is little reason to believe otherwise. The naval base given to Ruesia by Castro is supposedly to be used by fishing trawlers. It may be used for submarines, a definite threat to our security and, I should think, grounds for war, but the Russians are not advertising this possibility. If the base were used by submarines, it could be reatively easy to detect, and then nip in the bud, with the proper means. As for the Russian trawlers, they already range the seas in their dual role as fishing vessels, and spy ships. I don't see how the removal of Castro will change that.

Cuban Stepping Stone

The last, and most important danger is directed toward Central and South America. Cuba could be used as a stepping stone to revolutions in other countries. The Russians may even foster the illusion that they will be able to make Cuba into a showpiece of Communism. However, I do not believe that it will at any time in the near future become the Berlin of the Carribean. As a result, the only way that Cuba can endanger the other countries of South America is by direct force, and/or fifth column tactics. If these courses are pursued then the United States can attempt action through the Organization of American States, which will be a big test in its effectiveness. This measure failing, then the U.S. would be forced to unilateral action.

Not every consequence of the present situation is to the detriment of the United States goals and security. Cuba could be the reagent which will strengthen the powers of the O.A.S. . . . Furthermore. Congress and the American people have been awakened to the importance of South America, as a direct result of Castroism. It is inevitable that more attenion will be paid to this region in the future. It is also a possibility that the U.S. and Latin America will work more closely.

Commendable Stand

From this standpoint alone, the action taken by the present administration seems necessary. It is an accepted fact that Castro is in power, and that under his leadership Cuba is an independent nation, claiming sov-

Communist Threat Is Not As Distant As Commonly Thought

By Jan Dyroff

Every so often it is wise to stop and survey the surroundings an dto search them for dangers. The danger that is most pressingly malevolent in today's world is that of Communism.

Until the take-over in Cuba by the Castro regime, the threat was thought by the majority to be a half a world away. But how near it is now? Signs along Florida's highway gives the answer, "Communism is only ninety miles away!" Here in Pennsylvania similar signs would seem absurd, but that does not lessen the nearness of the danger by any sight.

Insidious Propaganda

Communism's voice of insidious propaganda is only as far away as the radio dial. There are many powerful radio stations in Communist dominated Cuba that broadcast the Moscow party line with regularity. They can be heard in this area quite clearly. Station CMHQ in Santa Clara can be heard nightly broadcasting in Spanish at 640 kilocycles. This is only one example.

There are "clandestine" broadcasts who try to combat this poison such as Radio Americas. But they speak only to the Latins. Perhaps they should broadcast to the Yanvees also requesting awareness to the dangers rather than sympathy for the victim.

Reflections of Telstar

Remember the picture above? It flashed across your television screen on a hot night last July. Perhaps you remember that it originated from France. And that it reached the U. S. via Telstar, the world's first private enterprise communications satellite.

Since that summer night, the Bell System's Telstar has relayed electronic signals of many types—television broadcasts, telephone calls, news photographs, and others.

But there's one Telstar reflection you might have missed. Look into the faces of the Bell System people below and you'll see it. It is the reflection of Telstar's success that glowed brightly on the faces of all who shared in the project.

Their engineering, administrative and operations skills created Telstar and are bringing its benefits down out of the clouds to your living room.

These Bell System people, through their talented, dedicated efforts, make your phone service still better, more economical, and more useful.

The reflections of Telstar are many.

Ecumenical Council Meets In October

By Joe Deighan

On October 11, 1962, the Second Ecumenical Council of the Vatican will meet. Much has been said of the council but even more is to be known. What is an ecumenical council? Where is it being held and why? These and and many other questions are being asked by Catholics and non-Catholics the world over.

An ecumenical council is a meeting of all the hierarchy of the Church for the purpose of carrying out their judicial, doctrinal and legislative functions. The word ecumenical itself means general or universal. This is the second general council to be held in the Vatican and thus is derived the offiicial name of the assembly. The official title of the council does not mean to imply however that it is only the second of its kind to be held by the Catholic Church. General councils are most definitely not new to the Church.

Council Infallible

The council of the Vatican will mark the twenty-first such general meeting of the hierarchy of the Church. The twenty previous assemblies range in date from 325 A.D. to 1869. The council of 1869, the last one to be held, was the first one to be held in the Vatican and thus was called the First Ecumenical Council of the Vatican. The primary or chief concern or goal of the clergymen in all of these councils was the welfare of the Catholic Church.

Just as Pope John XXIII is infallible in his teachings of faith and morals as Supreme Pontiff of the Church of Christ, so also is the ecumenical council infallible. The main reason for having this general assembly is to carry out the divine mission to teach mankind but it will also be extremely helpful in demonstrating to the world the advantages of unity. The people of today have become too accustomed to individuality and perhaps this sudden reversal of form will provide an opportunity for many to revaluate themselves.

The meetings will be presided over by Pope John himself. No ecumenical council may be held unless the pope convokes it. The pope only can transfer, dissolve or suspend an ecumenical council and no new laws will be binding unless the pope promulgates them.

Latin Only

It is important to note that the Second Council of the Vatican will be for the Catholic Church only. The leaders of other churches will be invited but they are to be observers and no more. The pope is free to invite anyone he wishes, (i.e. newspapermen, authors, etc.), but no such invitations have been extended as yet. It has clearly been stated by sources of the Vatican however that no representatives of government will be invited under any conditions.

Because the members attending this international assembly do not all speak the same language, it will be necessary to use the language of the Church, Latin. This will provide an accurate understanding of terms, whose best meanings might be lost in translation.

Months Not Years

The length of an ecumenical council is never pre-arranged. The representatives are there to do a job and they will not leave until the job is done. The Council of Trent in 1545 lasted for nine years because of several interruptions, however the coming council is expected to be numbered in terms of months rather than years.

Considering the problems confronting the world today, one might wonder how this meeting could fail to last for years. It is a commonly known and accepted fact that the problem of the influx of Communistic action on the free world can not be solved in a short period of time, but it is hoped that through the industriousness of our learned hierarchy, under the supervision of the Holy See and with the cooperation of the lay apostolate, significant steps can be taken in the right direction.

ereignty, and politically entitled to it. In order to maintain our announced principles, we must refrain from aggression, and/or unilateral action. Our prestige and leadership are at stake. The Russians would like nothing more to sacrifice Cuba for the greater victory of denouncing us in the U.N., and thus destroying what little common action the United States and Latin America might take up. I don't think it takes much imagination to hear the Russian propaganda — 'The U.S. has swallowed Cuba. You will be next.'

In summary; war has been diverted, the United States has kept its head and acted responsibility. We may have lost one of the little battles, but in doing so, we are aiming to win the Cold War.

DE PAULIA—De Paul University—Coe College will institute a tnree term, 3-course program beginning this year. While the academic year will be of about the same duration under the new system, students will register for only 3 courses each term as compared with 5 or 6 courses each semester. A recess will follow each term ending in time for Christmas and Spring vacations. The new program will offer a sufficient range of choices to prepare a student adequately for a post-college career or for graduate school. Another advantage of the system is that the faculty members are more likely to do their best teaching when they are not overburdened with preparations, and when they have fewer students at any one time. Other colleges operating under a similar system include Dartmouth, Carleton, Goucher, and Lake Forest.

Entertainment at the three intermissions of the night will be provided by the Chris Clark Quintet, The Coachman, and the Teatones of Rosemont.

One O'Clock Closing

The dance will come to a close at one o'clock Saturday morning with the next event scheduled for 9:30 the same morning.

Mass at 9:30 will be followed by breakfast in the day-hop cafeteria. This breakfast will be only for those persons that had attended Mass. Buses will leave following breakfast for the Villanova-Delaware game. A block of seats near midfield is available only to the Sophomore class.

The Newman Club of Delaware University has announced that their house will be open all during the day for Villanova sophs and their dates. The club is also sponsoring a dance Saturday night in the Student Center at 54 West Park Place that will feature the Delatones, with twist music from 8:30 until midnight.

The buses are tentatively scheduled to leave the Delaware campus at 12:30 for the return trip to Villanova to end the weekend.

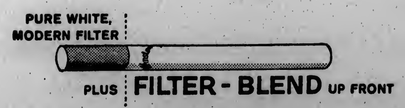
GOLD BUG—Western Maryland College to provide a common avenue of exchange in selling used books, the Student Government Organization has set up a book exchange. This makes books available which might otherwise not have been obtained through the grapevine and signs on the bulletin board. Students participating in the exchange, set their own prices and sign an agreement to pick up book and/or money at the end of the sale. A fee to cover expenses is five cents from the seller. This procedure will eliminate the need and a used book store or ordering the book if it cannot be obtained.

MUHLENBURG WEEKLY — Mulenburg College—Children at play are ever at work, enacting, in reverse, the entire pattern of man's long struggle upward into civilization. In his novel, LORD OF THE FLIES, William Golding uses this thesis to develop his theme—that "evil is inherent in the human mind" and only the fittest actually survive. Through his theme Golding attemps to trace the defects of society back to the defects of human nature. The moral is that the shape of a society must depend on the ethical nature of the individual and not on any political system however apparently logical or respectable. The book's title is taken from a free translation of the Greek BEELZEBUB, lord of insects, and it comes to represent symbolically, rather than traditionally, the Devil who is devoted to decay, destruction, demoralization, hysteria, and panic.

Foreign Students Are Notified About Laws

Villanova students from foreign countries were reminded last week by Prof. Daniel J. Rivas, the Foreign Student advisor, that they must comply with the laws of the United States in reference to the Immigration and Naturalization Service regulations.



Students from foreign countries are reminded to see Prof. Rivas at their earliest convenience with their passport visa, arrival-departure record, or other evidence of entry into this country. Failure to comply with this obligation may bring upon the student unnecessary trouble with American authorities.

Drill Team Reorganization Includes Two New Positions

The Villanova Drill Team, officially called Whiskey Company, has undergone a change in its company organization. Two different jobs have been created from the formerly one-man position of Company and Drill Team Commander.

Filling the two new posts are Roger Bride and Richard Hulit respectively. Both men were previously enlisted in the service. The other new officers this year are Al Ward, Company executive Officer, and Ken Holman and John Nelson, who are the platoon commanders. All five men are Marine Corps Option and are seniors except for Nelson, a junior.

Although the team has been practicing several completely new maneuvers this fall, their basic routine will not be changed. The team will march at half-time at the football games on both Parents' Day and Homecoming Weekend. Also as part of the Homecoming activities, Villanova's fourth annual invitational drill will be held on the school's baseball diamond on the morning of November third.

Society Announces Semper Fi Meeting To Choose Officers

The Semper Fidelis Society will meet tomorrow, Oct. 11, at 6:30 p.m. in room 209 C & F. All PLC's, whether sworn in or not, along with all NROTC Marines are urged to attend this meeting, at which the selection of officers will take place.

The name of the organization is taken from the motto of the Marine Corps. The organization provides students enrolled in Marine training at Villanova an opportunity to prepare themselves physically, mentally, and morally for their future duties as Marine officers.

Postgraduate Study Advisor Announces Awards Deadline

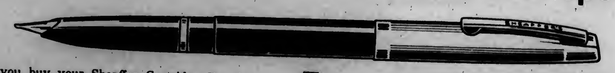
The deadline for applications to compete for Rhodes, Woodrow Wilson, and Danforth Fellowships is approaching. All students interested in entering this competition must have their application in the office of Dr. George, the Post-Graduate Study Advisor, no later than 4:30 p.m., October 17.

The Rhodes Scholarship number thirty-two and are awarded to individuals who show the outstanding qualities of character and intellect as dictated by Cecil Rhodes. Final selection of the candidates who will represent Villanova in the Rhodes Scholarships competition will be made by a committee composed of Fr. Robert J. Welsh, OSA, Dean of Arts and Sciences; John Gallen, Dean of Engineering; Bernard J. Downey, Profesor of Chemistry; and Henry L. Rofinot, of the History Department.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation awards one thousand fellowships annually to persons who are interested in post-graduate study leading to a career in the teaching profession. In order to enter this competition, the student must meet the requirements and by nominated be a faculty member.

The Danforth Fellowship Program is oriented in the direction of the teaching profession. The Danforth Foundation accepts a specific number of nominations from a participating university in accordance with the size of its student body. Villanova's five nominees will be selected from the applicants by a committee of faculty members not yet formed.

Application forms and information about the fellowships are available in Dr. George's office in the basement of the C&F Building.



Marine Interviewer To Give Information On Training Programs

The Marine Corps Selection Officer, Captain F. H. Mitchell, Jr. USMC, will be on Campus Oct. 29, 30, 31 and Nov. 1, 2, 1962 to interview men and women students for Marine Officer training programs. The Officer Selection Team will be at Dougherty Hall to provide information and interview applicants.

All Marine officer training is conducted at Quantico, Virginia. Qualified seniors who are accepted for Marine leadership training will be draft deferred upon enrollment until they have met the requirements for their degree. Upon graduation, they will attend a ten week training course and then be commissioned. Qualified applicants may choose to go on to Marine flight training, after commissioning, to win the coveted "Wings of Gold" of a Leatherneck pilot. Women applicants, with extensive background experience, may be guaranteed initial assignment to the field of their choice.

Frosh Dominate Swim Meet; Intramural Bowling Starting

by Ray Heitzman

The Intramural Department held its annual Swim Meet last Wednesday with the Freshman taking the first three places in every event. The meet began with Ray Donnelly taking the 50 yard freestyle in the time of 24.2 with Mike Marshall and Jack Goldschmidt in second and third place. Ray Donnelly also went on to win the 50 yard butterfly .

In the final heat of the 100 yard breast stoke the first three finishers eclipsed the record set by J. Leidy in 1960 of 34.1. Ken Herr had the exceptional time of 31.2, also with impressive times were John Hoffman 32.7 and Chuck Haire 33.7. In the 100 yard backstroke Joe Livengold cuttwo-tenths of a second off the record of 30.4 held by Don Reed and Dan Hurley.

Medley Relay Most Exciting

The 200 yard medley relay, following the diving event won by Bob Biese with 114.2 points, proved to be the most exciting event of the meet. The relay ended in a tie when both teams broke the old record of 1:58 with 1:57. Based on the judges' decision the team of Livengood, Griffths, Donnelley and Gepson was awarded the event.

The basement of Alumni Hall, adjacent to the gym, is the new location for the Intramural Office. The office will be open from Monday to Friday from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Entry blanks can be picked up there or 243 Sheehan until Thursday, October 11 for intramural bowling at the Rosemont Lanes. The cross-country meet will be held at 4:30 p.m. on October 11.

play fell incomplete. Buffalo took over on their own fifteen. Soph end John McDonnell threw the Bull's Don Gilbert for a seven yard loss. Buffalo's punt was returned to te fifty by Jack Gastley. Accurate Aceto passes to Gastley for twenty yards and to McDonnell for fifteen put the ball on the five yard line. After several plays Aceto hit end Jack Clifford on a hook for the Cats' fifth TD. Barbaro's kick was good and the score stood at 36-6 at the end of the contest.

Statistically, Buffalo led the Cats in first downs during the first half 11-8. They trailed the the Cats in total yardage garnered during the first thirty minutes, 188-195. But the final stats showed VU with 20 first down to the Bull's 13 while the Cats total yardage of 476 overwhelmed Buffalo's 227.

Rugby Squad Suffers First Defeat; Tangles With Penn State Saturday

By Roy Baron

Villanova's rugby squad suffered its first defeat of the season last Saturday, being set back by a strong team from the First Troop of the First Philadelphia Cavalry 8-3. Eight points by the Troop in the final five minutes enabled them to overcome a 3-0 Wildcat lead. This Saturday the 'Cats will try to make a comeback against a highly regarded Penn State team at University Park. They ought to be hungry for victory after losing to the Cavalarymen.

A large crowd, consisting mostly of high school students attending the Publications Conference, saw both squads display strong defense in the scoreless first half. A missed penalty kick by Rich Guinan was the closest the Wildcats came to scoring in the half. During this fiercely contested first half breakaway "Duke" Ford had to be helped from the field with a badly injured ankle. He was unable to return to action and will be lost to the team indefinitely.

Guinan Scores

In the second half the Wildcats took the kickoff and moved the ball into Philadelphia territory on a penalty kick by Captain Luke St. Onge. A three point "try" was scored by Don Canava, a lineman, only to be nullified by a penalty. A couple minutes later fly half Guinan made a penalty kick for the Wildcats' three points.

This 3-0 advantage held up for the 'Cats until the final five minutes when the Troop was able to score a "try" and add the conversion to take a 5-3 lead. Following the kickoff the Philadelphia club was able to score another "try." This made the score 8-3 with less than two minutes remaining to play. The Wildcats, trying desperately to tie the game, were unable to score.

'Cats Strong Points

The Villanova line, spearheaded by Don Crouthamel and Pete Triolo, played brilliantly through most of the game, until finally the Cavalrymen were able to penetrate the 'Cat defense in the last few minutes. St. Onge, Tom James, and Ed Wilkinson stood out in the backfield for Villanova. Captain St. Onge played the entire second half with a painful shoulder injury.

In the second game of the afternoon, the Wildcat "B" team defeated Philadelphia Rugby Club 11-8. This evened their record at 1-1, identical with that of the "A" team.

The remainder of the schedule is as follows:

Cross Country Season Opens 'Cats Aim For IC4A Victory

By Carol Burton and Lois Greyson

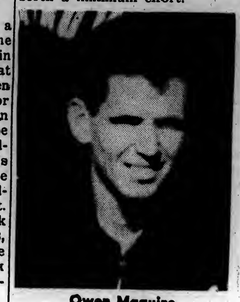
This Friday, October 12, Villanova's cross-country team will open their season with a dual meet against St. Joseph's at Cobb's Creek. Led by All-American Vic Zwolak and co-captains Pat Traynor and Owen Maguire, Villanova will try to extend an undefeated streak in dual and triangular meets which has stretched over three years. Last year the Villanova team capped a successful season by placing third in the IC4As held at Van Courtland Park, New York. Top individual performers for the Cats were Zwolak, taking fifth place, and Traynor, who finished tenth.

Pat Traynor

In this same meet, the freshmen team, led by Tom Sullivan's first place, took the IC4As freshmen title, capturing 17 out of a possible 15 points.

Seven Meets

This Friday's meet opens a seven meet schedule for the 'Cats climaxing in the IC4As in New York and the NCAAs at East Lansing, Michigan. Ten mile a day practices began for the team on September 17 in preparation for dual meets to be run against perennial Philadelphia foes LaSalle, last year's Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate champs, and St. Joseph's. In addition, Villanova will take on St. John's, Metropolitan New York Champs, the Quantico Marines, headed by two sub-four minute milers, Cary Weisiger and Chuck Dotson, and American University.



Villanova's chief competition in the IC4As, made up of 62 member colleges, will be provided by Penn State, Michigan State and Cornell. Penn State's big threat is steeplechaser Gerry Norman, second last year in this meet, while Steve Machooka from Kenya, last year's winner will be running for Cornell. Michigan State, rather than boasting outstanding individual performers, will present a well-balanced team.

Coach Tuppeny

This year's squad will depend a great deal on the untried ability of four sophomores, Tom Sullivan, Dave Hyland, Jim Orr and Marty Ferko, to run successfully at five miles, providing depth for veterans Zwolak, Maguire, Traynor, John Angevine, Al Adams, Harry Smeck and Jim Smyth.

Coach Jim Tuppeny predicts that this year's team will be successful only if the promising but inexperienced sophomores fulfill their potential, and the returning lettermen put forth a mximum effort.

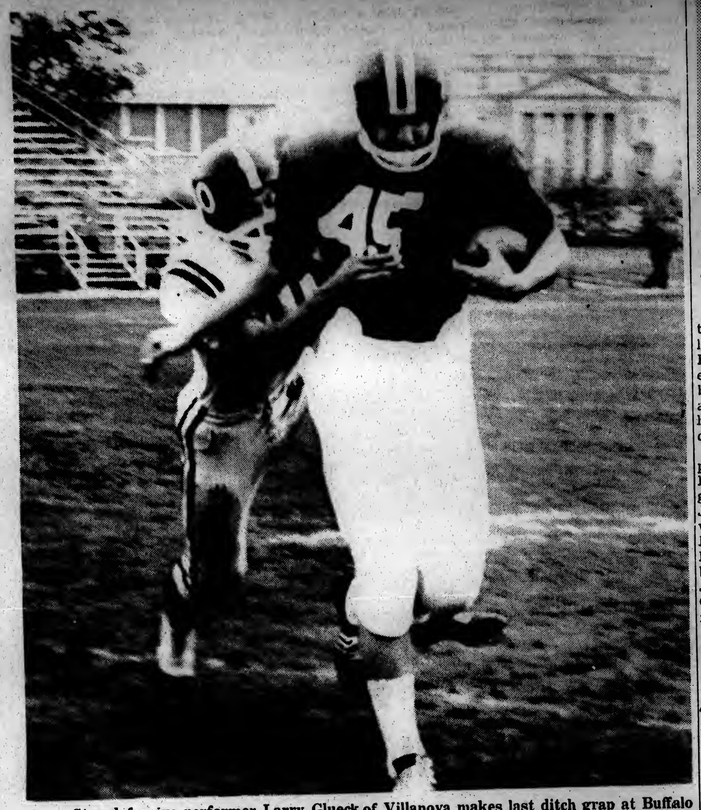
Spring Season Plans Made By Young VU Lacrosse Team

By Tom Finan



The lacrosse team at Villanova is currently undergoing personnel recruitment and organizational problems, in preparation for their still-distant Spring season. The first meeting of the year was held last Thursday, October 4, during the activities period. There was an enthusiastic turnout for the meeting and more than forty Villanovans, demonstrated their interest in playing lacrosse.

Lacrosse is a comparatively recent addition to the athletic program at the University, and this years Spring Season will mark the sport's third year of competition. In speaking of the current seasons prospects, Captain Gene Melcher stated that he is hopeful for a good season, and encourages anyone wishing to play, since no previous experence is needed.

New Mentor

Coach John Hodges, formerly of the Naval Academy, will be leading the club this year. Mr. Hodges has indicated that the next meeting of the team will be held next Thursday, October 18, during the activities period, in room 202, C&F. At this time, plans and details for the current year will be announced.

A tentative schedule, calling for a nine game season, has been released. This includes six or seven home games, which will be played behind the football stadium. Probable opponents will be: Bowdoin, C. W. Post, Bucknell, Dickinson, Franklin and Marshall, Fairleigh Dickinson, Drexel, University of Pennsylvania, and Lafayette.

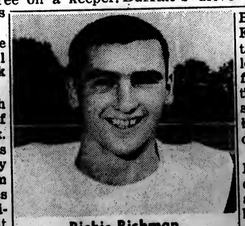
Buffalo Honeymoon Haven For Cats As Villanova Romps In Second Half

By Vince Kennedy

Last Saturday, Captain Charlie Johnson led his Villanova chargers to a 36-6 team victory over the Bulls of Buffalo as they extinguished Buffalo's fired up team with four touchdowns in the second half of their tilt.

The score at halftime was 8-6, Villanova, as penalties, two interceptions and two fumbles halted any sustained Wildcat drive during the first thirty minutes of play.



The Mainliners only score during the first two periods came during the second quarter as halfback Bob Merenda returned a Buffalo punt for five yards to Villanova's fifteen. Three plays later Richman rolled left and ran forty-five yards behind senior guard Bob Kowalski's crushing block. Two plays later Merenda followed strong blocking as he ran left for nine yards. Villanova's line then pinched in on a third and one situation enabling Glueck to run off the right side untouched for a twenty-six yard TD. Richman's pass to Glueck for the extra duece was complete.

The Bulls only score came in the second quarter as quarterback John Stofa carried the ball across from the three on a keeper. Buffalo's drive was highlighted by a forty-eight yard Stofa-Butler pass play.

Buffalo's other threats in the half were failed by the ball jarring tackling of soph Jack McDonald and an interception.

The second half started with Barbaro's kick soaring out of the end zone for a touchback. Buffalo was forced to punt as they could move the ball only four yards. The visitors from Pa. then dashed Buffalo's hopes with an eight play drive climaxed by Richman's roll-out eight yard TD. With Barbaro's one point conversion, the score stood at 15-6 Villanova, with 10:53 remaining in the third quarter.

Several plays later Tom Butler, Buffalo HB, fumbled on the Bull's 38 after a hard Larry Glueck tackle. Recovery by VU's Joe Cutroneo set up the Cat's third score. Three plays later Lou Rettino went fourteen yards by cutting in after attempting to run around the right end. On the next play he went the final three yards and the Wildcats led 21-6 as his fumble was recovered. The two point conversion was successful.

Richie Richman

40 Yard TD

Barbaro's kick was returned to the Bull's twelve by Bob Baker. Two plays later tackle Buddy Nask and defensive back Fran Dougherty broke through to nail Baker for a five yard loss as the quarter ended. Buffalo punted to the fifty and three plays later Bob Dunn skirted right end behind strong blocking for a forty yard touchdown run. Barbaro's kick failed.

The kickoff was returned to Buffalo's fifteen and they proceeded to make their second, and final, first down of the half by moving the ball to the twenty six. Nask pressed Stofa into a bad pass and the Bulls punted out of bounds on Villanova's forty-seven.

Aceto Passes

Aceto then maneuvered his unit to the hometowners' fifteen with a seven yard pass to Dunn and a seventeen yard pass to end John Dinan. Thomas' drive to the fourteen was fruitless as Gleuck's option pass on the next

SPORTS WILDCAT

Kittens Pound Bullis Prep; Kelleher And Connell Shine

By Dick Pazdan

Villanova's freshman football team jumped off to a flying start last Saturday by ripping Bullis Prep by a 22-0 score at the losers field. The victory may have been a costly one for the Cats, as three first line players were hurt and may miss next week's contest.

Dave Cappozi started at the pivot spot for Villanova, Charley Piela and Dan Cirone at the guards, Jerry Strid and Larry Jones held down the tackle slots, while Chip Kelleher and John McAdams were the flankers. Dave Connell was at quarterback, Don Hartlaub and Rudy Jugo were the halfbacks, Mike Guerri at fullback in the starting lineup for the Wildkittens.

In the first period, Villanova opened the scoring with a long pass play. Connell flipped a forty yarder to Kelleher to put Villanova on the scoreboard Connell rolled out right and carried the ball into the end zone for the two point conversion.

Midway through the second period, the same combination clicked for another touchdown drive into the Bullis end zone. This time Connell hit with a fifty yard bomb to make the score 14-0. The extra point attempt was stopped at the line of scrimmage, and the 'Kittens carried a fourteen point bulge into the locker at intermission. In this second period, reserve quarterbark Dan Koshlap suffered a rib injury, leaving doubt as to his ability to play for the rest of the season.

End Zone Plunge

Villanova received the opening kickoff and marched down the field in a sustained drive before Tom Brown capped it with a two yard touchdown plunge into the end zone. Connell carried the ball over to garner the two point conversion and close out the Villanova scoring for the afternoon. In the third period center Cappozi dislocated his shoulder and may be out for sometime.

Last Week 7-4-0.....Season 13-8-1 Pct. .619

Outlook Fair To Good

by Vince Kennedy

Last year the Villanova football team enjoyed one of the most successful seasons it has experienced in several years. With a regular season record of eight wins versus two defeats, the Wildcats climaxed the season with a 17-9 win over the University of Wichita. Many fans wondered if this type of season was a freak accident or were the Cats just playing fine football.

During the summer a lot of concern was expressed about whether or not the sophomore and little experienced second year men could capably fill several key spots vacated last year due to graduation.

Now that the 1962 squad has rolled over West Chester, VMI, and the University of Buffalo, and played winning football in a loss to Boston College, it is apparent that these new players have blended with last year's veterans to make this year's team as good or better than the one which took the field last year.

The team's spirit is high and possibilities for going all the way for the rest of the season are good. But getting up for each game is necessary and this year's squad is obviously doing just that.

Villanova's winning ways have shown that each game has been a complete team effort, in which no one player has been the sole reason for success. They have maintained this team work attitude all year and it is hoped that they will continue to do so. Loss of this cohesiveness could cause disasterous results.

Next week as the Mainliners travel to Delaware to take on the Blue Hens, it is certain that the home towners' spirit will be high as they and the rest of the squads on the schedule realize the fact that national recognition will be afforded them if they can defeat the nationally known Wildcats. But if Villanova enters into the rest of their games demonstrating the spirit and enthusiasm during the beginning of the season, they will probably finish the season with the BC loss as the only blemish on their record.

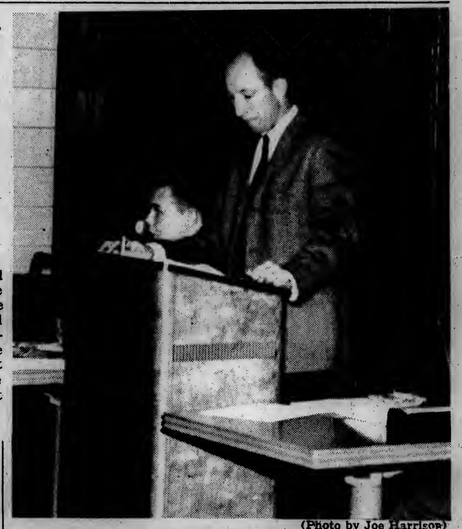
Council Decides On March 18 Holiday Seating Situation Opened To Debate

By Joe McCarthy

After spirited debate and argument during last Wednesday's Student Council Congress meeting, it was decided that the day of March 18, 1963 (the Monday following St. Patrick's Day) will officially constitute the annual Council holiday.

Also highlighting the second assembly of the year was the announcement by Vice Chairman Marty McGuinn that, according to university officials, there can be no extension of the Easter vacation during the present school year. The major reason given for the refusal was that the academic calendar has already been set and there would entail too many difficulties in effecting a change at this date.

Field House Admission



Chairman Joe Tate further announced the Athletic Department's intention of charging a minimal fifty cents admission price for basketball games scheduled in the Field House. He pointed out that this innovation would eliminate the difficulties that ensued last year when the crowd exceeded the number of seats.

Where the students had previously been given free admission upon presentation of their matriculation card, now students will think twice about attending games when they have to pay for admission. It is hoped that this system can narrow the crowds down to just those who want to attend he game in proper seating arrangements, thereby eliminating the pressure on the players and Athletic Department.

Originally McGuinn had proposed that the free day be designated as April 16 so that the Easter vacation could be lengthened. But, after the assembly went into a Committee of the whole to discuss the motion, it was amended to substitute "March 18." The debate, though limited, invoked various references from some Council members regarding past weekends in New York over St. Patrick's Day. The amended motion, nonetheless, was passed by a margin of 25 to 19½ votes.

At the beginning of the meeting, the assembly was addressed by the Alumni Secretary, George Pequingot, who emphasized the necessity of having an informed undergraduate body in the activities of what will one day be "their own alumni." The net profit of the Council's Dance was also announced to be about 1500 dollars, a record amount.

Father Whitley Appointed As Secretary To The Provincial

by Richard Flanagan

Rev. Norbert Whitley

Reverend Norbert W. Whitley OSA, S.T.L., Chaplain par excellence from 1957 to 1962, has been recently appointed Secretary en Socius to the Provincial, the Rev. James Donnellon, OSA.

Father Whitley was born circa 1910 and schooled in Philadelphia. In 1931 Father entered the minor seminary in Staten Island, New York.

He entered the novitiate in New Hamburg, New York and professed vows in 1932. He entered St. Mary's Hall in 1933 and was graduate in June, 1937.

Father furthered his education at the Gregorian University residing at the Augustinian House in Rome. He was ordained in May of 1940. Due to the outbreak of World War II, Father was assigned to the Augustinian House of Studies in Washington, D.C. in the capacity of instructor of Theology. In 1943 Father was appointed sub-master of Clerics and in 1945, Master of Clerics.

Father Whitley was assigned to Villanova in 1957 to succeed Father Klekota as Chaplain. His present assignment was made in June of this year. This position entails handling of confidential documents of the order and traveling with the Provincial which will warrant trips to California and Japan to visit the Augustinian Houses.

Concomitant with these duties, Father is assistant-in-resident at St. Thomas of Villanova parish in Rosemont and will continue teaching theology. Father maintains offices in the monastery and Tolentine Hall and hopes that the upper-classmen and freshmen will think of him as being available and not too busy for an appointment or friendly visit.

Delaware Game Rally Begins Annual Sophomore Weekend

The Sophomore Weekend at Villanova University begins this Friday evening with a Spirit Committee rally, followed by a Mardi Gras Ball in the Field House. Highlight of the evening's activities will be the crowning of the Sohpomore Cotillion Queen, and the presentation of the "Outstanding OC Award" of 1962. The next day's activities include a motor trip to the campus of the University of Delaware to witness the clash between the Hens of Delaware and the Wildcats of Villanova, after which there will be a party Saturday evening.

Tickets for the dance, which wil feature a festive New Orleans motif, will be on sale in the Pie Shoppe and aso at the door. The price is $4.00. The evening's entertainment will be under the direction of the Maurice Scott's Society Orchestra. Intermission music will be provided by the Chris Clark Quartet, while the program will be further augmented by the Teatones of Rosemont and Villanova's own Coachmen.

A Sophomore Mass will open Saturday's program; and a light breakfast will be available after Mass in the C&F cafeteria. At 11:30 buses will depart from the campus for the game, where a block of tickets has been reserved for the Sophomore Class. Tickets for the football game are priced at $5.00, while bus reservations may be made in the Pie Shoppe with the cost being $4.00. The buses will leave the Delaware campus at 6:30 and return to Villanova.

A class party is scheduled for Saturday evening, at the Elks Club in Norristown. The affair is limited to members of the Sophomore Class and their dates. Entertainment and refreshments will be provided. The cost of party is $3.00.

In commenting on the affair, Dan Pellechia, Cotillion Chairman, commented that he, "extends thanks to the Class Officers, the Cotillion Committee, the Class Moderator Fr. Kenney, and to Fr. Appicci, Dean of Student Activities."

Annual Law School Red Mass To Be Celebrated October 19

On Friday evening, October 19th at 7 P.M., the annual Red Mass for the students and alumni of the Villanova University School of Law will be celebrated in the church of Saint Thomas of Villanova on the campus. The Mass is traditionally celebrated to ask the blessing of the Holy Spirit upon the students, faculty, and alumni of the School of Law.

The Mass is known as the Red Mass for two reasons. The vestments of the clergy and the cloths are of that color which has always been associated with the Holy Spirit. Likewise, the robes of the English judges were red, and in the popular mind this fact was associated with the Mass, which the judges attended as a group, attired in their robes.

President Celebrates Mass

Solemn Mass will be celebrated by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University. The Reverend Robert J. Welsh, OSA, Dean of Liberal Arts will serve as deacon and the Reverend Joseph W. Kemme, OSA, Vice President for Student Affairs will be the sub-deacon. The Reverend William J. Hopkins, OSA, Chaplain of the University, will be Master of Ceremonies. The preacher at the Red Mass is to be the Very Reverend Nicholas J. Sullivan, SJ, the President of LeMoyne College in Syracuse, New York. Father Sullivan is a distinguished preacher. His sermon title is "The Law and the Phophets". The music of the Mass will be sung by the Villanova University Singers under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss, with Dean Gill Reuschlein of the Law School serving as organist.

Council and Students PlanParents' Weekend For Oct. 26, 27, 28

A new feature known as "Meet the Deans" will highlight this year's program for the annual Parents' Weekend which is being held on October 26, 27, and 28.

The weekend festivities will officially begin at 8:30 Friday evening in the Field House with an address by the President of the University, the Rev. John A. Klekoka OSA. Following the talk by Father Klekotka, there will be a Variety Show. This entertainment is being directed, staged, and emceed by Joe Salviolo, a student of the University. It will be entirely a student affair with no professional help.

The registration of parents will take place on Saturday morning in front of the Commerce and Finance Building from 9:00 to 10:00 a.m. At this time favors will be issued to the the mothers, consisting of a pin which they can wear to the game and retain as a souvenir of the weekend.

Immediately following registration, the Villanova Glee Club will give a concert on the green in front of Dougherty Hall. At this concert, Joe Tate, Chairman of the Student Council, will give a short welcoming address.

The specialty of this weekend will be the meeting of the Deans. This will take place in the Commerce and Finance Building and will afford the parents a chance of hearing a lecture by the Dean of their sons' division. A question period will follow the lecture to provide additional information.

Field House Lunch

After the lecture by the Deans a box luncheon will follow in the Field House from 11:15 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. This luncheon will try to alleviate the food problem caused by the overflow of parents and the shortage of dining facilities. The innovation will try to provide adequate facilities for eating and accomodate all parents.

Saturday afternoon at 1:30, parents and students will witness the football game between the Villanova Wildcats and the Xavier Musketeers. The highlight of the game will be the halftime show featuring the Villanova NROTC Unit and NROTC Band along with, "the pride of the Main Line", the Villanova Marching Band.

The weekend will close with 10:30 a.m.. Mass in the Field House celebrated by the Rev. John A. Klekotka OSA, President of the University.

John Driscoll, Vice President of the Blue Key, which is sponsoring Parents' Weekend feels, "this weekend will outdo by far any other Parents' Weekend and will surely be one of the most memorable weekends of the year."

The Blue Key has mailed a letter to parents containing courtesy tickets which will enable them free parking privileges. The letter also contains a map of the campus, a schedule of events, a letter from Jim Howley, President of the Blue Key, and a reply card which parents are asked to fill out and return stating what activities they can attend.

Football tickets for the game will be on sale starting October 15 and students are asked to pick them up in advance.

Chairman Tate also reported the receipt of a letter from the Bell Telephone Company in regard to destruction done to the phones on the campus. For the remainder of the year, asserted the company, there will be no further installation of pay phones in the dormitories. This was the result of two phones having been vandalized during the first two weeks of class, thereby revoking the promise of more phones if none had been damaged during the first two months.

Also constituting part of the accomplishments of the meeting was McGuinn's announcement that a Student Government Conference will be held at Villanova November 29 between three in the afternoon until about ten in the evening. The conference will include representatives from all the colleges and universities in the Philadelphia area.

IRS Meeting Opened Scholastic Season With Logue Lecture

The International Relations Society opened its first fall meeting on Monday, October 8, with a lecture by its moderator, Mr. John J. Logue. Mr. Logue, a member of the History Department, spoke about the "Expanding United Nations and American National Interest."

In his talk, Professor Logue emphasized that as the U.N. admits more and more neutralist countries, the United States will be forced to take a "back seat" in U.N. affairs unless we adopt a favorable attitude toward these nations. He referred particularly to the emerging African nations and our own racial problems.

Freedom Forum To Be Replaced By Similar Conservative Club

The Villanova University Freedom Forum has been disbanded at the request of its leaders. Bill Williams, the founder of the Forum, recognizing that it lacked depth, decided to reform the group for a new undertaking, the Conservative Club.

While not burying the effects that the former organization had achieved as an organ of anti-communist propaganda, nevertheless, he felt that the Forum lacked something: Therefore, the Conservative Club was formed as a purportedly non-political organization to study conservatism with a view to sociological and economic import.

While operating under academic approval from the administration, the organization still lacks clearance from the Student Council. Pending this approval, the club holds in abeyance its plans to expose the campus to prominent conservative speakers who will propound their views.

Slated for the near future is a field trip to the University of Pennsylvania, and participation In a seminar sponsored by the Intercollegiate Society of Individualists, featuring Dr. Russel Kirk of the National Observer.

The club invites all students to join.

Steering Committees Project Plans For Social Calendar

Campus activities are once again in progress and plans for another busy social year are being formulated, with the bulk of the behind-the-scenes work being done by the Junior and Senior Steering Committees.

Organized to accomplish a twofold purpose: to serve as a public relations and opinion link between the respective classes and their officers in respect to debatable issues, and to promote class activities through the personal approach, the Senior Steering Committee consists of seventy-four members and the Junior Steering Committee forty.

Members are chosen by their class officers, student council representatives, and class moderator from applicants who submit a letter to the class president stating the reasons why they would like to become a member of the Committee.

Class President Comments

Senior Class President Jim Tate stated, in reference to the Senior Steering Committee, "Although the class officers and myself realized that the present membership is perhaps too large, we also realized that the seventy-four named have all contributed greatly to the success of the class the past three years."

Faculty Wives Club Holds First Meeting

The Villanova University Faculty Wives Club held its first meeting of the 1962-63 season on Thursday, October 11, at 8:30 p.m. in the lounge of the Naval Science Building on the University campus. Mrs. James McKenna, Jr. of Wayne presided at the business meeting.

Officers Chosen

New officers for the year are: Vice President, Mrs. George T. Radan, Wynnefield; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Lewis Mathers, King of Prussia; Treasurer, Mrs. Leo Zuckowsky, King of Prussia; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Carlos J. Thillet, Jr. Norristown.

Kennedy Campaigns

Newspaper accounts today are full of stories of President Kennedy's campaigning for members of his party as election time draws near. Indeed, it would almost seem as if he were campaigning for his own election.

The question frequently coming to the fore in light of such reports is whether the President should take himself away from the White House at times when international crises are imminent and dangers of both internal and external strife demand constant vigilance at all times.

But, the retort comes, out of the Presidents main duties is to his party and its representatives. This is true but the first duty of the President is to the people of his nation and their interest and safety should override every commitment for individual candidates.

In the long run it may be better for the country if the President's campaigning brings the election of a Congress more in sympathy with his political sentiments. Certainly the Congress which has just adjourned was not in accord with the Administration. In this respect however, the President is faced with a dilemma; he cannot campaign outwardly against those conservative democrats who hindered his program so much in the 87th Congress. But on the other hand he cannot campaign for and does not want to campaign against those republicans who aided him in the measures which were passed.

Thus perhaps it would behoove the president and the people if Kennedy would stay out of electioneering altogether. But this would not promote the accord which he desires either.

Many other presidents have supported candidates for office and many more presidents undoubtedly will do so in the future. But not many in the past have done so with the fervor which Kennedy has shown. And probably not many in the future will either.

The question of how much good this campaigning does in relation to the amount of time it takes also comes into play. People are generally happy to meet with the President, especially Kennedy with his ability for influencing people through his personality. But as far as the voting record of the people is concerned, it may not matter to many who the young man with the good looks and big smile who visited them was. These people will vote just as they would have had Kennedy not visited their district; they will vote because of local ideas and beliefs.

A suggestion would be that Kennedy do his campaigning with less vigor and spend less time on the road and more time behind the desk of the White House. The solutions to even a small fraction of the problems confronting the leader of the United States would go much farther toward promoting the cause of the Democratic party. And it would make the people much happier as well.

The Give-Away Decades

For years now, Premier Tito of Yugoslavia has been reaping the benefits of American dollars and foreign aid programs. For years, it might also be added, he has successfully duped the easily-duped legislators in Washington into thinking that United States greenbacks can gain support in the cold war.

Ever since 1948 when the head-strong Tito broke ties with the Soviet Communism to save his own neck from the tight political pressures of Stalin, our benevolent, oftentimes bungling, theorists in Washington have doled out a fabulous sum that today totals over one billion dollars.

In 1955 at Belgrade, a new Soviet advance by Stalin's successors gained Tito an apology and the privilege to develop his own type of social system based on Communism. But, our heroes in Washington, nonetheless, continued to offer him assistance.

And, when a year later, probably in accordance with some clandestine, pre-arranged agreement with the Soviets, Tito sided with the United States in their demands to the United Nations for the withdrawal of Russian troops from Hungary, the American hopefuls went all agog from which they have yet to actually recover. With the seemingly friendly action, he was in store for the biggest and most substantial give-away ever perpetrated.

Today, we note Tito as continually leaning towards Moscow, leaving little doubt in the minds of any western observers about whom he supports. And we also see that, though President Kennedy took a well-deserved beating in many of his Congressional requests, he was granted the sole authority to offer and give free medical supplies, free food, and sundry other concessions to Tito. This is especially incongruous in view of the many necessary expenditures which could have taken precedence over Tito's needs.

In many cases this type of aid could effect bountiful results in other countries, especially South America and Africa. But our benevolent Presidents prefer to donate much of the tax-payers' gold to Tito's Yugoslavia, a proven enemy. But, he is a clever man. For, he has taken the United States for quite a tidy sum.

Freedom Fighters

America has been called the land of free. Its Constitution grants the right of assembly and of free speach. Mere possession of these rights does not, however, confer a corresponding freedom to abuse them.

There is a small but vocal minority who seem to delight in exercising these rights, even to the point of abuse.

A most striking example of a combination of these groups in action was the recent debacle on Chestnut Street the other night. The so-called "American Nazi Party" in an effort to promote their cause decided to picket a meeting of the now defunct and presumably non-existent Communist Party.

The erstwhile Mr. Gus Hall maintained that there was nothing subversive or worthy of picketing, but that it was only a group of law-abiding citizens meeting for a study session.

Unfortunately for the entire situation the rest of the populace viewed the proceedings with a certain amount of disdain and some of the more violently inclined formed a mob to disrupt the action. Only by dint of prompt police action was serious trouble averted.

The cost of the evening's entertainment was steep. It cost the Nazi's $2,500. It cost the reds unwonted publicity. But it cost the citizenry even more — it cost them their self-respect. By resorting to such tactics in order to oppose radical minorities, the citizens play into their hands. It is better to obey the law of the land than to flout it and become stooges for our country's enemies.

Case Against Neutralism

The attitude of many of today's neutralist nations is becoming increasingly outdated. These nations have in the past relied for peace and co-existence on carefully maneuvering their relations with the East and West blocs so as to obtain the most from one without offending the other. But many officals in the State Department are beginning to question the propriety of aid to and relations with such nations. And the Red Bloc is making moves which are more and more indicative of their desire for more control of these nations.

Such is the case today where India is finding herself hard pressed in remaining neutral with the Red Chinese pushing at her back door. She doesn't want to offend them with open hostility but at the same time she wants to defend her country from invasion. She is in a dilemma and further action from the Red's army causes her to use more troops than the few which she has just ordered to the border to ward off possible Red Chinese attempts at invasion.

This is but one case in which a neutralist nation is feeling the pinch of being "middle of the road". Many of the pseudo-neutralists in Central and South America who are quasi pro-Castro but at the same time who openhandedly accept aid from the United States will find in time that such policies can lead only to the severing of relations from both sources.

Perhaps it is time for the United States to begin plans to give an ultimatum of some sort to these countries to the effect that if they want United States aid and good will, then they will have to return it with closer ties with the West.

Even some of the United States allies in South America are secretly in favor of many policies and dealings which the United States is against because of their relation to communism. The Alliance for Progress money in these countries isn't going far toward bringing these countries to the West if they are fondling the East behind our backs.

It is time for the powers that be in Washington who are responsible for our international dealings to re-evaluate our relations with such nations. True, they cannot be merely cut off so that the Soviet bloc can attach them to itself. But through diplomatic channels action should be taken to bring them closer to the West before we find ourselves actually abetting Red nations.

NFCCS Recommendations For Campus Organizations

By John Neary,
Senior Delegate N.F.C.C.S.

The NFCCS Commission is your communications links between Villanova and other regional schools. Let's see what this means.

Say we postulate an average campus organization. This organization, whether it is a study group, or an action group, duplicates what equivalent campus groups do on other campuses. It has the age old student apathy problem and lacks the support its leaders would wish to obtain. If an average campus group could get in contact with its equivalent campus groups on the other regional campuses, then it could get involved in more significant projects, benefit from the experience of and work with other capable groups in the same area. In general, it will be much more effective in pursuing its aims. It is the job of the NFCCS Commission to provide this contact for interested organizations which seek to improve themselves. Intercollegiate cooperation has already improved the Emphasis panel discussion program that is heard over Villanova's radio station WWVU. The Villanova Conservative Club has also recently taken advantage of this service of the NFCCS Commission.

The NFCCS Commission also represents Villanova student opinion on national and regional levels.

If a student or organization which is studying or acting in some area has some ideas and wishes them to be heard this is how it should be accomplished. The campus organization submits its idea in the form of a resolution to the student council. If it is passed by the council it becomes representative of Villanova opinion. Then the NFCS Commission takes this resolution to the regional and national congress. If it passes the national congress, the resolution or idea becomes representative of Catholic College opinion in the United States, and as such, will be known, respected, and considered by those whom the resolution or idea involved.

These are but two of the services the NFCCS Commission performs. These services have not been taken advantage of in the past. The potential of such services to the campus organizations is very great.

Limelighted: The Quiet Chemists

By Jan Dyroff

A number of years ago there was a poll conducted to sample the population for their conception of a scientist. More often than not the immediate image was a wizened little man with a somewhat diabolical gleam shining from behind a pair of thick rimmed glasses. He had a beard and wore a long white coat; he carried a bubbling, smoking flask around with him while he was a b s e n t - m i d e d l y forgetting things.

This of course is an exaggerated view. No such animals exist outside of comic strips. But there is a lack of understanding what scientists do and this extends right onto our campus here. For the sake of illumination, let us take one of the groups of scientis, j.g., here at Villanova and look into their doings and compare them with the above image. The Chemistry major can be considered an extremely good example.

Science, Humanities, Arts

As far as his schedule goes it is strongly oriented to chemistry with related humanities and arts. He spends a considerable amount of his time doing lab work. In his junior and senior years he has the opportunity to carry on research work and to apply it towards his credit requirements. That much can be learned from the catalogue, but many of the chemists pursue knowledge in other fields—in economics, education, business administration, and the arts.

His official link with the rest of the University comes from his organization, the Villanova Chemical Society. Te Society is one of the most active and least lauded activities on campus. It sponsors a series of lectures that is in fact superior to many of the oter departments on the campus. In their series, topics and speakers all chosen by the members, the chem majors cover a wide variety of topics, from "Kinetics of Enzyme Reactions" to "A Demonstration In Glassblowing," and from "Police Lab Techniques In Crime Detection" to "A European Travelogue."

Technical Travel

Not confining his incuences to the University proper, the chem major travels. Through the Society he can travel on visits to neighboring establishments to see how professional chemists carry on their work. Through such organizations as the Philadelphia Area Student Chemists' Association and the Student's Affiliate of the American Chemical Society he can meet with his peers and deliver papers reporting on his individual work. For the past few years Villanova has been a leader in both of these groups.

Conforming to the ancient Greek idea of the well-rounded man, the chem majors are not flat characters. They engage in sports, both intra-mural and varsity. Some of the varsity athletes are basketball's Jim O'Brien and Jake Brokhars, and football's Rich Bertozzi. On the other hand chem majors have been active in student government, student publications, and other campus activities.

Flair For Fair

As a service to the school the chem majors host a large number of high school students each year at their annual Chemistry Fair. In doing so they introduce the school and its advantages to many younger people who had no idea of the greatness of the University.

And so it can be seen that the scientist student here is in no way a caricature or a recluse but a vital part of an energetic student body worthy of note and recognition.

Alumni News

By Marty Whalen
Alumni Representative

Again this year the Alumni will sponsor a trophy for the best float at Homecoming Weekend. The Alumni also invites the senior class and their dates to a Buffet Luncheon, to be served at 11:00 A.M. in the Fieldhouse before the Homecoming game, November 3rd, at $1.50 per person. Tickets may be purchased between October 22nd and October 26th inclusive in the Student Council Office from 12:30 to 1:20 P.M. Ed Donahue, President of the Villanova General Alumni Association, will be one of the judges for the Homecoming Queen Contest and the Best Decorated Dormitory.

The Senior Class and the Alumni are going to split the cost of "SHAKERS" to be presented to the ladies at the Homecoming Football Game.

Rugby Squad Romps Over Penn St. 46-3; Face New York Club

by Roy Baron

Villanova's rugby team ran wild last Saturday, defeating a bigger, faster, but inexperienced, Penn State squad 46-3. The Wildcats were fired up after having suffered their first setback the previous w e e k e n d. Dick Grove, Luke St. Onge, and Walt Shearer stood out in the gamt played at University Park, scoring three trys each.

Pete Triolo opened the scoring for the 'Cats, bulling over for a three point try. Shortly thereafter he was forced to leave the game after suffering a blow to the eye which caused a hem--orrhage. This left Villanova with only fourteen men. From there the Wildcats continued the romp with Gove, St. Onge, and Shearer leading the way. At halftime Villanova held a 26-0 advantage.

The game was played almost entirely in Penn State territory. It was not until late in the second half that the home team finally pushed the ball over for their only score.

Two sophomore speedsters, who were playing with the "A" team for the first time, were Tony Tranontozzi and Bert Lombino. They did exceptionally well although they did not score. Others who did score for the Wildcats were Jack Krug, with 7 points on a try and a pair of conversions; George Tongring, two trys for six points; and Tom James, one try.

B Team Wins

In a preliminary game the Wildcats "B" team defeated the Penn State "B" team 14-10. Scoring for Villanova were Denny La Niff, Mike Sim, Joe Forns, and Jim McCuster, each with one try, and John Galante, a conversion. During the contest McCuster suffered a broken hand.

This Saturday the "A" team will take on the New York Rugby Club in New York.

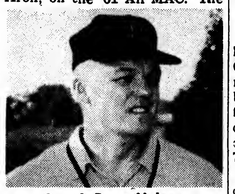
Winged-T Tangles Monster Defense As Delaware Plays Host To Villanova

By Vince Kennedy



After a two week rest, a sound Villanova football team travels to Newark to play the "Blue Hens" of Delaware. This is the first meeting between the two teams since 1924 in a series which Villanova leads 2-1. This year, Delaware faces the roughest schedule in its history.

Buffalo and Rutgers are the only teams Delaware encounters this year who appear on the Wildcats' 1962 schedule. Last year the "Blue Hens" defeated Buffalo 36-12 and lost a closely contested battle to Rutgers 27-19.

Delaware coach, Dave Nelson, is the famed innovator of the "Winged T" which was borrowed by Hawkeye coach, Forest Evashevski, as his Iowa team swept to the Big Ten championship and a victory in the Rose Bowl a few years ago. Nelson feels that this year's team is the best he has gathered since they last won the Middle Atlantic Crown in 1959.

After winning only four games last year, Delaware has shown a strong offense and a stingy defense in their first three encounters of the '62 season as they won decisive victories over Lehigh 27-0, Gettysburg 49-7 and Lafayette 28-7.

The "Blue Hens" have ten out of eleven starters returning from last year. Captain of the team is a 6', 225 lb. center, John Scholato, who was picked ahead of Rutgers All-American, Alex Kroll, on the '61 All MAC. The rest of the line features both speed and weight with such returnees as 250 lb. tackle Dick Evers and senior guard Jim Quirk. Delaware features a pair of fine halfbacks in All MAC Karl Lorenz and a converted 100 yd. dash man, Mike Brown, who averaged 4.5 yds. per carry last year. Quarterbacking the "Hens" will be Ted Kempski, a left handed chucker who completed 40 out of 85 passes last season for 696 yards. Rounding out the backfield will be 180 lb. fullback Tom Michaels, who boasts a 2.5 yards per carry.

Delaware's only weakness appears to be at the end positions and lack of general overall depth. This is one of the toughest games remaining on the Cats' schedule and a victory will give Alex Bell and his men the needed momentum to finish the remainder of the season unscratched.

Boom-Boom

By Tom Bruderle

Captain Charlie Johnson, Villanova's senior left-tackle, was named to the Eastern College Atheletic Conference (ECAC) All-East team last week. He achieved this honor because of the two fumbles he caused Buffalo ball-carriers during the Wildcats 36-6 rout of the Bulls ten days ago. In addition, the likeable Johnson opened the hole for Villanova's third TD.

West Catholic Grad

Johnson, who graduated from Priladelphia's West Catholic High School in 1958 with halfback Bob Merenda, has seen action since his sophomore year. His offensive and defensive play has caused several pro scouts to drool over the way he uses his 245 pounds. Although he has been impressive both ways, Johnson prefers to play offensive guard.

Boom-boom

Johnson, more affectionately known to his teammates and girl, Kathy, as Boom-boom, comes from a family of football enthusiasts. His two brothers played football at West Catholic and his parents are two of Villanova's most avid fans. Not only do they attend every home game, but they also find time to travel with the team on trips. Last year they journeyed to Detroit and Boston College and, ten days ago, found them in Buffalo.

Why did Johnson come to Villanova when the Wildcats were suffering through losing seasons? "I think the environment is good for both study and football."

Charlie Johnson

After graduation, Johnson would like to go into the bartending business with his brother Richard in a sportsman-type bar. He might do well as a bar-tender, but not if pro football scouts have anything to say about it.

Renovated Gymnasium Ready For Foul Shooting Contest

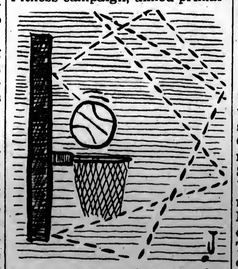
By Tom Finan

The Intramural Department has announced that the Alumni Gymasium has been completely renovated this year, with new backboards, paint and extensive floor repairs. The gym will be open to all students each weekday, and the hours are 10:00 to 7:00.

There will be a foul shooting contest this Monday in the gym, at 4:30. All interested are encouraged to participate in this activity.

Intramural Meeting

There will be an important meeting tomorrow of all captains of Intramural football teams, to discuss the revision of current schedules. This move was made neccessary due to the forthcoming change from Daylight Saving to Standard Time and also because of recent heavy rains, which resulted in cancelled games. This meeting will be held during the activities period in Alumni Gym.



Results are not yet available for the recent Intramural Cross Country meet. However medals will be awarded to the three place winners in each event.

Bowling on the intramural level has again been activiated and games are being played at the Rosemont Lanes, in the afternoon.

The pool is available for use by all the members of the student body, and is open every weekend from 10:00 to 5:00.

Physical Fitness Program

Currently in progress on campus is the Red Cross Physical Fitness campaign, aimed primarily at members of the faculty. It is a part of President Kennedy's "Physical Fitness" program. It consists of a program where a goal of fifty miles of swimming in segments has been established.

Students Note

The Delaware Game has been sold out. Xavier game tickets are now on sale.

Wildcat Harriers Rout Hawks By Taking First Five Places

By Carol Burton and Lois Greyson

Villanova's Cross Country team got their season off to a winning start by routing St. Joseph's last Friday at Cobb's Creek. The Wildcat harriers made a perfect 15 point score to St. Joe's 55 as five Villanovans Vic Zowlac, Pat Traynor, Tommy Sullivan, Dave Hyland, and Marty Ferrco effortlessly crossed the finish line together. These five men easily kept ahead of their nearest competion throughout the race, then finished in the identical time of 28 minutes, 15 seconds for the five miles, climaxing an impressive show of strength.

Meet No Contest

The best the Hawk's could manage was the 6th place finish of Kevin McCullen, 54 seconds behind the five victorious 'Cats. Then next three places were then taken by Villanova's, John Angevine, Jimmy Orr, and Harry Smeck to make the meet literally a no contest affair.

Smeck generated the most excitement of the day when he collapsed from heat and exhaustion after bearely beating out St. Joe's Chrales McShea for ninth place. He was eventually taken to Bryn Mawr Hospital for treatment.

Frosh Wins

Earlier in the day Noel Carroll, running for the Villanova freshman team, set the pace over the three mile course, capturing first place in 16 minutes, 8 seconds. The second and third place were taken by Tom Stubblebine and Ken McCloskey of St. Joe's, Cubbins then took fourth place for Villanova and Larry Bolger finished fifth. Although they failed to score as decisively as the varsity, the frosh set the tone for the day by defeating the Hawks 27 to 29.

The next three meets will be held at Cobb's Creek in Philadelphia, on Oct. 27, 30 and Nov. 3, against Quantico, LaSalle, and American University, respectively.

Homecoming Weekend Highlighted By Game And Sunday Concert

Highlighting the activities of the Nick Basca Homecoming Weekend will be a concert by the Four Freshmen in the Field House Sunday, November 4, at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are now on sale in the Pie Shoppe for $2.00 and $2.50.

The Sunday afternoon Jazz Concert, traditionally a part of the Homecoming Weekend, returns this year after being absent from last year's Homecoming activities.

Homecoming Queen

The high point of the dance Friday night will be the crowning of the Homecoming Queen. The queen will be selected from the finalists by a seven man panel including Intramural Director, Ed Geisz, two priests, the head of the Villanova Alumni Association, Edward Donohue, and two class officers.

Entries for the Queen Contest must be deposited in the Class of '63 box in the Student Council Office on or before October 26. Pictures must be 5"x 7" or larger, announced Chairman Cecile Mugnier.

Dance Tickets

Tickets for the dance Friday night are also on sale at $3.00 per couple, announced co-chairman Bob Coogan and Ralph Saviano. Supplying dance music will be Al Raymond and his Orchestra, with intermission entertainment by the Troubadours Three, a folk singing group composed of Villanova students.

Dance decorations will be the responsibility of chairman Nick DiMarino; tickets of publicity, John Hughes; and dormitory decorations, Paul Fenice and Tony Frate.

Floats submitted by various organizations will be paraded around the field at halftime of the Villanova-Detroit game on Saturday and 5,000 bon-bons will be distributed to the ladies attending the game.

Bi-Annual Review Presents Midshipmen To Father President

The Navy will hold its traditional fall review on Austin Field, November 6, at 3:30 p.m. Its purpose is the presentation of the entire battalion of 359 midshipmen to the Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University. It also serves as a medium of good will between the NROTC unit and the many civilians who are not familiar with its purpose.

Fr. Klekotka has personally invited Brigadier General J. S. Raynand, Commanding General of Marine Supply Activities in Philadelphia, and Rear Admiral R. W. Cavenagh, USN, Commander of the Fourth Naval District, to act as the reviewing officers during the afternoon's activities.

Villanova Nurse Crowned Sophomore Cotillion Queen

Last weekend saw the Class of '65 present the annual Sophomore Cotillion. The weekend's activities were begun 8:30 Friday night at the Mardi Gras Ball which featured music by Maurice Scott and his orchestra plus Chris Clark's group.

At midnight, John Clancy, Sophomore Class President, crowned Miss Betsy Grabowski as the Sophomore Cotillion Queen, thus disproving a long extant and popularly accepted opinion about Villanova nurses. The lovely freshmen nurse, date of Tom Furst, was presented with a bouquet of flowers by Charlie Zaccaria. Earlier in the evening Zaccaria had been presented a Villanova mug as a token of his selection as the best "OC" of the year. This was recognition of his efforts during the freshman orientation period.

The Mass for the sophomores in the Villanova Chapel was offered Saturday morning by Father Appicci as Father O'Rourke read the Mass commentary and led the sixty odd couples present in a hymn.

After a light breakfast of coffee and doughnuts in the Day Hop cafeteria, a good percentage of the Sophomore Class embarked for the trip to the University of Delaware to see what the Wildcats could do to the Blue Hens. However, as is history now, the game gave the attending Villanovans as much nervous tension as choosing between the Queen Contest finalists did to the judges.

Blue Key Will Act As Host At Annual Parents' Weekend

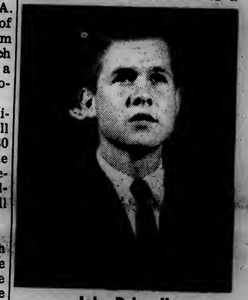
by Michael A. Magro

The annual Parents' Weekend of Villanova University will begin this Friday, October 26. This year's program is under the direction of John Driscoll, Tom Semmer, and Andy Collins, who have assumed the duties of acting chairmen during the absence of Jim Howley.

The Parents' Weekend actually began some two weeks ago when the parents of the students were sent two letters. One was from the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova. The other was from the Blue Key Society, which contained a parking permit, a map of the campus, and a program of events.

The first of the many activities planned for the parents will be this Friday evening at 8:30 p.m. when they will receive the opening address by Father Klekotka in the Field House. Following this address, there will be a Variety Show.

Thirteen Act Show



Master of Ceremonies, Joseph A. Salviulo, will present the thirteen act Variety Show in the Vasey Hall Auditorium. Belle Masque has produced two dramas for the show entitled "Matriculation" and "Boxville U.S.A.," both one act plays by Jules Tasca.

The vocal entertainment will consists of the Coachmen, the Chris Clark Quintette, and The Troubadours Three, along with vocalists Mike Sutherland, Holly McAlese Joe Ruggiero, Jim Croce, Mike DiBeneditto, and a vocal duet by Holly McAlese and Joe Ruggiero. An organ solo by Wayne Hawthorne is also included.

The entire production is staged and directed by Salviulo, music directed by Tom Picardo, audio by Mark Devaney, Bill Madden, and Bob Strong, lighting by Joe Styborsy and Mark Powder maker, and publicity by Tom Semmer.

Registration

The parents will register at the guard house of the main gate on Saturday at 9:00 a.m. There the mothers will receive favors, which will consist of a pin they can wear and save as a souvenir. Lunch tickets can be obtained at this time or later on in the Field House during lunch.

Following registration the Villanova Band will present a "Concert on the Green" at 10:00 a.m. At this time the parents will also be addressed by Joseph Tate, the President of the Student Council.

Immediately after the concert

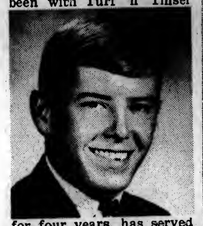
His Spirit Pervades



Though not personally present, the lively spirit of Jim Howley pervaded the wholesome atmosphere of Parents' Weekend. The unfortunate victim of an automobile accident, Jim has had to reap the rewards of his early efforts as General Chairman of the Weekend from his hospital bed.

Among his own innovations were "Meet the Deans" and the box lunches. But the success of the entire affair was due in no small measure to his energy and ideas and the devotion of his sub-committee chairmen to their leader.

Essentially connected with Blue Key from its outset, Howley has been instrumental in setting up a better faculty-student relationship since his installment as President of the organization.

Also indicative of his executive leadership abilities were his elections as Class Student Council representative for the past three years. For two of those years, he functioned as Executive Vice-President for Student Affairs.

A uniquely well-rounded Villanovan, Jim has also been with Turf 'n' Tinsel for four years, has served as last year's Co-chairman of Mothers' Day, and has been a member of the Finance Society. All this he has done while maintaining a 3.33 cumulative average.

A senior finance major from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Jim looks to law as his probable career.

Norton And Murray Appointed As New CONCEPT Co-Editors

Plans are now being made for the 1962-63 editions of Concept, the campus magazine of intellectual expression. Discussion as to whether the publication would return after last year's initial effort was ended last week when Rev. John Quinn, OSA, announced that Paul Norton and Peter Murray would be co-editors of the semi-annual review.

The purpose of the magazine will be the same as last year, to foster and encourage the Students of Villanova to express themselves in other than academic fields. In announcing plans for the first edition, expected to appear in the first week of the second semester, Co-editor Norton noted: "College students have many opinions, but have very few places to express them." It will be Concept's program to allow for this expression.

Norton maintained that Concept is probably the only Catholic campus magazine of its kind, as he announced his intention of offering no competition to the Lynx, Villanova's literary magazine. Copy readers and typists are needed in the Concept offices on the fourth floor of Tolentine Hall. Associate editors will be chosen from contributors and editorial assistants who express a desire to help in the planning of the thought provoking venture.

Deadline for copy for the initial edition of the year is December 12. The scope of this year's coverage has been extended to include political theory, philosophy, science and the Arts. Also planned as an innovation this year is the introduction of a guest writer, possibly a faculty member, graduate student, or student from another college. There is also a possibility of having the guest slot filled by a professional writer.

Another new policy will be to endeavor to bring the intellectual material to the student with a clearer understanding than was experienced in the past, this without sacrificing the essential intellectual ideas behind the various articles.

The publication is sold around the campus for the nominal fee of 25c per copy, more to insure proper use of the finished product than to pay for its production.

Honor Society

Associate Dean, Arts and Science; Dr. Alfred Buford, Assistant Dean, Graduate School.

The inductees were presented with pins and certificates recognizing their membership in the honor society.

After the presentation of the pins and certificates, Father Welsh addressed the assembly. Speaking on Catholic education, Father emphasized the challenge presented to Catholic educators to keep abreast of current developments and to acquire as much knowledge concerning their particular field as they possibly could.

He pointed out that only through this being accomplished could Catholic education remain on an intellectual level with comparable secular education.

Guests and relatives of the inductees attended the ceremonies which lasted approximately three quarters of an hour.

Belle Masque Opening To Be Prize Winner By William Saroyan

Mr. Thomas Nevins has announced the cast for Belle Masque's first production this year, "The Time of Your Life." The male lead, Joe, is portrayed by Dick McIntyre supported by John Meehan as Tom. Diane Huelski and Sheila Sheehan will be playing the female lead of Kitty. Supporting actors are: Pete Smith as Nick, Kenny Resinski as Kit Carson, James Mason as Harry, Frank Escobar as Wesley and Bill Byrne as Willie. Mr. Nevins is directing the play.

Saroyan's work, while not well organized, is certainly one that will provoke emotion, which is essentially the purpose of a play. It is a controversial drama which speaks of morals, murder, and Saroyan's picture of labor. Characterization and dialogue are what really give the play its Pulitzer Prize winning flavor.

Set in 1939, his play started some well known show business people on their road to success. William Bendix played Krupp, the policeman, and Gene Kelly started his career as Harry, the dancer.

Saroyan sees beauty in the seemingly insignificant, as he champions the underdog and captures his audience as much by what he says as how he says it. Belle Masque lives up to its reputation for fine performances, the "Time of Your Life" should be as worthwhile entertainment as the title suggests.

Emphasis Begins Year With Introduction Of Conservative Club

Frank Sauers, moderator of WWVU's "Emphasis" program, had as guests Bill Williams, President of the new Villanova Conservative Club, and Frank Forlini, editor of Libertas, as the discussion program returned to the airwaves last Thursday, October 18. The chief topic of the discussion was the Conservative Club.

Highlight of the hour-long program were the definition of Conservative ideas on such controversial isues as the Mississippi crisis, the Farm Problem, and Federal Aid to Education.

Williams, a Senior Political Science major, and Forlini, also a senior, explained the reasons for the organization of the club and talked about "Conservatism Today."

"Emphasis" will be heard every other Thursday evening as Sauers and his guests discuss topical problems of the day. In the immediate future is an intercollegiate debate on the Cuban situation. Representatives of St. Joseph's and Swarthmore Colleges have already agreed to join in the presentation.

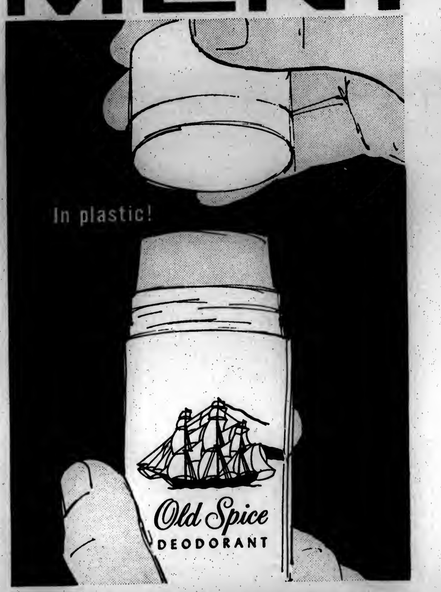
Annual Law School Red Mass Has Fr. Sullivan As Speaker

The Annual Red Mass for the students, faculty, and alumni of the Villanova University School of Law was celebrated on Friday evening, October 19, at 7:00 p.m. in the church of St. Thomas of Villanova. The purpose of the Red Mass is to invoke the blessing of the Holy Spirit upon the students and faculty of the Law School.

It is called the Red Mass for religious and legal reasons. The vestments are red since the Mass is the Votive Mass of the Holy Spirit. In the past, English judges wore red robes at the bench and at Mass when they attended together.

Solemn Mass was celebrated by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University.

The preacher at the Red Mass was the Very Reverend Nicholas J. Sullivan, SJ, President of Le-Moyne College in Syracuse N.Y. His sermon title was "The Law and the Prophets". Father Sullivan advised the future lawyers always to keep abreast of current developments in the legal field. On the mutability of the law he said, "Today's legal truths are tomorrow's errors." He counselled the legal students to apply Catholic principles to the bar. In closing he blessed the School of Law, saying "Keep your judgment broad and extensive, and your heart noble."



The music of the Mass was sung by the Villanova University Singers under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss.

IRS Delegates To Be Selected For Annual Eastern Convention

The final meeting of the International Relations Society before its annual convention will be held Monday evening at 7:30 in 110 Commerce and Finance Building. At that time, the ten delegates and their alternates will be selected for the convention.

The three-day convention is scheduled for November 2, 3 and 4 in the Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. Approximately one thousand delegates attend this convention, representing some 160 different colleges and universities from the Middle Atlantic States and two Canadian provinces.

Last year Villanova and the other area colleges supported Tom Burke, a Junior Pre-Law major, in a bid to capture the Chairmanship of the assembly. After Burke reached the finals he was defeated by a margin of twenty-three votes in the election.

Officers of this year's club are Burke, President, Jim Mitchell, Vice President, Lois Greyson, Secetary-Treasurer, and Noel McGeehan, Student Council Representative. Plans are now under consideration, reported Burke, for an intercollegiate union with Rosemont and Immaculata. He also expects that "the Villanova delegation will once again gain the prestige and respect that it has experienced in the past during this year's convention."

Villanova Midshipmen Plan Fall Navy Dance

The battalion of Midshipmen of Villanova NROTC are having their Fall Dance at the Radnor Valley Country Club on November 9. The event will feature Norrie Elwell's Band, and dancing will be from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m.

Lt. Knott, the faculty moderator for the dance, has sent invitations to faculty members and to the NROTC officers. The NROTC Recreation Committee, composed of members of all classes, organizes the dance. As in the past, the dance is dedicated to the 4/c Midshipmen.

Ring Mass, Breakfast Revived As Tradition By Junior Class of '64

On November 11, an annual Villanova tradition, the Junior Ring Mass and Communion Breakfast will be revived again by the Class of 1964. This exclusive Junior function, now in its fortieth year, is the beginning of the Junior social year.

The general co-chairman of the affair, James O'Connor and William Hart, have secured the facilities of the Treadway Inn for the Communion Breakfast. The Junior Class has been fortunate in obtaining Rev. Edward Stanford, OSA, as the principal speaker. The topic for discussion will be "What To Expect In Marriage."

This annual event brings the Junior Class together for the first time this year. It is a chance for the strengthening of old ties and the formation of new friendships. The officers of the Class of 1964 expect full participation by the juniors in order to establish new precedents of success in this long reigning tradition.

Music Society Offers Culture With Weekly Thurs. Sessions

by Richard Kane

Instead of the hum-drum, noise, and shouts of "Order! Order!", which stifle the air within many of the campus meeting halls, soothing strains from Bach and Moussorgsky permeated the atmosphere in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall, last Thursday evening as the Villanova Music Society conducted its first in a series of weekly meetings.

Here is a society which is the answer to a prayer of art-for-art's sake individuals of this university who hunger for more and more culture. Here is a society which makes no demands, which offers an atmosphere of relaxation conducive not only to music appreciation, but also to study or pleasant conversation. Here is a society which provides a restful haven for all those suffering from the tensions and frustrations produced by a hectic world of dinner lines, crowded lobbies, and interviews with professors who are out to lunch. Yet here is a society which when this writer entered the meeting room increased its attendance level by fourteen and two-seventhe per cent; a society itself starving for membership.

Is it a matter of no culture on this campus, or no interest?

Society's Plans

The officers of the club, William Alfred, president, Barry Byer, Vice-President, and Art Felderman, Secretary-Treasurer, along with their moderator from the fine arts department, Dr. Radan, encourage students to bring their own selections if they wish, and to talk to the club about them. The objective of the club is to promote music appreciation; the officers this year plan to make a greater appeal to the students, and are therefore not limiting "music" to that of a classical nature, but have included folk singing, progressive jazz, and musical comedy in their program. William Alfred stresses that a consideration of all these forms will be from a purely artistic viewpoint.

In an embryonic stage is a planned folk concert featuring the Villanova "Coachmen."

The Office of the President of the University announced a recent change in the catalog calendar. The change affects the time of Easter vacation and is to the effect that classes after Easter will begin on Wednesday, April 17, 1962. This will be an extension of the vacation by one day.

Chemical Engineering Holds Three Lectures On Water Pollution

As a guest of the Chemical Engineering Department, Dr. Cornelius Biemond will speak on river pollution at a meeting to be held in Dougherty Hall on October 25 and 26.

The meeting will consist of a series of three lectures, The first, held on October 25 at 2:30, will be on natural waters and their pollution, stressing quality problems and special troubles of water supply from rivers in the plains with examples from the United States and Europe.

There will be two sessions on October 26 at 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. respectively. The first will cover considerations on polluted rivers and high sewage load and heavy load of minerals, again with examples. The second will continue consideration of polluted rivers but with emphasis on variability of chemical composition, health hazards, and problems and potential dangers of explosive nature.

Dr. Biemond, representing the National Science Foundation and the American Water Works Association, is a graduate of the Technological University of Delft. He was chief engineer of public works in Amsterdam from 1923 to 1937. Since 1937, he has served as director of the municipal water utility. His consulting work at home and abroad has included planning for the California Water Plan and a dune water supply in Oregon.

He is past president and honorary member of the International Water Supply Association and an honorary member of both the Institute of Walter Engineers (Great Britain) and the British Waterworks Association.

Cuba Talk

For eighteen glorious minutes, it was the good fortune of the American citizenry to behold and listen to the melodious accent of their Leader and President last Monday night.

His address, centered on the Cuban menace to the Western Hemisphere has received resounding support.

True, his stand was strong and rightly so, but is it not also true that the same situation has existed in Cuba for the past year, if not two? Even a year ago, it was obvious that some policy had to be formulated as soon as possible.

But, Kennedy dallied the time away until the situation got worse, as is inevitably would. Now all of a sudden, he virtually declares war on Cuban Communism.

Having thus committed himself even at this late date to a stong stand, it is now up to Kennedy to maintain this stand and show the Soviets that the United States is finally at the wall as far as further buildup in the Western Hemishere is concerned.

The extension of all Navy and Marine duty assignments is indicative of the urgency of the situation, and shows that he probably means to do this.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor,

The Sophomore Class has made great progress so far this year. The Orientation Period was outstanding, and the plans for Soph Weekend are the best ever.

There is one thing, however, I would like to criticize—the Class Meetings. In the first place the attendance has been very poor, this shows two things. First, that the Class will go along with what ever the officers of the Class say, and second, that the officers are doing a good job because the Class is going along with what they say.

It was once said that "Little things mean a lot". This should apply to the Class of '65. They could start by having another Class Meeting and seeing how many of the members they can get to attend. When they get this attendance the officers can start the the meeting with a prayer (which was not done at the meeting of Oct. 18, 1962), and can even try to call a meeting to order and to adjourn one (this has NEVER been done!!!).

It should be very interesting to see what, if anything, this letter does to the Class of '65 as a whole, and to the officers.

Experience Counts First

The senatorial race in Massachusetts has been placed in the limelight of the nation due to the appearance of another Kennedy as the Democratic candidate. Ted Kennedy, brother of the president, is opposing Republican George Lodge and Independent H. Stuart Hughes for the seat in Washington formerly held by John F. Kennedy.

We are told that both the President and his brother, Robert, the Attorney General, were hesitant about thirty year old Teddy's candidacy but that he was encouraged by their father, Joesph Kennedy.

Regardless of the family's opinion on the matter, a large portion of the citizenry are becoming alarmed because they see too many Kennedys acquiring more power than is customary for one family.

It has been asserted that Teddy is not running on his own capabilities but rather on the reputation of his family name. The extent to which this is true is dubious but it is true that he has already beaten Democrat Edward McCormack in the primary, a man who graduate first at Boston University's law school, was twice elected attorney general of the state, and was formerly the favorite of Massachusetts Democrat Party's regular organization.

The up-coming Kennedy does possess, however, that winning combination of good looks, friendly personality, ambition, a beautiful wife, money, and that Kennedy surname.

The fact remains that he is only three years out of law school and lacks the background usually possessed by those who aspire to so high an office.

It is hoped that the people of Massachusetts will take this fact into consideration when they cast their votes in November.

Time Doesn't Always Heal

Time is said to be a healer. Some wounds mend with time, while others fester and remain painful. There is a wound in the consciences of the statesmen of the world, festering and painful, that cries out for a soothing balm.

Nearly six years ago to the day the peace of the old beautiful city of Budapest was violated by Communist directed gunfire. Students from the universities of Budapest, Szeged, and Pecs were in a tumult. They were threatening street demonstrations if their demands for academic autonomy, better living standards, and abolition of required courses in Marxism-Leninism continued unmet.

At first, the government was silent. To prove their sincerety the students demonstrated, tearing down the outward signs of Communism. The demonstrators gathered about a radio station seeking to give voice to their complaints.

The government answered with gunfire, and first blood was drawn when the demonstrators were fired upon by the Security Police.

The demonstrations developed into a rebellion. The revolt had no centralized leadership and was clearly not organized from abroad. By the end of the month of October the new government had set itself up, declared its neutrality, and had repudiated its connection with the Warsaw Pact.

Thus far in the conflict, the western powers had aided only by sending medical supplies and sympathy.

Early in November the Soviet Union sent troops and tanks to "help" the Hungarians, and by November 4 had moved into Budapest at the request of Premier Imre Nagy.

In an attempt to stave off the invasion, revolutionary General Pal Maleter went behind the Soviet lines under a flag of truce to ask for negotiations. The Soviets shot him.

The Hungarians were stunned. Those who could, fled. The Hungarians were unable to understand why the United States, a country with a glorious tradition of revolution and democracy, did not come to their aid.

The western powers were as effusive with their indignation to the Soviet action as they were with their inaction to the Hungarian pleas for recognition.

While the wound was fresh, as it was then, steps should have been taken immediately to heal it. Instead it was ignored. Moreover, it is as though salt is rubbed into it each time the United Nations shelves consideration of the Hungarian question.

After a retrospection of six years a number of observations can be made and a number of lessons can be learned. The Soviet Union will violate neutrality at her will, she does not honor a flag of truce, she is capable of killing another country's ambassador, and she fears not to spill blood. The lesson echoes an old Hungarian proverb, "Never trust a Russian, they are barbarians!"

A Forthcoming Crisis

During the past few weeks, there has been a great deal of international speculation over a forthcoming Berlin flare-up. Scattered events in both the East and the West have pointed to it. Editorials in the Soviet press seemed aimed at preparing the Russian people for a Berlin showdown. The Red editors sought to put advance blame on the West. In Washington, worry over Berlin has resulted in tough public statements by Secretary of Defence McNamara, Secretary of State Rusk, and Attorney General Kennedy. Rarely has an international crisis been so easily recognized in advance.

Officials believe that Khruschev is very likely to make some dramatic move to tip off this crisis after the United States elections, since Moscow has said publicly that it will hold off at least until then. However, when Khruschev visits the United Nations in mid-November, Berlin may be at the brink of war. Many officials firmly believe this, with good reason.

Popular opinion feels that the new Berlin crisis will develop somewhat in this order: Khruschev will sign the long threatened separate peace treaty with East Germany. This treaty will grant nominal control by the East Germans over Allied access routes to the City. Then will come a repeat of the 1948 Berlin blockade. After that, Khruschev will come to the United Nations General Assembly and claim that a threat to peace existed and should be stopped by UN presence in Berlin. This in effect would weaken considerably the Allied Powers in West Berlin. This conjectural plan could succeed if the West doesn't make a firm stand now.

Some optimistic officials take the view that Khruschev may simply try to get some sort of talks going with President Kennedy. Of course, these same optimists would be the ones to believe that Cuba will throw off their communistic ties. But history has shown that whenever the United States has taken a firm stand opposing communist expansion, the West has been succssful. Let's hope that our leaders have learned that you can't concede anything to the Reds.

Chancellor Adenauer is going to meet with Kennedy the day after elections. At present, there is no definite agreement between Bonn and Washington on Berlin policy. Therefore, it is necessary that at this meeting they agree to take a firm, united stand and thereby bring about negotiations with the Soviet Union. Both should remember that a firm stand prevailed against the blockade of West Berlin in 1948.

Through The Glass Lightly

Fraternal Groups Speak Out

by Liz Kovach

After interviewing the illustrious lord and lady heads of the fraternities and sororities on campus, one begins to wonder if the right hand knows what the left hand is doing, or maybe the right hand pretends not to notice.

Mary O'Leary—Pi Theta Chi, Nursing School Sorority; Richard Gleason — Delta Pi Epsilon, Commerce and Finance School Fraternity; Rocco Guidice — Delta Pi Mu, Arts School Fraternity; James Lombardi—Phi Kappa, Engineering School Fraternity; and William Shea—Science (Pre-Med) School Fraternity were kind enough to answer questions about their respective organizations.

Why Join

Question: Why do people join?

Answers: To meet interesting people; to further social status and increase social life; to give underclassmen a chance to develop friendships with the upperclassmen; and to further academic standing.

This was the answer, but out of the five organizations the two medical groups are strictly social minded. Why? It seems that there is a saying about "all work and no play," so that these two groups concentrate on the play part.

Name Aims

Question: What are the aims of the organization?

Answer: To bring about a unity among the members of the school, to stimulate academic and religious interest; to supplement cultural backgrounds of members; and to prepare students for future life.

These aims are quite lofty but are they ever reached? In Delta Pi Epsilon, Delta Pi Mu, and in Phi Kappa Pi, to an extent, these aims are reached. The members are very active on campus, not only in social activities, but also as leaders and in aiding each other in bettering study habits. On the cultural side, these groups have guest speakers who talk on subjects of interest to the students of the various schools. The religious side is not neglected either. The new pledges are encouraged to attend Mass and they also do charity work and manual labor at the various convents in the area.

School Aids

Question:. Do these groups add to the university as such?

Answer: They increase the school spirit, which can be noted at the games; increase interest in the school and its activities; and aid the administration in forming better individuals.

The athletic side is greatly stressed in the Phi Kappa Pi. They are very active in intramurals and in awakening school spirit. On the whole, all of the organizations help out in all school functions.

Profs Present

Question: Would you mind if an administration member showed up when one of your parties was in full swing? . . .

Answer: Not at all, in fact there are always some faculty members present and they are welcome.

So that's the way the interviews ran. If one were to rate the various organizations on the basis of the answers received, then Delta Pi Epsilon and Delta Mu would definitely head the list. Why? Because organizations are really striving to live up to their aims and live down the infamous reputation of fraternities.

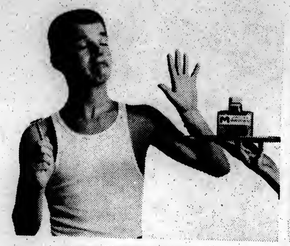
Inebriated News Briefs

The Villanova Feudal Forum announced that it will sponsor a Mammouth Rally in the parking lot over Homecoming. However, they emphasized that if any student plans to bring a mammoth to the rally it would be better not to do so since the Feudal Forum is a strictly non-everything group and there are cetain political implications to the elephant.

Torchlight Parade

Following the rally there will be a torchlight parade around the campus while the marchers chant "Ole Miss, si- Supreme Court, no!" Music for the march will be provided by the Fife and Drums Corps of the local group of Minutemen.



Anyone May Join

Any student who wishes may join this organization by having proof of his United States citizenship and by demonstrating a memorized knowledge of the works of Sen. Garry Boldwater.

Movies Are Better Than Ever

by Ray Ritter

CAVALIER DAILY—University of Virginia—Virginia University's writer-in-residence for the next semester will be John Dos Passos, American novelist, and resident of Virginia. Dos Passos, who is probably best known for his trilogy, U.S.A., which depicts the individual in a decaying civilization based on commercialism, will reside on the campus from February 5 until February 26. Other writers who have been participants include the late Nobel prize-winner William Faulkner, and Katherine Ann Porter, author of the best-seller SHIP OF FOOLS. Four other literary figures have also been invited as week-long guest lecturers. They are novelists Peter de Vries and Saul Bellow, dramatist Edward Albee, and poet Richard Wilbur. Dos Passos, who is 66 years old, currently lives on a Westmoreland County farm in the northern part of Virginia.

TEMPLE NEWS — Temple University—A SHADE OF DIFFERENCE by Allen Drury, which is a sequel to the Pulitzer Prize winner ADVISE AND CONSENT, makes the point that much of what goes on behind the scenes at the United Nations is routine, dull, and highly predictable. Unfortunately the novel is, too, and Drury uses over 600 pages and many of the characters from his congressional best seller to speculate about the future of the UN in a post-moon-landing world.

Lately movies are better than ever! After living through such films as FOLLOW THAT DREAM, SUMMER AND SMOKE, BOYS NIGHT OUT, and the latest dandy PHANTOM OF THE OPERA, movie-goers have finally reached a point of being entertained for their money. During the past summer and since September 1, the motion picture industry has released such excellent films as TOUCH OF MINK, MIRACLE WORKER, SWEET BIRD OF YOUTH, and BIRD MAN OF ALCATRAZ. In the MIRACLE WORKER, Anne Bancroft (who received the Film Festival Award for her part) relives the part of Helen Keller's teacher—depicting all her hardships and unending drive for the achievement of one goal. In BIRD MAN OF ALCATRAZ, Burt Lancaster gives one of his finest performances as a man who has murdered twice and is condemned to life in prison. He finds peace in his birds but finally even these are taken away from him. Karl Malden, who portrays the prison warden, also gives one of his better performances.

Old Philadelphia Street Cries

By Jan Dyroff

Every city has its personality, the little things that go to make it the whole that it is. Among these are the sounds. There are always the harsh impersonal sounds of a cab's horn, or a subway's rumble or the roar of bus's exhaust as it pulls away fom the curb.

But it is the personal human sounds that make a city really what it is and give a mellow depth to its metropolitan personality. In this respect, Philadelphia is a lucky city for it is rich in these sounds.

If a visitor were to come to Philadelphia by train this fall, perhaps to see one of the local football classics, he might find himself getting his first real glimpse of the town from the bottom of the escalator in the Reading Terminal. He would no doubt be greeted by the newsdealer's almost indecipherable exhortation. This would be the first of Philadelphia's street cries.

Chestnut Sellers

The second would most likely be the chestnut sellers. There may be other chestnut sellers in other cities but they would not be as indigenous as they are here. With the first real snap in the air they can be seen standing on the corners with their little portable ovens for roasting the nuts. A vocal cry is oft times superfluous, for just the aroma of the chestnuts in the fire is worth more than any words ever could be.

Another street-corner vendor is someone who is almost synonymous with Philadelphia, the pretzel salesman. His glass-paneled handcart is almost as much a symbol of the city as is Billy Penn on top of City Hall. The pretzel-man stands his vigil for most of the year directing his cry to the young, and to the young at heart. His big soft wares covered almost barbarously with mustard are an almost universal temptation.

The member of the streetcry fraternity who has most to rely on his vocal cords and talent is the street singer. He has nothing tangible to offer to his support as does the chestnut man or the pretzel seller. The street singer sometimes sings alone but at times he is accompanied by a guitarist or a harmonica player. These men serenade the passer-by with old Negro spirituals or with traditional blues. Sometime they just sing a song they like. They depend on the money that is placed in their cups for they are all blind and that is their mode of livelihood.

Flower Girls

Then there is also the individual vendor. They can be seen sitting in small cranies of tall buildings hawking their wares. They call from the shadows offering fine lavender to make your home smell sweeter, or shoelaces, or what have you. There are others who make the scene on Ludlow street early in the morning and buy volumes of roses, gladiolas, or some other flower and then they sell them. The flower vendors also are callers from the shadows of the city. Their flowers would wilt soon if they were in the sun, so they seek the shade.

Some of the criers are mobile. There is a dwindling corps refered to as the "rag man," or the "paper man" or what you will. He drives a little cart that is pulled by an immaculately kept horse. Soon his cry of "Any old rags, bones, bottles today?" will echo only in the Stygian memories of a few.

Some of the elder residents of the city remember a few of the cries from old. There was a banana-man and a fish-man, just to mention a couple. The banana-man would go down to the fruit company docks early in the morning and hang as many huge bunches of bananas on his cart as he could. Then he'd go through streets offering his fruit at twenty-five cents for the customer's choice of hands.

Fish Men Too

The fish-man too would be an early visitor to the wharves. He would pile his cart full of fish and his cry of "Fresh fish!" would echo through the streets of old Philadelphia. As a service he would clean it there on the spot for her.

There are many of these human sounds but the greatest concentration is in an open market where the different vegetable growers are convinced that he who has the best rutabgas is he who speaks the loudest. These are colorful, if sounds can be said to be colorful.

This cacophony is wonderfully pleasant. It brings a touch of warmth into the too often mechanized life of the city. It is the local equivalent of the monkeys of Gibralter. Gibralter will remain British as long as it keeps its monkeys and Philadelphia will remain as something special as long as it keeps its street cries.

"Not Pancakes Again."

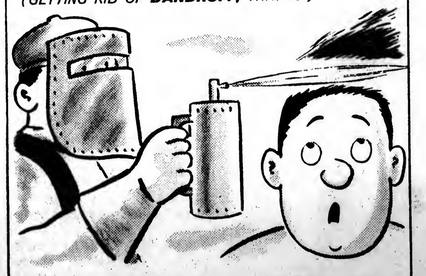
...for a life of pride and purpose

Among the young people being graduated from college in these times, there are some who think and feel—perhaps a little more deeply than the others—about the world we live in, the future we face. They ask, "How can I make my career really meaningful? More than just personally rewarding?"

And many of today's most successful young people are finding a fulfilling answer to these questions as officers on the Aerospace Team... the United States Air Force. They can tell you that no career could better combine the opportunity for achievement—and the deep inner satisfaction of knowing that they are helping preserve the very future of America.

How can you become an Air Force Officer?

If you are a college senior and not currently enrolled in ROTC, Air Force Officer Training School provides an opportunity to qualify for a wide variety of career fields. The graduate of this three-month course receives a commission as a second lieutenant. As the Air Force continues its technological advance, officers with college training will move into positions of increasing importance.



For full information—including the opportunity to earn graduate degrees at Air Force expense—see the Air Force Selection Team when it visits your college, visit your local Air Force Recruiting Office, or write: Air Force Officer Career Information, Dept. SC210, Box 805, New York 1, New York.

Complete Man Is Final Goal

by Joe Deighan

The ultimate goal of the university is to develop the complete man, to produce a well rounded intellectual as its graduate. To achieve this, the student must absorb as much as possible from his texts as well as to seek out and take for his own standards of living which can be inculcated through the wisdom of his professors. One may learn all the law and theories from the textbook, but he must also learn the practical applications of those principles, through the advice of the teacher through the student's personal endeavor while at school.

Associations Help

The members of the faculty are present at the university not just to cover the required material of a course, but also to plant the seed of intellectual pursuit in the minds of the students. We find present various associations on campus which also help to stimulate the thinking of the student body.

For example, let us take the Political Science Department and the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, The principles of political science can be put to practice right here on Villanova campus at the I.C.G. meetings where the members of the club assume the roles of political representatives. This is only one of many associations at Villanova where the student may exercise principles at the same time that he is learning them.

At present there are some fifty-five different organizations, clubs, fraternities, etc. on campus which can satisfy the taste of practically all the students.

Only One Hour

But now we come to the one glaring fault with the activity program of Villanova. Almost all of these very worthy and helpful organizations are forced to hold their meetings at conflicting times, viz. 10:30 Thursday. Many members belong to two or more factions and it is impossible for them to devote their full attention to more than one group because of the conflicting meeting times. Some associations avoid this difficulty by scheduling evening meetings, but this is not to the advantage of the day hop students who represent a great portion of the clubs' memberships.

While it is a fully agreed upon ract that the student's first obligation at Villanova is to his classroom work, it does not seem unreasonable to suggest that more than one hour out of forty-five could be appropriated for the purpose of substantiating learning with personal application. If only one additional hour a week were set aside for meetings, the presidents and the chairmen of the different organizations could get together and arrange to alternate meeting days and thus a greater percentage of the student body could actively participate in more organizations.

A change such as this seems small, but actually it would involve the revamping of many rosters and so could not be initiated immediately. However, if 10:30 on Tuesdays as well as Thursdays were set aside for activity periods in future scheduling, I am sure that everyone's classes could be arranged without too much difficulty. But perhaps before that is done, it would be a good idea to get the opinion of the entire student body by means of a vote and then it could be ascertained how deeply appreciated such a change would be.

Reflections of Telstar

Remember the picture above? It flashed across your television screen on a hot night last July. Perhaps you remember that it originated from France. And that it reached the U. S. via Telstar, the world's first private enterprise communications satellite.

Since that summer night, the Bell System's Telstar has relayed electronic signals of many types—television broadcasts, telephone calls, news photographs, and others.

But there's one Telstar reflection you might have missed. Look into the faces of the Bell System people below and you'll see it. It is the reflection of Telstar's success that glowed brightly on the faces of all who shared in the project.

Their engineering, administrative and operations skills created Telstar and are bringing its benefits down out of the clouds to your living room.

These Bell System people, through their talented, dedicated efforts, make your phone service still better, more economical, and more useful.

The reflections of Telstar are many.

Psychological Group Offers To Students Testing And Advice

by Jerry Cardamone

Just what is the Office of Psychological Services of Villanova University? This is an office which has as its function the assistance of students with some of the many problems of college life.

At present there are five capable and experienced counsellors one of which is Dr. W. Porter Swift (Director of Testing), who has developed testing centers in other colleges.

This year the center, located in Saint Rita's Hall, is introducing a total screening program for freshmen, consisting of seven tests from which a generalized picture can be given of Villanova students as a whole. Information from the tests will give material to advise the Dean and the students on such matters as study, habits, need for counselling, etc.

Ultimately, the center hopes to have two hundred different tests including intelligence tests, interests, personality, aptitude and also tests in subject fields such as Spanish. It might be mentioned that tests are available which are printed in Spanish for foreign students

The tests any one student may want to take do not have to be taken all at once They can be taken at the student's convenience. Testing and counselling at the present time are services without fee and the students are invited to take advantage of the opportunity available to them. Dr. E. J. Albrecht, Director of the Office of Psychological Services, said, "The office is geared to assist all students. It doesn't mean that a student must have a serious problem before he he comes."

The Service Center also conducts reading improvement and study habit courses which will be given several times during the year. The office will also cooperate with psychology students who are interested in test ing research.

As for the future of this department, expansion is the keynote. The Office Psychological Services has much to offer; it is up to the students to take advantage of their services.

Consideration Asked

by The Blue Key

Whenever a Villanovan invites a date to the campus for a weekend invariably the question arises as to who pays for what. Often the student unconsciously pays more than he should.

The girl is expected to pay all her transportation costs to and from the University. However, as soon as he has received her written acceptance he should inform her of the bus or train schedules and arrange to meet her at the depot. Once she has arrived it is his duty to pay all her expenses including her hotel bill.

When inviting a girl he should of course give enough notice and then try to give her at least a rough idea of what most of the other girls will wear. Certainly a bermuda-clad date would be embarrassed as well as out of place walking across our campus.

Finally it should be remembered that while the boy may be in his element his 'import' may very well not be. Therefore he should never abandon her to hob-nob with his friends. A little consideration on his part will make the weekend more pleasant and enjoyable.

Parents' Weekend Activities

the parents will be able to "meet the deans." The dean of each department of the University will hold a conference in the Commerce and Finance building. The room numbers will have been given during registration.

Box Lunches

After the conference box lunches can be purchased in the Field House along with beverages from 12:00 noon to 1:00 p.m. The lunches may be eaten in the Field House or taken out.

The Villanova Wildcats will take on the Xavier Musketeers at 1:30 p.m. in Villanova Stadium to the attendance of the parents and students. The halftime entertainment will feature the Villanova NROTC Drill Team and NROTC Band along with the Villanova Wildcats Marching Band.

The Villanova Singers will sing the closing High Mass on Sunday at 10:30 a.m., instead of the previously announced time. Father Klekotka will celebrate the Mass which signals the end of a long and entertaining weekend for the parents of Villanova students.

I. A. Members Attend Executive Seminar

Several members of the Industrial Administration Department are serving consulting-instructor roles for R.C.A.'s newly-instituted Educational Services Unit. This group developed an executive seminar entitled "Decision Making in Industry," and it was given at the Marriott Motor Hotel in Philadelphia in June, and at the Park Town Motel in Camden this month. Three Japanese brought over by the State Department to study management in this country attended the first seminar.

Senior Class Meeting To Choose Dance Site

There will be a general meeting of the Senior Class tomorrow, Thursday, October 25, in Vasey Hall Auditorium during the Activities Period at 10:30 a.m. The purpose of the meeting will be to determine the site for the Senior Dinner-Dance scheduled for February.

Senior Class President Jim Tate announced that the selections have now been limited to Downingtown or the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia.

Soph Cotillion

As a closing to their weekend, the Sophs were presented a 22-10 victory over Delaware and passed through Villanova en route to a sequel to Friday night with the stimulant of the game mingling with the feeling of belonging that comes after one's first class weekend.

Possible Speakers Announced By Literary Club Moderator

On Thursday, October 18, the Literary Society held its second meeting of the current scholastic year. Opened by its president, Bill Grosa, the meeting chiefly consisted of general business. Several members of the newly organized committee were called upon to offer suggestions for the coming year.

Dr. Slabey, faculty moderator of the society, announced a list of prospective speakers that would be available to lecture at some time during the current year. These prominent writers were compiled from a list circulated by the Poetry Center in New York and also from other distinctive contemporary novelists.

It was emphasized, however, that since the Literary Society is operating on a budget granted by the Dean of Student Activities, all speakers contacted would have to be within this and be approved by the Administration through the Student Council. Among Dr. Slabey's suggestions were the names of John Ciardi and Carl Sandburg.

There was announced the forthcoming lecture of Dr. Neil Brennan of Villanova's English Department. His topic will be "The Writer's Challenge—Hope and Literary Competitions". Dr. Brennan will present his views on this subject on Thursday, October 25, at 3:30 in Room 110 C&F.

This lecture will be open to the public.

Educational Services To Provide Training For Navy Personnel

The Educational Services Division of the Bureau of Marketing Research of Villanova's Commerce and Finance School has signed a contract with the Philadelphia Naval Yard to provide middle management training for supervisory personnel, announced Bureau Director and Associate Dean of Commerce and Finance Dr. Myron S. Heidingsfield.

The Navy program will be for six hours every Monday for twelve weeks, and will cover three subject areas. This is the second such program undertaken under the Educational Services Division, the first having been a middle management training program for Armour and Company's marketing department.

Organization

The Educational Services Division has been organized to satisfy the need for specialized training within industry, and is staffed by faculty members and practitioners who have business experience and management training. Several companies are presently interested in the Bureau's Executive Development Training Program, by which middle management training is provided on a contract basis.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

An even more determined Delaware team took the kick-off to open the second half. A Rozental punt gave the ball back to Villanova. On the first play from scrimmage Rettino fumbled and Delaware gained possession on the Wildcat 36 yard line. Two plays later Quarterback Kempski tossed a pass only to see it picked off by Atkinson. The 215 pound Sophomore from Monsignor Bonner High School then rumbled 52 yards for the six-pointer without a scratch. Clifford caught a Richman pass after it was deflected by a Delaware defender and the Cats were up 16-10.

Defense Takes Over

Midway in the third quarter, the pressure was placed on the Villanova defense. Then came the longest series of plays in the entire game. In twenty plays Delaware marched from their 10 to the Villanova 12 gaining five first downs only to be denied a score. Twice McDonnell came out from his defensive end position to kill plays on the other side of the line. Billy Joe, Captain, Charlie Johnson, Calligaris and Armstrong played well in this series. Moving from the 12, Villanova went 88 yards in 13 plays for the final TD score by Glueck. The try for the extra two points was stopped.

Delaware tried to stay in the game as Soph halfback Bill Hopkins raced 47 yards to the Villanova 24, but two plays later Cappetelli and end John Dinan bounced Quarterback Charles Zolak for a fifteen yard loss and the Hens were finished.

Glueck led all rushers with 66 yards in 7 carries and Hopkins had 45 yards in three tries for Delaware.

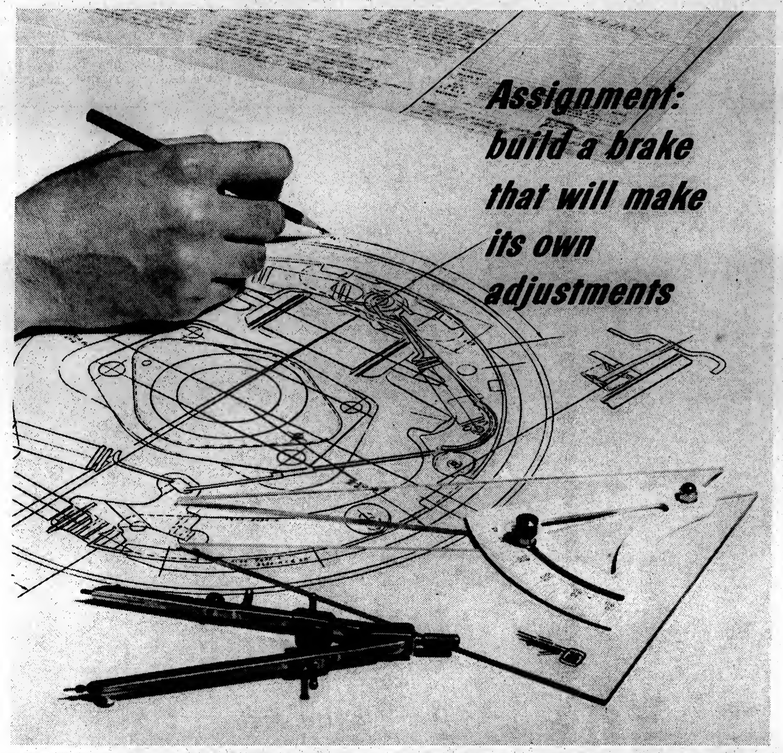
The game was closer than the score indicated yet, from here, it was expected. Delaware was naturally up for the game because of their loss to Buffalo, but there was another reason. Because of last year's Wildcats and the successful season experienced this year, opponents will be out for recognition that can only come from an upset.

Final Team Statistics

Delaware		Villanova
16	First downs	9
154	yards rushing	165
19	pass attempts	11
6	pass completions	5
101	yards passing	65
255	total offense yards	230

Sailing Club Brings Home Schuylkill River Honors

Taking their cue from the football team, the Villanova Sailing Club is off to another fine season. Although receiving very few headlines, the Club has performed well enough to have them.



Last weekend the Freshmen of the Club met at Annapolis, Maryland for a Freshmen Regatta. Among fourteen schools, the sea-going Wildcats finished fourth behind such powers as Kings Point, Georgetown and Princeton. Dan Mullray and Sandy Lockwood skippered home several firsts, but the Freshmen were disqualified because of protest.

Varsity Sets Sail

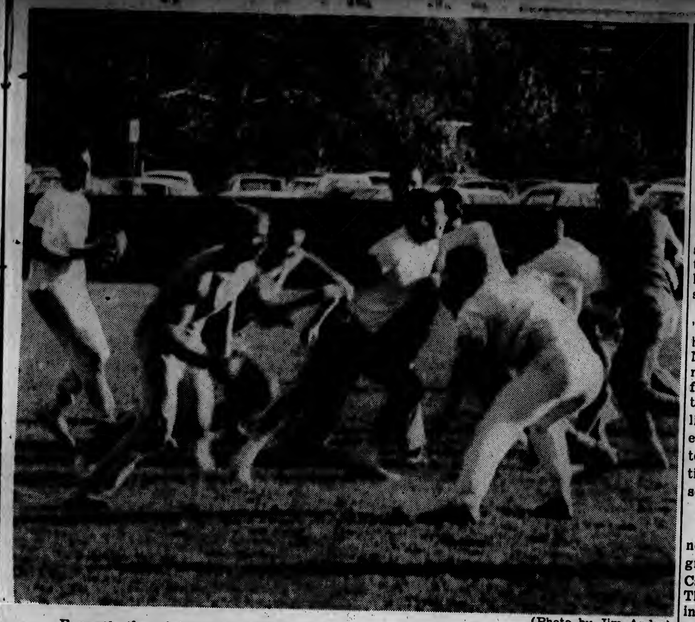
This past weekend, the Varsity finished third in the Greater Philadelphia Regatta held on the Schuylkill River. Again Villanova was in for stiff competition, this time it came from Haverford, Swarthmore, Drexel Institute and the University of Pennsylvania. Bob Bell and Mike Walsh participated in two races and finished with a first and a fourth place. Mullray and Lockwood, with the former as skipper, had a first, second and a fourth. Commodore Dan Hurley and Mike Reilly, the Sailing Club's secretary, brought home four first places finishes and one second place. Despite the fact that Villanova finished third in the Regatta, Villanova had lodged a protest. Hurley feels confident that the decision will be reversed and the Club will be awarded first place. The Club had won the Regatta for the past two years, and one more win would give them full possession of the Regatta Trophy that is now on display in Dougherty Hall.

Remainder of the Season

This Sunday the Club will journey to Monmouth College in New Jersey where they will take part in a Regatta on the Shrewsbury River. The following weekend they will be entered in three different regattas. On December 1 and 2 the Club will be in Washington D.C. where it will be entered in the Potomac Regatta.

It's now a fact: every Ford-built car in '63 has self-adjusting brakes

"Give us a brake," Ford Motor Company engineers were told, "that will automatically compensate for lining wear whenever an adjustment is needed—and make it work for the entire life of the lining."



Tough assignment—but not insurmountable. Today, not only does every Ford-built car boast self-adjusting brakes, but the design is so excellent that adjustments can be made more precisely than by hand.

This Ford-pioneered concept is not complex. Key to it is a simple mechanism which automatically maintains proper clearance between brake drum and lining.

Self-adjustment takes place when the brakes are applied while backing up. This adjustment normally occurs but once in several hundred miles of driving. The brake pedal stays up, providing full pedal reserve for braking.

Another assignment completed—and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

NY Club Vanquishes Wildcats Mainliners Fail To Score

by Roy Baron

Villanova's rugby squad came out on the short end of a 16-0 score last Saturday in New York when they tangled with the east's number one team, the New York Rugby Club. The powerful New Yorkers, featuring stars from South Africa, New Zealand, and Australia, took charge early in the contest. They put the game out of reach in the first few minutes with a quick eleven points. After these early scores the Wildcats regrouped their forces and were able to hold off their opponents with some strong line play.

Trailing 11-0 at halftime, the 'Cats fought back in the second half, keeping the ball deep in New York territory throughout most of the period. Despite this fact Villanova still was unable to get the ball over the goal line. In the final minutes, however, the New Yorkers were able to push over a late score on the tired Wildcats, making the final score 16-0.

Line Brilliance

The main cogs in the Villanova line which held off the great New York stars were Don Cannava and Don Crouthamel. These two linemen kept the 'Cats in scoring range throughout most of the second half with their all-around brilliant play, especially with their hard tackling.

Frosh Fall 36-14 To Coast Guard Team Ex-Wildcats In Game

by George Nicolaus

Youth was not served last Saturday when Villanova's freshman football team fell before an experienced Cape May Coast Guard eleven by a 36-14 score. The Coast Guard team, composed largely of former college ballplayers including quarterback Nick Langone and linebacker Rege Magnus of last years' Sun Bowl winners, had played six games before meeting the Wildkittens, and the result was a well-coordinated attack which the Villanovans were unable to contain.

The Coast Guard opened the scoring by marching the length of the field, mainly on dives and traps, to grab an 8-0 lead. Villanova came back, sparked by the running of sprinter-halfback Tom Brown and the blocking of center and big tackle Jerry Strid, only to fumble the ball away after reaching Cape May's six yard line.

In the second period the Coast Guard used deception and pinpoint by Langone to up the count to 16-0, which was the way they went to the locker room.

Connell Sets TD

The second half started on a different note as Villanova's Connell returned the kickoff 70 yards to the Cape May 15. Connell then took advantage of a laspe in the secondary to hit end John McAdams for a touchdown and followed this up with a flip to McAdams' running mate Chip Kelleher for the bonus points. Showing great poise, the Coast Guard countered immediately with a 50 yard TD bomb by Nick Langone. The extra point try was stopped short.

Ed Michaels' boys fought back on the running of Brown and Connell with the quarterback finally rolling around right end from 10 yards out and tightening the score at 22-14.,

Cape May proved equal to the challenge when they notched two last period touchdowns with Langone cleverly mixing his passing with fullback draws confushing an overeager Villanova line.

the squad is Bryniarski. The flashy signal caller has rushed the ball for a net total of 117 yards in 37 attempts for a 3.2 average. He is also the teams leading passer, completing 13 out of 32 for 222 yards and 2 touchdowns, with only two interceptions. Big (6'2", 219) Fred Reherman is the team's top pass receiver. The junior from Hardinsburg, Kentucky has hauled in 6 for a total of 90 yards and one touchdown.

In all it should be a fairly interesting game. The Musketeers sport a big enough team and seem to have the speed to make things go. However, our size and depth should prevail—Villa nova 22-7.

Good Field In Track Meet; Intramural Leagues Revised

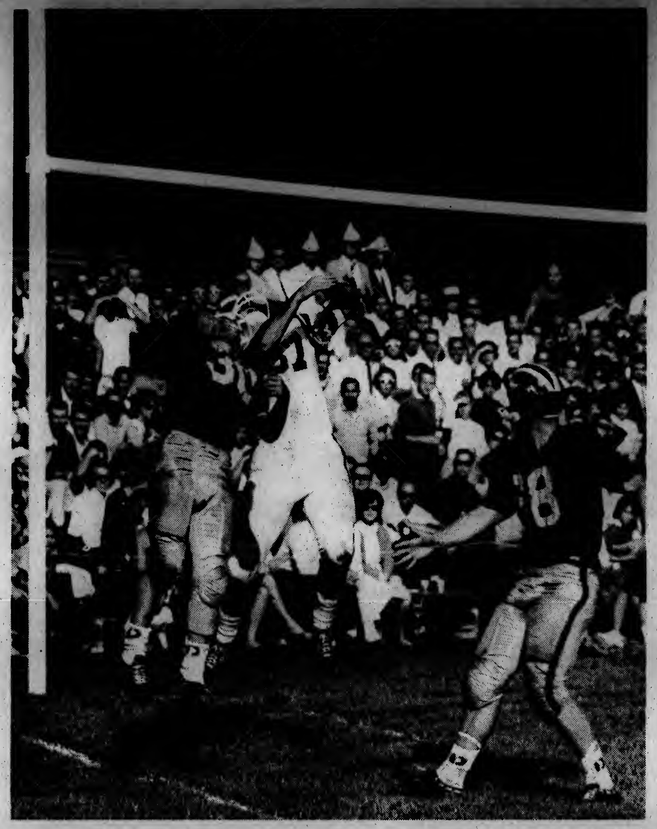
by Ray Heitzman

A good field was apparent on Thursday, October 11, when the Intramural Department held the annual Cross Country Meet. Don Fox, a sophmore who broke the existing record as a freshman last year, won again. This year's time was 8:23.

Robert Fitzgerald took second place not far off the pace with a time of 8:33. The senior class was represented by Ted Ennis with the time of 8:38. The rest of the field was close behind. The men above were well deserving medal winners.

Football League Revised

The Intramural Department has dropped all the teams with one forfeit with the result that instead of there being four leagues there will only be three. Thus, for the second half of the season there will be less teams and more games for these teams.



Many Teams Undefeated

As of October 17 there are ten teams undefeated, but the way it looks now they will not remain that way long. In the 3:30 Austin League the Bulldogs (last year Sapienza's Raiders), L.K.D. fraternity, and Whisky A are undefeated. In the 4:30 Austin League, the Rejects, L.K.D. fraternity, the 612 Club and the Playboys have not been beaten. The Alumni, the Birdmen and the Socialites are currently among the unbeaten on Mendel Field.

The new schedule will end on November 13. The playoffs begin on November 14, continue on the 16 and 17, and finish up with the semi-finals on the 19 and the finals on the 20.

Revamped Gym Opens

The newly renovated Alumni Gym was opened on Monday, October 15 for use by the student body from 10:00 A.M. until 7:00 P.M. On Monday, October 22 the foul shooting contest will be held in Alumni Gym. It will include fifty shots with the top three places being awarded medals by the expanded Intramural Department. Also for the use of the Villanova student body, the swimming pool will be available on weekends, as well as weekdays. Students should take advantage of this opportunity so that it will be continued.

Thunder And Lightning Here, Xavier Comes To Main Line

by Richard Pazdan

The second youngest coach in the nation brings his charges into Villanova Stadium this week, when Ed Biles brings the Musketeer's of Xavier to the Main Line. Biles, only thirty, became head coach at the end of the 1961 season, succeeding Ed Doherty at the helm.

Biles has introduced an innovation for Xavier football, somewhat along the pattern set by LSU's teams of recent years. He plans on having twenty-two starters this fall. He has based an attack around one team called the Thunder's, or power unit, and another attack around the Lightning's, or speed team. There will also be a third offense that each team will run, in addition to the offense designed to their best ability. The two attacks may be described as "four yards and a cloud of dust" and the wide open speed team.

22 Lettermen Back

This is a young Xavier team, having only twelve seniors and 40 underclassmen. They lost nine lettermen through graduation, but this slack could be more than made up by the twenty-two that return. We say could because there are a great many question marks in this year's edition of the Musketeers. Three of last year's starting backfield have graduated, leaving enormous gaps to fill. Despite the fact that they have nine lettermen in the backfield, they seem to be weakest there. The lone letterman at quarterback, Walt Bryniaski, played an average of just seven minutes a game; halfback, Bob Leuenberger lettered as a defensive specialist; fullback, George Potts, won his monogram as a kicking specialist; another fullback didn't even play last fall; and the other five played a total just 461 minutes among them over the ten game route of '61.

In their first four games this year, Xavier came up with an even split. They dropped the season's opener to Miami (0) by a 23-14 count, but then managed to bounce back the next week with a 9-8 victory over Kent State, with Potts kicking a 50-yard field goal to wrap up the victory. Two weeks ago they rallied from a fourteen to nothing deficit to walk off with a

Walt Bryniaski

24-20 victory. In this game Pots again called his talented toe into play as he blasted another 50-yarder through the uprights. Last week they dropped a 20-6 defeat to Ohio University. The Ohio squad came into the game undefeated, untired, and unscored upon in four conests.

Atkinson Scores On Interception As Wildcats Rip Blue-Hens 22-10

by Tom Bruderle

After a week lay-off, Villanova's football team returned to action with a 22-10 triumph over the University of Delaware at the loser's field. Larry Glueck, Bob Merenda, and tackle Al Atkinson made things miserable for most of the 9,200 people in attendance and a fired-up Delaware team. The Blue-Hens were out for an upset, particularly after their stunning defeat at the hands of the University of Buffalo.

One hour and fifteen minutes before game-time, the Wildcats were still in the team bus looking for the field. Finally the one car Delaware State Police escort found the field. The team tried to work the stiffness out before the game but with only moderate success. Villanova took the opening kick-off and ran three plays for five yards before returning the ball to Delaware via a Jack Sherlock punt. Not five minutes later, after moving from their own 40 yard line, Delaware's Ted Kempski pitched out to Mike Brown who scored from the Villanova one. The extra point made it 7-0 in favor of the Blue-Hens.

First Break

Still the attack was sluggish, and Villanova punted after Delaware's kick-off. The Blue-Hens had similar luck so Arnie Rozental went back to punt. He got off a six-yard boot and the Wildcats were in business on the Delaware 39. With half-back Jim Thomas supplying the punch, Villanova moved to the Delaware 13 where the defense stiffened. A Richie Richman roll-out was short in inches and the Cats were forced to give up the ball. Villanova held and the Blue-Hens were forced to punt as the first quarter ended.

Merenda for Eight

After Bob Merenda returned the punt for six yards, Larry Glueck took a wide turn around right-end and was stopped 22 yards later on the Delaware 18. With guards Bill Armstrong and Bob Kowalski, and center Gene Ceppetelli, providing the interference, Merenda shot up the middle for the six-pointer on the next play. Merenda ran for two and Villanova led 8-7.

Thanks to the fine defensive work of Jack Clifford, Joe Curtroneo, Lou Rettino, and Al Calligaris the Hens were forced to punt after taking the ensuing kick-off. Merenda bobbled the ball and eager Wes Firth flopped on the loose ball for the hometowners on the Wildcat 24. Three plays later Clifford intercepted a deflected pass on the 7 and Sherlock was forced to punt after Villanova could make little headway. Delaware drove down to the Villanova 8 yard line where John Osborn smacked a field goal giving Delaware a 10-8 lead.

With less than two minutes remaining in the half, the Cats tried to score. Following a Billy Joe run, Ted Aceto pitched to John McDonnell for 22 yards to the Delaware 45 yard line. Four yards later the half ended.

Rev. Edward Stanford To Be Guest Speaker At Junior Ring Mass

On November 11 the Class of 1964 of Villanova University will hold the annual Junior Ring Mass and Communion Breakfast, which signifies the beginning of the Junior social year. The Junior Class is privileged to have as its principle speaker at the Communion Breakfast the distinguished Rev. Edward V. Stanford, OSA.

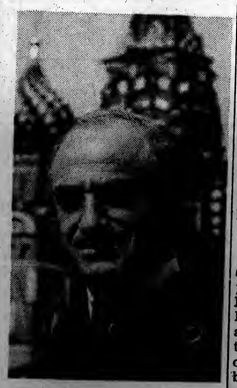
Father Stanford was ordained in 1922 and received his AB and MS Degrees from Villanova in 1918, and 1922, respectively. In addition he has received honorary degrees of law from Boston College, University of Pennsylvania, Loyola, St. John's, St. Thomas of Minneapolis and St. Paul, along with honorary Doctor of Education degrees from St. Francis College of Maine and Villanova University.

President of Villanova

Father Stanford was President of Villanova from 1932 to 1944 when he also was in charge of the Navy Department's Bureau of Personnel. He has written numerous books among which his "Principles of Descriptive Geometry" has been used by Villanova in preceding years. Father was also the first Roman Catholic priest to be admitted to the Association of American Colleges of which he is now one of their consultants.

Fr. Stanford

"What to Expect in Marriage" will be the topic of Father Stanford's address to the Juniors.



The Mass and Communion Breakfast will give the Junior Class its first opportunity to meet as a whole. James O'Connor and William Hart, general co-chairmen of the event, have procured the facilities of the Treadway Inn for the annual tradition.

The officers of the Class of 1964 expressed the hope that the juniors will give their full participation in making this year's event the most successful.

'Newsweek' Reporter Bassow Speaks On Russia, Nov. 6

By Bill McCloskey

The Student Council has announced that Whitman Bassow a Newsweek correspondent that has recently been expelled from Russia will speak here at the University on November 6.

Whitman Bassow

Bassow's lecture, to be delivered at 7:30 p.m., will cover his five year's reporting the Kremlin as a correspondent for United Press International and as the Newsweek Bureau Chief in the Russian capital. The talk deals with the current prospective into Mr. Khrushchev's mind and actions.

Mr. Bassow will also comment on the Russian news media. This media, and the Kremlin evidently differ from American standards for a Moscow foreign correspondent. According to Newsweek the Kremlin qualifications specify that a correspondent should know just enough of the language (Russian) to read Pravda, accept the isolation of Moscow's foreign colopy, and finally become dulled by the problem of covering the Soviet Union.

Ideal Correspondent

Bassow far exceeds these qualifications. From Newsweek's point of view he was the ideal Moscow correspondent, fluent in Russian, curious and objective about Soviet life, well versed in the history, politics, and culture of the country, and acquainted both officially and unofficially with a good number of Soviet citizens.

On August 16 of this year the reporter was called to the Soviet

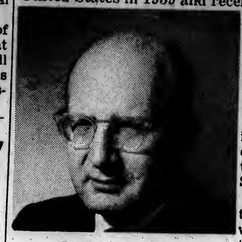
Basca Homecoming Weekend Features Activities Friday Through Sunday

By Ron Fenstermaker

Villanova's annual Nick Basca Homecoming Weekend under the sponsorshin of the senior class, will be officially initiated Friday evening at 8:00 with a bonfire and a parade through the campus followed by the judging of dormitory decorations.

Following the judging, there will be a dance in the Field House from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. and will feature the crowning of the Homecoming Queen who will reign for the entire weekend. Dance music will be provided by Al Raymond and his orchestra, announced dance co-chairmen Bob Coogan and Ralph Saviano. Intermission entertainment will be supplied by the Troubadors Three, formerly known as the Criterions, a folk-singing trio of Villanova students who have appeared publicly several times during the past year.



Pre-Game Luncheon

Saturday, preceeding the Villanova-Detroit football game, there will be a luncheon in the Field House for seniors and alumni. Floats, submitted by various campus organizations, will be paraded around the football field during halftime, and 5,000 shakers will be distributed to the ladies attending the game.

Villanova Law Forum To Host Harvard Prof. Louis B. Sohn

The second speaker to address the Villanova Law Forum this season will be Professor Louis B. Sohn. Bemis Professor of International Law at Harvard Law School. Professor Sohn will lecture on "Disarmament Is Not Enough: The Legal Framework for Peace", November 8, at 8:30.

Born in Poland in 1914. Professor Sohn came to the United States in 1939 and received his citizenship in 1943. He studied law and diplomatic science at John Casimir University, in Lwow, Poland, and received there the degrees of LL.B. and Diplomatic Sc.M. in 1935. After coming to the United States he received two degrees from Harvard, LL.M. in 1940 and S.J.D. in 1958. In 1961 he was appointed Bemis Professor of International Law at the Harvard Law School.

Prof. Louis Sohn

Professor Sohn took part in the San Francisco Conference which established the United Nations in 1945, and served as a legal officer in the United Nations Secretariat in 1950 and 1951. Since 1956 he has been working, with Professor R. E. Bayter, on a draft convention of the international responsibility to the International Law Commission of the United Nations.

Professor Sohn has been teaching courses on world law and international organizations since 1946, and became a full-time member of the Harvard Faculty in 1951. At present he teaches courses on "United Nations Law", "Problems of World Order", and "International Protection of Foriegn Investments." He is also editor of "Cases on World Law" and Cases on United Nations Law", and co-author with Grenville Clark of "World Peace Through World Law".

In recent years Professor Sohn has been working on problems of disarmament and arms control, and took part in the Sixth International Conference of Scientists in Moscow, November 27 to December 5, 1960. In 1960, he was elected to honorary membership in the American Bar Association.

Tutorial Program And Student Court Discussed By Council

An unusually brief Student Congress meeting last Wednesday evening featured mostly announcements rather than actual business performed.

The lecture of Mr. Whitman Bassow was of prime concern as far as announcements were concerned. Mr. Bassow will lecture on November 6 in Vasey Hall auditorium, at 7:30. An appropriation of $450 for Mr. Bassow's lecture was noted as being appropriated by the Senate.

A special committee has been set up to study proposals for a student court. Composed of Joseph McCarthy, Betsy Massaniso, Bob Heenan, and James McErlane, the committee is chaired by Bill DiPaolo. Ideas and opinions on the court from the students will be welcome by members of the committee and the council.

Four Freshmen

Sunday afternoon the Four Freshmen will present a concert in the Field House, announced co-chairman Jim Tate and Dick Novia. Ranked for many years as the top vocal group in America by United Press International, Playboy, Metronome, Billboard, and Downbeat, the Four Freshmen's versatility and performing experience are sure to make Sunday a day to remember for the Villanova audience.

Chairmen

Marty Whelan, Alumni Representative, is in charge of the senior and alumni luncheon, and Paul Fenice and Tony Frate are in charge of dormitory decorations. Cecile Mugnier is Queen Contest Crairman, Nick DiMarino is chairman of the dance decorations committee, and John Hughes' will be responsible for dance tickets and publicity.

Marty Whalen, Alumni Representative, holds the "Ole 84 Award" to be presented to the group with the best float in the parade at the annual homecoming game. Ed Donahue, President of the National Alumni Association of Villanova will make the presentation.

Selecting the Homecoming Queen from the five finalists will be a seven man panel including Intramural Director Ed Geisz, two priests, two senior class officers, and Edward Donohue, head of the Villanova Alumni Association.

PORTRETTE

Spirited Nurse

The spirit of a Villanova Nurse can best be exemplified in Marian Wagner. The activities in which she has participated span the length of her successful college career.

Marian has been a diligent working member of Belle Air and is now Senior Section Editor. Also active in Pi Theta Chi, she is this year's Chairman of Cultural Affairs.

Currently on the Senior Steering Committee, Marian will channel her energies towards the success of Homecoming Weekend as a member of the Program Committee for the Four Freshmen Concert and towards the success of Senior Weekend as a member of the Program Committee for the Jazz Concert.

In her sophomore year Marian was a "Whitehat," an instiller of spirit in the freshmen during their time of orientation and adjustment. As a junior, she participated on many different committees, the important Junior Steering Committee in particular.

After graduation she will possibly attend graduate school in nursing specializing in Maternal and Child Health Nursing. About nursing Marian says, "I want to help people who need help and I think that nursing is the best way for me to do this."

Our loyal Villanova nurse choose her future alma mater because of its excellent program in nursing and because of its four-year degree program in this field. She feels that "it is important for a Catholic girl to have a Catholic education in nursing."

Marian attended Central Catholic High School in Allentown and hails from that Pennsylvania city.

'Villanovan' Editors Attend Conference Of ACP In Detroit

Representatives from colleges and universities across the nation have just returned from the three day thirty eighth annual Associated Collegiate Press Conference in Detroit Michigan.

Representing the VILLANOVAN were Edward C. Farrell, Editor and Arthur A. Molitierno, Feature Editor.

The program consisted of talks and panel discussions on nearly every aspect of the college press, including yearbooks and newspapers.

Two Banquets

Two banquets were also held in honor of the delegates. Featured speakers were Charles Moore, Vice-President for Public Relations, Ford Motor Company, and Harrison Salisbury, director of national correspondence for The New York Times.

Popular Session

One of the most popular of the sessions was on college freedom of the press. This conference enabled the representatives to discuss their views and problems on this subject.

When queried about the conference, Farrell replied, "The Press conference was informative and we picked up several ideas which will be of value in our future planning. We did note, though, the lack of any panel or discussion groups aimed primarily at the Catholic student press and we are going to suggest this for next year."

The press conference is held annually at a different location, the site being determined by the ACP.

Mass And Breakfast Held For Midshipmen Before Game

Last Saturday the NROTC midshipmen added to the Parents' Weekend activities by attending a Solemn High Mass and Communion Breakfast in the morning, and marching in Battalion formation prior to the Villanova-Xavier football game in the afternoon.

Celebrant

Celebrating this Military Mass was the Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University. The sermon was given by Rear Admiral George A. Rosso, Chaplain Corps, U.S. Navy. Chaplain Rosso is the second regular Navy who, while on active duty, has been elevated to the rank of Monsignor in the Church. Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, Prior Provincial also attended the Mass.

Communion Breakfast

Following the Mass, there was a Communion Breakfast in the C&F Cafeteria for the Midshipmen and guests. Captain James Donnelly (USN-ret.) of Villanova's Mechanical Engineering Department, performed duties as toastmaster for the breakfast.

In the afternoon the Battalion formed in Villanova Stadium for pre-game ceremonies before marching into the stands where they were seated as a body. Villanova's Champion Drill Team added color to the half-time proceedings with an exhibition of precision drill.

Tape Recordings Of Families Highlight Parents' Weekend

New innovations were prevalent and successful on campus last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday as Villanova parents from all over the country converged on the Main Line campus for Parents Weekend.

The parents met with the deans of the various departments in the C & F Building on Saturday morning and from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. Saturday, Mary Lou Csere, Dan Sylvester and Bill McCloskey interviewed parents and other guests to the campus on WWVU from their remote "studio" on the patio of Dougherty Hall. Some two hundred parents were questioned and the tape will be played on WWVU at an undetermined future date so that students will be able to hear their parents views on the campus.

The event was smoothly run as a result of the work done by the Student Council, The Blue Key, and the Acting Chairmen, John Driscoll, Tom Semmer, and Andy Collins. Another person who should be credited with entertaining the parents, although his act was not listed on the program, was the referee of the Villanova-Xavier game who allowed himself to get tackled in the otherwise dull third period of the 16-8 game which Villanova won with two back to back first half scores.

Villanova NROTC Unit To Be Presented To University President

The presentation of the entire Battalion of 359 midshipmen to the Reverend John A. Klekotka OSA, President of Villanova University, will be held on Austin Field, November 6, at 3:30 P.M.

Father Klekotka has personally invited Brigadier General J. S. Raynand, USMC, Commanding General of Marine Corps Supply Activities in the Philadelphia area, and Rear Admiral R. W. Cavenagh, USN, Commandant of the Fourth Naval District, to act as reviewing officers during the afternoons activities. Consequently, this traditional ceremony serves not only as an event in honor of Father President, but it also brings the complement of midshipmen before top ranking officers of both the Navy and Marine Corps in this district.

NOTICE

Seniors may now register in the Placement Office, Basement Sheehan Hall, for January through April interviews. Resumes may be obtained in that office.

Each registant will receive a College Placement Annual, and a list of firms interviewing at Villanova.

IFC Lessens Problems Between Fraternities And Administration

A new campus organization has entered the scene at Villanova. First conceived last spring, the Interfraternity Council is just beginning to come of age this year. According to Jack Collins, its chairman, the Council is off to a "cautious" start. He feels that steady growth toward an ideal has much more values than sweeping arbitrary regulations and their subsequent revision.

Composed of member fraternities, its purpose is to act as a connecting link between the fraternity member and the administration in an attempt to lessen the load and problems of each. In its previous meetings this fall, the Council has supervised the arranging of the social cal-

Belle Masque To Stage Saroyan Play 'The Time Of Your Life' Nov. 14-17

The Belle Masque will present William Saroyan's controversial play, "The Time of Your Life," from November 14 through November 17. Dick McIntyre plays the male lead, Joe, with John Meehen in the supporting role of Tom. The female lead, Kitty, will be portrayed by Dianne Huelski and Sheila Sheen.

Mr. Thomas Nevins, the director and moderator, explained the unusual dual lead by commenting, "I was presented with two girls of similar capability who both read with equal inflection and insight into the character of Kitty. I have solved this perplexing problem by casting Dianne and Sheila as alternate leads."

The value of this contemporary play lies in the abstract, colorful, and completely individualistic characters who capture the audience's attention. The dramatic spotlight is turned upon the characters, not the plot. After hearing the banter of dialogue, one critic aptly said, "A Binge of Characters!"

Original Setting

This play is not "interesting and informative" but rather enjoyable. It has been summarized from five acts to three concise acts, but the basic content has been cut as little as possible. The original seting, a 1939 San Francisco bar in which the characters enact their personalities, has been kept.

In his directing, Mr. Nevins has emphasized forcefulness of plot individualistic interpretation of character.

Student Matinee

"The Time of Your Life" will be held in Vasey Hall Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. on November 14, 15, 16, and 17. A student matinee will be held on Saturday, November 17, at 2:00 p.m. Admission for the evening performance will be $1.00 and the matinee will be $.75. A one-hour discussion period for high-school students will follow the matinee. At this time criticisms of the acting may be made and questions directed to the actors may be asked.

Sophomore Retreat Speaker Monsignor William J. Awalt

Father Hopkins, University Chaplain, announced the schedule for the Annual Sophomore Retreat. The Retreat will be held next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, November 7, 8, 9 in the University Field House. Retreat cards can be secured Monday afternoon from 1:30 to 4:30 and Tuesday from 9:30 until 4.30 in the center lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The opening exercise will begin Wednesday evening at 7:30 and will be followed by a conference, benediction, and confessions. The guest speaker will be Msgr. William J. Awalt, a well-known Retreat Master in Washington, D.C. and also Diocesan Director of CYO activities in that area.

Thursday's schedule will open with Mass at 8 a.m. for both residents and day students. Conferences will follow at 9:30, 11:00 and and 1:30 p.m. Confessions will be heard by several priests immediately following the second and third conferences. Afternoon exercises will be concluded with a Holy Hour at 3 p.m. Residents are obliged to return at 7:30 p.m. for night prayers and confessions.

It is emphasized that Nocturnal Adoration has been a tradition at the Annual Villanova Retreat. The Blessed Sacrament will be exposed after the Holy Hour on Thursday afternoon, and on Friday up to noon. All residents and day students are urged to spend at least one hour in adoration. Day students may bring their relatives and friends to join with them during this time.

Friday's exercises will be launched with conferences at 9:00 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. The concluding exercise of the Annual Retreat will be Mass and general Communion at 12 noon.

Father Hopkins has asked that all be on time in order to fully benefit from the exercises and not cause delay to others attending.

Joyce Kiley Mile To Be Held Today Features Hilarity And Excitement

The traditional Joyce Kiley Mile, a fraternity activity, will be held for the seventh consecutive year on Wednesday, October 31, at 3:30 p.m.

The event this year will again be an inter-fraternity activity sponsored by Delta Pi Mu Fraternity.

For those who are not familiar with the story, let it be know that Joyce Kiley is not a myth. A Miss Kiley accepted two dates for the 1956 Homecoming Weekend. Subsequently, the two good-natured Villanovans, Dave Belcher and Jed Diogardi of the Class of '58, since they were opposed to physical violence of any sort, chose to resolve the crisis by the running of a mile to determine who should escort the young lady during the Weekend.

Irish vs. Italian

The Irish-American Club was organized by Belcher, and he chose Ollie Finan as his miler. Diogardi formed the Italian-American Association and had Chubby McCarthy train for the match. In an undetermined time, which is still undetermined, Finan bested his opponent and Belcher won the date.

Miss Joyce Kiley, 1961

The following year the race was held during Homecoming Weekend. This time the table was turned, and McCarthy literally ran Finan into the cinders.

Since most of the contestants were members of Delta Pi Mi Fraternity, this organization took over the handling of the event in 1958. In this race John Quinn broke all records as he

Unheralded Science Expansion Attributed To Graduate Study

The existence of the new Mendel Hall is an outstanding indication of the growth of the Science Departments here at Villanova. However, to what degree study in the sciences has progressed on this campus is unknown to most.

A clue to this growth could be derived from the increased number of science seminars held on campus. An investigation of the why behind this increase led directly to one fact, the growth of graduate study in the Chemistry, Biology, and Physics departments of the Arts and Science Division, which is indicative of the university's general progress. The seminar programs, although open to the general public, are principally for the benefit of upperclass and graduate students.

The seminar program of the Chemistry Department exemplifies the goals of the other departments because of its longer existence. The purpose of the program is to acquaint the people here at Villanova with what is going on in the four basic fields of Chemistry outside the campus and to forward research program in progress at the University.

In order to achieve these goals, the first semester of the seminar program is built around speakers from a cross-section of institutions, of which Swarthmore, Harvard, and Villanova are representative, and industrial concerns such as the Rohm and Haas Company here in the Philadelphia area. The speakers lecture on the state of their particular fields in Chemistry. Then, in the second semester, the seminar discussions are given by the graduate students about the research that they are doing towards their graduate degree.

Although this is the basic plan of the programs of the Biology and Physics Departments also, the Biology program is only now beginning its first year, and the Physics Department's graduate school is still in the planning stages.

Before 1958, there were no full time graduate study programs in either Chemistry or Biology. Now, there are twenty-four full time and thirty-two part time graduates in the Chemistry Department and twenty-three furthering their educations in Biology.

Again, in 1958, Dr. Doyne and Dr. Driscoll were the only faculty members of the Chemistry Department conducting research projects as opposed to the present situation which has ten members of the Chemistry staff conducting such projects with the aid of five grants from varied sources.

As would be expected from their youth, the graduate study programs of these departments have been greatly influenced by recent happenings. Two of the most influential were the construction of the new Mendel Hall and the reception of grants from sources such as the National Science Foundation and the General Electric Company. The Physics Department, for example, has acquired a sub-critical nuclear reactor, which will

An Annual Debate

The war-mongering state of Red China has once again made its annual plea to become a member of the United Nations. Once again the peace loving countries of the communist bloc have given this motion their complete backing.

Many reasons are presented by the Red Chinese in support of their qualifications for such membership. First, their government is recognized by a lost list of nations. Secondly the government of Peking does control the entire mainland of China and and presumably has the support of the Chinese people. Furthermore, it is argued that participation of Red China is vitally necessary for the situation of world disarmament.

At first glance, these reasons seem adequate proof of Red China's qualifications, but they are not. The question, whether the Peking regime speaks for the Chinese people, is of paramount inportance. The truth is that the people of China live daily in the fear of their lives. We need only refer to the exodus of refugees which flowed into British Hong Kong last year to prove this. Since Western observers are forbidden in the country we must rely on the reports of rufugees and the people who have been expelled for verification the conditions there. We find that criminal tactics are used by the government in pursuing its goals. The economy is based on slave labor and the party wages a continuous war against religion.

A problem arises in the consideration of Red China for membership in the U.N., in that the Nationalist Chinese government on Formosa is already a member nation of the U.N. with a seat in the security council. This pro-West government bases its claim for the representation of the Chinese people on both legal and moral rights.

The admission of Red China to the U.N. would give that country the pretense of being a law-abiding nation. This is contrary to fact. Communist China has been consistently aggressive in its attitude towards its neighbors. It has engaged in aggression in Korea in 1951 against U.N. forces. India has become the latest victim of undeclared aggressive warfare being waged by China.

The U.N. Charter defines as one of its objectives, the furtherance of "fundamental human rights." If for no other reason than this, Red China should not be admitted to the U.N. The objective of that nation could be more accurately described as the "suppression of fundamental human right."

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor

Last Monday, (October 22), while international crisis was at fever pitch, the Villanova Police Corps provided me with a good chuckle.

About thirty-seven days have gone since the first full day of school. During that time the usual impossible parking situation has become unbelievably worse because of the absence of lines on the west side of the lot. Cars park in every way and in every direction. But the drivers are not to blame because the lack of order in the lot is a result of the lack of lines. Who is to blame? The persons responsible for the marking of the line.

On Monday a warning from the Villanova Police Department was on my car. It claimed I had parked "illegally" and the next time my car was parked in such a manner it would be towed away. Unless the tow truck is dropped from a helicopter, I cannot see a way it can get to my car.

Again, the simple solution is merely to draw white lines on this area of the lot so some kind of order can return.

The Turning Point Of The Cold War

Monday, October 22, 1962, may go down in history as the date of the turning point in the Cold War that has been waged between the East and the West for fifteen years. For, on this day, President Kennedy declared a United States' quarantine against military shipments to Cuba and demanded that all offensive missiles be removed from this most recent Soviet satelite. This action which was actually directed against Russia has placed the Cold War in an entirely new and decisive stage.

The blockade of Cuba has changed the outlook of the Cold War in two ways. First, there is a direct confrontation of the military power of the United States and the military power of the Soviet Union. In the past, both sides have tried to prevent any such confrontation of power. Second, the United States has taken an offensive stand, bringing the Cold War to a climactic crisis which can result in only one of three possible consequences: the backdown of the Soviet Union, the backdown of the United States, or war.

After Stalin had erected the Iron Curtain around Eastern Europe, Russia began piece-meal aggression of the noncommunist world. Under the disguise of "peaceful coexistence", Khrushchev has continued this aggression in which Russia has used the forces of its satelite nations. Russia has been most successful and, until the acquisition of Cuba, had never openly committed its own forces. The Soviet Union has not relinquished any of the territory that it gained by force, as it may be forced to do in Cuba. But never have American forces directly confronted Soviet forces in Cuba; and, something has to give.

If Russia backs down, the expanding power of the Soviet Union will have been reversed. Submission by the Soviet Union, after public committments that there would be no submission, would result in a tremendous loss of power and prestige to Russia and, more important, to Communism as an ideology. Also there is no element as powerful in international politics as the possession of superior power and the willingness to use it.

The present balance of nuclear striking power is seriously threatened by the Soviet missile bases in Cuba, The United States has used this balance of power to preserve freedom. However, at the present time, Russia does not have enough long range missiles to cover essential targets in this hemisphere.

If the Soviets had nuclear warheads on medium and intermediate range missiles in Cuba, they would not need the large amount of long-range missiles. With their present MRBM and IRBM stockpile, they would possess an international military advantage which could eliminate most of the United States' nuclear ability in one overall strike. The Soviets could use this "first strike capability" to gain concessions throughout the world. The President's timely action prevents Russia from destroying this balance of power.

If the United States were to back down, which is most unlikely, the Free World's defense against Soviet "power politics" would crumble. By waiting for the moment of recognizable provocation, the Kennedy Administration has justified the arms blockade of Cuba in the eyes of most of the world's free nations. For years these same nations have accepted Communist piece-meal aggression as being inevitable and regarded any attempt to check this action as a deliberate creation of a crisis. In Cuba, Kennedy has successively shown that Russia and not the United States has created this crisis. Therefore, the rest of the world looks toward Russia for the termination of the Cuban crisis. Since Russia has been put on the defensive, the United States has no reason to back down and lose the balance of nuclear power.

The third possible consequence of the blockade is war. It could be a limited invasion of Cuba or an all-out nuclear war. At this time, a nuclear war seems very doubtful since neither side has a safe advantage to initiate a successful nuclear war. An invasion of Cuba, however, does appear very feasible, and many national leaders openly advocate an invasion. If this missile threat isn't removed within a short period, there will probably be such an offensive by the United States. Kennedy has shown that this country means business; and with the support of the O.A.S., an invasion of Cuba would not seriously damage the United States' prestige abroad.

In view of Khruschev's statement that he is going to pull his missile bases out of Cuba, it seems as though President Kennedy has won out and a Kremlin backdown, an occurrance so rare today, has taken place. If the United Nations inspectors determine that this takes place in the near future, a turning point in the cold war will definitely have been reached.

This turning point can have far reaching effects. With the United States on the offensive, as it were, action may come in Berlin if the Soviets make any sort of aggressive moves. Likewise in Viet Nam, the Chinese Communist may be told by their cremlin comrades to not provoke the American "observers" lest the United States draws the line as in Cuba.

For God and Country

Just as the twin spires of the campus chapel remind us of our duty to God it seems appropriate to remind ourselves that the flag of our nation flying on the staff in front of Barry Hall should remind us of our citizenship in a great nation.

Patriotism, it seems, blooms in time of national peril—as well it should. Unfortunately this same external expression of national pride is considered almost unseemly any other time. Students at Villanova, for example often ignore completely the passing of the colors during the Tuesday afternoon NROTC drills in front of Barry Hall.

The lowering of the flag at the close of the drill is regarded with apathy by those who stop to watch.

Perhaps it takes a threat to our national safety and honor to remind us that the flag of the United States is not merely a piece of cloth but the symbol of all that this nation stands for.

Thousands of Americans have given their lives to prove that. Certainly we at Villanova can at least give it respect.

Four Freshmen To Entertain; Ranked Top U.S. Vocal Group

By Ron Fenstermaker

Highlighting the activities of the Nick Basca Homecoming Weekend will be a concert by the Four Freshmen in the Field House Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m.

Ranked for many years as the top vocal group in the United States by United Press International, Playboy, Metronome, Billboard, and Downbeat, the Four Freshmen began doing club jobs around Indianapolis in their student days.

Discovered by Kenton

Then, one lucky night at the Esquire Lounge, the Four Freshmen's performance so impressed Stan Kenton that he signed them to a Capitol Record contract. As soon as they completed their engagement at the Lounge, they were on their way to Hollywood. Nationwide enthusiasm for their unusual style and distinctive vocalizing followed swiftly.

The Four Freshmen uninhibitedly approach a familiar song as though it were brand new. They feel free to sing a number faster or slower than it is usually done, and take delightful liberties with its phrasing and melody.

Something Extra

The versatile group adds something extra to their intricate harmonizing by participating instrumentally. Bob Flanigan, the top voice, also demonstrates his ability on the trombone and string base. Ken Albers, the bass voice of the group, also plays two instruments, the trumpet and mellophone. The M. C. of the group, third voice Ross Barbour, plays the drums, and second voice Bill Comstock the guitar. Among important recordings are the long-playing albums: "The Four Freshmen and Five Saxes", "The Best of the Four Freshmen", "The Four Freshmen in Person", "Stars in our Eyes", "The Swinger," and "Voices in Fun."

THE FOUR FRESHMEN

With the popular appeal, versatility, and performing experience of the Four Freshmen, those attending their concerts this Sunday are guaranteed an afternoon that will be long remembered.

NFCCS Aids CCD

By John Neary,
Senior Delegate N.F.C.C.S.

It was recommended at the NFCCS national congress that all Catholic colleges study contemporary social issues, applying the teaching of the papal encyclicals as principles of action to the current social situations.

On our campus the Confraternity of Christian Doctorine is sponsoring a series of open panel discussion. The first topic to be discussed is "Segregation". This is an issue that concerns all of us, not only as Christians, but as citizens of a free nation. This first discussion was held in 116 C&F Building at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday, October 25.

The next topic to be discussed will be the Ecumenical Council. Guest panelists from neighboring colleges will be invited to discuss this and other synchronous issues.

Discussion Series

Also, Father Jack O'Rourke OSA, moderator of the CCD has expressed a desire to inaugurate a series of closed discussion groups of about twelve members each in the near future.

The campus NFCCS Commission will help the CCD in its endeavors in the field by supplying information which is filtered in from other schools, by informing those students interested concerning upcoming regional and national seminars on these topics, by providing a contact with groups working in the same field on some other area campuses, and by acquainting those interested in this area with regional action programs.

Drinking College Students As Seen By A.A. Member

By Joe Deighan

A funny thing happened to me on the way to school last Monday. As I turned into the parking lot, I inadvertently ran over a brown bottle. I managed only a few feet after the initial contact with what had previously been a bubbling bottle of brew, when I heard the only too familiar sound that is a tire losing its air. Besides urging me to utter a few remarks, this unfortunate accident aroused certain questions in my mind, viz, whence had the bottle come, who threw the empty there, and more important who drained its contents.

Applying the arguments of Logic 101, I quickly arrived at the valid concusion that a Villanova student must have thrown the bottle there. The fact that the members of the Villanova student body indulge in the drinking of alcoholic beverages did not particularly alarm me, but it did not make me cognizant of a problem which is undoubtedly present at all colleges, universities and other places where young men are forced to spend time from the surroundings which are most familiar to them. There just isn't very much to do on the weekend in the dormitory of a school many miles from home; nothing to do that is after the student has finished his studies.

All Answer Yes

I wondered how many students did drink and to answer my questions or rather to confirm my suspicions, I took an informal poll. My intention was to ask enough students the question, "do you drink " so I could establish a percentage of drinkers and non-drinkers at Villanova. I was unable to ask a great number of students but of those which I did contact none answered negatively to the question.

Because of the number of affirmative response to my question, I decided to push on further in my quest for information which might throw some light on the subject. I spoke to a member of Alcoholics Anonymous and he provided me with a goodly amount of pertinent information. Mr. X. said that "loneliness was the main reason why many people drink". Mr. X, a college graduate, volunteered that although he himself did not drink while in school, "many alcoholics got their start while attending college."

Excessive Drinking
A Forerunner

Mr. X added with much emphasis that "alcoholism is a serious disease which results from excessive drinking over an extended period of time." This excessive drinking is the forerunner of alcoholism. The experts on the subject claim that only those who have a nervous or neurotic disposition are likely to become problem drinkers, since it takes at least six years exposure to drinking to know for sure what effect alchol will have on the individual. By that time he might be well past the point of no return.

It is not my purpose to either to approve or condemn the consumption of alcohol at Villanova. I merely wish to illustrate what are the ill effects of the drinking habit and what, if any, are its practical advantages.

Obvious Advantages

Mr. X when asked to enumerate the advantage of alcohol replied very tersely that "drinking certainly peps up a party, and even sometimes brings a grouchy man back to humanity, but if you have to be half bombed to enjoy yourself then this could hardly be considered an advantage of alcohol."

This then is pretty strong language from a man who at one time enjoyed the sensual pleasures of weekend indulging, but this is a man who learned his lesson the hard way. It was Mr. X's hope that his willingness to disclose his past would not be in vain. The advice of a man who knows and the evaluations of the experts will not be wasted if the individual drinker will study the words and use his common sense and then choose for himself the safest possible path to a secure future.

Best Foot Forward

by The Blue Key

With smoking so common we sometimes forget that there are times and places where one never smoke even though there may be no reminder such as a "High Explosives" sign. No one may smoke in a church, or during any religious service, or ceremonial proceedings. In a sick room you shouldn't light up unless you are invited to do so. Finally, it should be unnecessary to say that no one should think of smoking or carrying a lighted cigarette when dancing.

Until recently, smoking during dinner was frowned upon but today you may now if your host invites you to smoke by the absence or presence of ashtrays on the table. Never deposit your ashes on dinnerware . . . As a matter of precaution don't go to the dinner table carrying a lighted cigarette.

More Etiquette

If you are in confined space, such as a private car, always ask, "Dou you mind if I smoke?" Be careful that the smoke from your cigarette is not finding its way into someone's face. Never lay a burning cigarette on a piece of furniture, even for a moment, for it could prove to be an expensive mistake. An outstanding example of the work of these petty arsonists is the condition of the floor of our classrooms and in either of the Dougherty Student Lounges. Certainly no one with the least amount of manners or sense would drop ashes and stamp out their used matches and butts on floors our tuition helped pay for.

Smoking, when it takes place in public, is like borrowing a book—not a right but a privilege. Respect it by becoming a considerate and careful smoker.

Letters To Home

By Liz Kovach

Guess what! I went to one of those college parties! Promise you won't tell Ma an' Pa.

When we got thar the shindig was jest startin' but already most everyone was full of stuff like our moonshine, only it wasn't as powerful an' smelled worse. To get in we had to step over people who kept fallin' over while they tried to dance. The dance they was doin' was the TWIST an' it looked like a greased pig wrigglin' through everyone's hands at our annual pig chase.

The place was a little aqua colored bungalow (that's a fancy shack) an' inside it was real dark so that I kept steppin' on the bare feet of someone. How they managed to find the smallest place in town for those fifty drunken sardines, I'll never know. But I remember that when they told us how to get thar they said that if you see it an' don't believe it—that's it. (I really tried not to believe it.)

You can't imagine how mad I was when I saw what they all were wearin' an' how they looked, 'cause I even took a bath an' combed my hair for nutin'. The fellers had their shirtails a hangin' an' the gals had their hair strung all over their faces.

Everyone was huggin' either each other or a bottle an' you should of seen them carryin' on. Some were so shameless that they were sparkin' right in public (course it was dark), but most of them went outside "For some fresh air." I've never seen people with so much fresh air in them! Guess they're nature lovers.

Those who weren't busy like this, played a little game called CARDINAL. It seems that you had to fill a glass with beer an' say somethin' holy about some cardinal called PUFF PUFF; then jump up an' down an' then down the hatch went the beer. Of course some of them got pretty sloppy an' especially after they had a few glasses. Some fellers became cardinals an' ran around tellin' everyone, but most of them fell off the chair-dejected an' rejected.

All durin' the shindig people kept hollerin' somethin' they called their motto: "Life is a banquet and so many poor suckers are starvin." Everytime I heard that I was sad for those poor starvin' people an' when I asked if I could help nobody told me where they were.

Your lovin' friend,
Joanie Podunk

JOE COLLEGE

By John Roberts

There is an atypical college student who doesn't smoke or drink, doesn't have a girlfriend and doesn't like rock 'n' roll. No, he is not a figment of someone's imagination; he actually exists. If he sounds a little unusual, and you must admit that he does, it may well be because he is unusual. As a matter of fact, Joseph Hsui Lau Yuen, who is from the free port of Hong Kong, is an engineering student at Villanova University.

Joe, a talkative freshman who resides in Austin Hall, has been in the United States only two months but he will make a comment on just about anything except President Kennedy.

The most impressive thing Joe has seen in America so far are its transportation systems, which he exclaims are unparalleled by those of any other country. He thinks New York City is big although he refers to his own home town of Hong Kong as a small city. (Hong Kong's population is greater than Philadelphia's.)

American Girls

On the subject of American girls, Joe sounds like a master of observation. He thinks the girls are nice but that they talk too much and overdo the make-up bit. He is quick to tactfully add that he is familiar with the conservative and reticent oriental girls, although he admits that even some of them have flamboyant hairdos.

American food is a painful subject for Joe and on that topic he is quite succinct. He doesn't like it, but he further qualifies the statement by pointing out that it is very different from the food that he is used to and although he does not like it, that does not mean it isn't good. American eating implements also bother Joe. He asserts that chop-sticks are much less clumsy.

Joe is of the opinion that in general, Americans are much more informal than the people of his country. He thinks Americans are more inclined to joke and laught than his people are. He says the Chinese are more subdued and aloof. In particular, Joe thinks Villanova students are friendly and fond of horseplay and laughing but he says that for the most part, they seem serious enough about their studies.

Different Dialects

Joe attended the Nam Wah Middle School in Hong Kong where his father is a highschool teacher. He revealed that he was surprised when he found out that all Americans speak the same language. Not so in China, he says. He explained that the Chinese language is all written the same and that all of the people can read Chinese but that different provinces have different dialects each of which has its own distinct pronunciations of the same words. He says that in China, someone from Brooklyn would not understand someone from South Philadelphia at all; which makes one wonder if the same is true in America!

All in all, Joe likes America and is pleased with Villanova. He hopes to graduate with an engineering degree and return home. Good luck Joe.

Annual Drill Meet To Add To Homecoming Activities

Homecoming activities will begin early on Saturday morning with the Fourth Annual Invitational Drill Meet at nine o'clock in the area behind the stadium.

Teams competing include some of the top squads in the East, among them, Georgetown, Princeton, Rutgers, Pitt, and Ball State, considered one of the best teams in Pennsylvania. Hosting the event will be the pride of the University, the Villanova Whisky Company Drill Team under the direction of Drill Team Commander, Richard Hulit.

Xavier of New York, one of the best high school drill teams in the country will also compete in the meet which will be divided into three divisions: Advance Trick Drill, Basic Drill, and Individual Drill.

Trophies will be awarded for the top three competitors in the Advance Trick and Basic Drill divisions.

A trophy will also be awarded to the top individual driller and the team scoring the highest number of overall points. The Villanova team has announced that it will not accept the team trophy if they win, and will relegate it to the second place winner.

Winner of last year's event was Pitt, who received the trophy after it was refused by the Villanova team.

In referring to an article on fraternal groups in last week's VILLANOVAN, Jack Collins said, "At last the right hand does know what the left is doing."

The chairman, in addressing anyone who is contemplating pledging for a fraternity, emphasized the fact that fraternity functions are for members only, and not to be opened to outsiders. We feel, he added, that a fraternity can enhance your stay at Villanova by promoting friendship, supplementing the processes of social maturity, and helping to form an all-around Christian gentleman."

Philosophy Professor Lectures On Virtues, Love And Marriage

Dr. Charles O'Niel, Professor of Philosophy at Villanova, lectured on Thursday, October 25. His subject was "Love, Marriage, and The Cardinal Virtues". He is the author of "IMPRUDENCE IN ST. THOMAS", and the editor of "An Etienne Gilson Tribune." He has contributed many articles and critical reviews to learned periodicals, and has translated book IV of St. Thomas' "Summa Contra Gentiles."

Dr. O'Niel handled the subject with wit and perception. His ability to express the profound in simple language added color to the lecture. He stressed that justice always flows from love, whereas love doesn't flow from justice. He contended that the family should rely more on itself and God, and less on rigid rules and Dr. Spock, saying, "There is too much of a tendency to think that family life can be solved by a few simple rules.

Foreign Ministry at noon, and told the news of his expulsion. He was given seven days to leave.

Tass, the official Soviet News Agency, reported the incident and issued a statement from the Ministry that said that Mr. Bassow's accreditation was being annulled because of his violation of standards of the behavior of foreign correspondents in the USSR as well . . . as Bassow's crudely slanted dispatches about the Soviet Union which had evoked legitimate indignation of Soviet public opinion."

Too Close to Russians

According to a dispatch in the New York Herald-Tribune the morning after the expulsion was announced, Marshall Peck reported that Bassow was evidently getting too close to the Russians. The article that had appeared in the then current issue of the news magazine contrasted public and private humor in the Red Capital. Evidently this dispatch pointed up to the Soviet government just how close Bassow had become to the Russian people.

Also referred to by Tass was an "unauthorized visit to a Russian grade school." This was referred to as one reason for his ouster. Although not pointed out by Tass, the Tribune noted that the reason for Bassow's visit to the school was to see the school that a young American Negro girl had been sent to by her parents. (The parents told newsmen that they felt that their daughter could get a better education in an "unbigotted Russian school".)

The note about the Russian people being indigant was not explained by Tass, but to the New York paper, it was pretty hard to explain since Newsweek is not distributed in the Soviet Union.

Bassow did not undergo the usual ritual of being slandered by Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper. Ironical is the report that the expelled correspondent wrote his doctoral thesis on the history of the same paper. Bassow has now joined the New York staff of the weekly magazine and is presently on a nationwide speaking tour which stops at Villanova next week.

flew by Gus Susnjara in the fabulous time of 9:53. In a last ditch bid for victory, Susnjara cut across the track in the third lap. This enabled him to break 11 minutes.

In 1959 the Mile became an inter-fraternity affair with each of the frats entering a candidate.

Last year's winner of this humorous mile was the President of Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity, Ron Viscuso.

The race itself consists of a relay, with each frat entering a team consisting of their fattest, shortest, and tallest men for the first laps. The final lap is run by the respective fraternity presidents.

The contestants and spectators will march from Mendel Field at 3:15 p.m. to the football stadium where the event will be held. The fraternities promising hilarity, excitement, music, and girls, ask the support of the student body.

We went to the mountain to make 1963 Ford-built cars go 30,000 to 100,000 miles between major chassis lubrications

Quite a task faced Ford Motor Company engineers when they set out to eliminate the traditional trip to the grease rack every 1,000 miles.

Like Mohammed, they went to the mountain—Bartlett Mountain on the Continental Divide in Colorado. More molybdenite is mined there than in the rest of the world combined. And from molybdenite ore comes the amazing "moly" grease that helps extend the chassis lubrication intervals for Ford-built cars. This grease sticks tenaciously to metal, stands up under extreme pressures and resists moisture, pounding and squeezing. It is slicker than skates on ice!

New, improved seals were developed. Bushings, bearings and washers of many materials were investigated. Slippery synthetics, like nylon and teflon, were used a number of new ways.

The search for means to extend chassis lubrication also led to New Orleans—where experimental suspension ball joints tested in taxicabs in regular service went two years without relubrication.

It took time. And ingenuity. But the effort paid off when Ford-built cars were the first to build in chassis lubrication good for 30,000 miles or two years—whichever came first.

Another assignment completed—another "Ford First" and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

'Cats Point For Homecoming Clash With Gross And Titans

By Richard Pazdan

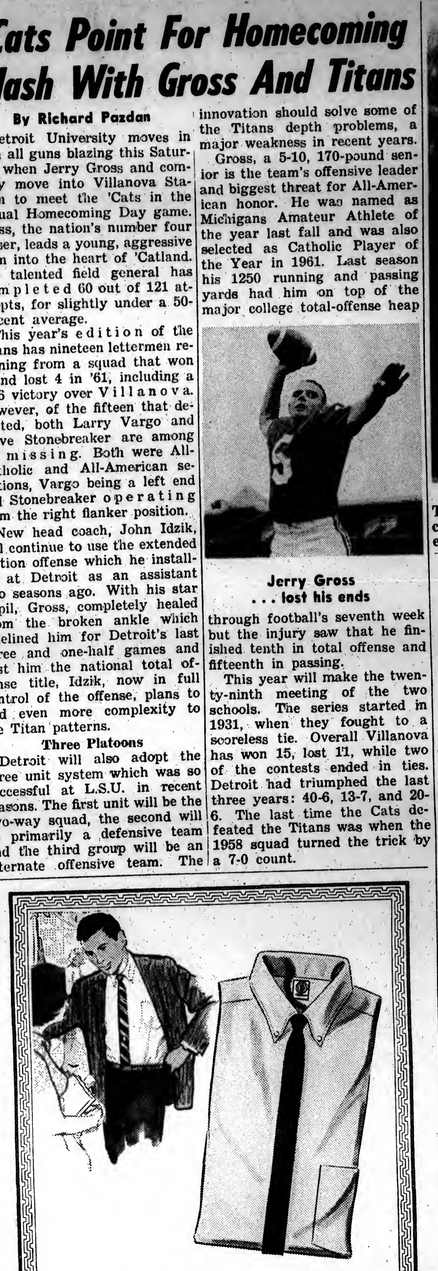
Detroit University moves in with all guns blazing this Saturday when Jerry Gross and company move into Villanova Stadium to meet the 'Cats in the annual Homecoming Day game. Gross, the nation's number four passer, leads a young, aggressive team into the heart of 'Catland. The talented field general has completed 60 out of 121 attempts, for slightly under a 50-percent average.

This year's edition of the Titans has nineteen lettermen returning from a squad that won 5 and lost 4 in '61, including a 20-6 victory over Villanova. However, of the fifteen that departed, both Larry Vargo and Steve Stonebreaker are among the missing. Both were All-Catholic and All-American selections, Vargo being a left end and Stonebreaker operating from the right flanker position.

New head coach, John Idzik, will continue to use the extended motion offense which he installed at Detroit as an assistant two seasons ago. With his star pupil, Gross, completely healed from the broken ankle which sidelined him for Detroit's last three and one-half games and cost him the national total offense title, Idzik, now in full control of the offense, plans to add even more complexity to the Titan patterns.

Three Platoons

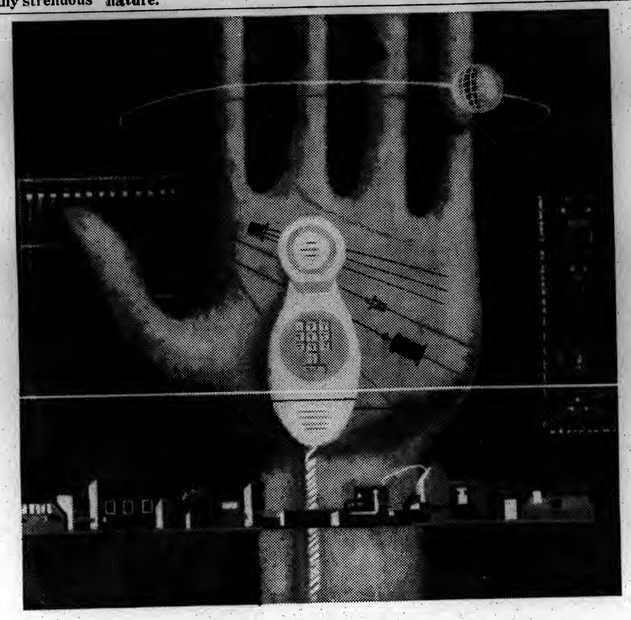
Detroit will also adopt the three unit system which was so successful at L.S.U. in recent seasons. The first unit will be the two-way squad, the second will be primarily a defensive team and the third group will be an alternate offensive team. The innovation should solve some of the Titans depth problems, a major weakness in recent years.



Gross, a 5-10, 170-pound senior is the team's offensive leader and biggest threat for All-American honor. He was named as Michigans Amateur Athlete of the year last fall and was also selected as Catholic Player of the Year in 1961. Last season his 1250 running and passing yards had him on top of the major college total-offense heap through football's seventh week but the injury saw that he finished tenth in total offense and fifteenth in passing.

Jerry Gross
. . . lost his ends

This year will make the twenty-ninth meeting of the two schools. The series started in 1931, when they fought to a scoreless tie. Overall Villanova has won 15, lost 11, while two of the contests ended in ties. Detroit had triumphed the last three years: 40-6, 13-7, and 20-6. The last time the Cats defeated the Titans was when the 1958 squad turned the trick by a 7-0 count.



Here is another splendid example of the hearty and valient intramuralers in action. This time the place of battle is Austin Field. The pass looks a little short of its intended receiver, but the striped-shirt-clad player seems involved in other matters of an unrelated but equally strenuous nature. (Photo by Tom Thomas)

Our future is in the hands of men not yet hired

At Western Electric we play a vital role in helping meet the complex needs of America's vast communications networks. And a career at Western Electric, the manufacturing arm of the nation-wide Bell Telephone System, offers young men the exciting opportunity to help us meet these important needs.

Today, Western Electric equipment reduces thousands of miles to fractions of seconds. Even so, we know that our present communications systems will be inadequate tomorrow; and we are seeking ways to keep up with—and anticipate—the future. For instance, right now Western Electric engineers are working on various phases of solar cell manufacture, miniaturization, data transmission, futuristic telephones, electronic central offices, and computer-controlled production lines—to name just a few.

To perfect the work now in progress and launch many new communications products, projects, procedures, and processes not yet in the mind of man—we need quality-minded engineers. If you feel that you can meet our standards, consider the opportunities offered by working with our company. In a few short years, you will be Western Electric.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6206, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Wildkittens Notch Second Win As West Chester Falls, 14-6

Somebody must have given Ed Michaels and Alex Bell the same script last week because Friday, Michaels' freshman team put on sneak preview of Saturday's varsity contest in beating the West Chester frosh 14-6. In notching their second victory in three away games, the Wildkittens fumbled away their first scoring opportunity; scored their two touchdowns in the second period; had one of their starting linemen ejected on a questionable call; and completely contained their opponent's offense until the Rams scored in the last thirty seconds on a desperation pass.

Villanova finally got a break when end John MacAdams blocked the third kick attempt and recovered on the West Chester 32. Quarterback Dave Connell directed the Frosh to the 10 from where he hit MacAdams for a TD on the first play of the second stanza. Connell found two more with a 3 yard flip to the other flanker Dick Fabrizzio.

The referees then apparently became dissatisfied with the way Villanova was treating their hosts and tried to do something about it. First they whistled down most VU gainers while ignoring repeated piling-on by West Chester; then they topped this off by ejecting Chip Kelleher from the game for some obscure reason. The Wildkittens managed to score anyway. This second TD was set up by a zig-zag 70 yard punt return with Don Hartlaub going to the West Chester 10.

Brown Scores

On the next play Tom Brown bolted around left end behind guard Joe Piela and fullback Mike Guerneri for the score. The bonus attempt by halfback George Ackerson was stopped inches short, and the halftime saw a 14-0 Villanova advantage.

Throughout the second half, West Chester was unable to move the ball while desperately fighting off repeated VU drives. Villanova linemen Larry Jones and Joe Sweeney spent most of the afternoon in the Rams' backfield, repeatedly smothering their running attack and pressuring any pass attempt.

The officials finally made their point—six to be exact—when they signaled a touchdown for the Teachers on a pass caught by end Joe Ostroski, who flag. Quarterback Tim McCool missed his toss for two, and the game ended thirty seconds later.

Football In 1937

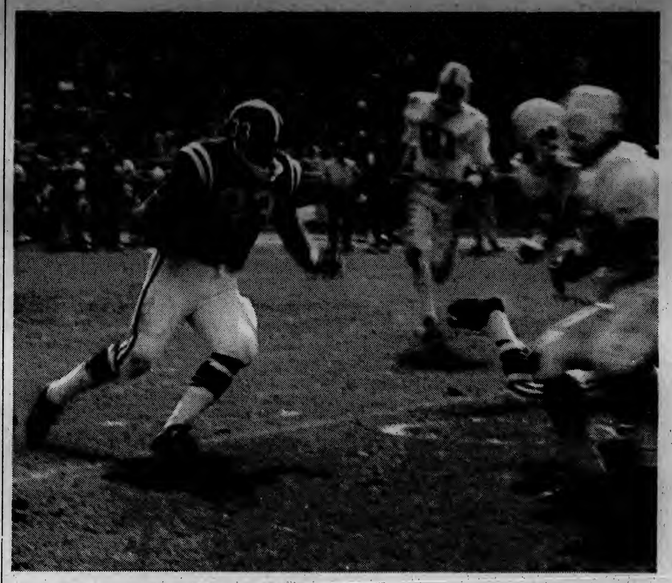
Temple, 33-0. Four touchdown passes one each to Wysocki, Bell, Stopper and Earle made a shambles of the Owls' defense. Stopper played a brilliant game along with Jordan Olivar and John Mellus in the line. A center by the name of John McKenna aso distinguished himself.



With the usual starting lineup of Bell RE, Olivar RT, Kuber RG, McKenna C, Rogers LG, Mellus LT, Wysocki LE, Sowlett QB, Stopper LHB, Stoviak RHB, and Earle FB, the wildest of all Cat elevens swept by Loyola at Los Angeles, 25-0.

Thus completed the finest season by a Villanova football team, a just reward to desire, ability, unity and the coaching prowess of 'Clipper' Smith. The team was ranked fourth in the country and John Wysocki was elected to the Coaches' All-American.

Most of the members of that great team are teachers or in the coaching ranks today: Alex Bell at his Alma Mater; John McKenna at VMI; Jordan Olivar Art Raimo and Ray Stoviak at Yale: Andy Stopper retired from coaching but still teaches at Reading High School; and Val Rizdo is at Canon-McMillan High in western Pa. Frank Nye and Pat Marquette are school principals, Nye at nearby Marple-Newtown. John Mellus works for a steel company in Baltimore; Joe Missar is a retired Marine colonel; Bell Rogers is a construction equipment salesmen in Detroit and Jack Earle owns a couple of gas stations in Camden.

Senior History Forms must be turned in by November 5. Forms are available in the Belle Air Office.

This medal play tournament is the team's only fall activity. The regular season, which includes 13 matches this year with such teams as Army, Navy, Princeton and Penn State, will be held in the spring.

Golf Team Competes In ECAC Tournament With One In Finals

Recently four members of the Villanova Golf team participated in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Golf Tournament (ECAC). The qualifying round was held at the Navy course in Annapolis with the finals being staged at Bethpage Park, Farmingdale, Long Island.

John Driscoll, Bob McMahon, Joe Patterson and Ed Coffey played in the qualifying round. Of these only Driscoll, who had a 78 to place fourth, qualified for the finals; however he finished far down on the list.

After three Cat plays and a punt, Xavier again had the ball, this time on the host's 30 yard line. The Musketeers moved to the 17 where Bryniarski was thrown for a loss on a good second effort by Emmett Michaels. Captain Charlie Johnson and Xavier's Jim Higgins were ejected for fighting after the play.

Field Goal Attempt Missed

On the next play, Bob Kowalski tossed Bryniarski for a loss of 11 more yards, before George Potts' 31 yard windblown field-goal attempt went awry. Thus far this season, Potts has had 2 fifty yard field goals to his credit plus one from 46 yards.

Several plays later a Xavier punt gave the ball to Villanova on their 3 yard line but two plays later Thomas fumbled again after a 7 yard loss and Musketeer Terry Coughlin recovered on the VU 3. A TD pass, Bryniarski to Callahan, was called back because of a penalty but, with 4 seconds left in the game, the duo finally worked.

Harriers Trounce Marine Team As Three 'Cats Set New Mark

By Carol Burton and Lois Greyson

In chilling 35 degree weather on Saturday at Cobb's Creek the impressive Villanova Cross Country team scored their second decisive victory of the season over a game but less talented Quantico Marine team. Villanova's Vic Zwolak, Pat Trayner, and Tom Sullivan crossed the finish line together in 25 minutes, 15 seconds to set a new record for the five mile Cobb's Creek Course. Their time bettered the existing mark set by Zwolak in 1961.

In addition to the first three places, the 'Cats' Marty Ferko and Dave Hyland came in fifth and sixth respectively to make the final tally 17 points for Villanova to Quantico's 42. A Villanova clean sweep of the first five places was spoiled by former Villanova Olympian, Alex Breckenridge, who finished fourth and was the first Marine to cross the finish line.

Connor Captures Foul Shoot; Intramural Basketball Starts

The Intramural Foul Shooting contest, held October 22 in Alumni Gym, was won by senior Tom Connor who hit forty out of fifty shots. Close behind him was Bob Parker, a sophomore, with a score of thirty-eight out of fifty and in third place was Wm. Ray Heitzmann with a score of thirty-seven. The scores this year were low because the ball used was poor. The above people will be awarded medals in the spring of next year by the Intramural Department.

Undefeated Teams Dwindle

The number of undefeated teams in the Intramural Touch Football League are slowly dwindling. In the 4:30 Austin League, P.K.P. was upset by the awesome A's 13-0. This leaves the 612 Club and the Rejects still undefeated in that league. P.K.P. posed a threat to the Rejects when they played them last Friday. The Konders dropped Alumni from the ranks of the unbeaten by a score of 8-6. This leaves only the Konders and the Socialites still unbeaten in the 4:30 Mendel League. On the 3:30 Austin League, the Bulldogs, L.K.D. and Whiskey A, are still among the undefeated.

Basketball

Applications may be picked up from either the new Intramural office in Alumni Gym or at the Pool for Intramural Basketball. Entries close on November 20. Leagues will begin play on November 27 and will use both the Gym and the Field House. The League times will be 10:30, 2:30, 4:30, 6:45 and 7:30. The number of men each team can carry will be limited to ten men. Also each team will be able to have one varsity or freshman athlete provided he does not participate on the school team in that sport.

Intramural Council Expands

New additions to the Intramural Council and officiating staff are: Bob (Bulldog) Shayer, a junior, Tom Fitzgerald and Phil Gormley, sophomores and John Fenlon, a freshman. These new additions will help alleviate the problem of officiating at the touch football games, which was a problem at times in previous years. These men will also be officials during the basketball and umpires during the softball season. The pool will open from 10:00 until 5:00 everyday Monday thru Friday. The Student Council is still negotiating with the administration to have the pool opened on weekends in the future.

Mildcats Sneak By Xavier As Clifford, Sherlock Score

by Tom Bruderle

Thunder and Lightning struck the Villanova campus this past weekend, but if you didn't notice anything extraordinary don't worry because very few people did. Thunder is the power unit of the Xavier offense while Lightning is the speed unit. Neither unit was noticable as the Wildcats defeated the Musketeers 16-8.

On the ground, Alex Bell's charges held Xavier to a minus 16 yards rushing.

Villanova, however, didn't appear too spectacular either.

On the ground Villanova could manage only 94 yards and a total of 8 first downs. Of those 8, two came in the second half and one was a penalty. In the air the 'Cats could muster only 34 yards.

Quarterback Walt Bryniarski riddled the Wildcats pass defense for 172 yards, coming on 13 complete passes out of 26 thrown.

50% Average

Although Bryniarski had a very commendable 50% average, he was constantly under pressure from Villanova's forward defensive wall and finished the game with minus 62 yards rushing.

Right-end Jack Clifford scored the first touchdown of the afternoon on an 18 yard pass from Richie Richman. Larry Glueck scored the extra two points. The 'Cats' second TD came on a pass interception by Bill Sherlock who raced 38 yards for the score. Richman's pass to Jim Thomas added two more.

The only Xavier score came on a pass from Bryniarski to end Tom Callahan. The twosome clicked for the two extra points.

Musketeers Drive

Xavier began their first drive from the 20 yard line when halfback Don Stupica hit left tackle for 24 yards before Lou Rettino caught him. Two plays later Bryniarski was hit by Clifford and the ball shot up in the air where it was grabbed by John McDonnell who raced to the Villanova 42, but the offense couldn't get rolling.

Toward the end of the first quarter Villanova drove to the Musketeer 5 yard line only to lose the ball when Thomas fumbled. Unable to move, Xavier punted. Glueck returned it 10 yards. Four plays later found VU on the Xavier 18. Two plays later the Cats were still there, and with fourth and 8 on the 18 Richman tossed the touchdown pass to Clifford. One minute and twenty-three seconds later Sherlock intercepted Bryniarski's pass and raced 38 yards for the score. The ball changed hands twice before Xavier had the ball on their own 39 with first and 10. Bryniarski went back to pass and the receiver had everyone beat, only the receiver turned out to be Billy Joe. Running over one man and faking out another Joe went from the 'Cat 15 to the 'Cat 43. A personal foul, however, brought the ball back to the 28. Two plays later the half ended.

Tight Defense

Xavier began to roll when they got the ball in the second half. With the help of a 25 yard Bryniarski run, Xavier drove to the Villanova 14. The Wildcat defense stiffened and the Musketeers lost the ball on downs.

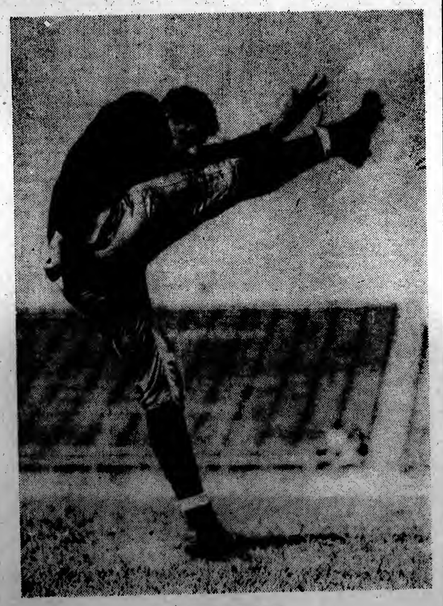
1937 Wildcats Give Up But Lone TD As One Of Villanova's Best Teams

by Larry Everling

"Wildcats Trounce Cadets Easily." This was the first of many banner headlines for the 1937 edition of the Wildcats. The present season marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of that great team which went undefeated and was scored upon only once.



Clipper Smith, Coach, and Vince McNally, assistant, knew they had a good power-house returning but that initial victory overP.M.C., 42-0, was more than convincing. A senior end named Alex Bell was the captain that game. Seems he had the leadership qualities even then.

Auburn came next, but the quick, fast-charging line of the Plainsmen stifled the Cats' offense and held the powerful eleven to a 0-0 tie. A strong Manhattan team then succumbed to the rampaging Cats by a score of 20-0 at Ebbetts' Field in Brookly as junior end John Wysocki scored all the points.

Ray Stoviak, a left hander, starred in the following win over Bucknell, 21-0, and then Detroit fell on a pass from halfback Andy Stopper to Art Raimo. As usual John Mellus, starting left tackle, played a strong game. Marquette, 25-7 (the only score), and Boston University, 12-0, were successive victims.

Temple was the big game of the season in those days. The Cherry and White had tied Mississippi and had given up but twenty-five points coming into the match. Thirty-six thousand fans watched the 'mismatch' in amazement as the Cats trounced

Columbia Forfeits Rugby Game; Wildcats Feature Scrimmage

A last minute forfeit of Saturday morning's game by Columbia caused the Villanova rugby team to divide its forces for an inter-squad scrimmage. Playing before a large Parents Weekend crowd, the Big Blue unit edged the Zebra unit by 14-11 on a late score by Tony Trasostozzi. This was a very spirited contest causing roars of approval from the onlooking parents. The Big Blue unit was composed of the "A" team backfield and the "B' team line, while the Zebra unit was composed of the "B" team backfield and the "A" team line.

The Zebras scored first on a try by Jim Seaborg and followed it up with a second try, this one by Jack Krug. Both conversions failed, leaving the Zebras with a 6-0 advantage. However the Blue came back on a try by Tom James and Ed Kurek's conversion. This made the score 6-5 at halftime.

Blue Rallies

A second half try by the Zebras' Don Crouthamel and a conversion by Jack Krug made the score 11-5. That was far from being the end for the Blue, however, as they came back on a try by Bert Lombino and a penalty kick by Kurek to tie the score at 11-11. This set the stage for Tranontozzi's tie-breaking score with only three minutes remaining to play.

This Saturday the Wildcats engage Notre Dame at home in a contest scheduled for 10 a.m. Villanova is out for revenge of last year's 6-0 defeat. A large Homcoming crowd is expected for this grudge match.

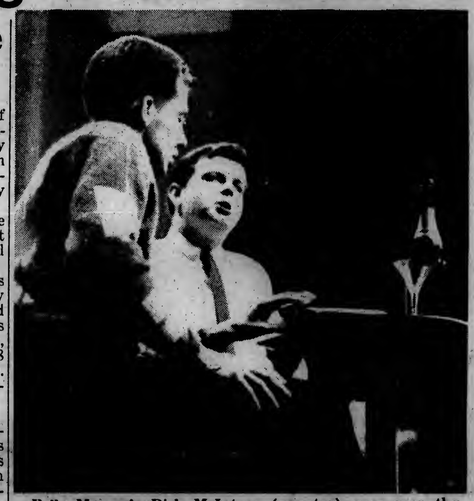
Comedy King As New Theatre Season Opens

Cast Causes Change Update Bard Out

There has been a general reshuffling of the 1962-63 production program of Villanova's Theatre Department. The previously announced opening production of William Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" has been postponed because of cast difficulties, giving way to Jean Giraudoux's "The Enchanted."

Rights are also being sought to make Dore Shary's adaptation of the Morris West novel, "The Devil's Advocate," the second offering of the season.

"The Enchanted," one of Giraudoux's most successful plays, will open in Vasey Hall on Saturday, Dec. 1 with a matinee and an evening performance. Performances thereafter are on Sunday, Dec. 2; Thursday, Dec. 6; Friday, Dec. 7; Saturday, Dec. 8 (two performances) and Sunday, Dec 9. General admission is $1.75; student admission $1.00.



Director George Herman

Directed by Mr. George Herman, assistant professor of Theatre, The Enchanted is essentially comic and explores the boundaries of reality and fancy. It is concerned with the transition of a young girl into womanhood. This is told through a fable about a small French town in which unusual incidents occur.

An Inspector is summoned to investigate these occurrences and when he finds that they are apparently caused by a girl's romances with a ghost, the town sets out to destroy the ghost.

They then discover that the "ghost" was really a wanted

Belle Masque's Dick McIntyre (sweater) goes over the script of a scene from "The Time of Your Life" with Ken Resinski. McIntyre portrays Joe while Resinski plays Kit Carson.

"Time Of Your Life" Begins Run Tonight

Tonight marks the opening of "The Time of Your Life," the year's first production by the Belle Masque Dramatic Society.

The Pulitzer Prize winning play by William Saroyan brings an innovation to the Villanova theatre in that emphasis is on characterization, rather than the heavy story line. The play will run until Saturday, November 17, in the Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Veterans in Cast

Portraying leading characters will be both veterans and newcomers to the Belle Masque Society. In the pivotal role of "Joe," Dick McIntyre will bring the benefit of his dramatic experience from productions of, "The Country Girl" and "The Detective Story."

Another veteran of Villanova stage productions is Pete Smith, who was noted for his Rabelaisian frolics in "The Matchmaker" and "Mr. Roberts." Pete will portray "Nick," the friendly and sarcastic bartender.

The female lead will be co-cast between Diane Huelski, a Senior Villanova Nurse and Belle Masque veteran, and Sheila Sheehan of Holy Family College, who is making her debut at Villanova.

The minor characters will feature many stage veterans. Leading this group is Kenneth Resinski, President of the Belle Masque Society, who will portray "Kit Carson." Bill Byrne, another capable veteran, will be seen as the pin ball fanatic, "Willie Far-oughli."

The villain of the play will be rendered by Bob Heenan, another long standing member of Belle Masque.

Newcomers include, John Meehan in the difficult role of "Tom." "Krupp and McCarthy" are portrayed by Larry Mihally and Tom Rzepski. James Mason, Frank Escobar, Larry Rosintowski, and Paul Wachtler are seen as inhabitants of "Nick's Restaurant, Saloon and Entertainment Palace."

Director From Grad Theater

The work of Saroyan's, which has been described as a "binge of characters," is directed by Mr. Thomas Nevins of the Graduate Theater Department with the assistance of Tom Zielazny as stage manager.

The appointment of Mr. Nevins marked the first time in the nearly one-hundred-year history of the Dramatic Society that a member of the Graduate Theatre Department has served as director of one of its productions.

Belle Masque Since 1870's

The Belle Masque is the second oldest organization on campus and dates back at least to the 1870's. It made great advancement during the late 1800's under the direction of Father Delurey, who, as President, took an active interest in theatre.

Since then it has continued to produce two quality productions per year.

Thirty-Six Seniors Honored By Selection To National Who's Who

Thirty-six active members of the Class of 1963 have been named to represent Villanova on the national Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges. The finalists, selected from among senior nominees, represent every division of the University.

Among the honored are William Allard, Ross Anzaldi, Charles Butler, Christopher Clark, Peter Connors, Robert Coogan, Joseph Cutroneo, Robert Delaney, John Delany, Mark DeSantis, Nicholas DiMarino, and Joann Dynakowski.

Also named are Frank Gilbride, Rocco Guidice, James Howley, James Lombardi, John Lucey, Robert Mairone, Margaret McGeehan, Frank Murphy, James O'Brien, Mary O'Leary, Louis Olivere, Raymond Polaski, Leo Rattigan, Richard Richman, and Joseph Ruggiero.

Rounding out the list are Ralph Saviano, Robert Sullivan, James Tate, Joseph Tate, Patrick Traynor, Marian Wagner, Martin Whalen, William Williams, and Arthur Wolf.

Ex-Muscovite Journalist Is Featured At Inaugural Student Council Lecture

By Jan Dyroff

On Tuesday evening November 6 Whitman Bassow spoke to the student body about his experiences as a correspondent in Moscow for Newsweek. Mr. Bassow's speech, the first in the Student Council's lecture series, was well received by the campus. The auditorium in Vasy Hall was filled with a standing-room-only crowd of about 450.

Considering his background Mr. Bassow was qualified to speak on his topic. Prior to his recent expulsion he had been a correspondent in the Soviet Union since 1955. During his stay there had travelled widely throughout the country sampling public opinion.

The reason for his expulsion, he explained, was due to the Russian's sense of humor, or lack of it. In the course of his reporting Mr. Bassow sent a group of current Soviet jokes to the telegraph office to be transmitted to the United States. The Soviets claimed that this aroused their indignation and dismissed him.

Friendly Fondness

At the outset of his remarks Mr. Bassow expressed a fondness for the Soviet people, many of whom were his friends. He reported their concern at his dismissal and that many of them called on him to say good-bye.

Mr. Bassow maintained that the stereotyped American view of the Soviet Union, concentration camps and Siberia, was true ten years ago, but not today. He had seen significant changes himself.

Since the Bolshevik Revolution there have been two great

Juniors Plan Special Program For Orphans Charity Weekend

Traditionally, the Juniors of Villanova University have provided the children of Saint John's Orphanage with a truly merry Christmas. The "johnnies" are taken on an outing by the Juniors where they treat the children to lunch, a movie, and a trip through the toylands of 69th Street.

The Villanova Glee Club and Band add to the merriment by presenting a concert especially for the children. In addition, the Juniors, through their donations, provide scholarships for the orphanage as well as a small donation to the sisters who administer it.

Ugly Contest

To aid in raising funds for the affair an Ugly Man contest is held the week preceding the outing and a Charity Ball is presented by the Junior Class the night before the outing.

The general chairman of the entire weekend is Paul Norton. Chairman of the Charity Ball is Edward Coffey, and co-chairmen of the outing itself are Jack Degnan and John Hohenadel. Charles M. Stockinger is the chairman of the Ugly Man contest.

Votes for your candidates as the ugliest man on the campus may be cast from November 26 to 30. Voting will be held in the Pie Shoppe and a trophy for the winner will be awarded at the Charity Ball.

Ball Planned

The Charity Ball will be held on Friday, November 30, in the Field House, music will be provided by the "Villanovans", the new Villanova dance band. A

Norton Charity Head

Passivity finds no place in the college life of Paul Norton. This junior's relentless and efficient participation in extra-academic activities can best be exemplified by his diligent work as General Chairman of Charity Weekend.

The Weekend promotes the treating of orphans from St. John's Orphanage by Villanova students. Paul will intensify his efforts towards the success of the two main events of the Weekend, which will be the Charity Ball on November 30 and the Charity Outing on December 1.

He says, "I'm particularly interested in extending the activities of the Weekend to the whole student body, especially the Charity Ball and Charity Outing. This is a tremendous opportunity for all Villanovans to back a worthwhile project which is extremely self-satisfying."

For the past two years, Paul has been a member of WWVU. This year on Monday nights from 8-9:30, Paul has a mood music show called "Ride Thru the Night."

Reading Improvement Course To Commence On November 14

Dr. W. Porter Swift, Director of Testing for the Office of Psychological Services, has announced the beginning of a Reading Improvement Course. This six-week course starts November 14 and will be given at 11:30 and 2:30 on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, it will include hints and pointers on techniques of speed and reading comprehension.

Dr. Swift also announced the introduction of a special "How to Study" course which begins on November 13. This four week course will be given on Tuesday and Thursday at 11:30 and 2:30. The study habit course will include pointers on better methods of study, preparation for tests, digestion of classroom material, and the relationship of reading to study.

Creditless Courses

These special courses are entirely voluntary; all undergraduate students are eligible, and no academic credit will be given.

IRS Representatives Attend Convention In Philadelphia

Ten members of the Villanova Chapter of the International Relations Society recently attended the annual convention of American International Relations Clubs in Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. The convention was attended by about 710 delegates representing 37 colleges and universities from the Eastern United States and Canada.

The Villanova delegation, under the leadership of President Thomas F. Burke and Senior Delegate Paul Galvin, again played a predominant role in the workings of the convention. Burke termed the activities of Villanova as "the most feared, most powerful, and most respected of the entire convention."

In the annual election of a Convention President and Vice-President, Villanova placed William Dlauvelt, in nomination for the Vice Presidency. The "Burke Machine," however, failed in its bid to gain this post after three run-off ballots losing in the last by one vote 17-16.

During the Saturday evening session, Burke was also selected as Chairman of the State Nominating Committee. He further acted as Chairman for the State of Pennsylvania for the entire convention.

The topic for the convention was World Trade and the Common Market. Donald Franz of Villanova secured passage an original resolution in the general assembly. A Constitutional amendment was also written and passed through the efforts of Burke and the other Villanova delgates. A resolution not to submit all proposals to the State Department as had been the procedure during the past several years,however, was defeated.

Literary Club Lecture Will Feature As Guest Leonard McAdams

Sponsoring its second lecture of the year, the Villanova Literary Society will present Mr. Leonard J. McAdams, noted reporter for The Philadelphia Inquirer tomorrow, November 15, at 8:00 p.m. in room 209 C&F.

Mr. McAdams has gained recognition recently for his reporting on the Philadelphia Grand Jury Investigation. In the past, he has reecived awards from the Philadelphia Press Association for outstanding news writing and has won The Annenberg Award (presented by the Inquirer) for his coverage of the Gold Spy Case. In 1960, Mr. McAdams was commended here at Villanova for his outstanding role in the communications arts and consequently was presented with The Augustinian Award. Mr. McAdams, a native of Philadelphia, was graduated from St. Joseph's Prep and St. Joseph's College.

The topic of Mr. McAdams lecture will be "New Trends in Writing". Emphasis will be placed on journalistic style. The lecture will be open to all.

Juniors Begin Social Year By Attendance At Ring Mass

Last Sunday, the Junior Class held its annual Ring Mass and Communion Breakfast. The Rev. Edward Stanford, OSA, delivered the address while the Rev. Michael Gallagher, class moderator, OSA, said Mass and performed the ring blessing ceremony.

Juniors, numbering about 160, including a large turnout of nurses, attended the Communion Breakfast at the Radnor room of the Treadway Inn after the Mass in the University Chapel.

Father Stanford's announced topic, "What to Expect in Marriage", was changed somewhat by him since as he stated, "No one but a major prophet could tell you what to expect in marriage."

Discusses Requirements

Instead Father discussed what makes a successful mariage. He cited the fact that one out of every four marriages in the United States ends in divorce. Blaming this on inadequate preparation before marriage and a lack of marital love, he gave some requirements for a successful marriage.

"There can be no selfishness in marriage," said Father. "The partners must possess emotional maturity, and a willingness to sacrifice and to surrender their individual lives for their life in common."

Annual Library Conference To Feature Peter H. Binzen

Peter H. Binzen Education Editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin will be the keynote speaker for the Third Annual Fall Library Conference at Villanova University on Saturday, November 17th.

More than 1000 students, school and college librarians and administrators are expected to attend the day-long conference on the University campus. Dr. Howard McGinn, Chairman of the Library Science Department at Villanova, is conference chairman.

Both public and parochial schools from a five state area will be represented. Registration begins at 8:30 AM in the University field house.

Among the speakers are Judith Marcus of Masterman Library and Demonstration School, Philadelphia Board of Education; Beatrice Downin, Library Coordinator Abington School District; Rev. Robert Welsh, Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at Villanova; Dr. Edward T. Schofield, Director, Department of Libraries, Newark Public Schools and the Rev. Francis J. Greene, Librarian at Northeast Catholic High School, Philadelphia.

Binzen, a veteran newsman, is regarded as one of the foremost education journalists in the East.

Following his graduation from Yale in 1947, he worked on papers in North Jersey and spent 1950 and part of 1951 freelancing in Europe. He joined the Bulletin staff in 1951. Binzen served as a rewriteman and general assignment reporter prior to his appointment to the paper's education desk in 1958.

During the 1961-62 school year, Binzen attended Harvard University on a Nieman Fellowship. The grants are awarded yearly to 10 of the nation's top journalists to help raise the standards of journalism.

Prominent Local Men Chosen As Speakers By Chairman McGuinn

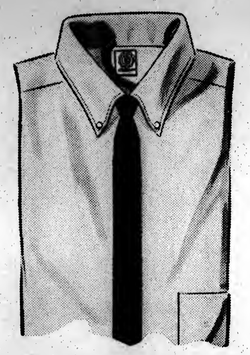
The Honorable James H. J. Tate, Mayor of the city of Philadelphia and Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova will be the keynote speakers at the Student Government Conference to be held here Thursday, November 29.

Marty, McGuinn, Student Council Vice-Chairman, reported that some eighteen area schools will participate in the meeting which will be the highlight of the annual Student Council Week.

The week this year will begin next Monday.

Two Main Topics

Scheduled to be discussed at the meeting are two main topics: "How Much Responsibility Should be Given to the Student Council" and "The Student Council's Role in Education."



These topics will be broken down into several discussion groups with one representative of each school on each panel. Villanova students may sit in on any of the panels, most of which are scheduled for Mendel Hall.

Main Addresses

The main student addresses of the day will be given by Tim Rose of Haverford College and Andrew von Eschenbach of St. Joseph's College.

Princeton English Professor Lectures About Shakespeare

Dr. Albert H. Buford, Chairman of The Villanova English Department's Lecture Series, has announced the engagement of the first of two guest lecturers for this scholastic year. Dr. Edward Hubler, Professor of English at Princeton University, will present this lecture on Wednesday, December 5, at 4.00 p.m. in room 110 C&F.

Professor Hubler is an active published scholar noted for his works on Shakespeare. He has presented several papers to the Modern Language Association and is presently preparing a paper for The Shakespearean Fourth Centenial Volume which is to be published in 1964. by The Folger Shakespearean Library.

His lecture will be entitled "Shakespearean Comedy" and will be a part of the forementioned volume. Dr. Buford feels that this will be one of the most distinguished and invigorating lectures ever to be presented on campus.

ASCE Holds Dance

The Villanova Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers will hold its annual dance Friday evening, November 16, 1962, at the Mt. Carmel Sport Club, 1210 East Main St., Norristown. Dancing will be from 8:30 to 12:30 and the music will be supplied by the "Revelers". Tickets are $3.50 and my be purchased from any of the officers.

Papparella To Speak

Dr. Benedict Papparella will speak before a meeting being sponsored jointly by the Philosophy Club and the NFCCS. The lecture will be delivered in Room 110 C&F at 3:30 tommorrow, Thursday, November 15. Dr. Papparella's topic will be "The Philosophical Foundations of 'Mater et Magistra."

George Hamilton, DC To Address Campus On Peace Corps Day

The National Director of the Peace Corps, R. Sargent Shriver, has directed Mr. George Hamilton, D.C. to visit Villanova on Tuesday, November 27th.

His purpose will be to inform as many students and faculty members as possible about the Peace Corps services and the progress it has made.

Mr. Hamilton will address all interested students and faculty members in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall on Tuesday morning, November the 27th at 10:30 a.m. Following the lecture there will be a question and answer period.

In the afternoon Mr. Hamilton will meet with interested groups from one until four o'clock. From four o'clock on he will be available for private interviews in the President's quarters in Dougherty Hall.

In addition to the lectures, the Peace Corps representative will have a new 28 minute film on the work of the Peace Corps Volunteers overseas. This highly interesting film will be shown at 7:30 in Room 209 at the Commerce and Finance Building.

Rev. George F. Riley, OSA is Peace Corps Moderator.

Top Political People To Speak At Programs Sponsored By Council

The speaker program sponsored by the Student Council has been accelerated to include some of the top names in national politics and literature. Although no definite names have been definitely mentioned it has been noted that the good student support for the first speaker of the year, famed Newsweek correspondent, Whitman Bassow has prompted the Student Council Vice President for Educational Affairs, Jim McErlane, to announce that the next council sponsored lectures will be held in the Field House.

The goal of the council for the Bassow lecture was an attendance of four hundred which was easily surpassed according to McErlane, Tuesday evening.

Also announced after the highly successful initial program last week was an attempt to get the various organizations on campus that are planning lectures to schedule the talks in the late afternoon and open them to the entire student body.

Impressed by the showing last Tuesday the administration has pledged to support the Student Council plans for top flight speakers by providing additional funds to supplement those already available to the Council.

The Villanova Singers

Singers' Sweet Sound Series To Swing In Six Session Set

By John Ferrazzano
of the Villanova Singers

This May, the Villanova University Singers, under the able direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss and the moderatorship of Rev. Edward Doherty, OSA, will present for the first time in its brief history a series of concerts throughout the Mid-West. The series will consist of six concerts.

The tour will extend from May first through May sixth and will include, among others, principal concerts at Chatham College in Pittsburgh, Notre Dame College in Cleveland, St. Xavier's College, and St. Rita's High School in Chicago.

This trip resulted from many months of careful planning and work. This will be but another means of spreading the name of the Villanova Singers.

Other major concerts this season will include Manhattanville College, Purchase, N.Y., and the College of New Rochelle, New Rochelle, N.Y.

Locally, the Singers will present concerts at Chestnut Hill, Immaculata, and Holy Family. This year three Christmas concerts will be given, one at Villanova, one at Rosemont, and a benefit for the Augustinians Seminarians, which will be held at St. Denis parish auditorium on December eighth.

At present, the Singers can boast a membership of 89 men. This, incidentally, is the largest in the club's history. Each individual spends between three to six hours weekly in concert and rehearsal. The many hours of hard work and devoted labor is well worth the effort in view of the phenomenal benefit which the organization renders the University.

Since the Singers were organized seven years ago, the group has consistently improved and become more polished and are now doing major works by Bach and Brahms. To be sure, the Villanova Singers have fast received their place among leading glee clubs in the East. This year, the Singers have the potential of being among the very finest glee clubs in the country.

Second Villanova Law Forum Hosts Professor Louis Sohn

The second session of the Villanova Law Forum, held on Thursday evening, November 8, was addressed by the noted Professor Louis B. Sohn, Bemis Professor of International Law at Harvard Law School.

Essence of Talk

The essence of his talk entitled, "Disarmament Is Not Enough: The Legal Framework for Peace," stated that a reduction in arms alone will not bring about peace and harmony in the world.

He began by saying that we have to abolish arms before they abolish us, but that this in itself is not enough to keep peace. Professor Sohn explained this by maintaining that a plethora of arms is not necessary to start a full scale war, and gave an example of this in Fidel Castro being able to toy with the threat of war.

Professor Sohn went on to assert that you have to connect disarmament with peace-keeping machinery, such as a United Nations Police Force. He avowed that you can only deprive a country of the use of force if you have something to settle disputes and that if you don't have an international machinery for peace the powerful nations will use coercion to settle settle differences.

Not to overshadow the importance of disarmament, Professor Sohn declared that an international police force would be powerless against a major nation that did not reduce its arms. He said that it is not enough to have decisions made unless they can be enforced and that they cannot be enforced unless there is a certain amount of disarmament.

This international police force, Professor Sohn felt, should number about 200,000 and be composed of volunteers rather than national contingents but that the number of nationals in the force be kept to a minimum. He stated that this international organization should be located in a small country and be supervised by the United Nations who would check it for misuse.

Football Contest Has Dozen Winners

John Harrington, Sheehan Hall is the winner of the $100 cash prize in last week's Viceroy College Football Contest, which was based on 11 games in this area.

In addition to the top award, there were 11 other cash prize winners.

Four separate contests are being sponsored by the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, manufacturers of Viceroy cigarettes. Entry blanks for a new contest are now on easel cards displayed throughout the campus.

Other winners in last week's contest were:

Villanova President Plans Foreign Trip To Study Schools

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, leaves on Friday, November 9th for a three week trip to Europe to study educational systems in six European cities including cities in Russia.

Group of Fifty-Five

Father Klekotka will travel with a group of fifty five American educators under the sponsorship of the Comparative Education Society. The group will observe educational systems in Edinburgh, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Vienna and Kiev (Russia).

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

After reading the article, "Fraternal Groups Speak Out", by one Miss Liz Kovach, in your October 24th issue, I feel compelled to reply in behalf of the Pi Theta Chi Sorority.

To begin with, Miss Kovach said she interviewed me. It seems to me that one could not consider our two minute conversation on the telephone much of an interview. She stated she did not have time for another meeting. Nor did she have the courtesy, as any apprentice newspaper woman would, to interview me in person.

Secondly, how she, a freshman, could have gained the knowledge requisite for a denunciation of organizations which have been on this campus many years is beyond me. Miss Kovach didn't know what they were like two or three years ago, so how can she judge their status now?

Referring directly to this article, I would like to clear up a few erroneous statements. The Pi Theta Chi Sorority is NOT a nursing sorority, but open to all female undergraduate students. This fact was emphasized in our conversation.

Yes, the main motive for girls joining the sorority is social. Can you tell me of any fraternity that has a more predominant motive?

The Pi Theta Chi Sorority does not "concentrate on play". It may seem so to her since she does not know anything of our history. It is a well-known fact that Pi Theta Chi is trying to increase their social functions. In the previous years we only had a splash party and a dinner dance. I don't believe a few mixers each year can cause any harm, do you?

Our religious functions consist of a Communion Breakfast and charitable works throughout the year.

Culturally, we have attended, in a group, such performances as the Royal Ballet, the American Ballet, and the Philadelphia Orchestra. Our guest speakers have lectured on subjects ranging from Communism to crime studies in Philadelphia.

Sports are not neglected either. Since our admission to the Intramural Council, we have been able to organize a bowling team, tennis tournament, volleyball and basketball teams, and participation in various other sports.

Through these activities, girls from each class are brought together as "sisters" in one unified body. This has taken years to accomplish and we, as members of Pi Theta Chi, are very proud to be a part of this body.

Our aims are reached and I do not believe she is in a position to tell me they are not. Furthermore, may I state that I know of no other fraternal organization on this campus that has the variety of activities we do and that has been held in such regard.

True, the fraternities in the past have not merited a favorable standing but, what does she think the Interfraternity-Sorority Council is attempting to do? If we all were to have attitudes such as hers there could never be any improvement.

Hoping she will learn as the years go by to look before she leaps.

To the Editor.

The Villanovan has always been highly regarded by the members of the Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity. This high regard, I know, has been due to the journalistic excellence of the staff, and to the frequent reporting in the paper about members of our fraternity whose academic, social or athletic status have merited this recognition.

In the article, Fraternal Groups Speak Out, issue of October 24, 1962, many important activities engaged in by, and distinctions awarded to, both the individual members, and the fraternity as a whole, have been omitted by its reporter.

As a matter of fact, on page 1 of this same issue, it was reported that ten senior undergraduates, five of whom are members honored by induction into the of Lambda Kappa Delta, were Beta Chi Chapter of Delta Epsilon Sigma.

On page 8, also of this same issue it was reported that the LKD intramural football team was undefeated in the 3:30 Austin league.

I could list innumerable other activities and distinctions both of individual members and of the fraternity as a whole; some of these I mentioned in my interview with the reporter of the above mentioned article.

Since these were not considered worthy of note, it is indeed unfortunate that this reporter was not able to sooner read the two other news items mentioned above, which were pertinent to the topic, and were printed in the same issue of your publication.

To the Editor:

On Thursday, November 6, at 7:30 p.m. I attended the Student Council sponsored lecture of Mr. Whitman Bassow. Mr. Bassow's speech impressed me as little more than an expanded cover leaf brief of Inside Russia Today, by John Gunther.

However, if we assume that not more than twenty individuals at the lecture, which managed to draw approximately 400 persons, had read Mr. Gunther's book, I seriously wonder whether the same information could not have been learned by reading the New York Times.

That Mr. Bassow hemmed and hawed throughout his boring oration, was quite evident to anyone present. Why did this occur when on outlay of about $450 was made available for this speaker?

The problem suggested is easily resolved when the inner workings of an inefficient Student Council comes (sic) to light. Inefficiency is the word of the day shouted from the Council room atop the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

People are found madly rushing around gasping, "We need a speaker! We need a speaker!, the semester is half finished and we haven't sponsored one yet."

Must we invite every fly-by-night, flash-in-the-pan individual to our campus, when good discretion would have suggested someone else? Does the Student Council not realize that is is a privilege to be invited to visit a university campus and address its students?

In closing let us all hope that in the future the Student Council will use better judgment in its selection of guest speakers.

William S. Gross '63

To the Editor:

It is logically incorrect to accuse an inanimate object of causing scandal, for such an evil can only be allowed by a human being. For every effect there is both a cause and a condition. Let us consider here the cause to be a student, the effect to be scandal, and the condition to be a school jacket.

The damage to a school's reputation by the thoughtless actions of us students is inauspiciously increased when we are displaying the school's name on the back of our jacket. Although we are undoubtedly at fault, the observer of the action is also to blame. This is true since it is illogically part of human nature to generalize from a particular incident. Invariably, the observer concludes that "all Villanovans are like that".

In terms of effect that incident labels 4500 students as poorly trained. If you add the number of these actions to the number of observers—not mentioning the people to whom the observer communicates his conclusion—the extent of the defamation ominously increases.

Since the correcting of the false generalizations of human nature is an enormous task and the removal of the condition, the jacket, would meet with widespread resentment, the only remedy seems to be to reacquaint ourselves with the responsibilities to our school and the other students that we assume when we wear our school jacket.

Of course, it would be ideal to have all thoughtless actions discontinued, and toward this objective we should all strive. But if scandalous behavior should occur, an earnest suggestion is that the school jacket remain at home restricting the unfavorable publicity to the individual rather than the institution.

To the Editor

I agree most assuredly with last week's letter concerning the outstanding achievements of the Sophomore Class. There are, however, certain shortcomings which I feel would be changed if brought to the attention of my classmates. They may be natural but should be corrected.

When the class of '65 matriculated it passed vibrant unity and spirit. What has now happened to our outstanding characteristics? For example—where was the much needed help on Thursday, October 18, when preparations for the dance was underway?

Where was the enthusiasm that should have been exemplified in the Sophomore Block during our victory over Delaware? These were our activities and the glory was accepted by all, but why wasn't the work also universal?

Because of our lack of unity our class has allowed a clique to rule us. We can take this for so long—but how long?

It is not their fault but ours—for allowing it. How many of us know our class officers?

It is not their fault but ours because we have not approached them to give our opinions. They are our representatives, not their own—let's prove it!

Let us overcome our complaining by showing interest and our representatives what WE want done.

Remember we need each and every Sophomore working together to constitute a unified and outstanding class—not each and every representative working for an outstanding class.

Candid Opinions

Today's editorial page takes on an entirely different perspective than in many of the past issues of the Villanovan, whether in just this year or in the past several years.

For the first time, we see here a group of letters submitted by undergraduates expressing opinions. Previously, the majority of the undergraduate student body had exhibited a complete lack of interest in what appeared in the campus newspaper. And this was only one phase of the student apathy that has run rampant on the campus in recent years.

These letters, each of them voicing a definite view, might well be the beginning of more student interest. Though they do not of necessity represent the views of the editorial staff of the Villanovan, all letters of content and indicative of some concrete view are encouraged and will be published as long as they fulfill the conventional journalistic requirements for letters.

Perhaps, the continued response of the studentry of this university can awaken some, if not a good majority, of the present student body to their obligations and duties as students. And then such organizations as the Student Council, the Radio Station, the School Publications and the other organizations on campus will come to represent not merely a few energetic students but also the entire student body.

Rugby Is NOT An English Vegetable

By Ed Wilkinson

Contrary to a widespread popular notion, Rugby is not an English vegetable. Actually, it all began like this. Once upon a time, many years ago (it almost sounds like a fairy tale doesn't it?) there lived a sadistic old Englishman in a very dark, dingy castle. He was an evil old man whose only joy in life was to watch people hurting each other. (Bloodshed, violence, pain!) Surely only the utterly depraved mind of this vile old wretch could have been capable of devising the sinister plot which he one day unfolded to inflict pain on the unsuspecting village sluggards who loafed around outside his castle window every day.

Wicked Union

Wickedly he contrived a union of the three most popular games of the day, (football, basketball and soccer, for those of you weak in English history.), fiendishly omitting all points of restraint existing in each, and basely adding just as many of his own foul-purpose rules as was necessary to assure complete license to violence (ah, hear his vile, toothless old cackle as he does so). The result of his creation was an unholy, inhuman beastly form of mass torture, involving 30 human beings, thinly veiled under the guise of "sport".

Shocking enough, when the dirty old Englishman foisted this madness upon the villagers, the poor devils took to it with gleeful abandon. (Some say it surpassed even bear-baiting in popularity.) As a matter of fact, from that day on, everybody in the village lived happily ever after — which seems fitting enough in a tale of this sort.

Creeping Ruby-Rabidness

But the story does not end there. No, incredible as it may seem, all this has bearing on you and I, for history has shown us that participation in what commonly came to be known as "rugby" has not been limited to only mad dogs and Englishmen, as was once widely believed.

It was soon realized that there were certain lost souls in America who also fell prey to creeping rugby-rabidness. A jolting awakening occurred right here at old V.U. four years ago when it was discovered that traces of the disease existed on this very campus.

As you may imagine, this caused no small panic, and not a little investigation into student's psychological backgrounds. It has since been a matter of great concern, for each year there is increased evidence of the affliction gripping considerable numbers of illfated Villanovans.

Outstanding Cases

Take for example a few of the present Villanova Ruggers. When you look at fellows like Jack Krug and Pete Triolo, poor devils, you see the spark of which we speak. These two baby tanks never fail to draw heated protestations from the more faint-hearted spectators watching the game who cry that "Rugby is Animal!" And then poor Luke St. Onge, the captain.

He is so gung-ho rugger that at night to lull himself to sleep he counts rugby balls going over the fence instead of sheep. And Tom James, why everybody knows that he's nothing more than a big bully who likes to throw his weight around.

And Don Cannava, who not only plays rugby, but is a marine as well (what more need be said about that ghastly combination.)

More Evidence

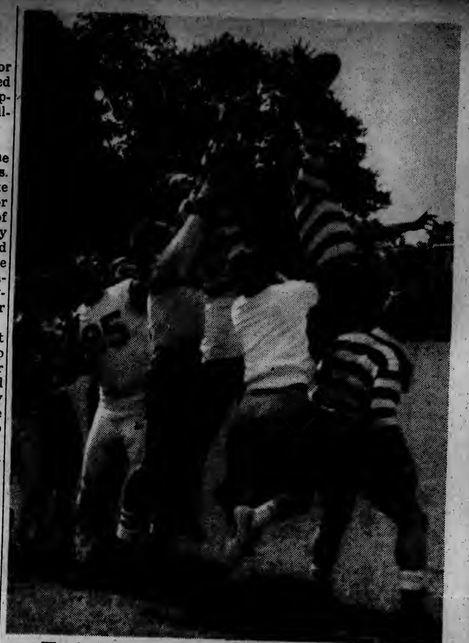
And then Don Crouthamel, who has decided to remain an undergraduate until he's fifty, and past his prime, just so he can play rugby. And Walt Schearer and Jim Buckley and Duke Ford, who admittedly only play because they like to hurt people. And Ed Wilkinson, who hasn't been coherent to any great degree ever since he began playing the game.

And there are the young Sophomore wolves with that lean and hungry look and the animal instinct, Dick Gove, Jim Seaborg and Big George Tongring. And the fleet-footed, steely-eyed, angry young men Ed Kurek, Tony Tramontozzi, and Bert Lombino. Gad, what a curious assortment of messed-up guys they are.

Jolly Good Fun

Anyone who likes to live dangerously has probably witnessed several Villanova rugby games, and has undoubtably noted that the game itself defies description. Very probably you have wondered what really goes on in a "scrum."

This is the name given to that bit of insanity where both teams lock into one mass of writhing humanity and try to push and kick and shove each other about for some undisclosed purpose.



Most likely you have delighted over the quaint terms used to describe the positions, such as breakaway," "wing ¾," "prop," "lock," "scrum-half," "fly-half," and so on. No doubt you have thrilled over the funny way all the players gang around and kick a man who doesn't let go of the ball when he's tackled.

Rugby Bunny

And then at Villanova you always have the added bonus attraction of seeing Ralph, the Rugby Rabbit, who as team mascot is present at all home and away games, and of course at all the post-game social functions, where he has proven time and again that he can really put it away for a rabbit of his size.

Yes, there is no doubt about it, watching rugby at Villanova is always a treat, and it remains a mystery why so many people have foolishly deprived themselves of such an unparalled opportunity for fun and profit.

Yet it is sorrowfully evident that many Villanovans have even to this day ignored the emphatic exhoration which has come from no lesser source than Commander Whitehead, in that now historic crv directed to all mankind. "CONFOUND IT MAN, LEARN YOUR RUGGER!"

The derivation of the word "rugby" is rather interesting. It evolved from the term by which this vulgar pass-time was originally know, i.e., "Ugh Boy." These are claimed to be the first words uttered by the very first spectators of the game. One may easily see how the name arrived at its present state.

A man accompanying a woman always opens the door for her and allows her to proceed first. Unless they are walking through a room that is congested, the woman always goes first if it is necessary to walk in a single file.

When on the street, the man always walks on the outside of the pavement nearest the traffic and carries any parcels or suitcases the woman has.

In a restaurant, the woman preceeds the man to the table where he pulls out the chair for her and helps her to be seated. The man always rises when his date or any other woman leaves or arrives at the table. He always gives his date's order to the waiter before giving his own.

After eating, the man always suggests when it is time to move on to the next entertainment, movie, party, etc. He does not, however, suggest it is time to go home, that is up to the woman.

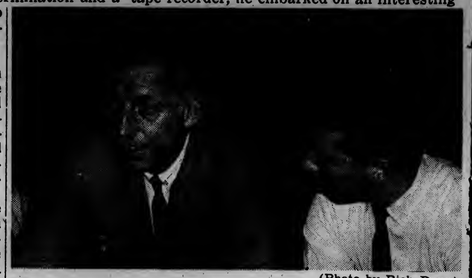
Checking The Stars

By Ray Ritter

In the history of mankind June 6, 1944 stands as a day to be remembered by the whole world. On that date, the greatest armada in history swarmed out of British ports and headed for the Normandy coast across the Channel to deliver the first crushing offensive blow against Germany in World War II. The invasion was the largest and the mightiest and also the most complicated operation in history.

Producer Darryl F. Zanuck has accomplished a unique feat in his re-creation of "D Day" for his new picture "The Longest Day." He has combined teamwork to make such a picture, and he has also intricately blended the specialized talent of forty-two top name stars. With its sweeping cameras and envolved script, "Day" takes you behind the scenes of the Normandy invasion to learn the strategy of each side. Would the operation go off, were the Germans ready, and would the weather hold out, were questions answered throughout the movie. It is very authentic and is forcibly played to the upmost. French and German soldiers speak in their native languages and frank opinions are abundantly sprinkled throughout. The human side of the war is seen from all angles, and the movie is very realistic in parts. The satire and symbolism are there to a limited degree, for those who reach to those dimensions. Some of the humor is a bit trite, but it serves to break up the film and keep the audience awake. Some roles were not enough of a challenge to the star's ability and it seemed as if they didn't have enough time to perform. Robert Mitchum (as Brig. General Cota) and Peter Lawford (as Lord Lavat) were up to par.

Although the movie is hailed by some to be the "greatest war film ever produced", it still has its faults. The film drags in the beginning and is very hard to follow as it switches from the German front to the American front and then back to the German front. Henry Grace, who plays Eisenhower is a fascinating likeness and it is too bad he doesn't act as well as he looks. Also many parts of the movie were unbelievable: John Wayne walking on a compound fracture, a British glider plane crashing next to a German barracks and no one hears it, and some fighting scenes on Omaha Beach. In parts the picture sems like bits of nothing and is very un-unified on the whole. The actresses and actors seemed to be crammed into three hours of film just for the sake of making money, but if bored when viewing, play the game of checking the stars as they appear.



Bride's Brass Bags Jazz Giants

By Frank Quattrone

Whenever an ambitious young man embraces a heartfelt idea, casts off the shackles of convention, and makes ample use of his natural brass and talent, towers tumble and visible results are achieved.

Such was the case when sophomore disc jockey, Eddie Bride, decided to tackle the unheard-of and bring the sound and sense of the giants of modern jazz to the threshold of Villanova radio.

Armed solely with determination and a tape recorder, he embarked on an interesting and gratifying journey into the backstage world of modern jazz.

It's inconceivable for a jazz fan to realize that a guy like Tex Ritter has great heart and emotion," replies a thoughtful Stan Kenton to his surprised interviewer, Eddie Bride.

Commerical Re-Broadcast

An ardent follower of Stan Kenton for years, Eddie broadcast a two-hour musical history on WWVU on Feburary 19, Kenton's fiftieth birthday. This show was re-played last summer on WBIS, his hometown AM station in Bristol, Connecticut.

A subsequent series of phone calls to Hollywood arranged an interview with "Modern America's Man of Music," who is the Chief Advisor of the Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival.

Aired on Eddie's "Ride Thru the Nite" program last night, and again on this Friday's edition of the 7 p.m. "Jazzroom," the interview features Kenton's thoughtful remarks on jazz and the modern teenager, and comments on a few of his latest Capitol releases and the Jazz Festival.

Kenton Defends Ritter

One of the more notable things he had to say concerned an album he recorded last summer with Western singer Tex Ritter.

Saieth Kenton: " . . . It's inconceivable for a jazz fan to realize that a guy like Tex Ritter has great heart and emotion, and I think that a man like Red Foley is a great singer or a guy like Tex Ritter has great heart and emotion . . . A jazz fan thinks that anybody who wears cowboy boots is clear out in left field . . . I think that if through making records like these we can break down some of this animosity and hostility between the different musics . . . we can do a great deal towards helping the progress of music generally."

Ferguson Explains Decline

Kenton still thinks highly of Maynard Ferguson, former soloist with his band. In another interview, presented by Bride on an earlier "Jazzroom" show, Ferguson, relating back to Kenton, interpreted the reason for the recent decline of the big bands: "You mentioned Kenton and myself, and I think that my orchestra sounds like Maynard Ferguson's orchestra and that Stan Kenton's sounds like Stan Kenton. And, therein lies the story. We've lived through fifteen years of young orchestra leaders trying to sound like old or, in some cases, deceased orchestra leader, and the lack of orginality is why I believe that the orchestras have not done as well in the last ten years as they could."

And there you have it. All it took was an interest in and a knowledge of jazz, a sound idea, "un-Bridled" confidence, and a tape recorder.

Folk Singers Interviewed

Tom Picardo (back, left) and Tim Hauser of WWVU interview Peter Yarrow (back, right) and Paul Stookey of the "Peter, Paul, and Mary" trio. The interview may be heard on the station (6:45 A.M.) on the Sunday Spectacular Show, this Sunday from 7-10 P.M.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Emphasis, the semi-monthly discussion program of radio station, WWVU will have two Augustinian priests as guests on Thursday, November 15. Frank Sauers, the moderator, announced that the subject will be: "The Ecumenical Council--what it is and what it hopes to accomplish."

Topics for future programs include the New Villanova Political Union and the Literary Society.

Reverend George J. McLaughlin, OSA, in a letter to Senior Class President Jim Tate, last week outlined the technical prohibitions regarding private telephones being installed in student's rooms at this time.

The primary reason for the decision to scrap the idea at the present time, was due to fact pointed out by the Bell Telephone Company, That fact being outside lines to the University are already overcrowded. It was pointed out by the company that installation of any additional phones would necessitate bringing more lines on the campus.

The installation would necessitate drilling holes to get the lines into the wall and then drilling more holes to allow the line to connect with individual sets in the rooms. Removal of the sets upon graduation of participating students and the changing of rooms each September would leave unsightly holes or patches in the walls.

Father McLaughlin told Tate that the question will remain open to discussion and that any new suggestions will be welcome.

Is this the only reason for using Mennen Skin Bracer?

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.

Bassow Lecture

changes in the Soviet Union, Mr. Bassow stated, the industrial revolution and liberalization. Their expansion has been based largely on their educational system.

The creation of the new technological and educational elite has created new problems stated Bassow. The new elite are interested in their families and jobs, not in furthering the revolution or dying for Cuba or Berlin.

Kremlin Endangered

This is a danger to the Kremlin because the youth does not think of the welfare of the state. Since the people think of themselves, they will work for themselves not for Krushchev.

Following his address, Mr. Bassow opened the session to general debate. For about an hour there was a lively question and answer session in which the student audience propounded many intelligent and pointed questions.

Immediately after the speech, Mr. Bassow was the guest of WWVU for a panel interview. The tape of the session between Mr. Bassow and his VILLANOVAN-WWVU inquisitors will be aired at a later date.

murderer who has been hiding out in the woods. Unfortunately, by killing him, they have turned him into a genuine ghost who threatens to return the following day for Isabel, his girlfriend.

Preparing to deter this invasion by the dead, the town brings into sharp focus all the sounds and pleasures of living, and lures Isabel back to reality, maturity, and the arms of a young Supervisor. Unfortunately, it also returns everything to normal.

Lead roles are being filled by Villanova graduate Gerald Paonessa as the ghost, Christine Assini, graduate of Russell Sage College, as his lover, and William Flynn, Villanova M. A. Graduate who also holds a bachelor's degree from Manhattan College, as the inspector. Also to be featured in the company are the director, Mr. George Herman, and Professor James O'Tulse, of the Villanova Speech Department.

The setting was designed by Mr. Thomas Nevins, Theatre Department Technical Advisor.

Modern Villanovans Feature The Sound of 'Big Society'

By Richard Kane

Calabria, Cardinal, Cebrowski, Chipello, Green, Jacobs, Junker, Pease, Seager, Sorokac, Tremer Turner, Wanieski: put them together and what do you have? — The big new sound of the official Villanova University dance band, the inimitable Villanovans.

The new Villanovan bandleader, Junior math major, Art Cebrowski, working closely with the administration, has organized a unit quite different from last year's six-man combo. He has enlarged the group and changed the style in an effort to return to the big society sound of Quincy Jones and Billy Butterfield.

Besides traditional favorites such as "Stardust", "Moonlight in Vermont", and "Tuxedo Junction", the Villanovan repertory will be heavily spiced with melodies from Broadway shows such as "Bye Bye Birdie", and "West Side Story", and novelty dances such as the cha-cha, polka, Charleston, and twist.

All the Villanovans are members of the University marching band and Cebrowski feels that his men represent some of the best talent on campus. The Villanovans are interested in playing mostly for occasions such as proms, dinner dances, and balls. The group entertained at Holy Child on October 27, performing so outstandingly that they were invited to return for the school's spring prom. The Villanovans will make their "home-town" debut on November 30, when they will play at the annual Charity Ball in the Villanova Field House.

Tripartate Discussion Marks Initial Meeting Of New Political Union

The Villanova Political Union held its first informal debate last Wednesday, November 7 at 4:30 p.m. The audience witnessed a vigorous, spirited and notly-contested debate on United States foreign aid.

The Union, a political debating society, hopes to bring to the campus prominent figures who will initiate its debates on current national and international issues.

The Union is composed of three parties: Liberal, Moderate, and Conservative. While still in its initial stages, temporary officers have been elected.

Peter DeLiberty, a Junior history major, was appointed temporary General Chairman. David Galie, a Junior political science major, was elected temporary Chairman of the Liberal party. John Deering, another Junior political science major, was appointed temporary chairman of the Moderate party and James Clarke, a Freshman liberal Arts major, was elected temporary chairman of the Conservative party.

Under the competent and skillful direction of their moderator, Mr. John J. Logue of the Villanova Political Science department, the Union has shown that it might become one of the leading organizations on campus.

Villanova Nominates Olivar For 1962 All-American Award

Jordan Olivar head football coach at Yale University, was nominated for the 1962 Sports Illustrated Silver Anniversary All-America Award by his alma mater, Villanova University. He is cited for his contributions to society as a private citizen, business man, teacher and builder of youth.

Olivar was an outstanding tackle at Villanova for four years, playing from 1934 to 1937 under Harry Stuhldreher. In his senior year Olivar was selected by Stuhldreher to "quarterback" the team from his tackle spot.

Class of '38

In 1938 Olivar taught at Radnor High School and was assistant coach in football and basketball. From 1939 to 1941 he taught Spanish and Social Studies at Paulsboro, New Jersey High School, and coached the football team in 1941.

In 1942 he taught Spanish at Roman Catholic High School in Philadelphia and also coached football and basketball. From 1943 to 1948 Olivar was head football coach at Villanova; teaching, also, at Roman Catholic High School through 1945. From 1949 to 1951 he served as head football coach at Loyola University, Los Angeles.

Since 1952 Olivar has been head football coach at Yale University and holds the record for longevity for head football coaches at Yale. Olivar's success and popularity at New Haven prompted the University to provide an unprecedented "Appointment Without Term" policy.

"Coach of the Year"

In 1960 he was selected as "Coach of the Year" by the Washington Touchdown Club in honor of Yale's undefeated 1960 season, the first since 1923. In 1956 and 1960 he was selected as "New England Coach of the Year" by the New England Football Writers Association.

Overall Record

Olivar's overall coaching record is one-hundred-nine victories, fifty-eight defeats, and 6 ties. His mark at Yale is 59-27-4.

His accomplishments at Yale include the school's first official Ivy League Championship in 1956, a five game victory at the start of the 1959 season and Yale's first unbeaten and untied season in 37 years in 1960.

Olivar has been elected to the Helm's Athletic Foundation Hall of Fame and is the United States Commissioner for the Pop Warner Football Conference.

Cross Country Team Defeats LaSalle And St. Johns; 4-0 Record

Villanova's Cross Country team completed a perfect 4-0 season by defeating the two remaining teams on their schedule, LaSalle and St. John's.

On October 30, the Wildcat harriers sloshed through inches of mud in cold, rainy weather to defeat LaSalle 19 to 40. Despite the far from ideal conditions, Pat Traynor and Vic Zwolak finished together for Villanova in identical times of 23 minutes, 15 seconds to take first place.

They easily out distanced their nearest competition which happened to be fellow Villanovan Tom Sullivan, who took third in 23 minutes, 44 seconds over the abbreviated 4½ mile course.

Last Saturday Villanova trounced St. John's taking the first six places to score a perfect 15 points. Zwolak, Traynor and Sullivan again finished 1-2-3.

Villanova now hopes to become the first Philadelphia team ever to win the IC4As at Van-courtland Park, New York next Monday.

half, but now they began to pay off. With first and ten on their own 38, Phil DeRose scampered 30 yards on a reverse around left end. Another reverse moved the ball to the 19 yard line. Whelchel scored again, this time on a double reverse with 7:49 to go in the game. Pleau's kick was good and Massachusetts had the winning 19-18 score.

With Aceto quarterbacking, the running attack moved the ball downfield in the dying moments of the game. With fourth and goal, and less than a minute to go Jim Thomas was stopped a yard from the goal.

Thinking out loud:

Lou Rettino led all rusher with 100 gained on 14 attempts for a 7.2 average . . . Several hundred fans came down from Lansdale, Pa. to honor Larry Glueck. The hard-running Lansdale Catholic grad put on quite a show for his rooters. Playing only three quarters, Glueck scored 12 points, gained 70 yards in ten carries, and make several key tackles on Massachusetts' devastating reverses . . . Mike Ross led the Redmen in yards gained with 65 on only 2 runs . . . Massachusetts has 32 sophomores and juniors on their 41 man squad. At one time the potentially powerful Redmen had 10 sophs in the lineup .

Villanova Sports Roundup

Fedigan Hall, with the theme of Greek Mythology was voted the best decorated dormitory during the recent Homecoming weekend. Outside Fedigan Hall the Wildcat was depicted as destroying the Titans. In second place was Alumni Hall which incorporated Villanova into the space age. Sullivan Hall, with its exhibit facing the quad, had the Wildcat ripping the Titan out of the sky. The Frosh in Austin Hall took for their theme "Speed Kills."

The nurses, Tolentine Hall and Delury Hall were tied for fifth place. The nurses, with their exhibit set up on the field next to the classroom annex, had a gladiator scene on a football field with the Villanova football player tournament. Tolentine Hall had painted sheets depicting the Wildcat victories. At the other end of campus Delury Hall had the Titan missile being stopped by the Wildcat. The award was presented to Fedigan Hall at the Homecoming dance on Friday night by Al Ward, President of the Intramural Council.

Floats

The Senior and Junior Class jointly shared the "Ole 84 Award" for the best float. The Senior Class used the proud giant peacock on their float while the Junior Class had a Dutch scene with a windmill and girls on their float. The theme for the floats was "Around The World." Mr. Edward Donohue, President of the Alumni Association presented the award to winners.

Basketball

Applications must be turned in by November 20 the last day before the Thanksgiving Holiday. The Entry blanks may be picked up at the Intramural Office. The number of men each team can have will be limited to ten. Also each team will be able to have one varsity of freshman athelete, provided he does not participate on the school team in that sport.

Villanova's Pistol team is off to another fine season. On Saturday, November 3, the team hosted the marksmen from the Merchant Marine Academy with the Wildcats beating the fleet 1307 to 1211. George Sinclair, an all-American for the past two years was high man for Villanova with a 274 out of a possible 300 points.

Following close behind Sinclair was team Captain Joe Hack who collected 269 out of a maximum 300.

The victory over the Merchant Marine Academy gave the squad its fourth straight victory in the same number of matches. They are out to better the mark from last year's team that had a 4-2 varsity record and 12-5 mark in the Delaware Valley League. The squad also finshed second in the National Rifle Association sectional competition.

All home matches are held in the basement of John Barry Hall. Master Sergeant John Reilly in the Coach of the team and says" the pistol team is separate from the NROTC Unit."

Rifle team

Although opening the season with a loss to the University of Scranton on October 13, the rifle team is expected to have a good year. Last year's squad finished with a 10-4 record and came in second in the NRA sectional.

On November 17, the team will take on the squad from Gettysburg at one P.M. in John Barry Hall.

The Villanova rugby squad defeated St. Joseph's 26-0 last Saturday morning after being held to a 0-0 tie by Notre Dame the previous week.

The homecoming day game with Notre Dame was called after twenty minutes of play because of extremely bad playing conditions. This disappointed the Wildcats, who were looking forward to avenging last year's 6-0 defeat.

After a great deal of discussion whether or not to play, the game got under way in the windblown rain and sleet. The field was a series of lakes and rivers, catching the water as it flowed from the elevated parking lot. One of these "rivers" was six yards wide and one-half foot deep. Conditions were so bad that the ball floated when tossed into the scrum.

Because of this problem it was impossible for either side to put together a sustained offensive. It was a spirited contest, however, as the players ran about in a futile attempt to keep warm. Finally, the game was brought to an early halt.

Offensive Display

The St. Joseph's game was a completely different story, however, as the Wildcats took charge early in a display of offensive strength. Tony Tranmontozzi got Villanova off to a fast start with two quick scores in the opening minutes of the contest. This put the visitors behind from the outset, and they were unable to recover. Walt Shearer scored twice and Captain Luke St. Onge once to make the score 15-0 at halftime.

The second half proved to be much the same story as Bert Lombino, Dick Gove, and Ed Kurek each made a three-point "try." Kurek also added a two-point conversion to make the score 26-0. Only near the end of the game did St. Joseph's threaten. This offensive thrust was topped by the rugged 'Cat line. This half was marred by an injury to George Tongring, which was later diagnosed as a severely sprained ankle.

Princeton

This Saturday the rugby squad journeys to Princeton to take on the Tigers in a morning game. Then they will move on to Rutgers to view the football game. The following weekend Villanova will enter two teams in the 7-a aside tournament in New York.

Villanova's Bowl Hopes Dampened By 19-18 Upset Loss To Massachusetts

By Tom Bruderle

Villanova's bowl aspirations were dealt a serious blow last Saturday when they dropped a heart-breaking 19-18 battle with the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts.

During the past week, the Wildcats were rumored as being possible contestants in one of the post-season bowl games. A convincing victory over Massachusetts was necessary for Villanova's chances.

To seniors Ted Aceto, Richie Richman, Jim Kropke, Lou Rettino, Billy Joe, Larry Glueck, Bob Merenda, Gene Ceppetelli, Al Reinoso, Al Calligaris, Bill Armstrong, Bob Kowalski, Arnie Buben, Captain Charlie Johnson, Mike DeLone, Bill Barbaro, and Joe Cutroneo the Massachusetts game was a disappointing close to their collegiate careers at home.

Statistics

Judging by the statistics, however, it's hard to imagine a Villanova loss. The Cats set a school record in first downs by collecting 28, with 17 coming in the first half. The old mark was set against North Carolina State in 1949. In the process of setting this mark, they gained 21 first downs on the ground as compared with 20 against State in 1949. The Redmen could manage only 10 first downs, with only one coming in the first half.

The Mainliners ran twice as many plays as the visitors (82-41) and amassed a total of 481 total offensive yards gained to the 256 of the Redmen. In fact, it wasn't until the middle of the second quarter that the New Englanders could penetrate into enemy soil, and then only to the 45 yard line.

If the Redmen came home without a win, they had an ideal excuse. Their top ground-gainer, Sam Lussier, was injured and didn't suit-up for the game. The 180-pound senior halfback had gained 518 yards on 88 carries, for a 5.9 average. Unfortunately, Massachusetts didn't need excuse.

Wildcats Score First

After taking the kick-off on their own 23, Villanova marched 77 yards in 15 plays. Glueck cracked right tackle from the six for the touchdown, with the game five minutes and 48 seconds old. Quarterback Richie Richman rolled to his left but was stopped from the two-point conversion, which was soon to be all important.

Massachusetts could move no closer than their own 49 yard line, and the quarter ended with Villanova in possession of the ball on the New Englander's 29.

Richman Scores

With the second quarter only 2:02 old, quarterback Ted Aceto tossed a pass to sometime flanker Richman who scored the second Wildcat six-pointer. Despite a five yard penalty, Villanova went for the two-pointer but Richman's pass to rightend Jack Clifford fell incomplete. Villanova led 12-0 but the proverbial die had been cast.

After taking the ensuing kick-off, Massachusetts punted and Richman fumbled the ball. Left-tackle Bob Burke recovered for the visitors on the Villanova 20 yard line. With fourth and goal on the one, quarterback Jerry Whelchel sneaked over from the one for the score with 6.51 gone by in the second quarter. George Pleau's extra-point try was wide and the score stood 12-6.

Following the kick-off, Villanova drove from their own 30 to the Massachusetts 26. The big ground-gainer was a 42 yard pass play from Richman to Clifford. Two plays later a Richman pass was intercepted by Jack Kozaka on the visitors 18.

Immediately after the steal, fullback Mike Ross went 52 yards only to be stopped by Glueck and Merenda on the Villanova 23 yard line. A Whelchel fumble was recovered by Villanova's Bob Kowalski and the pressure was eased—temporarily.

Rettino Fumbles

Then the old Villanova nemisis known as the fumble struck again. The victim this time was fullback Lou Rettino who lost the handle on the Cat 43. Again Bob Burke recovered for the Redmen. Six plays later Ken Kezar hit right tackle for 19 yards and the second Massachusett's TD. Pleau again missed the extra point attempt with 1:49 gone by in the fourth period.

Villanova took the kickoff, and with Rettino and Merenda alternating with the running chores, the Mainliners drove to the Massachusetts 15. Larry Glueck circled right end for the third and final touchdown, but as he scored he pulled a muscle in his left thigh and was unable to return to the game. A Richman pass for the extra points was stopped and the score read 18-12, Villanova.

'Cats Seeking Triumph Over Scarlet Knights Of Rutgers

By Tom Finan

This Saturday afternoon, the Wildcats of Villanova will engage the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers in fierce battle on the banks of the Raritan.

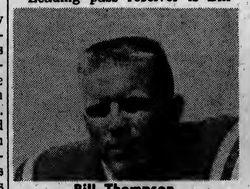
It will be the last regularly scheduled game of the season for the VU eleven, who will invade the State University campus at New Brunswick N. J. to top off a winning 6-2 record. It is also the ninth contest between the two clubs, with the first game dating back to 1906, and the series is tied at 4-4.

The Garden State University is the proud possessor of an impressive sports first. For it was on that campus, that the nation's first official inter-collegiate football game was played, when Rugters trounced Princeton 6-4.

The Scarlet eleven is coached by former Penn mentor, John Bateman who enjoyed a 17-1 record at New Brunswick in his first two seasons there. This year the Scarlet Knights are 5-2, and face Columbia and the University of Virginia after this Saturday's tussle with the Main Liners.

Strong Comeback

After dropping their first two games to Princeton and Connecticut, Coach Bateman's squad buckled down and defeated Colgate, Lehigh, Penn, and Lafayette in that order.



With 18 lettermen returning, Bateman has two intact lines. Backfield strength centers around a "fullback-quarterback" offense deevloped under the present coach.

Bob Yaksick has taken over as signal caller, and Drew Carollo and Richie Poad will again play fullback. The number one offensive weapon is local boy, Bill Thompson from New Brunswick High. Thomson has a 6.0 yd. avg. per carry, over a two season period, and who is regarded as being virtually "unstoppable."

Individual Statistics

Quarterback Yaksick of Clairton, Pa. is the leader in total offense with 583 yards, with 329 in the air, not including last week's game.

Leading pass receiver is Bill

Bill Thompson

Craft of Riverside High, with 13 catches for 232 yards. Bill Thompson is first in rushing with 275 yards, followed closely by Yaksick, who has 254 and fullback Drew Carollo, with 229.

Game Prospects

This weekend's clash between the 'Cats from the Main Line and the men in Scarlet from the swift flowing Raritan should prove to be definitely the toughest contest of the current season for both teams. Both squads will be "up" for the game, but the Blue and White's superoir backfield and overall strength

Final: VU 22-RU 14.

Mudcats Drown Titans 14-0, As Gross Throws Three Passes

By Vince Kennedy

Heavy rains and forty mph winds, added to a temperature of 42 degrees reduced an expected Homecoming sellout crowd to 3,000 staunch spectators but did not prevent the Villanova Mudcats from defeating the Detroit Titans 14-0 for the first time in four years. Among the 3,000 fans were 135 who traveled by bus from Glouchester, N.J. to honor senior quaterback, Ted Aceto. No one came away disappointed as the Cats displayed their best offense since the Boston College game.

Detroit at a Loss

Detroit quarterback, Jerry Gross, entered the game averaging twenty seven passes per contest but ended up throwing only three times. His first attempt did not come until the fourth quarter and its completion marked the first time that Detroit was in Villanova's territory the entire second half. However, this only Titan drive of the day, was stopped as tackle, Charlie Johnson, hit Gross hard on the next play and recovered the fumble for his second recovery of the day. Johnson's hard tackling and crisp blocking earned him a selection on the weekly ALL EAST Team for his second time this year.

Villanova Hits Hard

Villanova's first score came in the second quarter with Richie Richman sneaking over from the one yard line and Larry Glueck running for the extra two points. The touchdown drive was kept alive because of Villanova's ability to get first downs twice with fourth down and short yardage to go. The Cat's second touchdown came in the third quarter on a drive originating from Villanova's own thirty, which was highlighted by Billy Joe crashing through the middle of the line six straight times from the Titan's eighteen yard line to the one. Fullback, Lou Rettino then replaced Joe and drove over for the final yard. Glueck's run for the extra two failed.

Charity Ball, Outing, Contest To Benefit Local Orphanage

by Bill McCloskey

The annual Charity Ball, scheduled for tomorrow, Friday, November 30, presents an opportunity for Villanova students to begin their Christmas shopping early, by helping to buy gifts for some 160 boys at St. John's Orphanage.

The event, which will get underway at nine in the Field House, will feature the new dance band sound of the Villanovans and the decorations provided by the Belle Masque.

The admission donation of $2.50 will be a donation as it will go to finance the entire program planned for the boys at St. John's by the Junior Class.

Missing Link Contest

The highlight of the evening will be the "discovery" of Villanova's missing link, the student chosen, (at 1¢ a vote) as the one most likely to be the true missing link in evolution.

At the intermission of this, the biggest open social event of the year, dancers will be entertained by the snappy music of a Twist band.

Saturday morning, the St. John's orphans reap the benefits of the Villanova charity when they travel to the 69th Street Shopping Center in nearby Upper Darby for a visit to Santa Claus in the J. C. Penny store. While there, the Villanovans will buy each of the boys a small gift.

From there the group will travel up the street to Kiddieland for rides on the amusements. Lunch at Kostick's Restaurant on 69th Street will be followed by 45 minutes of cartons and the showing of "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea" at the Terminal Theatre, to end the day.

Party on Tuesday

Those on the various committees planning the weekend will return to the orphanage on Tuesday December 4th to fete the children at a Christmas Party financed by the Ball, classroom collections and the "Missing Link" contest. The afternoon will consist of movies, gifts for the boys and a visit by Santa "Pete Triolo" Claus.

Beta Gamma Sponsors Debate Tournament; Thirty Teams Invited

The Third Annual Varsity Invitational Debate Tournament, sponsored by the Beta Gamma Debate Society, will be held Saturday, December 8 in the Commerce and Finance Building at Villanova.

Thirty Schools

The tournament, expanded from last year, will host 30 teams from the neighboring states of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Maryland.

Among the notables expected to attend are Rosemont, St. Joseph's, LaSalle, St. John's, NYU, Annapolis, and the Pennsylvania State Champions, King's College, and last year's winner, the University of Pennsylvania.

Each school will be allowed to enter one four man team consisting of two affirmative and two negative debaters.

The competition will begin at 9:30 a.m. and will consist of three rounds of debate ending with presentation of awards at 5:30 p.m.

Trophies

Awards will be given to the top three schools compiling the best total won-lost records for the day. Trophies will also be awarded to the best affirmative and the best negative debaters on the basis of their overall point score for the three rounds.

Graduate Theatre Presents Witty French Play Tomorrow

by Mike Magro

This year's first production of the Villanova Graduate Theater Department, The Enchanted by Jean Giraudoux, will open Saturday, December 1, with a matinee at 2:30 p.m. and an evening performance at 8:30 p.m.

The show will run in split performances during the following week, from Thursday, December 6 through Sunday, December 9. All performances will be held at 8:30 p.m. with matinees on Saturday, December 1 and 8. Student admission is $1.00 and general admission $1.75.

Witty Comedy

The play is a witty comedy by this outstanding French playwright and boasts an experienced and skillful cast headed by Bill Flynn in the lead role of the French inspector. Chris Assini portrays the new school teacher of the enchanted town. James O'Toole, of the Villanova Speech Department, is cast as the Mayor with David Raber in the important role of the Doctor. Leslie Caplin and Marf Moesel as Armand and Leonide respectively, fill the other important roles.

The story is concerned with a young girl who has met a ghost in the woods surrounding the village and the efforts of the town people to remove it. It can also be explained as Jean Giraudoux's view of the time in every girl's life when she must grow up and make a choice between the real and the dream world.

Guest Meal Ticket Program Awarded To Student Council

by Joe McCarthy

The Administration of the University last week gave official approval to the Student Council suggestion for the procurement of weekend meal tickets for guests of Villanova students. There will be no charge for the privilege.

The original legislation and plan development was sponsored by Vice-Chairman Marty McGuinn and had received passage from the Congress earlier this semester. The proposal had until last week been pending the approval of the Administration.

Implementation

McGuinn also announced means by which the program will be implemented by the Council as follows.

A Committee of the Student Council will soon be formed to assume all responsibility for the organization of the proposal and the drawing up of each week's guest list. A student desiring to have a guest would first have to secure a room on campus.

Application

Then, with written permission from that student in whose room the guest would be staying, he would apply for the guest privileges in the Student Council office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

year. Although the actual rating did not change, the paper garnered a total of 3195 points out of a possible point total of about 3700.

This also marked an increase of 145 points over the previous semester and was 205 short of All-American honors, the highest given by the Association. Among the departments cited for excellence were sports coverage, photography, and front page make-up.

Weekly Criticism

The Villanovan has also been submitting copies weekly to the evaluation of the National College Press Service. In their first counseling, it was noted that there is enough material to warrant publishing on a semi-weekly basis and that story continuations from the first and back pages should be held to a minimum.

Guest Tickets

Permission for a day or for certain meals also could be secured by Wednesday of that week. This phase of the program has yet to reach the final stages.

And since there would never be more guests than there would be students going home, there would be little likelihood of overloading the residents cafeteria.

Effects

It is felt by McGuinn and the Council that such a weekend guest program would eliminate the existing (and free) practice of transferring matriculation cards. It would also provide for a list of all guests and where they are staying.

This list would this be available to anyone seeking to contact the guest and would further place the responsibility for the particular guest on a particular student.

Villanova Basketball Preview, 1962-1963

Big Five Champions To Defend Title Minus Leftwich In Lineup

by Tom Bruderle

The 1962-63 edition of the Villanova basketball team will take to the floor next Tuesday night against the Tigers of Princeton University in the Villanova Field House.

Except for two names, Villanova's starting five will be the same ones who started last year's opener against Scranton University in the Palestra.

Gone will be Hubie White, a 21.5 contributor, and George Leftwich (13.2 ppg) who is recuperating from an automobile accident.

Jones and Leftwich

With Wally Jones and Leftwich, Villanova had one of the best back-court combinations in the nation. Second year Coach Jack Kraft said, "We have been forced to change our plans drastically due to his absence."

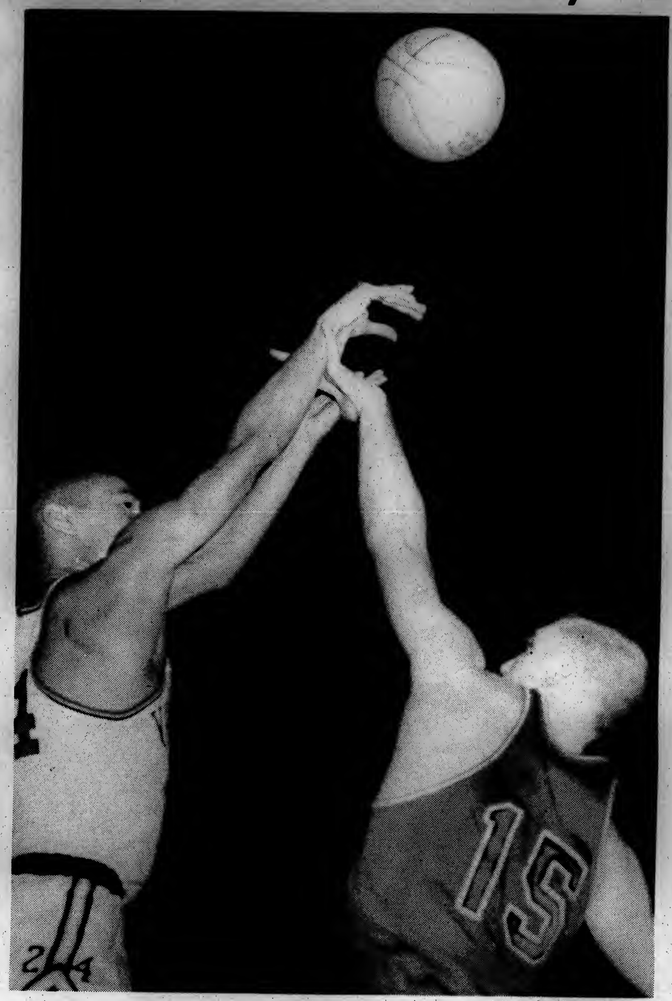
Kraft believes that the loss of Leftwich is more serious than the departure of White. Said Kraft, "Despite the loss of White, we had counted on having four men returning who knew each other's moves, and from here work in our center. Now we'll have to work in a replacement for George as well."

Returnees

Returning from last year's Big Five Championship squad are co-captains Jim McMonagle and Jim O'Brien both 6-4. They averaged 8.9 and 9.7 ppg, respectively. Along with Jones in the backcourt will be either 6-0 Joe McGill, a Junior, 6-2 Ben Kenny, or 6-3 Eric Erickson, both of whom are Sophomores. Junior Butch Winterbottom and Soph Jim Hodson will make their presence felt.

Jim Washington, 6-7, who averaged 20.0 ppg as a Freshmen last year, will jump center. If Erickson isn't back with Jones handling the ball, he may move forward subbing for McMonagle or O'Brien.

Jerry Stefanic, a 6-6 Junior, has been a pleasant surprise for Kraft during practice, and his shooting and rebounding have greatly improved. Sam Iorio, 6-8, will also help out in rebounding.



The Wildcats defense will naturally depend upon the opponent. Jones, McMonagle, or Washington will guard the high scorer of the opposition depending on his size.

This Season?

Recently the Villanova mentor said that this year's squad will be "an interesting one to watch." The current team won't have the explosiveness of last year's team that was often characterized by 15 or 20 point leads at intermission. Coach Kraft expects the team to be a little unsteady offensively in the first few games since the club will need game experience as a unit.

Disregarding any predictions thus far, the opening few games will either make-or-break Villanova. As has been noted previously, they will be shaky offensively and, in addition, the bench will be weak. If they play well in early December, Villanova will have another fine season.

As a matter of record, the same thing was said of last year's team, the same team that won 12 games in a row, four in one week.

Former Area Stars To Be In Lineup As Frosh Meet Temple High At Home

by Tom Finan

The Freshmen team will face Temple High tomorrow, in their first competition of the 1962-63 season. With a twelve game schedule, the hustling Frosh, under the direction of Coach Jack Devine, are now being molded into an effective and co-ordinated squad of potential Varsity "timber."

Probable starting lineup for the season will be 6-0 Bill Melchione, former Bishop Eustace High standout, who is expected to be "the playmaker and should prove to be the key to the season," in the opinion of Devine.

A great deal is expected of Richie Moore, who is a product of John Bartram High in Philadephia and the Independent Leagues of the city. A consistent high scorer and a fine all around player, Moore could prove to be the nucleus and spark of the squad.

Frosh Standouts

Fast break man is Radnor High's Lou Benn, 6-2, whose speed and savvy will prove to be the big difference in some of this year's hard fought games. The big man in the rebounding department is Haverford High's Bernie Schaefer. His 6-5 frame will provide the needed height for action around the boards. Schaefer's tough, aggressive style will provide the drive and hustle for a strong and potent offense.

Dion Vonderlieth, 6-3 is another fine rebounder and his corner shot is very effective.

Capable Substitutes

Devine has an ample number of talented subs upon whom he can depend to supplement the starting lineup. John Hayes is good on offense and has several fine shots, but an injury is preventing him from seeing much action this season.

Jerry O'Brien is a skilled playmaker, who is expected to back up Melchione. Bonner's Kevin Traynor is a handy man, who plays a good ball game. Dick Freeman is expected to develop somewhat later in the season into a real asset to the club.

With a 4-5 record last season, the Freshmen five will meet it's greatest opposition from Temple, which has a very strong Frosh team. The Hawks of 54th and City Line are also very strong this season as the result of extensive recruiting.

The yearlings certainly have their work cut out for them and a demanding and rigorous schedule will prove their worth in combat.

Rookie Coach Leads Surprising Wildcats To First City Crown

by Jack Duffy

Last season, Villanova went through its most successful basketball season in recent years.

Exciting personnel make up an exciting team, and last season, Villanova was excitement personified. The trio of Hubie White, a senior and captain of the team, and sophs Wally Jones, and George Leftwich made more than just a mild impression on opponents.

Add to this threesome juniors Jim McMonagle and Jim O'Brien, and one can see why fans from Niagara Falls to the Palestra to Morgantown were amazed at the play of this squad.

How?

How can a team do so well when all the odds are against it? This is where a fine coach fits in. Coach Jack Kraft, after coaching at Bishop Neumann High School, and, recently at Malvern Prep, came to the Main Line and sized up the situation.

He found a team that was willing to grant to its opponents size, and nothing else. Kraft's basic philosophy was to look for the fast break in order to get the ball to White, Jones, and Leftwich. Every coach has different methods of coaching a ball club and the measurement of efficiency is the team's final won-loss record. Villanova had a 21-7 log and that speaks for itself.

12 Straight

The season started with the Cats piling up twelve straight. Included in these were four victories in one week, three on the road, and a Christmas tournament crown.

Except for the opening few games the Wildcats had the schedule in their favor and they made the most of it. Sixteen of Villanova's twenty eight games were at home, with home being either the Palestra or the Field House. Villanova took all of their home games usually before a full house.

On the road, the record was not quite as impressive. Before going to Maryland for the NCAA semi-finals, Villanova had only managed to win four of their ten away engagements.

Considering the circumstamces and the pre-season ratings given by prognosticators, an invitation to the NCAA tournament was surprise. Villanova earned the right to go to the semifinals of the NCAA Eastern Regionals at College Park, Maryland by defeating West Virginia, 90-75.

The Cats staged one of their greatest comebacks in years after they had spotted West Virginia 42-39 at intermission. In the second half, Villanova scored 51 points and defeated the visitors pulling away.

At Maryland the Wildcats met NYU and Wake Forest. The NYU game demonstrated the Cats uncanny comeback ability. Several times they bounced back from near disaster to finally defeat the big city boys on a foul shot by Leftwich, and earned Villanova the right to meet Wake Forest. Thanks to Len Chappell's 22 points and 21 rebounds, the Demon Deacons from Wake Forest defeated the Wildcats 79-69.

Villanova Basketball Preview, 1962-1963

Big Five Champions To Defend Title Minus Leftwich In Lineup

by Tom Bruderle

The 1962-63 edition of the Villanova basketball team will take to the floor next Tuesday night against the Tigers of Princeton University in the Villanova Field House.

Except for two names, Villanova's starting five will be the same ones who started last year's opener against Scranton University in the Palestra.

Gone will be Hubie White, a 21.5 contributor, and George Leftwich (13.2 ppg) who is recuperating from an automobile accident.

Jones and Leftwich

With Wally Jones and Leftwich, Villanova had one of the best back-court combinations in the nation. Second year Coach Jack Kraft said, "We have been forced to change our plans drastically due to his absence."

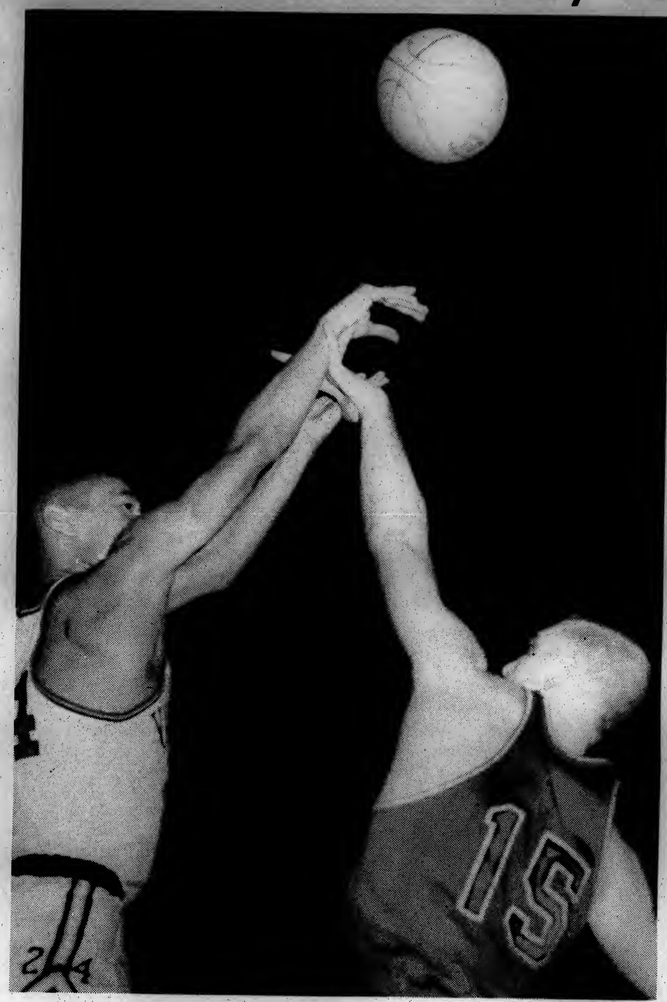
Kraft believes that the loss of Leftwich is more serious than the departure of White. Said Kraft, "Despite the loss of White, we had counted on having four men returning who knew each other's moves, and from here work in our center. Now we'll have to work in a replacement for George as well."

Returnees

Returning from last year's Big Five Championship squad are co-captains Jim McMonagle and Jim O'Brien both 6-4. They averaged 8.9 and 9.7 ppg, respectively. Along with Jones in the backcourt will be either 6-0 Joe McGill, a Junior, 6-2 Ben Kenny, or 6-3 Eric Erickson, both of whom are Sophomores. Junior Butch Winterbottom and Soph Jim Hodson will make their presence felt.

Jim Washington, 6-7, who averaged 20.0 ppg as a Freshmen last year, will jump center. If Erickson isn't back with Jones handling the ball, he may move forward subbing for McMonagle or O'Brien.

Jerry Stefanic, a 6-6 Junior, has been a pleasant surprise for Kraft during practice, and his shooting and rebounding have greatly improved. Sam Iorio, 6-8, will also help out in rebounding.



The Wildcats defense will naturally depend upon the opponent. Jones, McMonagle, or Washington will guard the high scorer of the opposition depending on his size.

This Season?

Recently the Villanova mentor said that this year's squad will be "an interesting one to watch." The current team won't have the explosiveness of last year's team that was often characterized by 15 or 20 point leads at intermission. Coach Kraft expects the team to be a little unsteady offensively in the first few games since the club will need game experience as a unit.

Disregarding any predictions thus far, the opening few games will either make-or-break Villanova. As has been noted previously, they will be shaky offensively and, in addition, the bench will be weak. If they play well in early December, Villanova will have another fine season.

As a matter of record, the same thing was said of last year's team, the same team that won 12 games in a row, four in one week.

Former Area Stars To Be In Lineup As Frosh Meet Temple High At Home

by Tom Finan

The Freshmen team will face Temple High tomorrow, in their first competition of the 1962-63 season. With a twelve game schedule, the hustling Frosh, under the direction of Coach Jack Devine, are now being molded into an effective and co-ordinated squad of potential Varsity "timber."

Probable starting lineup for the season will be 6-0 Bill Melchione, former Bishop Eustace High standout, who is expected to be "the playmaker and should prove to be the key to the season," in the opinion of Devine.

A great deal is expected of Richie Moore, who is a product of John Bartram High in Philadephia and the Independent Leagues of the city. A consistent high scorer and a fine all around player, Moore could prove to be the nucleus and spark of the squad.

Frosh Standouts

Fast break man is Radnor High's Lou Benn, 6-2, whose speed and savvy will prove to be the big difference in some of this year's hard fought games. The big man in the rebounding department is Haverford High's Bernie Schaefer. His 6-5 frame will provide the needed height for action around the boards. Schaefer's tough, aggressive style will provide the drive and hustle for a strong and potent offense.

Dion Vonderlieth, 6-3 is another fine rebounder and his corner shot is very effective.

Capable Substitutes

Devine has an ample number of talented subs upon whom he can depend to supplement the starting lineup. John Hayes is good on offense and has several fine shots, but an injury is preventing him from seeing much action this season.

Jerry O'Brien is a skilled playmaker, who is expected to back up Melchione. Bonner's Kevin Traynor is a handy man, who plays a good ball game. Dick Freeman is expected to develop somewhat later in the season into a real asset to the club.

With a 4-5 record last season, the Freshmen five will meet it's greatest opposition from Temple, which has a very strong Frosh team. The Hawks of 54th and City Line are also very strong this season as the result of extensive recruiting.

The yearlings certainly have their work cut out for them and a demanding and rigorous schedule will prove their worth in combat.

Rookie Coach Leads Surprising Wildcats To First City Crown

by Jack Duffy

Last season, Villanova went through its most successful basketball season in recent years.

Exciting personnel make up an exciting team, and last season, Villanova was excitement personified. The trio of Hubie White, a senior and captain of the team, and sophs Wally Jones, and George Leftwich made more than just a mild impression on opponents.

Add to this threesome juniors Jim McMonagle and Jim O'Brien, and one can see why fans from Niagara Falls to the Palestra to Morgantown were amazed at the play of this squad.

How?

How can a team do so well when all the odds are against it? This is where a fine coach fits in. Coach Jack Kraft, after coaching at Bishop Neumann High School, and, recently at Malvern Prep, came to the Main Line and sized up the situation.

He found a team that was willing to grant to its opponents size, and nothing else. Kraft's basic philosophy was to look for the fast break in order to get the ball to White, Jones, and Leftwich. Every coach has different methods of coaching a ball club and the measurement of efficiency is the team's final won-loss record. Villanova had a 21-7 log and that speaks for itself.

12 Straight

The season started with the Cats piling up twelve straight. Included in these were four victories in one week, three on the road, and a Christmas tournament crown.

Except for the opening few games the Wildcats had the schedule in their favor and they made the most of it. Sixteen of Villanova's twenty eight games were at home, with home being either the Palestra or the Field House. Villanova took all of their home games usually before a full house.

On the road, the record was not quite as impressive. Before going to Maryland for the NCAA semi-finals, Villanova had only managed to win four of their ten away engagements.

Considering the circumstamces and the pre-season ratings given by prognosticators, an invitation to the NCAA tournament was surprise. Villanova earned the right to go to the semifinals of the NCAA Eastern Regionals at College Park, Maryland by defeating West Virginia, 90-75.

The Cats staged one of their greatest comebacks in years after they had spotted West Virginia 42-39 at intermission. In the second half, Villanova scored 51 points and defeated the visitors pulling away.

At Maryland the Wildcats met NYU and Wake Forest. The NYU game demonstrated the Cats uncanny comeback ability. Several times they bounced back from near disaster to finally defeat the big city boys on a foul shot by Leftwich, and earned Villanova the right to meet Wake Forest. Thanks to Len Chappell's 22 points and 21 rebounds, the Demon Deacons from Wake Forest defeated the Wildcats 79-69.

DUQUESNE

Duquesne coach Red Manning has lost all of last year's 22-7 starting five with four graduating and Willie Somerset sitting out the season following a knee operation. Remaining are three juniors, 6-5 John Cegalis, 5-10 Paul Kudelko, and 6-2 Dennis Cuff, along with 6-5 senior Terry Malloy, all of whom saw most of their 1961-62 action in pre-game warmups. Sophomore prospects from a 12-1 frosh team include 6-3 Willie Ross, 6-0 Ron Willard, and 6-2 Frank Miniotas with Ross as a likely starter.

MEMPHIS STATE

Memphis State is probably the best team the Wildcats will face this season. The same squad which lost a 109-84 turkey shoot at the Palestra last year has four starters back for the 1963 match in Tigerland. Two 6-5 forwards, Hunter Beckman and Bob Neumann, plus 6-2 George Kirk and 6-3 Larry Garber were regulars on a team which shot 48.1% and 83.6 points per game. Center is the only question mark with Don Drewel, a 6-8 junior lacking experience, and 6-8 soph Jamie McMahan looking for the starting spot.

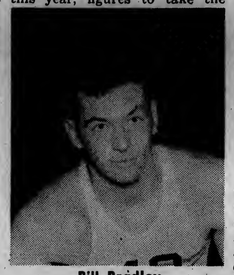
ST. FRANCIS OF BROOKLYN

St. Francis of Brooklyn should be a much improved team this year with the addition of some tall sophs to complement the scoring of 6-3 Jim Raferty and 6-2 Tom Kurowski. Big boys 6-7 Ted Kotch, 6-5 Ed Lein, and 6-4 George Steinmann should get plenty of rebounds giving Raferty and Kurowski ample opportunity to top their 30 points per game average of last year. Ray Nash, 6-0, will direct the traffic.

ST. PETER'S, JERSEY CITY

St. Peter's College of Jersey City, N.J. should present no problems for the 'Cats since they are currently faced with personnel and organizational difficulties. Coach Don Kennedy has a 180-94 won-loss record, earned over twelve years at St. Pete's. Primarily maintaining a small college schedule, their only major opponents are Miami, St. Joseph's and Villanova.

TOLEDO



Last year Coach Eddie Melvin's Rockets posted a 14-10 record and as a result this year face the toughest schedule ever lined up for a Toledo basketball team. Leading the returning eight lettermen are: Larry Jones, a senior who received some All-American mention last year, and 6-5 Jim Cox, a soph. The rest of the team is well rounded in height and experience and should fare well in their tough competition.

SCRANTON

Scranton is headed this year by Bill Witaconis who led the team in scoring last year as a sophomore. Last year the Royals played even .500 ball compiling a 12-12 record. They will probably repeat last year's record for they lack the good big man again but make up for this with experience and depth in the backcourt. The team's speed and shooting ability are good.

PRINCETON

This year Bill Bradley, a 6'5" sophomore who averaged thirty points per game, is expected to lead the Tigers to the Ivy League Title. Bradley, who may well be the best player in the League this year, figures to take the place of high scorer, Pete Campbell, and rebounder Al Kaemmerlen. Art Hyland, who averaged 14 ppg last year, will provide depth in the backcourt.

CANISIUS

Three seniors return this year and this should provide the Golden Griffins with all the help and talent they need to improve on last year's disappointing 12-9 record. The team is led by 6-5 Bill O'Connor who boasted a 22.6 scoring average last year, his second straight as an all-sectional choice. Height could be the Grifs' problem, O'Connor being the tallest on the team.

ST. JOHN'S

Gone are four of the five men that paced St. John's to a 21-5 record last year. Most notable of the departed is 6-10 All-American LeRoy Ellis. Coach Joe Lapchick is set in the backcourt with Don Burks and Dan Waddleton back. The Redmen may be hurting for big men up front, Bill O'Sullivan and John McKenna, both 6-7, give St. John's a tall, if inexperienced front line.

Assignment: find a filter paper that works harder the dirtier it gets

In chain-drag test, truck raises heavy dust clouds to check air filter efficiency.

Results: Up to 30,000 miles between filter changes in Ford-built cars for '63!

The 1963 Ford-built cars you see on the road these days can eat dust and keep coming back for more, thanks to improved carburetor air filters.

In our continuing quest to build total quality and service-saving features into Ford-built cars, our engineering research staff explored the entire field of physical chemistry for new air-purifying properties in materials.

The result: a filtering material made of chemically treated wood pulp and paper that permits Ford-built cars under normal operation to go from 24,000 to 30,000 miles before carburetor air filter replacement is required.

The new, tougher filter paper is accordion folded to increase surface area four-fold, permitting higher filtration in a smaller package. The more matter it accumulates, the better it filters right up to its full rated service life. It saves owners time and money. It keeps Ford-built engines livelier longer.

SETON HALL

Seton Hall will base its attack around Nick Werkman, a

Nick Werkman

6-3 Junior from Trenton Catholic who averaged 33 ppg last year. Werkman will be teamed up with 6-1 Golden Sunkett, (7.6 ppg) and Randy Chave 6-2 (6.9 ppg) Sophs Dick Dec (6-5) and Harrison Slaton (6-7) round out the starting five. Last year the Pirates averaged 88.1 ppg and broke 100 five times.

ST. BONAVENTURE

The Bonnies could be good enough for sectional honors and possibly a national threat if — and it's a big if—6-4 Fred Crawford recovers from tuberculosis. A healthy Crawford coupled with 6-6 Miles Aiken, who broke the school's sophomore scoring record last year (23.6) are a mighty one-two punch.

Miles Aiken

ST. FRANCIS OF LORETTO

Cal Fowler, one of the best in St. Francis' (Loretto) history, will be sorely missed. The Frankies hope, however, that the improved forecourt will override backcourt losses. Improvement will be looked for from returnees Sandy Williams and Gene De Berardinas. There's no worry abut the captain of the squad, senior Chris Carey. For coach Bill Hughes, this will be a year of transition.

NIAGARA

Without temporarily incligiblo Joe Maddrey Niagara was 7-6. With Joe, who averaged 19.5 ppg., the Purple Eagles were 9-2. Maddrey coupled. with 6-4 Ken Glenn (20.7 ppg) gives Niagara a potent scoring punch. Andy O'Connell, at 6-2 will quarterback the team and his running mate will be 6-1 Jim Kuryak. Coach Taps Gallagher's 29th year could be one his best.

XAVIER

Basketball's biggest coach, 6-8, 265 pound Jim McCafferty, essayed as tough a schedule as anyone in the country last year, began it under an injury cloud, and just about broke even. He's got two nimble, talented 6-7 Juniors to start out with in this rebuilding year plus experienced senior guards. The Musketeers will miss big Jack Throbe and little Bill Kirvin. In any event, the club must improve last year's sad 1-10 road record.

DETROIT

Now that one-man show Dave DeBusschere has graduated, the Titans of Detroit will be forced to rely on team play to compensate for his loss. Fortunately for the Titans, 6-2 guard Al Cech, a Junior, a 6-3 Senior forward Harry Munson, and Junior Dick Dzek, a 6-6 center will be back. Sophs Bill Downes, 5-8, and John Schrown, 6-5, appear to have cracked the starting line-up. In addition, the Titans will sport a strong bench.

QUAKER CITY TOURNAMENT

Villanova travels in fast company when they seek to defend their throne in the Quaker City Basketball Tournament, which opens at the Palestra Dec. 26. Providence, with Vinnie Ernst and John Thompson, is possibly the best in the East. Along with Bowling Green and big Nate Thurmond, Providence is a co-favorite to win. St. Joe's and La-Salle have the homecourt crowd to cheer them on and will probably make a run for the title. Delaware, Manhattan and Brigham Young (a dark horse) round out the other hopefuls.

Learning never stops for engineers at Western Electric

There's no place at Western Electric for engineers who feel that college diplomas signify the end of their education. However, if a man can meet our quality standards and feels that he is really just beginning to learn . . . and if he is ready to launch his career where learning is an important part of the job and where graduate-level training on and off the job is encouraged — we want and need him.

At Western Electric, in addition to the normal learning-while-doing, engineers are encouraged to move ahead in their fields by several types of educational programs. Western maintains its own full-time graduate engineering training program, seven formal management courses, and a tuition refund plan for out-of-hours college study.

This learning atmosphere is just one reason why a career at Western Electric is so stimulating. Of equal importance, however, is the nature of the work we do. Our new engineers are taking part in projects that implement the whole art of modern telephony, from high-speed sound transmission and solar cells to electronic telephone offices and computer-controlled production techniques.

Should you join us now, you will be coming to Western Electric at one of the best times in the company's history. In the management area alone, several thousand supervisory jobs are expected to open up to W.E. people within the next 10 years. And our work of building communications equipment and systems becomes increasingly challenging and important as the communications needs of our nation and the world continue to increase.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6206, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

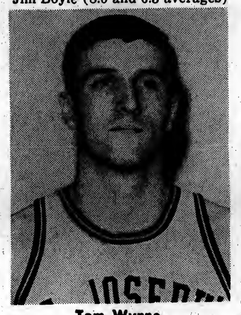
Big Five Race Features Strong Contenders

Four teams are in strong contention for the Big Five crown this year. Villanova, Penn, LaSalle, and St. Joseph's appear likely to make it a very close battle with a split crown not a remote possibility. Temple doesn't seem to be in the picture except that it could pick up second place in the event of a four way tie for first.



ST. JOSEPH'S

En route to the MAC championship last year, the Hawks used defensive tactics to score most of their points. Because of an unbalanced offense, they relied on disrupting the opponents' patterns and picked up fast breaks from steals.

The three lettermen lost last year through graduation ranked 1, 2 and 4 in the steal department. Therefore, the question is: can the current crop of eight lettermen pool enough offensive power to do the job?

Wynne Returns

Tom Wynne, who racked up 19.5 points and 10 rebounds per game last year, heads the returnees. He will be paired with Jim Boyle (8.0 and 6.5 averages) in the front court. At center is 6-8 Larry Hoffmann, a poor shooter (36% from the field) but a strong rebounder.

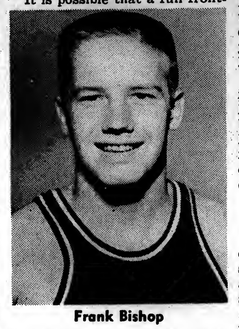
The backcourt remains intact with veterans Jim Lynam and Billy Hoy. Lynam and Wynne were the only two double-figure contributors last year. All of the returning subs saw action in at least 20 games and will be complemented by 5-8 Ed Walsh, who averaged 19.6 for the '62 freshmen team.

St. Joe's in NCAA

St. Joe's surprised everyone last year by taking fourth place in the Eastern Regionals of the NCAA. It will be hard for the Cats to defeat the Hawks this year. Last year was the first year in several years that Villanova defeated the Red and Gray in the Big Five series. The 54th and City Liners' coach is the highly regarded Jack Ramsay who gets the team and the crowd up for each game as if it was for the national championship. During the past summer Coach Ramsay put his team on a weight training schedule that should show some results this year. The players were on an isometric program that increased their strength and raised their jumping ability by an average of 3 inches.

Since the team will be weaker defensively, Hoffman and Boyle must give Wynne some aid in the form of at least 25 rebounds and 30 points a game between them. If they can and the backcourt lives up to expectations, The Hawks could improve on last year's 18-10 record.



TEMPLE

Temple will have the least amount of talent in the Big Five this year. Last year Temple's starting five and first two reserves were lost because of graduation.

Coach Harry Litwack will rely mostly on the 1961-62 freshmen basketball squad. The only upper classmen likely to break into the starting lineup are Elmer Snethen, Ken Krasmer and Bob Harrington. Harrington, from Cardinal Dougherty High in Philadelphia, was doing well last year as a forward until he ran into scholastic difficulties. A healthy Harrington could bring some light in what promises to be a bleak Owl season.

Dougherty Grads

It is possible that a full front-line of Cardinal Dougherty graduates will man the forward wall. The other two are Dan Fitzgerald and Vince Richardson.

Frank Bishop

At the moment, 6-8 Jimmy Boyle, from La Salle High, is playing center with Fitzgerald at the corner. Boyle is a good shooter but lacks the aggressiveness to combat the big men he will oppose. Fitzgerald, 6-5 and 210, probably can play a better defensive game. Litwack would like to have both him and Boyle in at the same time.

The backcourt candidates are headed by Frank Bishop who is the only one Litwack has who could run the offense. Challenging Bishop are Howie Turnoff, a transfer from Brandeis University; Bill Kelly, and Gary Kasmer, the lone backcourt letterman. The third letterman with Kramer and Kasmer is Elmer Snethen, a 6-4 forward who improved toward the end of last year but hasn't looked too good thus for.

Strong Defense

Litwack is considered to be one of the best coaches in the country. His teams have been especially noted for their strong defenses and their play execution in setting up double screens. One of Temple's former stars, Bill (Pickles) Kennedy, has returned to become the assistant coach after spending a couple of years in the Eastern Basketball League.

Temple will not only be shooting for strong contention in the Big Five race but has always been one of the top teams in the MAC. Unless Litwack can perform one of his greatest miracles, Temple has to be figured out of both races.

PENN

Although many teams rely on one man to carry the burden it still takes five players to make a team. And that's what Pennsylvania has — all five starters returning from last season plus most of the reserve corps.

Bob Purdy and John Wideman, a pair of all Ivy League selections, head the Quakers, a team which emphasizes teamwork.

Besides 6-4 Purdy and 6-3 Wideman, Coach Jack McClosky has three other seniors returning from last year's starting five. They are 6-5 Dave Robinson, 6-5 J. D. Graham, and 6-0 Sid Amira. Purdy (13.3) and Graham (6.2) will operate in the corners with Robinson (12.0) at center.

Wideman (13.2) and Amira (7.8) will direct the attack at the guard posts.

17-8 Last Season

This is the unit which compiled a 17-8 over-all record last season. They also placed second to Yale in the Ivy League, finishing with a league mark of 11-3.

The key holdover reserve is 6-0 junior Ray Carazo, who saw a great deal of service due to the injury and sickness of Amira. He averaged 10.2 points per game. Other juniors who return are 6-8 Joe Andrews (6.1) and 6-3 Jeff Sturm (6.0). These two provided most of the forecourt depth last season.

Another returnee is 6-7 Karl Vogelsang. Backcourt bench strength comes principally from

John Wideman

Dick Biborosch and Bill Englesbe.

Outstanding Sophs

Two outstanding sophomores who figure to see some action are Fred Greene and Bruce Moore, both 6-4. Greene broke Carazo's freshmen scoring record last season, averaging 20.9. However, Moore is called the most promising by Coach McClosky.

Penn is probably the best balanced team Villanova will face during the entire season. Each man fits right into the well-knit squad. If one of the starters has a bad night, there is always someone else to take up the slack and a capable reserve to put in his place. This is a situation all coaches would like to be faced with.

Penn again figures to challenge Yale for the top spot in the Ivy League along with Princeton, last season's third place finisher. It should be another good year for McClosky and his squad.

LaSALLE

Coach Dudey Moore has a team which has the potential to become one of the East's best.

However, the key to success is held by 6-4 senior guard Bill Raferty, who is a doubtful quantity because of an operation for a ruptured disc. If his back remains strong he could return to the form that saw him set the New Jersey schoolboy scoring record, the La Salle freshman scoring record, and brought him 17.8 p.p.g. as a sophomore. Last year he was able to play in only four games. So far his back seems good. If it remains this way La Salle could be great.

Other Worries

Raferty is not the only worry Coach Moore has, however. Frank Corace and Walter Sampson, starters last year as sophomores, were hot and cold performers. Corace (6-6) averaged 15.4 and Sampson (6-8) averaged 10.0, but they must become more consistent if the Explorers are to reach the top.

Sampson showed signs of future stardom in a late season game against Dayton, when he scored 20 points and took rebounds against the N.I.T.'s most valuable player, Bill Chmielewski.

5-10 Tony Abbott will be Raferty's running mate in the backcourt. He averaged 10.2 points last season. He has a tendency to become over-emotional in tough critical situations and must learn to relax.

Two sophomores, 6-7 George Sutor and 6-4 Al Tezsla, are trying for the remaining forecourt position. Tezsla, who has exceptional speed for a big man and is very strong under the boards, appears to have the inside track.

Sutor, the former Father Judge star, who averaged 22 points as freshman, will then become the number one frontcourt reserve. Another sophomore, 6-0 John Hart, could become the top resrve guard.

Reserves

Slated to see a great deal of reserve action are soph Harry Carpenter, 6-3 senior Gene Park, Jim Flavin, and Paul Gallagher. These men provide the team with needed depth.

Even without the services of its All-City guard Bob McAteer, La Salle should pose the biggest threat to St. Joseph's defense of the Middle Atlantic Conference crown. By the time they face Villanova, March 2, the Explorers should have developed into a powerful contender for Eastern laurels.

The selection was made at the Student Congress meeting, last Wednesday night. Nominations were made by various members of the Congress and a secret ballot determined the Villanova nominee.

High Average

Traynor's qualifications for the nomination include his 3.53 cumulative average as a history major, and his election as co-captain of the cross country team. In addition, he has been All-American in track for two years, and All-American in Cross Country this year.

Traynor was also inducted into Delta Sigma Epsilon, the National Catholic Honor Society, and has currently been a member of the Villanova Chapter of the Knights of Columbus.

Howley Runner-up

The other nominees for the honor were James Howley, John Neary, Joseph Tate, Art Wolf, Joseph Ruggiero, Robert Coogan, and Rocco Guidice. The field was initially narrowed by secret ballot to Traynor and Jim Howley. A final vote was then in favor of Traynor.

'Enchanted' Resumes Vasey Performances Until Sunday Evening

by Ron Fenstermaker

The Villanova Graduate Theatre Department's production of Jean Giraudoux's "The Enchanted" which opened with two performances in Vasey Hall on Saturday, December 1, will be presented Thursday evening, December 6; Friday evening, December 7; Saturday afternoon and evening, December 8; and closes Sunday evening, December 9.

The elimination of the Wednesday evening performance, the addition of Saturday matinees, and performances on two consecutive weekends are being tried for the first time by the Graduate Theatre. It is the first Graduate Theatre production of the school year. General admission is $1.75, special student's price of $1.00.

Essentially a Comedy

Directed by George M. Herman, assistant professor of theatre, "The Enchanted" is essentially a comedy exploring the boundaries of reality and fancy. Told as a fable about a small French town, the play concerns the transition of a young girl into womanhood. The young girl romances with a murderer whom the town suspects is a ghost, however, his true identity is learned when the town destroys the murderer, only to have him return as a real ghost.

Lead Roles

Lead roles are filled by 1962 Villanova graduate, Gerald Paonessa, as the ghost; Christine Assini, a graduate of Russell Sage College as his lover; and William Flynn, a Villanova M.A. graduate as the inspector. Also included in the company is, Professor James O'Tulse, of the Villanova speech department. Mr. Thomas Nevins, theatre department technical advisor, designed the setting.

Villanova Resumes Career Conference For Senior Class

After an absence of two years, the Annual Villanova Career Conference was resumed last Thursday at 10:45 in the Field House. Due to the constantly increasing membership of seniors each year, it was decided that the conference be moved from Vasey Hall, where it had originally been held.

In attendance were approximately 80 guest representatives from industry, many members of the Villanova faculty, and the class of 1963 of Villanova University.

Following an opening address by the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, a talk was given by Mr. W. A. Spartin of DuPont, entitled "Preparation to the Interview," in which he outlined the basic requisites for a successful Interview.

A second talk was given by Mr. Michael A. Mooney, of Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., on "What the Employer Looks for in the Interview."

Mr. William J. Bennett, Sr., of the U.S. Army Material Command then spoke on "What Information the Student should expect from the Interview."

Following these talks, a ten minute recess was held during which questions were presented to the speakers.

Mayor Tate Gives Keynote Address At Student Government Conclave

by Jim Brennan

In conjunction with Student Government Week, the first Student Government Conference of major scale was held on November 29 in Mendel Hall. All nineteen colleges in the area participated in this event.

Marty McGuinn, chairman of the conference, acted as master of ceremonies and opened the assembly by stating that its purpose was to exchange ideas and discuss common problems in student government.

The Honorable James H. Tate, Philadelphia mayor, greets the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, at the Student Government Conference. Marty McGuinn, Conference chairman, looks on.

The welcoming address was delivered by the Rev. John A. Kiekotka OSA, President of the University. Father Klekotka declared that young people should get in the spirit of government and that it will be these college students that government will depend on in the future. Father President finished by reading a letter from Anthony J. Celebrezze, United States Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, who sent his greetings to the delegates of the meeting.

A greeting was extended to the partakers on behalf of the undergraduate students by Joe Tate, President of the Student Body.

Keynote Address

The keynote address was given by the Honorable James H. J. Tate, mayor of Philadelphia.

After his talk, he was presented an engraved revere bowl in memory of his trip to Villanova.

The afternoon discussion topic was entitled, "How Much Responsibility Should A Student Government Be Given," and was delivered by Timothy L. Rose, President of the Students' Association of Haverford College. "Student Councils' Role In Education" was the evening topic.

Speaking of the accomplishments of the conference, Chairman Marty McGuinn said, "This is the first time our Student Council has attempted something of this nature and it is our hope that this conference will result in closer relations among area colleges."

Council Atmosphere Emanates Effectual Progress, Industry

The establishment of the guidelines for all campus organizations in the selection and approval of speakers was one of the key points of business at last Wednesday's Student Council meeting.

Traynor Nominated

Also highlighting the assembly was the election of Patrick Traynor as the Villanova nominee for the Outstanding Catholic Youth in America, the resignation of the Sophomore Day-Hop Representative John Galante, and the nominations for the Book of the Semester program.

Galante's resignation was prompted due to his obligations to post class work. Included in the book nominations are Nation of Sheep, Lederer, Causes of World War III, Mills, and Power and Diplomacy, Acheson. The final selection will be determined by the Student Faculty Committee.

The tentative approval of the Administration to rename the Commerce and Finance Building to Bartley Hall has also been granted. The Ways and Means Committee also noted the appropriation of five dollars to enter a representative in the Bakers-

Beta Gamma Debate Society Hosts Invitational Tourney

The Beta Gamma Debate Society will play host to some of the finest teams in the East this Saturday at its Third Annual Varsity Invitational Debate Tournament.

The program of debates will include 30 teams, which is a considerable expansion over last year's program. Teams will be traveling to the tournament from the States of New York, New Jersey, Maryland, and all parts of Pennsylvania. The most notable are the Big Five, Rosemont, Holy Family, Hofstra, and last year's Pennsylvania Champions, Kings College.

The tournament, which will begin at 9:30 am, will be officially opened by the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University. The competition will consist of three rounds of debate.

At the completion of the day's debates, awards will be presented to the top three teams on the basis of their overall won-lost record. Trophies will also be presented to the best affirmative and best negative speakers.

Terry Cooney, President of Beta Gamma, announced, "The eager and overwhelming response to our invitations lead us to believe that this tournament will be the best ever."

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

The National Science Foundation and the American Astronomical Society have arranged for Dr. Peter van de Kamp, Director of the Sproul Observatory of Swarthmore College to be Visiting Professor of Astronomy at Villanova University on December 11th and 12th.

Dr. van de Kamp is well-known for his work on the parallaxes of stars, especially of those stars that are smallest and nearest to the earth. He will give a popular lecture on astronomy titled "OUR STELLAR NEIGHBORS" on the evening of Tuesday, December 11th, at 8:00 P.M. in Room 158 Mendel Hall.

Interested faculty members and students of Villanova and all surrounding colleges are invited to the lecture. Members of the Rittenhouse Astronomical Society and the Amateur Astronomers and Telescope Makers of the Franklin Institute are also invited. The observatory will be open after the lecture.

Missing Link Contest Adds To Charity Weekend Events

This year's Charity Weekend was one of the best in the history of this annual tradition.

The Missing Link Contest started the weekend off early, on November 26, and the voting continued till Friday. The contest was won by the "Rosemonsters" mainly because of collections voluntarily taken up by girls of Rosemont College.

They were presented with a statuette which in the words of Edward Coffey, the Chairman of the Charity Ball, "looked almost liko an Oscar".

The Ball, held Friday night, was attended by more than 200 persons. Decorations were provided by Belle Masque and a 17 foot high chapel tower emphasized the theme of the dance — "Silver Bells."

Music was provided by the "Villanovans," the new Villanova dance band and according to the comments of many of the couples there, they did an excellent job.

Saturday morning the orphans of St. John's Orphanage were taken on a day's outing by many Villanovans and their dates. They visited Santa Claus who had dropped in at J. C. Penny's in Upper Darby, and were showered with gifts by their generous big "brothers and sisters."

Chairman for the entire weekend was Paul Norton, while Jack Degnan and John Hohenadel were the co-chairmen for the outing on Saturday.

Result: '63 Ford-built cars are better protected against rust than ever before

To tackle this assignment, Ford Motor Company engineers turned to zinc. Galvanized, or zinc-clad, steel has long been noted for its resistance to corrosion. It presented special problems which had limited its use in automotive applications, however. It was hard to weld, difficult to paint.

Our engineers developed special techniques to solve the welding problem. They found a process which eliminates the crystalline pattern on galvanized steel and produces a surface that will accept a high-quality paint job.

Now zinc can be married to steel and used for vital underbody parts and rocker panels of Ford-built cars. The zinc coating forms a tough barrier to corrosive moisture—and if corrosion attacks, the zinc sacrifices itself through galvanic action, saving the steel.

Other avenues explored in the fight against rust also brought results: special zinc-rich primers to protect key body areas, aluminized and stainless steels to extend muffler life, quality baked-enamel finishes that are more durable (and look better).

Another step forward in total quality—and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

Salt-water bath is one of tests used to check rust protection built into Ford-built cars.

PORTRETTE

Jovial Jim Tate

Leadership seems to be the most outstanding and appealing quality of James E. Tate, considering that he has been elected President of the Class of 1963 in both his Junior and Senior years. This is an accomplishment achieved by only a few Villanovans in the school's history.

Jim, a native of Toledo, Ohio, is majoring in industrial administration. After graduation he plans on a career in life insurance sales coupled with local politics. His plans for the future also include marriage this June and a permanent residence in the Philadelphia area.

Recently, Jim was selected to Villanova's Who's Who for his numerous contributions in the field of student activities. Besides being active on the Student Council, he holds memberships in the Blue Key, Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity, Turf 'n' Tinsel, and Belle Masque. He has also been active on various committees, namely: The Senior Dinner Dance, The Senior Jazz Festival, the Junior Steering, and the Junior Orphan's Outing Committees.

His jovial personality and friendly manner have, perhaps, aided him in his success. When asked to comment on his successful activities at Villanova, he stated: "Any success that I have experienced in the past, or any that I may experience in the future I can attribute to one man, my father, who has encouraged me at numerous times of indecision and doubt." In preparation for his career, Jim is selling insurance as Villanova's campus representative for Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.

field Annual Alligator races in California.

A controversial motion by Jim Tate to request the Administration to require all instructors to refrain from administering hourly examinations on the day upon which vacations commence was defeated by the Congress. Another motion, however, written by Jim McErlane seeking the painting of lines on the western sector of the parking lot, received the unanimous approval of the legislators.

The essence of the announcement regarding speakers is that all organizations inviting speakers to lecture before the student body are to notify the Speaker's Committee at least two weeks previous to the set date. The directive intends to avoid all conflicts between organizations. In the event of a conflict the speaker of greater importance will be given preference.

Station WRCV-TV to Present Political Union Discussion

by Jan M. Dyroff '1

Expounding upon the principle that political controversy is indigenous to the university students, Villanova's neophyte Political Union will take its forum before the eyes of the public on WRCV-TV's "Concept."

Emanating from historic Independence Hall the argumentative tyros will hold their debate in the rejuvenated Congress Hall Wing early in December. The City of Philadelphia has granted permission for interested spectators to view the proceedings from the visitors balcony.

Counterpointing around the general topic of the expedience of military aid to India, the organization will hold a trial run before their television debut. The trial run will be held Thursday, Dec. 6, at 8:30 p.m. in the Physics Lecture Hall, Mendel. Dr. Hafeez Malik of the Political Science Department will be the moderator of the proceedings.

Acting head of the Union, Pete DiLiberty, let it be known that anyone interested in political hair-splitting, no matter what viewpoint, from hard-bound conservative to radical liberal, can join the Union. Applications should be made to the various parties.

Who's Who Selectees Receive Memoranda Concerning Benefits

Selection to the national Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges is not merely a nominal recognition of achievement. The thirty-six Villanovans who were named to the list recently came to this understanding when they received letters from the national Who's Who office in Alabama.

The letter explained that a special Who's Who placement service will send each interview forms, which they may use in seeking future employment.

Members will also receive survey sheets to be used in the publication Tommorrow's Leaders Speak, an opinion poll on various national issues.

Finally, all selectees appear in the national Who's Who yearbook and receive key-pins.

Psychological Service Available To Students

Dr. W. Porter Swift, Director of Testing for the Office of Psychological Services, announced that the services of his office are still available to all freshmen who have not taken the comprehensive tests. Students may take all six tests at once, or by appointment, may take the tests separately in their free time.

The tests provide, for the student, a basis for counselling during his four years at the university.

Conformity or Individuality?

There is an inherent lack of something in the general atmosphere of Villanova. Granted there are few colleges or universities with as beautiful a campus as ours, but that points to a large and efficient gardening staff not atmosphere.

The ingredient that is lacking is individuality on the part of the student. In any large group of people there is always the element of stylistic conformity, which is natural. That does not, however, preclude the possibility of the development of individuality.

In one way it is unfortunate that Villanova does not suffer from the plague of the bearded unwashed ones for they, in their own way, are expressing their dissatisfaction with the norm and their desire to achieve something else. This desire to be different is laudable.

In contrast to that it seems evident that there is no such desire of any kind on this campus. Out of a large student body, why is it always the same people who support every activity? Is it that no one else can write except the staffs of the student publications? Is it that no one else is capable of standing on their own two feet and expressing an idea except the student legislators? Is it that no one dares to take the step to individuality?

A problem as old as the ancient Greek philosophers paces the individual's steps. Xenophanes faced the problem of being an individual and he declared "the wisdom (of individuality) is better than the strength of men." Xenophanes dared the censure of his time and pursued individuality and his memory is still revered twenty-five centuries after his death.

It is recognized that the path of the individual is not an easy one. but is is also well to keep in mind that all the great works of history were achieved by individuals.

One's days at Villanova are all too few It is in these fleeting years that one's personality is polished. Now is the time to make the decision—for conformity or for individuality.

An Open Letter To The Senior Class

It is with regret that I find it necessary to direct an open letter such as this to you, the Class of 1963.

It has come to my attention that several of you have initiated and nurtured a rumor concerning the recent change of location of the Senior Dinner Dance from the Sheraton Hotel to the Philadelphia Athletic Club.

Through this letter I hope to put an end to all rumors and assure the sensible members of the class that any rumors circulated are entirely false in nature. I am most confident that those of you who have worked with me the past two years and others of you who have come to know me personally know me better than to honor any accusations made without justification. It is not to you that I address this letter but rather to the other members of our class.

I understand by way of these rumors that I supposedly was offered a "commission" or "bonus" from the management of the Downingtown Motor Inn. Perhaps this report was started as the result of some "deep thinking" on the part of some people who knew I was employed by the Motor Inn from May to July 1962.

If this commission basis is in reality true, why did I last year bother to bargain with the management to bring the price of the dinner down fifty cents and not leave it as originally quoted and realize a profit of fifty cents per person. Why did I this week bother to bargain with the Philadelphia Athletic Club, where we are incidentally holding the dinner dance, and realize a savings of ninety-six cents to each of you. I am sure last year's and this year's class officers will bear me out on any of these facts.

The reason for leaving the Sheraton was a simple one, a mixup in their management.

I am inviting all of you who still doubt my word to a class meeting scheduled for tomorrow at 10:30 A.M. in 216 C & F at which time we will discuss anything on your mind. Thanking you for your time, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
James E. Tate
President, Class of 1963

Gross Misgivings

To the Editor:

I must congratulate the Villanovan for publishing Mr. Gross' letter in the November 14 issue of the paper; it took courage. The charges against Mr. Whitman Bassow and the Student Council seem to me quite erroneous and I believe to the majority of those who attended the lecture on contemporary Russia.

Mr. Bassow's credentials are anything but "fly-by-night, flash-in-the-pan" ones. I refer to the Villanovan announcement of the lecture.

If his qualifications were as poor as Mr. Gross insinuates, may I ask why such a gathering appeared for the lecture?

Certainly not because it was sponsored by the Student Council, but perhaps because Mr. Bassow had something to give to those who were interested enough to hear him.

Stating that Mr. Bassow "hemmed and hawed throughout his boring oration" and that this "was evident to everyone present" is an outright injustice to the speaker and those present. I was there and did not evidence this, and I assume that I do not stand alone.

The charges against the Student Council are malicious and sound as if they come from one who has some personal grievance against that organization.

This lecture was the first supported by our Student Council with the students' funds. I think it is a welcome step to the undergraduates to see something tangible being done with their funds rather than nothing at all.

Using Mr. Gross' advice to use better judgment in the future in selecting speakers, perhaps I may suggest we secure J.F.K. for the next Student Council lecture; but may he not also be termed a "flash-in-the-pan individual?"

William E. Blauvelt, Jr., '65

More Misgivings

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, November 6, the Student Council presented a lecture by Mr. Whitman Bassow, noted Newsweek correspondent recently expelled from the Soviet Union.

Mr. Bassow, though not the most polished orator to ever visit the Villanova campus, did present a very interesting picture of modern Russia.

The success of this presentation may be most adequately measured by the response of the 450 students who spent a worthwhile hour and a half in Vasey Auditorium.

The very lengthy and enthusiastic applause granted to Mr. Bassow we consider to be representative of an endorsement of the student body and not at all of the spurious indignation expressed in this column.

It is true that some students were disappointed because Mr. Bassow did not occupy his time with a fire and brimstone condemnation of Soviet foreign policy. However, even these individuals were quite satisfied with the logical and probing survey of contemporary Russian life.

The speaker did not concentrate his lecture on those government figures who appear in our daily newspapers but rather those common individuals who make up the Russian population — the Russia which lies below the bellowing of Communist ideology.

The impression to be gathered from the previous "Letter to the Editor" was that the Student Council was quite distressed and frantic because half the semester had been completed and no speaker had visited the Villanova campus. Hence, a "fly-by-night, flash-in-the-pan" was brought in.

This situation is simply a figment of the imagination. Mr. Bassow had been contracted through his agency in early October. This was shortly after his expulsion from Moscow and almost immediately after his consent to a three month lecture program.

An allusion to the dean of the Free World news correspondents in Moscow or even to anyone with the credentials of a Bureau Chief of one of this nation's most respected news magazines as a "fly-by-night" is not to be taken seriously and warrants no comment in this letter.

Rest assured that the Student Council has and will continue to use discretion in its selection of fine speakers for the second semester. The student body will be informed shortly of a well-planned and balanced program for the second semester and the upcoming year.

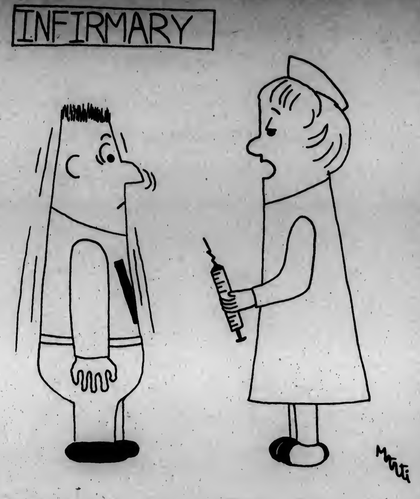
Sophomore Blues

To the Editor:

In regard to the letter written last week concerning the so-called "shortcomings" of the class of '65. I would like to state that the gentleman made many good points, but I do not agree with his statement that the class is ruled by a clique.



The needed help for the dance and the enthusiasm for the Delaware game can only come from the class as a whole.

If certain individuals seem to be doing all the work, I would not classify them as belonging to a clique, but only as a too few group of people who have a desire to sacrifice their time for the betterment of the class.

I wholeheartedly welcome a sense of spirit and I welcome all the opinions of my constituents. For a "representative" is concerned with the interests and desires of the whole class and not a select group within that class.

I think I speak for all the officers of our class when I say that only by a united and spirited class can our officers expect to accomplish anything of lasting value.

Strength Of Belle Masque Play Lies In Subordinate Characters

by George Welch

"The Time of Your Life" put on by Belle Masque, November fourteenth through seventeenth, is a play which sparkles with humor, and intoxicates with its insight and pathos, but like the Noilly-Prat which was supposed to serve as champagne, most of the performance seemed to lack the effervescence of the real thing. However, there were several individual performances which stood out as a credit to the play and the players. After having viewed the performance twice I was struck by the consistency in performance from one night to the next.

William Saroyan's award-winning play, originally in five acts, is an impressionistic microcosm, with slight plot, and great opportunity for individual acting expression within the large cast of characters. The complete time span of twenty-four hours is spent in a waterfront bar in San Francisco.

In this interval, Joe, described by Saroyan as a young loafer with money and a good heart, tries to discover the 'good' in the various patrons of Nick's bar, and subsequently tries to encourage and bring out this virtue in himself and the others. The love interest in the play is centered on the characters of Kitty Duval and Tom, Joe's friend, admirer, and errand boy.

McIntyre's Interpretation

Dick McIntyre as Joe created a definite interpretation of the role. His timing, movement, and voice inflection were good, but there was something wrong with the part. The casting instructions for Joe note that he should be a young man, but Mr. McIntyre's hair was powdered making him look old. Also, Mr. McIntyre's performance was aloof, with little of the casualness, humor, and warmth that the part demands.

However, this interpretation of Joe's role may be consistent in light of the changes made in the structure of the play in this production. The original five acts were condensed to three, eliminating a scene in Kitty's room, ostensibly because of limited facilities and problems in scenery changes. Several characters were also eliminated as not being important to the play. The characters were not missed, but cutting that scene from the play practically destroyed the characterization of Kitty and reduced Tom and Kitty's love to something inconsequential. With the imaginative use of lights and a few props, I think that it could have been put on.

Players Alternate

The role of Kitty was played by Sheila Sheehan and Diane Hneleski on alternate nights. It is difficult to judge which performance of this weakened part was better, but I think that Miss Sheehan managed to touch more of the essential character of Kitty Duval as a street-walker, with warmth, memories, and dignity, but little control of her emotions.

The real strength of the Belle Masque production was in the performances of the subordinate characters. Peter Smith as Nick the bartender was warm and humorous. James Mason as Harry the frustrated comedian created a very interesting character. There were the impassioned "No Foundation-" of Mr. Rosintoski as the Arab, and the lovable exuberant prevarications and rolling eyes of Kit Carson played by Mr. Resinski. Larry Miley turned in a good performance as Krupp the confused cop. The feminine segment of the cast got some attention for the fine figures they cut — especially Tritia Stroud in a floppy hat and drooping nylons. The real showstopper was Bill Byrne as Willie the marble-game maniac, who waited quietly for the major part of the play, and then exploded into a spirited, leaping performance.

Facilities Not Conducive

The scenery seemed appropriate to the setting of a waterfront dive, beat up and dirty, but the special effects and makeup left something to be desired.

Taken in its entirety, there was a great deal that could have been criticized in this production, but then there were certain aspects that should be praised. The main criticism that I have is the apparent lack of spirit in presentation. This may be due in part to the play, in part to the inexperience of the players, but it may also be due to the rather poor facilities.

Ship And Camera Work Successful But Picture Falls Short Of Great

by Art Molitierno
and Ray Ritter

Set against the background of tempestuous seas, breadfruit plants, sensuous uninhibited Polynesian women, and swash-buckling heroes, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has produced its newest entry into the world of pictorial fiction with its eighteen million dollar Mutiny on the Bounty.

In the movie, the old tale of the mutiny on April 28, 1789 aboard the H.M.S. Bounty is re-told from the book of the same title by Nordhoff and Hall, although it would even be hard for the authors to recognize it. The mutiny is led by the first mate, Fletcher Christian (Marlon Brando), against an officer of modest background named William Bligh (Trevor Howard). Because of Bligh's harsh and inhuman tactics against the crew, Christian is forced to mutiny against him and his ideas with the help of a member of the crew, John Mills (Richard Harris).

After taking over command, Christian becomes so possessed by the idea of sailing back to England to clear his name, and the guilt that looms over his crew, that it results in his own death. In the end the crew of the H.M.S. Bounty did succeed because at least one man will live to tell the story of Captain Bligh.

Camera and Music

The camera work takes the viewer aboard the Bounty during the violent storms, visits to sun-drenched islands, and the mutiny itself. From the blueness of the ocean deep to the tan complected bodies of the Tahitian women, the camera captures every hue and color in the spectrum. On the island more than ten thousand Polynesian natives greet the members of the crew behind a background of light blue sky, green hils, deep blue water, and the white sails of the Bounty and the native ships.

The music (whose opening measures bear an amazing resemblance to Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair) inspires the audience to watch the Bounty be tossed from wave to wave, and from port to port. The score which is based on Polynesian songs as well as sea chants was recorded for the film by an enlarged MGM symphony orchestra and the chorus in the background is more than adequate.

Comedy

Although the picture is interpreted as a very serious saga of the sea, there is much comedy throughout. Brando with his usual sly and side remarks carries the picture through its crucial lengths. One scene pictures Brando and Howard below in the captain's cabin. The captain after receiving notices from the island that Polynesian women must be handled warmly, orders Christian to return to the islands and make love to the chief's daughter. Brando asks, "Is that an order, sir?"

An is affirmed by the captain. The next scene pictures Brando running up the ladders, lowering the longboat, and standing in front of the longboat with his hand in his vest, while the French national anthem is heard in the background. Other scenes occurring between the island girls and the crew serve to break up the picture.

Not Necessarily Great

Now, a picture that has 1) cost millions 2) color camera work, and sets that are magnificent and 3) last and not (by the slimmest means) least — girls, is sure to be good. But not necessarily great. From the standpoint of beautiful girls (literally thousands of them) the picture is well worth seeing. However, there are serious flaws.

Everyone is well acquainted with the acting abilities of Marlon Brando and Trevor Howard. Both actors were well cast for their respective roles. It is a shame that spending millions on sets does not increase the quality of the script or plot. It seems that the ship, Bounty, is a success while the picture, Mutiny on the Bounty, falls short of expected quality.

The acting was good where the script permitted — e.g., in the case of Captain Bligh. However, Christian's role and dialogue were limited to that of a more or less vindictive opponent of Captain Bligh.

Necessary Scene

After reading the title of the book and then seeing the mutiny scene there could be much doubt whether this scene was at all necessary. At any rate, the entire scene was poor. The exchange of words in the mutiny scene between Christian and Bligh is more similar to that of two self-restrained diplomats than a captain and his mutinous first mate.

In the final analysis Mutiny on the Bounty may be said to be the finest pictorial travelogue that Hollywood has yet produced. If you are romantic at heart, spend $2.75 and get three hours' escape from the madness of modern society.

English Si — Latin No

by John Neary
NFCCS Senior Delegate

There exists today in our Catholic churches a barrier between the altar and the pew. People at Mass rarely hear what what the priest is saying, much less understand the language he is using. Practical unity and intercommunication between priest and people is disrupted by a veritable Chinese wall: Latin.

Roman Rite Language

First of all, we must remember that Latin is the liturgical language only of the Roman rite of the Catholic Church. It became that, only because of the fact that Latin, at the time of its adoption by the Roman rite, was the common tongue of the people.

Save for a few scholars, it is a dead language. Not one percent of the faithful understand it. It no longer effectively serves the devotional needs of the faithful, and unfortunately has even occasioned widespread apathy and ignorance of what is being said at the altar.

Christ Used Vernacular

The vernacular is the living, functioning language of the people — in our case, English. Our Lord preached in Aramaic and prayed in Aramaic — again the language of the people. When He spoke, He wanted to express ideas and to communicate thoughts and sentiments. Because Latin today requires the faithful to use an unfamiliar language, it renders easy, natural and fruitful participation in the Mass and Liturgy impossible. It violates a basic law of all prayer and devotion which requires that to pray intelligently and fervently, a Christian must pray with his whole mind, heart and soul. And this is possible only when he readily understands what he is saying.

Crumbling Chinese Wall

Help dismantle this Chinese wall between altar and pew. Help make possible once again a generous, enthusiastic and spontaneous participation of the faithful in public worship, especially the Sacrifice of the Mass. Cooperate in an effort to overcome an obstacle preventing the faithful from uniting with the celebrant in praying to God in the language they understand.

Flyers will be distributed next week with information about a student petition to be sent to the Ecumenical Council.

'Tons Of Fun' Cop Intramural Crown As Bulldogs Offer Stiff Opposition

The Rejects, better known as the Tons of Fun, have won the Intramural football title.

Undefeated in two years and 26-1-1 in their three years together, the senior team defeated the Bulldogs, 2-0, in a closely fought championship game.

Each team missed numerous chances to cross the goal. The Bulldogs had an opportunity early in the game on an interception at the Rejects' ten-yard line. Four passes went incomplete and the champs took over. A long pass from Fred Shaughnessy to Pince Panetta put them on the Bulldog twenty.

Pass interference on the next play carried the ball to the two, but a timely interception by Bob Shayer got the challengers out of trouble.

Shayer might have gone all the way with a block, but Charlie Doloway forced him out of bounds on the thirty-yard line.

The Bulldog captain, Shayer, did everything in the game; quarterback, catch passes, and play a good defensive game.

Successive first down catches by Bill Bracken and Larry Everling, the Rejects' captain, moved the champs downfield late in the game but they were held and had to punt. Jim Grady put the Bulldogs in a hole with a good boot.

A stout defense led by Chick McDonnell and Marty Whalen and backed up by Buzzy Lang and Kinsey Walsh continuously put on the pressure from there.

Hard-charging Hal Canty then tagged the Bulldog quarterback for the game-winning safety.

Injured seriously in the first half was Denny Calahan, the Rejects' leading scorer and pass receiver. He dislocated his left shoulder for the second time this season. Joe 'Fatso' O'Dowd also was injured, pulling a leg muscle.

Behind The Scene

By Tom Bruderle

Villanova has accepted a bid to appear in the fourth annual Liberty Bowl game to be held on Saturday, December 15, at Philadelphia Stadium.

For Villanovans it was a surprise to say the least. Following the 14-0 victory over Detroit, it was rumored that the Cats might get a return invitation to El Paso to defend their Sun Bowl Championship. The Monday after the Massachusetts fiasco, however, Villanova's chances were bleak.

Rutgers

A 34-12 bombing of Rutgers aided the Main-Liners cause, but the outlook was still not good. Both coach and team have to be good to come back with such a convincing triumph coming after a 19-18 heartbreak. But it's hard to sell that to a bowl promoter.

Finally, last Monday it was officially announced that Villanova had accepted a bid from Bud Dudley, a former Athletic Director at Villanova. Although Villanova was not as sought after as Penn State, there were several reasons why the Wildcats were picked.

The Nittany Lions had accepted a bid to play in the Gator Bowl after they defeated Pitt. Being the top team in the East, it was only natural that Dudley would be interested in the upstaters. Another contender was Boston College. Recently the Golden Eagles clawed their way through Boston University (one of the top teams in the nation in pass defense) by a 45-21 score. Needless to say, BC's first score came on a Concannon-to-Graham pass on the game's first play from scrimmage.

An invite extended to BC might have been a logical choice judging by their record, but last year another out of state team, Syracuse, was pitted against Miami in a game that had a poor turnout.

Ernie Davis

Syracuse led by Ernie Davis was one of the top teams in the nation last year. Local TV coverage plus two out of state teams kept the attendance figures down.

Since the bowl's inception, the gate has steadily been decreasing even though Alabama, Syracuse, Miami, and Penn State (twice) had appeared. In order to receive a good Philadelphia attendance, Dudley has invited a local team, Villanova.

Villanova's opponent will be Oregon State, featuring the nation's leading offensive weapon, Heisman trophy winner Terry Baker.

Rejects Win Title; Basketball Leagues Commence Operations

Rejects emerged the victors in the rugged Intramural League on Monday, November 26, when they beat the Bulldogs 2-0.

Basketball Begins

Intramural Basketball tapped-off its season on November 28. This year there are six leagues, five in Alumni Gym and one in the Field House, with forty-eight teams participating. The games in the Field House league will begin at 8:00 except on Monday's when they will begin at 7:00.

Two Freshmen recently joined the Intramural Council; they are Bob Beise and Al Lupcho.

Wildcats Travel To Toledo For Skirmish With Rockets

by Tom Finan

In their first road game of the season, the Villanova Wildcats face off against the Rockets of Toledo University this Saturday evening, in Toledo, Ohio.

With eight lettermen back from last year and seven Soph prospects from last seasons well balanced Frosh five, Coach Eddie Melvin's quintet is expected to show improvement over 14-10 record of a year ago.

Backbone of the Buckeye squad is 6-1 Larry Jones, an All-American candidate who has smashed all records at TU. With a 19.8 ppg. average earned over two seasons, Jones led the field in scoring, point average, rebounds, field goals, free throws percentage. He is fast on his way to breaking the school lifetime record of 1319 points, since he already has 918 point total for his past two years of Varsity competition.

Another important fixture of Coach Melvin's outfit is junior Ray Wolford, 6-6 and 215 lbs. Wolford had a 15.9 ppg. average last season for the second highest scorer. He is potentially one of the finest players in the country.

Backing up Jones and Wolford will be 6-7 junior Ralph Kierdel, 6-6 senior Larry Monier and 6-6 soph Doug Duncan. Also expected to see action are 6-5 senior Jay Bail, 6-5 soph Carl Utz and 6-4 Bill Mc Hale.

The Toledo five has overall depth, sufficient bench strength and good general size and also very good speed. On the deficit side, their greatest problem seems to be the lack of the "big man," inexperience in the backcourt and one of the toughest schedules ever faced by a Rocket basketball squad.

Soviet Educational System Studied By Father Klekotka

by Bill McCloskey

Shabby buildings, foggy weather, and guided tours were the order of the day for Villanova President, Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, for a three week period that ended November 29.

During that period Father Klekotka had donned a coat and tie for a trip to Europe and Russia to view the much-acclaimed Russian school system.

The high point of the trip for Father and the other fifty-eight persons that made up the Comparative Education Society, was a visit to the Shevuhenko University at Kiev in the Soviet Union's Ukraine region.

The University is some eight years older than Villanova and has a slightly larger student body, 13,000. Some 90% of the students, those that the University says are "brighter," receive a "pension," and education in the Soviet Union is free.

Shabby Facilities

Facilities at the universities and secondary schools visited by the group were larger than those here. Facilities however, like most of the buildings visited, were shabby. Even the newer school buildings, while modernistic from the outside, are poorly constructed.

Even the floor in the two-year-old Hotel Moscow, the base of operations for three days, did not meet the wall, reported Father Klekotka.

Just as religion is a required subject for all Catholics here at Villanova, all students must take a course in Communist philosophy, history, and morals at Kiev. Although there were opportunities to observe the after-class activities at the University, the principals were shown a film that indicated that although more were disposed to study,

Beta Gamma Society Hosts Annual Debate Lehigh Wins Tourney

The Beta Gamma Debating Society hosted twenty-one eastern schools on Saturday, December 8, for its Third Annual Invitational Debate Tournament.

Bad weather forced a reduction to twenty-one of the original thirty schools scheduled to attend.

Tournament Opened

The tournament was officially opened by the Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President.

In his welcoming address he expressed his pleasure at seeing the students partaking in an exercise which he felt contributed greatly to the rounding out of their total personality.

After his address the first round of debate commenced.

Two rounds of debate in the afternoon concluded the activities.

Winners Announced

After the completion of debate and tabluation of the final scores, Terrence Cooney, Beta Gamma president, announced the results. Lehigh University was awarded first place with a perfect 6-0 record.

A three way tie for second place among St. Joseph's College, Rutgers State University-Camden, and Villanova, each with a 5-1 record, was broken on the basis of point scores. St. Joe's took second, Rutgers third, and Villanova fourth.

Best Speakers

Best individual speaker trophies were awarded to Dennis Suppli of St. Joseph's as the best affirmative debater and William Walsh, Seton Hall, as the best negative debater.

In commenting on the day's tournament Cooney stated that he "wished to give special thanks to the Kombjt Club of Camden, School of the Holy Child-Rosemont, the Villanova Nurses, and all others who helped to make this day so successful."

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Dear Villanovans:

As we approach the Christmas season this year, we cannot help but think that only a few weeks ago our world seemed to be on the brink of war. We, therefore, have ample reason today to welcome the Nativity of the Prince of Peace with prayers of heartfelt thanks that we have been preserved from this disaster. At the same time, we must be reminded that our efforts to maintain world peace must be redoubled. This means that we must do all that is in our power to make our world worthy of the peace of Christ. We can do this by the practice of the charity that He has taught us and by devotion to the ideals which He so beautifully exemplified in His own life.

As we near Christmas day, may I wish all Villanovans the blessings of our Divine Savior coupled with the hope that the coming year will see us all coming closer to Him in our way of life. Merry Christmas!

Sincerely yours,

John A. Klekotka, OSA.

LYNX Heads Promise Start Of Campus Sales Following Yule Break

The campus literary magazine, The Lynx, will be on sale the first day after Christmas vacation.

This year's Lynx, under the editorship of Frank Murphy, will feature an interview with Bennett Cerf, President of Random House, publishers of the Modern Library series.

Taped in New York

The interview was taped on September 27 in Mr. Cerf's New York office, Dr. Joseph C. Reino and Frank Murphy acting as interviewers.

The forthcoming Lynx will include a review of Richard A. Duprey's new book, Just Off The Aisle. Mr. Duprey is the Chairman of the Villanova Theatre Department.

Other articles will include student contributions of short stories and poems. Andy Lovas is responsible for the art work for this issue.

Annual Moot Court Arguments Decided In Favor Of Appellee

The annual Moot Court debate of the Villanova Law School was held at 8:15 last Monday, December 10, in the Moot Courtroom of Garey Hall.

Kenneth Garber and Robert Silverberg of the Cardozo Club (appellee) were declared the winners over Richard Roesgen and Robert Corcoran, the appellants of the St. Thomas More Club. Each of the winning contestants receives $50, and their club wins $100.

Judge Hastie Presides

The presiding judge was the Honorable William Henry Hastie from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. His associate judges were the Honorable Joseph S. Lord, III, from the U.S. District Court, and The Honorable William Duff, Jr., from the Supreme Court of Delaware.

The argument this year centered around the question of whether a federal statute, not recognized in a specific state, could be used in deciding whether or not a labor union was a legal entity as stated in the NLRB statutes.

The contestants' written briefs were submitted three days before Monday night's oral arguments. After deliberation the judges concurred and declared the Cardozo Club the winner.

Written Briefs Wordy

Following the decision the judges commented that the written briefs were wordy in parts and not concise enough. They agreed, however, that all the arguments presented orally were excellent.

Judge Hastie said that it was the closest of all the moot court decisions he has thus far had to make. Judge Lord pointed out that the four contestants in their oral arguments did exceedingly well to avoid pitfalls in answering questions put to them by the bench.

Coffee was afterwards served in the law school lounge to the hundred people who attended.

Highly Hopeful Council Proposes Reading Plan To Stimulate Students

A motion recently passed by the Student Council has met with highly enthusiastic support by certain members of our student body. The proposal entails the selection of a well-known and highly controversial book by an eminent author for the purpose of discussion and debate.

A volunteer panel will be constituted of those students who have read the book and have found it to contain certain elements which necessitate an intelligent discussion. The Student Council assures the student body that the selection of the proposed work will be of such literary merit as to be worth taking their time.

Intellectual Motivation

The primary objective in a plan such as this is to motivate the minds of the students toward the positive need for discussion and debate as part of the intellectual stimuli of college life.

Mermen Place Second in Carnival As Maryland Breaks Meet Records

by Roger Bride

On Saturday morning the university's swimming team journeyed to New York City to open its 1962-63 season at the Eastern Collegiate Swimming Association Relay Carnival held in the Quigley Pool on the New York University campus.

Colgate, who was the team champion last year, was heavily favored because of its veteran squad but had to cancel at the last minute. Maryland upset the field by winning six of ten events and finishing first. Villanova finished a strong second.

Meet Dominated

The meet was completely dominated by the Maryland and Villanova teams. Maryland took six first placed and two seconds to compiling 124 points. In all of their winning efforts the Maryland team set Relay Carnival records. The Wildcats took two first places and six seconds piling up 88 points.

One of Villanova's seconds was a disputed finish with Maryland in the last event. The final outcome of the meet had already been determined but the 400 yard Medley Relay was a tight dual. Both teams finished with the same time of 3:58.8 seconds, but the referee gave the final nod to the University of Maryland.

Villanova was strong in the Freestyle events, setting new records for the Relay Carnival, New York University Pool and a Villanova University Team in both the 400 and 500 yard events with times of 3:23.7 and 4:22.2 respectively. The 400 yard team consisted of Rick Girdler, Paul Winn, Jack Geoghegan, and Dick McDonough. Girdler, Geoghegan, McDonough and Winn doubled in the 500 yard Freestyle. Chris Fished was the fifth member of that team.

Records Fall

Other Villanova records fell including a 1:32.8 time in the 200 yard freestyle relay by Doug Reback, John Manning, Winn and Fisher but again, Maryland nullified this great push by winning and setting a New Relay Carnival Record. John Leidy, Ed Brier, Frank Keim and Roger Guthrie set a new V. U. record in the 400 yard Breast-Butterfly Relay with a time of 4:22.7 in finishing.

Rutger's Gains 44

Maryland and Villanova dominated the meet so much that Rutgers, the third team, could only put together 44 points which was less than Villanova's point total when it finished fourth last year. There were twelve teams entered from six states. This number is the largest field to compete in this Third Annual Carnival.

The teams, in addition to Maryland, Rutgers and Villanova were: Adelphi, City College, Fordham, Gettysburg, Lafayette, Manhattan, MIT, NYU, Queens and Union.

Frosh Swim

Led by two strong relay teams and a record smashing effort by Ken Herr the freshmen swimming team easily defeated Malvern Prep at Villanova on November 29th. Paced by Herr with a time of 29.2 in his leg of the event the 200 yard team went on to better the old Frosh record of 1:55.3 by clocking a time of 1:52.

Herr broke the Freshmen record for the 100 yard Breast Stroke by 4 seconds with a time of 1:09.5. The losers were paced by two double winners, T. Johnson and P. Hornsleth.

The final score of the meet was 62-33.

SPORTS WILDCAT

Traynor, Zwolak, Sullivan

by Joe McCarthy

An array of halos and bright lights have befallen the somewhat blasé Villanova athletic scene since the University adjourned for that annual Stuff-Up time, Drumstick Day.

These beacons range in intensity from an unexpected, yet deserved, invite to the Liberty Bowl and the selection of two senior gridiron heroes to the Eastern All-American squad, to a first place IC4A Cross Country finish, second place laurels in NCAA competition, and national accolades for the performances of three Villanova Cross Country runners as All-American stars.

The football situation rates no further eulogy until after their next hurdle fades into history. But the Cross Country efforts now will rest ad infinitum a memory.

IC4A Champions

A strong, dedicated Villanova contingent first upset the favored Michigan team in rolling to the IC4A title behind the brilliant one-two finish of Vic Zwolak and Pat Traynor. Then, a week later, the group, returning from vacation, ventured into East Lansing, Michigan to compete for the NCAA team title.

In a tight battle between a sleek, balanced squad from some place called San Jose State, they finished second best, just 11 points behind and some 50 points ahead of their nearest rival. San Jose with the team low of 58 placed two of their five man team on the All-American squad composed of the first 15 finishers.

The driving Wildcats, edged out with 69 points, however, gained one consolation. Three Main Liners, Senior Co-Captain Pat Traynor, with his second place finish, Junior Vic Zwolak, in fourth place, and Sophomore Tommy Sullivan, in fifteenth place, gained berths on the All-American Cross Country squad. In doing so, they represented the only school in the country to garner this distinction.

Two of Three All-Americans

Another sophomore Dave Hyland crossed the tape amid some ten runners in close formation to take twenty-fifth. Coupled with returning stars Zwolak and Sullivan, they hold the hope for the 1963 title.

And in the past week's events, it might be noted that an ex-Villanovan of All-American track fame, Frank Budd, caught his first touchdown pass as a professional football player.

DPM And LKD Frats Entertain Fifty Orphans From St. Joe's

Complying with the Christmas spirit, the members of Delta Pi Mu and Lambda Kappa Delta fraternities in a joint effort entertained some fifty orphans last Saturday afternoon, December 8, on the Villanova campus.

The group of youngsters traveled by chartered bus from St. Joseph's Orphanage in Philadelphia to Villanova where their festivities began at the Physics Lecture Hall in the science building with the showing of several cartoons and a movie.

Following the show they were taken on a tour of the campus including a visit inside the Navy Building. The afternoon was concluded with a party in the basement of Sullivan Hall where each of the children received a gift and were served ice cream, soda, and cookies.

Art Christiano of Lambda Kappa Delta and Bill Strickland of Delta Pi Mu were the co-chairmen of the outing and were responsible for most of the planning.

Handel's Masterpiece Will Be Spotlighted At Christmas Concert

Dr. Radan, the moderator of the Villanova Music Society, announced that the Christmas concert, to be held tonight, December 12, will spotlight Handel's masterpiece, "The Messiah."

Tentative plans announced by the executive committee of William Allard, Barry Byer, and Arthur Feldman include five chamber music concerts.

Father President Addresses IRS On European Impressions

By Matthew Roche

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova, addressed a meeting of the International Relations Society on Monday, December 10. His topic was "Impressions of the European and Russian Educational Systems."

Father Klekotka and a group of fifty-eight other American educators have just returned from a three week educational study trip under the sponsorship of the Comparative Education Society. The group observed educational systems in Edinburgh, Frankfurt, Vienna, and Kiev.

'Not So Hopeless'

Father took each country which he visited and discussed the subjects where he observed. He stated, "We are not so hopeless as we have been led to believe by 'scare magazines'."

His observations included: Europe excels in language teaching from necessity; Russia, from national purpose. There seems to be no thought of guidance in the European system. The student makes the choice of his future career on his own.

Atheism Fostered

Teachers in verbal subjects in Russia seem to have no freedom of inquiry, while science teachers have considerably more. In the Russian school system, atheism is fostered as national policy, while in the public life there is a distinct cult of Leninism.

Father Klekotka concluded by saying, "My trip was very interesting. I am reassured about American education. We have problems, but I'm sure that a new personal dedication on our part will solve them. The Russians are a dynamic people, and we must rise to meet their challenge for the world of the future."

Independence Hall Site Of TV Debate For Political Union

The Villanova Political Union, which was originally scheduled to hold a television debate during mid-December, will instead be the guests of WRCV-TV after the new year.

The debate will be taped in the renovated Congress Hall of Independence Hall, which witnessed the inauguration of Washington and the addition of the Bill of Rights to the Constitution.

Mr. John J. Logue of the Villanova Political Science Department recently spoke with the WRCV officials of "Concept" the TV program on which the Union will debate, on his plans to have a prominent speaker for the TV debate, preferably a U.S. Senator. An estimated one and one-half million persons will view the proceedings.

The purpose of the society is summed up in its motto, "Tribuni e Discipulis," which, freely translated, means "We make statesman out of students."

Debates for the Union follow very formal rules.

The time of each speaker is strictly limited and the presiding officer must alternate among the parties. A limited amount of cross-questioning is permitted Just before the end of the debate the quest speaker makes some concluding remarks and then the roll-call vote is taken on the resolution.

Dr. Malik Speaks

Last Thursday, December 6, at 8:30 p.m., a formal debate was held, with Dr. Hafeez Malik of the Villanova Political Science Department as the guest speaker. The resolution before the House: "That This House Favors All-Out Military Aid to India."

Dr. Malik, who was a native of Pakistan, presented a middle-of-the-road analysis of the problem. He divided the problem into four main parts: its legal aspects, how it was brought about, its relation to Pakistan, and the stategy to be used.

PORTRETTE

Man Of Many Talents

Leaders are men of ideas and action. Executive Vice President of the Student Council, Bill DiPaolo, is a man with an idea upon which he is acting to make it a reality.

In short, the idea is a student court to deal with the disciplinary problems of Villanova students. As Chairman of the Student Court Committee, Bill believes that "the conduct and achievement of each student here establishes the reputation of our university and if anything is done to mar this reputation by an individual, we feel that the responsibility to correct this problem rests with the students."

Besides assuming the two formerly mentioned positions on the Student Council, this active senior is also a member of the Student Senate and has been on the Council itself for three years.

In addition to the court project, Bill is also helping to formulate plans for a college carnival to be held this spring. A ceaseless worker, Bill is never satisfied with the status quo; he is especially disappointed that more students don't participate in their own government.

Bill extends his leadership qualities beyond student government. Last year he acted as President of Alpha Psi Omega, the National Honorary Fraternity. A talented "Belle Masquer" since he was a freshman, Bill has given memorable performances such as the righteous, duty-bound McCloud of The Detective Story; and the "hanging-judge" Governor Danforth of The Crucible.

Di Paolo, an English major and future teacher, has also served on innumerable class activities and has worked with WWVU. Occasionally on Saturday mornings, he forgets all school and government responsibilities and enjoys himself roaming over the fields and hills of the surrounding area partaking in man's most primordial activity — hunting.

Scubba Bowl Plans: Rally, Cheering Bloc, Beat Oregon Buttons

The last football rally of the year, to generate spirit for the Liberty Bowl game, will be held Thursday evening, December 13, in the Sheehan-Sullivan quad.

The Liberty Bowl Queen and her court, plus sportswriters Bill Shefski of the Daily News, and Bob Vetrone of the Bulletin, are expected to appear, announced Spirit Committee co-chairmen Bob Spellmeyer and Roger Bride.

The SCUBBA (Scrappy Cats Upset Beaver's Bowl Aims) Squad, composed of Spirit Committee members and organized by Jerry Cannizzaro, are selling "Beat Oregon" buttons and have placed an ad in a Salem, Oregon, newspaper predicting "Villanova will devour Oregon State."

A "Player of the Day" is being selected and a review of his accomplishments made and posted in Dougherty Hall every day this week. Villanovans are urged to show their team that they are behind them by attending practices this week.

A bloc of 1,000 seats is reserved in Philadelphia Stadium for a cheering section, and free shakers will be distributed to all those in this section. The Villanova Band is preparing a half-time surprise for the spectators.

Projected Senior Religion Poll Will Test Effects Of Courses

The Student Council has announced plans to take a religion poll among selected members of the Senior Class. The poll will be taken at a future date which has not yet been announced.

The poll's purpose will be to evaluate the theology courses at Villanova with reference in particular to the textbooks and the practical applications of the courses. The question of the advisability of a Sacred Scripture course for freshmen will also be considered.

Qualified Quiz

As part of the questionnaire, the seniors will be asked if they feel qualified to comment on the subject. They will be requested to furnish a record of the grades received in their various theology courses in order to insure an adequate cross-section of the student body. Personalities will be kept to as minimal a degree as possible.

As present, evaluation of courses is done only sporadically and on the level of the individual teacher. This poll will be the first such endeavor by the Student Council.

Students Speak

James McErlane, chairman of the project, feels that the Theology Department is looking at the problem in the same manner as the students. It is his viewpoint that the student's attitude on the subject be given adequate expression.

The current poll is limited only to seniors. Depending upon the success of this poll, the Student Council hopes to conduct others in the future, touching on a variety of subjects.

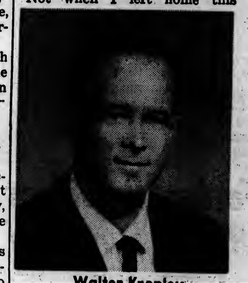
Knepley, First Male Nurse



by Jim Brennan

Halt! Stop, fellow Villanovans and listen to me. Did you know that we have a male student in the Nursing Division? Well we do, and his name is Walter Knepley.

When first laying eyes on Walter, I could tell that he was no average-age college student, for his receding hair line and specks of gray locks gave him away. Hailing from Lower Merion, Pennsylvania, this thirty-two year old is small in stature, small in voice, but big in personality.

After graduating from high school, Walter enlisted in the Navy for four years and then went to Penn State for two years, making the Dean's List as engineering major. He realized that this field was not for him, and that he didn't want to do this type of work for the rest of his life.

He worked for construction companies for several years during which time he was married. When I asked if he had any children, he answered wittily "Not when I left home this morning." Clarifying this statement, Walter said that his wife was expecting their first child this week.

Walter Knepley

The essential reason for his choosing nursing can best be expressed in his own words. "The contact with people is closer, and I get more personal satisfaction knowing that someone feels better because of me."

One would imagine that Walter would feel rather awkward in the midst of so many female nursing students. He assured me that he plays the role of the student and knows that he is in the same boat as the girls. "They seem to accept me as a student, no more, no less."

After graduation, Walter's plans are not definite. He told me, "I have some wild ideas about going to Alaska or some other remote place."

No matter what he decides, come June, Walter Knepley will have the honor of being Villanova's first male nursing student to successfully complete the prescribed course of studies.

Senior Class Meets, Retreat To Be Held

The Senior Class Meeting, presided over by Class President Jim Tate, was held on Thursday, December 6, in the Commerce and Finance Building.

The main topic discussed was the location of the Senior Dinner Dance. Originally, it was to be held at the Sheraton Hotel but complications arose and the Philadelphia Athletic Club was chosen instead. Co-chairman, Jim Shiels, announced that drinks plus set-ups will be sold at the dance.

Tentative plans for Senior Week were explained and the financial standing of the Class was given by the Treasurer.

President Tate stated that a retreat will be held this weekend and that anyone who goes on it will be excused from the Senior Retreat in March.

Campus Lost & Found Recently Renovated By Billon And Bavosa

The Villanova lost and found departments have recently gone under considerable renovation through the efforts of two Villanovans on the Student Union and Student Problems Committee, Richard Billon and George Bavosa.

The renovation consists of combining the three lost and found departments into one which is located in the Office of Campus Police on the second floor, Dougherty Hall.

Captain Murphy, the man in charge of this department, has instructed the campus police, the janitors, and the maintenance men to return all lost articles to him in his office. At the end of the year all the items not claimed will be turned over to charity.

The changeover to one office as the lost and found mecca was done in order to stop the confusion associated with three different offices in the past.

If you have lost anything, it is recommended to visit this office . . . even if it's a St. Anthony Medal!

A Spirit Question

The culmination of three months of activity for the football squad will be manifested this weekend in Philadelphia's Municipal Statium.

And yet, though on several occasions the squad might be criticized constructively, there remains a far greater criticism to be rendered. This criticism pertains explicitly to the attitude and spirit of the individual members of the undergraduate student body.

The only type of "spirit" that has been apparent this semester during, preceeding or proceeding, football games has been that which is pluralized. The action exemplified by some Villanovans during rallies are strongly reminisent of a Bacchanalian feast.

It certainly gives one the impression that a winning football squad evokes little consideration from their fellow classmates. But, if the squad were to return to their status of two years ago, we should certainly have student riots and criticisms that would rival any in the country.

Attendance for a school the size of Villanova has been more than pitiful for both the games themselves and the rallies in particular. And even when attendance is good, the greater majority are mournfully silent.

Now for the first time this year, Villanova teams are in need of spirit. In the Liberty Bowl, Villanova will face its toughest opposition of the year. After the opening game of the basketball team, it is obvious that spirit can be of utmost importance to this year's squad.

That is why each and every student is asked to make it a point, a need, an elixir to assure his own attendance at the rally this Thursday evening and for the future basketball games.

Another Napoleon?

Recently Charles DeGaulle won an unprecedented victory in France's National Assembly election. It was the first time in modern French history that any party has been able to win a clear majority. The reason for this is France's multi-party system which forces coalition governments.

Charges of dictator have been hurled at DeGaulle for several years politicians seem to feel that he is drifting toward the policies of Louis Napoleon who destroyed a republic and created an empire in 1852.

The first step in Napoleon's coup d'etat was to hold a plebiscite for popular election of the Republic's president. When DeGaulle proposed the same amendment recently, it naturally arosed suspicion.

France had feared a strong executive ever since Napoleon's overthrow in 1870. The National Assembly since that time has consistently elected a weak president whose principles were those of the assembly and who adhered to the assembly's domination of the government.

General DeGaulle's recent plebisite and stunning National Assembly victories have done much to alleviate the problems of diversity in a coalition government. The result of this election may well be the decisive reduction of the multi-party system which has been a plague to France.

France is an integral part of Europe. To be useful it must be united and progressive. The old system of electing a weak president is outdated and useless. Whether we believe Charles DeGaulle to be a Napoleon in the making or an impractical chaser of chimeras about France's "destiny," France needs DeGaulle's strength now if it ever hopes to retain its former world position.

Letters To The Editor

Junior Notes

To the Editor:

It is odd that in our society commendable actions are seldom noticed. Very often the reprehensible behavior of a group is brought to light. However, here the darkness will be dispelled.

Recently in the Theology classes, collections were taken for the benefit of the children of Saint John's Orphanage. The money is used primarily to purchase Christmas presents for the children.

This year ALL the children will receive presents from Santa Claus, mainly because of the enthusiastic support given by the Villanova student body.

Yes, all Villanovans should be very proud. You are responsible for the huge smile on a small boy's face as he opens his gift from Santa.

A hearty and well deserved "Thank you", is expressed for these donations to a worthy cause. Special recognition is given for a fine job well done to the many persons involved in these collections.

Remember, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

1962 Charity Week

To the Editor:

During this time of year, it is so easy to become saccharine over Christmas and the socially required spirit surrounding the holidays.

At the risk of joining any of this brigade of superficiality, may I doff my hat to the undergraduate student body for their very special display of enthusiasm and love manifested in the anuual Junior Charity Weekend.

One hundred and seventy orphans have funny ways of saying thank you. The most touching was by the boy who asked "his" Villanovan for a dime to put into the Salvation Army basket.

He was helped; he helped someone. It was an unusual way of showing gratitude but a very real one.

We, who have worked on the project for the last few months, do not have the same tenderness or means to express our appreciation. Nonetheless, we are deeply indebted to the University, the students, and the various businessmen who made the success of Charity Weekend.

With every best wish for the holiday season,

In Apathetic Silence

There has fallen over the campus of Villanova University the pall of a growth-stunting silence. Sixty-three organizations have been formed by the students in which to spend their spare time, yet it seems that most of these organizations pursue the path of the lone existential.

How many of these groups take the time and the trouble to let the world know that they are still functioning? At a recent check of the bulletin board in Dougherty Hall it appears that only eleven have elected to take advantage of that medium of communication.

Where are the others? It is unpleasant to think that the majority of the student organizations are either doing nothing or are so satisfied with their lot in life that they can afford their policy of incommunicado complacency.

If the reverse is true then there is something lacking somewhere. The number of students on campus who are interested in participating in activities is greater than might be thought. The problem is that the student has no way of finding out about the organizations.

Too often the club's office is located in some obscure part of the campus or doesn't exist anywhere at all. But this is certainly no excuse for their remaining silent, as if to sit off in a corner and cry to themselves.

On other campuses the students in general are aware of what is going on. Can this be said of the student body at Villanova? If not, why not?

Placing the blame is a two-way task. At least half of it deserves to be placed heavily upon the shoulder of an apathetic student body. A great deal of information concerning activities can be had merely by expending enough energy to inquire at the Student Council office.

The rest falls squarely upon the campus organizations and their recalcitrant communication situation. Adequate advertising of meetings and events can be achieved with minimal effort.

A solution to this problem can only be reached by a greater awareness on the part of the student and a little more gumption on the part of the activities.

COUNTERPOINT

Of Mice And Men

by Arthur Molitierno

On Wednesday, November 28 the Student Council presented the students of Villanova with a movie, The Mouse That Roared. The admission fee was a mere 25c, but the behavior of those present was far less than 2c. By the time people reach college they are supposed to have a minimum of self control and moral common sense.

Who's A Clod

At a time when crusading journalism is solely lacking in our society a writer who tries to treat such a subject as this is often looked upon as a clod, fink, or various other names. Let us take a look at what happened and you can decide who's the clod.

Granted, Villanova is a man's university. However, to observe the behavior of these men at the movie will show that their attitude is that of adolescent perversion of the facts of life. Let's face the facts; there is more than one type of English which can be used by would-be intellectuals. Is there any reason for showing your most base speech and figurative habits at a movie in Vasey Hall?

Among Friends

I think the main reason for this adolescent behavior is the fact that you are among your fellow students. Who gives a damn, you're among friends. But would Villanova students show this same attitude in a public theatre—I think not. In essence it only goes to show that students have more regard for others than themselves.

Then there was the girl who wanted to see the picture . . . It seems amazing how fast Villanova men can be transformed into Villanova animals. Needless to say, she never had half a chance. Let me say that I have been to other colleges in the area and have attended similar programs as the one of last Wednesday. I never noticed the same degree of debauched manners.

To be fair about the matter one can not say that every one behaved in the manner indicated, but the fact remains that there was a good percentage present who did. This is the percentage that can spoil a good thing at any given time and place.

The Inspector (William Flynn) is not really attacking Viola (Susan Redmond) in this scene from the Graduate Theatre's "The Enchanted". He's merely preventing her from continuing her discourse on the "bees and the flowers".

Vasey Hosts The 'Enchanted' Ghost Third Act Is Wasted In The Woods

by George Welch

When the lights went out on the opening night of this last month in 1962, the air was cool, the sky clear, and the stars bright. There was a cherry-hue of innocence on the cheek of each playgoer at the first performance of "The Enchanted" presented by the Villanova University Graduate Theatre Department in Vasey Hall.

The setting for the plot of "The Enchanted" is a provincial town in France which has recently been experiencing some strange events ever since a ghost appeared in the neighborhood of a pond where a young man had supposedly committed suicide. The cast of characters includes an assortment of French bureaucrats, a doctor, a nutty inspector, gossipy spinster sisters, a young and innocent girl, some precocious school children, and, of course, a ghost.

Humanitarian Plea

As the plot whimsically winds its way through the three acts it becomes apparent that something is being said that is far more significant than the jests and comic situations present. Giraudoux makes an eloquent and entertaining plea for humanity. In the wonderful way of a Gallic magician, with a few words he "transforms the most vulgar and prosaic moment into a time of mystery and romance."

Giraudoux prods the French bureaucratic system through his characterizations of the inspector, the mayor, and the supervisor. William Flynn, as the inspector, created a fine interpretation of this humorous, but slightly frightening character—"The Inspector considers everyone guilty until he's proved innocent." He stalks about the stage delivering speeches in the best political style whenever the opportunity is at hand, and in the interim tries to uncover the elements of subversion which he is convinced are at work. James O'Toole gave a good impersonation of the meek and good-natured character of the mayor.

Supervisor's Scene

Jerry Paonessa gave a fair performance as the supervisor. Sometimes his voice and mannerisms were clear and confident, at other times he stumbled over lines, slurred words, and moved clumsily. The most important scene for the supervisor, and the play, comes in the third act when he and the ghost, played by Vincent Verbosse, are trying to woo Isabel. There is a spirited (no pun intended) argument in which Isabel vacillates from one suitor to the other as each tries to win her with his words.

The ghost momentarily succeeds, and his deathly kiss makes Isabel swoon. Giraudoux's lines were spoken (sometimes inaudibly due to the poor reproduction of the Sound system), but the sense of a contest, of the drama were not present. Isabel should have been the immediate focus of each speech, she was not; and the absence of the ghost from the stage greatly weakened the effect. A great deal of the play's meaning was lost on the poor direction of this scene.

Setting Change

Adding further to the weakness of Act III was the change made by the director, George Herman, in Giraudoux's instructions for its setting. The stage direction in the original calls for the scene to take place in Isabel's room. The Villanova production played it in the woods, in more ways than one. The ostensible reason, I suppose,

Bossa Nova New From Brazil

by Jan Dyroff

Lately there has been quite a bit of interest in the newest phase of jazz music, namely bossa nova. Nearly everyone has heard about b.n., and nearly everyone has heard b.n., at least through the tune "Desafinado" which made the so-called hit parade.

For those who haven't paid too much attention to b.n. a little background would be in order. It has been around for a long time. Downbeat's John Tynan maintains the b.n. beat first got life in an L.A. cabaret back in '53, Clare Fischer sets the date back six years before that.

Bossa nova is definitely Brazilian, no matter who says what. According to the "Brazilian Bulletin" sent to me by the Consul in Philadelphia, Renato Denys, bossa means the "new trend," being a relaxed sounding rhythm.

Basic Samba

To try to define b.n. is everybody's football. At heart it could be called a basic samba with a difference. An important feature is a guitarist lightly carrying the rhythm. There is an element of slight atonality that is introduced, and the rhythm section should be Brazilian in sound. Can the bongoes, please!

With b.n. bands and arrangements increasing exceptionally as the days go by, it is reminiscent of the way Dixieland took off. In those days bands crawled out of the woodwork, and nearly killed the form. The same thing is happening to b.n. today.

More often than not, instead of a relaxed sounding rhythm, the b.n. sound, put that in quotes, comes out like the Spanish-American War. Instead of blending the two jazz ethnics, they are grafted discordantly one on the other. What good does it do to import a Brazilian guitarist and fight him all the way with American big band jazz?

Records Mostly

To a great extent b.n. has been almost exclusively a recording medium. In order to survive in the commercial world it should have a dance to go with it. It's been reported that Deidre LeSage, Miss New York Summer Festival, came out with

Put Your Best Foot Forward

by The Blue Key

With the holiday season rapidly approaching many of us are now making plans to attend some sort of a formal affair. During Christmas week, New York, for example, is bubbling with college dinner dances, cocktail parties, and proms.

If a girl invites you to her school's function she, of course, purchases the tickets. But after that, expenses must come from your own pocket.

After going to more than a few affairs that require renting a tuxedo many a college student will decide to buy a tux of his own. They come in all styles and many seasonal colors but it is best to buy a traditional, although conservative, black or less formal midnight blue.

Red Tux

No girl would want to have a boy appear in a fire-engine red dinner jacket each time she went to a formal with him. Incidentally many excellent bargains may be made by purchasing a good reconditioned tuxedo; for after all, the one you rent has been used many times before.

Fed up with a profusion of promises?

If the thought has crossed your mind that there's too much of a good thing going around for engineering students lately, we don't blame you. We are making no exaggerated promises. In fact, we are looking to you and to other engineering students for promise to bring to us. There's a switch!

History's second most significant Noah defines promise as, "Ground for hope, expectation, or assurance, often specific, of eventual success." Since we are dedicated to the proposition of complete success in all our endeavors, —and the less "eventual," the better—we are looking for men of promise.

Graduate Theatre Review

given for this change would be that there is little room on the Vasey auditorium stage for scene changes. In my previous review of "The Time of Your Life" I asked why a little imagination in set planning couldn't be used to compensate for any difficulties? This question is asked again, this time of the Graduate Theatre group.

Having seen the aforementioned Act III done in several other productions, I can say that the section in which the Doctor, played by David Rabe, conducts the symphony by which Isabel's spirit is enticed back from the spirit world, can be effective, if done well. Again, something was missing in this performance.

The Good Doctor

The good Doctor's conducting was haphazard, the timing was off, and individual phrases became submerged in cacophony, when each passage in the fugue-like verbal symphony should be clear, especially the lines—"She wore black lace petticoats!"—as these are the words that bring Isabel out of her trance. Mr. Rabe, however, did a fairly good job of portraying the elderly doctor. He conveyed to the audience a sense of knowledge and confidence in his character through his clear diction and mannerisms.

At the very center of Giraudoux's universe there is a young girl, stars are her eyes, and the light by which they shine is the light of innocence; Isabel is such a girl. Fresh, young, and attractive Isabel, played by Chris Assini, is the enchanted and the enchantress. Miss Assini played the part just right, not too innocent or sappy, but as a young girl who is adventurous, exciting, and at that particular time in her life when she must make a decision between the world of her dreams and the world as it is.

There was an incident in the second act, which in a small, inadvertent way added to the humor of the performance. The Vasey Hall stage is old, and there are many loose floorboards. The Supervisor is addressing Isabel, they are in the woods — "How lightly your foot falls, Miss Isabel. You walk on the seams of the forest like a skillful burglar who keeps the stairs from creaking . . . ". At this juncture Miss Assini took several sylph-like steps, and the old boards of the Vasey stage creaked loudly in protest.

On the whole, it was an entertaining evening. The performance and production by the Graduate Theatre group was adequate, not by any means professional, but then it was better than the average amateur.

Yuletide At VU

by Liz Kovach

'Twas the night before Christmas and all through Villanova not a Wildcat was stirring not even a nurse. The stockings were hung in the Pie Shoppe with care in hopes that the laundry man would find them there.

When out in the drive there arose such a clatter that I sprang from my desk to see what was the matter. The guard at the gate had a FAT problem, they thought the little guy came to rob them. He had a round face and a big beer belly that shook and jiggled as he talked and giggled. On his back was a sack just bursting with presents, why did the guards misinterpret his presence?

Onward, Onward

"You're not on the faculty" they shouted to him but he reved up his reindeer and up the drive he sped quite grim. Into each dorm he went with his gifts in answers to letter that would warm an English prof's heart.

He stopped to ponder the long, long list:

"A basketball star or two for Coach Kraft, someone the NROTC won't try to draft."

To clean all the tables a new rag for Jimmy that won't push the crumbs in everyone's lap."

"A gift for the gate guards to let each student in; then would the plea "HELP YOUR HOSPITAL" have true meaning.

"More typewriters for the paper are needed; all typists are welcome so please heed it."

The list ran on and Old Nick's beehive hair-do began to droop as he tried to learn the Twist with a Hula Hoop.

And For Me . . .

After he scared me back to my books, I kept throwing him sly little looks full of curiosity and hope. Later I learned that I had been a dope.

His messy work done he quit the scene after which I ran about with a bottle of Mr. Clean.

Past the guards he zoomed as morning loomed not to return till next year for his nocturnal sojourn.

He shouted and laughed as he drove out of sight: MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL and TO ALL GOOD LUCK!

THE DEADLINE FOR THE NEXT VILLANOVAN (JANUARY 10) WILL BE JANUARY 3.

Bossa Nova Brazil

has come to Philadelphia in the form the Herbie Mann concert a while back, with Pat Thomas vocalizing.

Jazz flutist Mann, who recently returned from Brazil and has since recorded many b.n. melodies, calls it the modern version of the samba. "In Brazil," he says, "it is the music of the 'in' group and is considered 'hip.' It's like a samba, only it's more lyrical, like most Brazilian music. And the best, like in good jazz, is implied. What's intriguing about something like the bossa nova is that it lets you keep all the rhythmic excitement and still play lyrically."

Herbie Mann

Too Much Trash

Aside from such in person concerts in the big cities b.n. is not to be heard live. This might hurt the form because it sets a breeding ground for all kinds of trash. Some of the trash has already grown and fruited, like Barney Kessel's twangy-guitar attempt at the b.n.

All kinds of names are getting on the b.n. kick and some do quite well, like the aformentioned Herbie Mann. Also add to the list Bud Shank, Shorty Rogers, Laurindo Almeida, Sonny Rollins, and of course, the great Charlie Byrd.

This though is mostly Americanized b.n. and the thought that cannot be put down is, what are they doing in Brazil? As far as I'm concerned it's pure conjecture, not having any of their b.n. discs on hand. Perhaps in a future column I will be able to shed a little light on that angle.

Brazil's Apart

But, going from contemporary Brazilian music heard before b.n. became big, it would be a safe bet Brazilian b.n. sounds different from ours. They use a completely different percussion approach, and that can't be overlooked. They also have a couple other instruments that aren't up here.

What will develop in b.n. is hard to say. If it would become purer and kick too much Americanization it might have a permanent influence on the course of jazz. It is only natural music that is an international language. Some of our imports are coming home to roost and making themselves felt, for better or for worse.

Geophysicist Dayton E. Carritt Outlines Salinewater Problem

The American Geophysical Union, acting under the National Academy of Sciences for the National Research Council, is sponsoring a series of lectures by Professor Dayton E. Carritt on December 11, 12 and 13.

Professor Carritt, Associate Professor of Oceanography at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is a specialist in the field of chemical oceanography, particularly in the problems of radioactive waste disposal in the sea. Professor Carritt also does research in the production of fresh water from salt water.

Harvard Graduate

Dr. Carritt received his Ph.D. at Harvard University in 1948; since then he has been on the staffs of the Scripts Institute of Oceanography, the Woodlands Oceanographic Institute, and the Chesapeake Bay Institute of the Johns Hopkins University.

The three-day affair began last night, Wednesday, December 11, when Dr. Carritt delivered his first lecture to the chemical engineering seminar on "Some Engineering Aspects of Oceanography."

Tonight, December 12, at 7:45 p.m., he will present a lecture on "Oceanography and Careers in Oceanography" to the undergraduate students, and on Thursday, December 13, at 4:30 p.m., he will speak to the combined biology and chemistry seminars on "Oceanographic Research in the Biological and the Physical Sciences."

Open Lectures

Dr. James J. Markham of the Villanova Chemistry Department has emphasized that all lectures are open to the public and that Dr. Carritt will be available for private conferences with persons interested in Oceanography. Interviews can be scheduled through the Chemistry Department office.

10,000 Overseas Volunteers Needed Notes Peace Corps' James Boughton

Mr. James H. Boughton, the Acting Chief of the Near East and South Asia Regional Office of the Peace Corps, visited Villanova on Tuesday, November 27.

During the course of the day he spoke to over 500 Villanova students about the Peace Corps and its rapid progress overseas.

Volunteers Desired

Specifically, he pointed out that there are presently 4000 volunteers overseas, and the projected plans call for 10,000 Peace Corps volunteers overseas by the end of 1963.

The volunteers serve for a two-year period and receive their living expenses overseas and $7 per month which they have awaiting them here in America when their tour of duty is completed.

As to qualifications, Mr. Boughton pointed out that the applicant must be 18 years of age, be of sound physical and mental health, and be properly motivated.

Villanova Corpsmen

At present, there are two Villanova graduates now serving in the Peace Corps. They are Salvatore DiBlasio, who is teaching English in Turkey, and Michael Menster, who is in the Philippines.

Mr. Boughton, who is presently on loan from the Department of State to the Peace Corps, met with members of the History and Political Science Departments, the Nursing Division, the Placement Office, and other groups.

He also showed a new movie on the Peace Corps and answered questions on the Peace Corps for campus radio station WWVU. Rev. George Riley is the Peace Corps liaison officer on campus.

Summer Job Directory Lets Students Begin Their Plans For Work

A directory listing summer jobs throughout the United States for college students is now available. Students can begin their summer plans during the Christmas holiday vacation.

The 1963 "Summer Employment Directory" gives the names and addresses of 1,485 organizations which want to employ college students. It also gives positions open, salaries, and suggestions on how to apply.

The many types of jobs in the directory are found at summer camps, resorts, various departments of the government, business, and industry. National parks, ranches, and summer theatres listed also need college students.

Students wishing summer work apply directly to the employers, who are included in the directory at their own request.

Copies of the new "Summer Employment Directory" may be obtained by sending $3 to National Directory Service, Dept. C., Box 32065, Cincinnati 32, Ohio.

Action: Now under Army test, a Ford-designed glass filament torsion bar that's lighter, stronger, more flexible than steel

"Looks like you've got something there," the Army Tank Command said in effect to Ford Motor Company engineers. "Let's do a feasibility study on tracklaying military vehicles."

The story begins in 1957 when Ford engineers conceived the idea of a plastic-bonded glass filament torsion bar for vehicle suspension systems. It was a revolutionary departure from the use of solid steel. It promised dramatic weight savings in battle tanks, in personnel carriers and other military vehicles. For example, as much as 1,000 pounds in medium tanks.

Compared to steel, the tubular-shaped glass filament composition has greater energy storage potential—is stronger and more flexible under heavy load. It may well prove to be the automobile suspension material of tomorrow . . . cars suspended on glass!

St. John's Orphans Treated To Party Given By Juniors

The final function of Charity Weekend, a party which treated one hundred sixty-seven boys from St. John's Orphanage to more of Villanova's charity, was held on Tuesday, December 4.

A two-and-a-half hour show and party was held for their entertainment at the Orphanage. The show, a "Truth or Consequences"-type affair was followed by Santa Claus (Pete Triolo), who distributed gifts to all the orphans.

The party's success was due greatly to the efforts of the chairmen Edward Weille, Marianne Ortepio, and Diane Bizub, and to the assistance provided by Tom Stanley, Chuck Gnilka, Dick Griner, Walt Zimmerer, Maurice McCarthy, Barry Thorton, and the Villanova nurses. The nurses helped to wrap the gifts and many of them baked cookies for the party.

Part of the proceeds of the weekend were used to supply the gifts and food, the remainder was donated to the Orphanage.

Father President's European Tour

the students did participate in extra-curricular activities. Father said, however, that he saw no evidence of University-sponsored publications.

Language Barrier

Commenting on the trip itself, Father said that his only regret was that he did not have more time to travel the area on his own. His communications with the people were stifled to a degree, however, because the only English-speaking persons that they met in Russia were the guide and English teachers.

Father, who is of Polish descent, had an edge on the others on the tour in that Polish and Russian as spoken in the Ukraine Region are akin. He did, however, have trouble getting his point across to most of those to whom he spoke, because of the language barrier.

One of the big surprises of the trip, according to Father, was the lack of talk of the then just ended Cuban crisis. The general attitude of the bourgeoisie was that they really did not care how they treated their American visitors. "If you had to wait, you had to wait" was the attitude in restaurants.

The President noted the large number of girls in the school at Kiev and the large size of the night school. As was the case here, night schools were started after the Second World War for the benefit of those adults that had missed their schooling as a result of their military service. Now, Father noted, the classes are predominantly teenagers and those in their early twenties.

Inquisitive Guide

Guides in the Soviet Union did not, surprisingly enough, try to impress their Communist ideology on the visiting educators. In one instance a guide did pose the question to the group, "What is the difference between your Democratic and Republican parties?"

Although no one came up with an answer that satisfied the pseudo-inquisitive woman, President Sykes of West Chester State Teachers College, did retort with what all in the American group felt was an excellent answer.

The guide, in trying to equate Christianity with the belief in the Communist way, said that with Christianity we are basing our reward on a promise, while they feel that the state is providing them with their reward now.

Actually, Father feels, under the "Seven Year Plans" that punctuate the Communist Party line, the reward is just as promised, but much less tangible, before or after death, as the plans almost always fail.

Lenin for God

Father commented that he felt that the Russian had simply substituted Lenin for God. In one case an old church had been converted into a museum to the one-time top Communist. Another museum to Lenin was in fact the only well-built building that Father saw while in Kiev.

In all, the fifty-nine educators visited five countries, including Germany and Austria, where Father reported things seemed much better in almost all respects than in Russia. Even Scotland, a relatively poor country, had a much higher standard of living than the highly-touted Russia.

Father has returned to Villanova now, to a desk full of mail that, according to his secretary, he is fast putting a dent into, bringing with him a few new ideas on education and several memories of what he termed "a depressing place to see," the Soviet Union.

Tutorial Program Visits VU; Attempts Home Peace Corps

The Philadelphia Tutorial Program, which began early last summer, has finally spread to Villanova.

While students from Drexel, LaSalle, Haverford, Bryn Mawr, Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, and Temple are already participating, this widely acclaimed program is just now gaining interest on the Villanova campus.

Jim McErlane, who is promoting the project at Villanova, hopes to have a core of twenty-five tutors by the start of the Spring term. Anyone interested in the program should go to the Student Council office in Dougherty Hall or send his application directly to Project Headquarters.

Domestic Peace Corps

The group responsible for the creation of the Tutorial Project is known as the Northern Student Movement. This essentially a coordinating organization for social groups of thirty-five New England colleges which were drawn together in October 1961 due to their common interest in the creation of a "domestic Peace Corps" to deal with civil rights problems on a practical level.

The Philadelphia Tutorial Project was conceived as an experiment to investigate the effectiveness of such a program.

Benefit to Tutor

It is the opinion to Mr. J. Tim Parsons, the Director of the Project, that participation in the Project is as beneficial to the tutor as to the tutored.

Mr. Parsons. who is taking a one year-leave-of-absence from his undergraduate study at Amherst College, fell that, "The Project should be be viewed as a purely altruistic contribution to society but as an aducational experience as well."

RussianAward-Winner 'Ballad Of A Soldier' To Be Shown Tonight

Dick McIntyre and Charlie DiDomenico, chairman of the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Student Council, have announced that a movie will be shown tonight at 7:30 in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

The film, entitled "Ballad of a Soldier," is the famous award-winning Russian production.

This work has received many prizes from the various film festivals around the world.

Book Of The Semester

passed almost unanimously the Student Council feels that it will meet with ultimate success.

There are several problems yet to be resolved, one of which is the selection of a book which will meet with the approval of both the administration and the student body, and at the same time be feasible for purposes of intelligent discussion.

Suggested Books

Among the suggested books, Lederer's A Nation of Sheep, Drury's A Shade of Difference, Frankel's The Democratic Prospect, and Burdick's Fail-Safe reign most popular at this time.

The Student Council emphasizes, however, that nothing has been selected as of this writing and they encourage all reasonable suggestions.

Final Selection

When the final selection of the book is made, it will be made available in the bookstore at list price. Any other suggestions concerning this project are also greatly encouraged.

Moore And Benn Pace Kittens To Victory Over Temple Prep

by Tom Finan

Coach Jack Devine's Wildkittens tallied an impressive 80-63 victory over outclassed Temple Prep last Tuesday evening before an enthusiastic Field House crowd of 3200.

Former Philadelphia All-Catholic and All-Public sensation Richie Moore was high man that night with 23 points. Radnor's Lou Benn was next with 12, followed by Bill Melchionne with 10 counters. Bernie Schaeffer and Kevin Vonderlieth were tied with nine apiece.

Season Deput

In their first competition of the current hardwood season the Frosh were a hustling, driving and potently accurate quintet. With a twelve game schedule this year, the Kittens will gain real experience and exposure to some of the toughest and talented Freshmen teams in the East.

Fine Unit

Varsity material will be at a premium next season due to graduation and the perennial dropouts due to academic difficulties. This year's crop of fledglings will with certain expected improvements develop into one of the finest and most powerful Frosh units in the history of the University.

The season will resume for the Wildkittens on January 7, when they will meet the talent-laden Hawklet five, at 54th and City Line.

Augustinians Enter Squad In Intramural Basketball Leagues

This year the Intramural Basketball League is in full swing with all games coming off smoothly. In addition, no team has forefeited a game.

Several teams have turned in late entries and will not begin their season until January 3. The present schedule runs up to January 10 and a new one will be made up for the second semester.

"The Monks"

Fr. Reilly is captain of "The Monks" basketball team which is in the 7:00 Field House League. Other members are Fr. Gallagher, Fr. Firrell, Fr. Lawless, and Fr. Geisser.

Toledo Falls To Wildcats 73-61, O'Brien Has 23 In Cats First Win

by Tom Bruderle

How sweet it is! Villanova picked up its first win of the infant season last Saturday against the University of Toledo, 73-61, before 3,863 thoroughly disgusted fans.

High point-gatherer for the rejuvenated Wildcats was co-captain Jim O'Brien who had 23. Top man for the Rockets was Ray Wolford who had 30 points. However, the big 6-6 junior tabbed 24 points in the first half and threatened to make the evening miserable for the Wildcats.

For the first 14:25 of the game, outside of the game's first scored by the Rocket's Jay Ball, Toledo was spelled W-O-L-F-O-R-D. The score was 27-20 in favor of Villanova, with all of the Rockets' points coming from Wolford's hot left hand. Ball put in another device and Wolford's streak was stopped.

In the second half, Wally Jones (17 points) dropped back in front of Wolford and he could pick up but six more points. Nevertheless, he was 14 for 25 from the field.

High Percentago

As a whole, the team was 31 for 58 from the field for a hot 53.4%. Toledo had a respectable 42.6%.

There was notable improvement in the play of Sophs Eric Erickson and Jim Washington. Both had eight points and shared the rebound leadership by grabbing nine each.

Co-captain Jim McMonagle tallied 17 points and brought down seven rebounds. The ex-LaSalle star had 12 points in the second half, with eight of his baskets coming on layups. In addition, he made a number of steals.

Lead Switches Hands

In the opening of the game, the lead changed hands several times. With 7:59 gone by, Wolford, er, Toledo enjoyed their last lead of the game by way of a Wolford jumper. O'Brien put the Cats out in front with a two-pointer from the side of the circle. Approximately eleven minutes later, with Wolford at last getting some help, Toledo tied the score at 29-29.

An Erickson layup and a Jim Cox (16 points) conversion of a couple of foul shots made it 31-31 each. Washington worked his way in for a fine layup only to have Wolford match it with a jumper. With 33 seconds remaining in the half, O'Brien swished a jumper and Villanova had a 35-33 lead at halftime.

Second Half

With the beginning of the second half, Jones began to drop in front of Wolford with devasting effect. With Wolford having trouble, the Rockets went five minutes without a score until Cor converted a foul toss. To complement their sound zone defense, the Wildcats shot a torrid 66.6% from the field in the second half.

17 Point Spread

Villanova continued to pull away, and with 5:16 to play, a Jones jumper gave the Cats a 17 point spread. Several times the Rockets attempted to make it close, but the zone limited them to passing the ball in the backcourt, much to the disgust of the partisan crowd.

Nevertheless, Toledo had a chance to make it interesting since they were on the charity line 17 times, but could convert only nine. With nearly ten minutes gone by, Washington picked up his fourth foul and Coach Jack Kraft inserted Sam Iorio.

Villanova initiated a freeze only to have McMonagle and Jones pick up their fourth personal. Joe McGill and Butch Winterbottom replaced them and maintained the freeze. A bullet pass from McGill to O'Brien gave Villanova its last basket.

Eight day ago, the Wildcats dropped their season opener to Princeton 68-53. This Saturday, in their last game before the ECAC Tournament, Villanova will meet Niagara at the Palestra.

Liberty Bowl: Villanova Hosts Oregon State

Previews by Roy Baron

Villanova enters its second straight bowl game attempting to equal last season's 17-9 triumph over Wichita in the Sun Bowl. Coach Alex Bell's Wildcats bring the same record into this post season contest as they did last year, 7-2.

Directing the attack for Villanova will be quarterbacks Richie Richman and Ted Aceto. Richman completed 32 of 73 passes during the season for 508 yards and 7 touchdowns, while Aceto was hitting on 39 of 83 attempts for 464 yards and 4 touchdowns. Chief target for these two is Larry Glueck with 17 receptions for 235 yards. Ends Jack Clifford and John Dinan follow Glueck with 8 receptions each. Richman has also been on the receiving end, hauling in 8 of Aceto's aerials.

Larry Glueck

Ground Attack

The Wildcats rely heavily on their running game, as evidenced by their 2006 total yards rushing as compared to 1009 yards passing. Supplying the inside power are fullbacks Lou Rettino and Billy Joe and halfbacks Jim Thomas and Bob Merenda. When the 'Cats go to the outside for yardage, it is usually Glueck, 5.9 yards per carry, and Richman, 4.9 yards per carry who are called upon.

The key to Villanova's winning season was the strong defensive line, which held its opponents to a mere 95.3 yards per game on the ground. Anchoring this forward wall are Captain Charlie Johnson and ends Clifford and soph John McDonnell. Linebackers Rettino, Joe, and Bob Kowalski give the front line strong support. Bright spots in a sometimes porous secondary were Glueck and Merenda.

Open Letter to the Student Body

Saturday, December 15th will mark the peak of Villanova in recent years. During the past two years the cry has been, "We want the Liberty Bowl." This honor has been bestowed upon our great team and without a doubt they earned it.

It's been a long season. For the Student body it began September 15th. It included Saturday's for ten weeks and one day off in October. But for the team it began last spring and started again in August to windup on December 15th.

They've worked hard six days a week for four months in order to bring to the school the Liberty Bowl. We now have three days left. What can we do to assist our great team in these waning days. First, stop down at practice, let the team know we're around. Second, Thursday night in the Quad at 8:30 there will be a rally. The Liberty Bowl Queen will be present in addition to the team and the coaches.

Don't let the team down. Be at the Rally. Let's each of us show that we are proud of our team and are proud of the efforts they have put forth.

Third and last but on the whole the most important of all, on Saturday, December 15th be at the Municipal Stadium in South Philadelphia.

It has been said from Oregon State to the Mainline, "What a mismatch, poor Villanova." But we of Villanova know, when "The Light Brigade" of Oregon State takes the field, the Big Whites or Blues will stop them cold.

We got the Liberty Bowl, the football team has practiced, the rally has been set up. Now you the student do your part to make the entire country say, "I BELIEVE."

Coach Tommy Prothro leads his Oregon State Beavers into the Liberty Bowl with an 8-2 record for the season. The team is led in both running and passing by Heisman Trophy winner Terry Baker. He has rushed for 538 yards, a 4.5 yard average, and passed for a total of 1738 yards.

On the receiving end of most of these passes has been second team All-American Vern Burke. He has caught 69 passes for 1006 yards, a total which is two yards short of the total yardage gained through the air by Villanova as a team.

Besides Baker, the chief outside running threat is sprinter Leroy Whittle, who sports a 4.9 yard average. He has also caught nine passes for 139 yards and two touchdowns. On short yardage situations the Beavers depend on fullbacks Bruce Williams, 3.5 yards per carry, and Booker M. Washington, 5.0 yards per carry.

Terry Baker

Small Line

The Oregon State defense was not as strong as its offense, however, allowing 14.8 points per game. The main reason for this is the Beavers' lack of size. With a line that averages only 195 pounds, they had trouble containing larger opponents such as Iowa and Washington, to whom they lost 28-8 and 14-13 respectively.

State uses a basic 6-2 defense. Spearheading the forward wall is 200 pound senior guard George Gnoss, one of the top linemen on the West Coast.

Oregon State comes into its first bowl game since its 1956 Rose Bowl loss to Iowa, sporting a six game winning streak.

Glueck, Rettino, Joe And Johnson Drafted By Pro NFL And AFL

by Richard Pazdan

The 1962 edition of the Villanova football team has had four of its members drafted by the two professional leagues.

The four 'Cats tapped for pro service were halfback Larry Glueck, fullbacks Lou Rettino and Billy Joe and the captain of the team, tackle Charley Johnson.

AFL Picks Four

The American Football League, which held its drafts in Dallas, Texas on Derember 1 latched onto all four stars, while the National Football League picked Glueck, Joe, and Rettino.

In the American League the 6-2, 190-pound Glueck was picked on the fifth round by the San Diego Chargers. Joe, IC4A shotput king, went to the Denver Broncos on the eleventh round. The New York Titans got Johnson on the 17th round and Rettino, Joe's running mate at fullback on the 23rd.

NFL Choices

The NFL stuck strictly to the backfield and took three of the finest ever to come off the Main Line campus. Glueck went to the Chicago Bears on the third round. The eighth round saw the World Champion Green Bay Packers pick Rettino and the Washington Redskins went with Villanova's prize line-smasher Joe in the next round.

Campus Radio Station WWVU To Introduce FM In Autumn

Campus radio station WWVU, after a long and tedious delay, will be operating on a non-commercial educational FM basis by October, 1963.

The station will have an effective broadcasting radius of twenty-five miles, which reaches a listening audience throughout the Delaware Valley to Trenton.

A few steps remain before WWVU is able to begin its expanded operations. A construction permit is expected to be returned to the station shortly by the Federal Communications Commission. Only then can the appropriate engineering equipment be bought and installed.

Tests Before License

There will then be equipment tests prior to the station's obtaining a license. Guiding the station through this intricate process are Raymond Wilke, Faculty Advisor, and John Finger, Engineering Consultant.

Broadcasts will still originate from the main studios on the second floor, Dougherty Hall, but the new transmitter is to be located at the basement of St. Mary's Hall.

Actual research on the possibility of obtaining an educational FM set-up for Villanova began during autumn of 1960, although the idea had been discussed for many years previous to this. A comprehensive proposal for the establishing of such a station here was formally made around Easter, 1962.

Educational FM

Non - commercial educational FM, as its name implies, consists of FM non-commercial broadcasting by educational groups. A separate portion at the lower end of the FM broadcast band is reserved for the exclusive use of such groups.

This type station, announced Station Manager, Mark Devaney, is not required to operate on a regular schedule, and no minimum number of hours of operation is specified.

The advantages of FM are numerous. It serves to extend the educational function of a college or university to the general public as part of a college extension program, serving coincidentally as an instrument to improve relations between the the college or university and the surrounding community.

Intellectual Stimulation

Perhaps most important is its function to provide higher caliber programming to stimulate the listener to increased intellectual activity.

In the words of Frank Sauers, Program Director of the station: "WWVU hopes to offer listeners in the Philadelphia metropolitan area something that they can't get on other commercial or FM stations in the area. Educational FM provides us with a golden opportunity to try new things and experiment in the hope that the programming will be a stimulant to the listeners."

One such stimulant, Sauers feels, is the discussion program, which allows a vital free exchange of ideas.

Administration Posts Examination Schedule For End Of Fall Term

The final examinations will extend from January 12 to January 19, 1963. All morning examinations will begin at nine o'clock (9:00 A.M.). Afternoon examinations will begin at one-thirty (1:30 P.M.) except where noted.

WRCV-TV Program 'Concept' To Host Villanova Political Union Tuesday

By Mike Magro

Villanova's newly formed political union will be featured in the television series "Concept" on Station WRCV-TV (Channel 3) on Tuesday evening, January 15th at 7:00. The debate type program was arranged by the station's Department of Public Affairs and Villanova's Office of Public Information.

The resolution before the House will be, "That this house favors the creation of a Department of Urban Affairs with cabinet rank." Highlighting the show will be guest speaker Richardson Dilworth, former Mayor of Philadelphia, who will present his views on the subject. His talk will be followed by short speeches by the members of the Union's three parties, and individual interviews with members of the Union.

The debate was actually taped on January 8 at the Congress Hall of Independence Hall, which witnessed the inauguration of President Adams and the addition of the Bill of Rights to the Constitution.

Until recently, the meeting hall had no desks and was virtually bare of furnishings. However, authentic reproductions of early American desks and chairs, made by European craftsmen, have been added, among other renovations. The V.P.U. is the first organization given permission by the National Park Service to meet in the refurnished hall.

Chairman of the proceedings Peter DeLiberty with the aid of Secretary Frank Dunne and the other members of the Union, will conduct the debate which will be viewed by as many as one and one-half million spectators.

Mr. John Logue, moderator of the Political Union, feels that Dilworth was a good choice as guest speaker, pointing out that Dilworth is a former president of the United States Conference of Mayors.

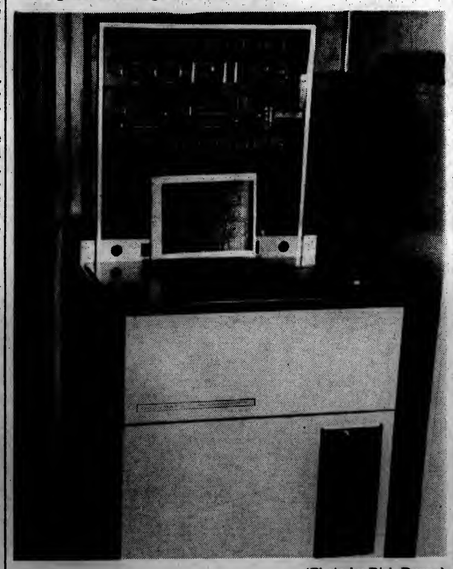
A graduate of Yale University, Dilworth was a member of the prominent Yale Political Union from which he received part of his introduction to politics. Mr. Dilworth was also mentioned as one of two men who might have been appointed Secretary of Urban Affairs, had Congress created that post last year.

Library Installs New Docustat To Reproduce Textbook Pages

A Docustat machine for the duplication of manuscript pages has been installed in the University Library. The machine is located in the Reference Room near the exit.

This device produces white on black reproductions of two book pages. The fee for this process is twenty-five cents. No special operator is required for its operation so there is no restriction to its use in that respect.

Student Aid



The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, the head of the Library, gave his permission for the installation of the machine in order to aid the students in their study projects.

The great advantage afforded by this mechanism is that any document, map, book page, or graph can be easily and inexpensively reproduced. This enables the home use of otherwise inaccessable or limited circulation reference books.

Clear Copies

A high degree of accuracy and readability is obtainable from the Docustat reproductions. It is possible to copy clearly even such things as pages of small print.

If a black on white copy is desired, simply put the white on black sheet in and insert another quarter. The white on black then copies out black on white.

The Docustat machine stands ready for use in the Reference Room of the University Library. A quarter is all that's needed to operate the dry photocopying machine.

Pi Theta Chi Hosts Annual Dinner Dance At Falcon House Feb. 9

Villanova's nursing sororjty, Pi Theta Chi, will hold its annual dinner dance on the evening of February 9. The affair will be held at the Falcon House in Havertown.

Kathleen M. Roos, the general chairman for the event, announced that the musical segment of the evening's entertainment will be provided by the Satellites of Villanova.

Tickets will be available to the members and pledges starting on January 10. They can be obtained from the respective class representatives: Kathleen Dolphin, Ticket Sales Chairman; Judy Miller, Favors and Invitations; Joann Dynakowski, Senior Class Representative; Trish D'Alonzo, Junior Class Representative; Sandy Sauer, Sophomore Class Representative; and Annette Paczkowski, Freshman Class Representative.

You'll make the wisest choice no matter which Chevrolet you choose!

These four different cars are alike in one important way. Each is a product of Chevrolet Division of General Motors. So each will give you more performance, beauty, comfort and good news at trade-in. But each is tailored to a certain kind of buyer. Our big Chevrolet has the Jet-smooth ride, luxury and styling you'd expect only in costly cars. Chevy II features parkable size, perky performance and outstanding fuel economy. Corvair gives you rear engine maneuverability and sports car flair. The new Corvette Sting Ray can best be described as dramatic. With a choice of 33 models, there's one Chevrolet that will suit you best.

Fall Lynx Presents New Look Cerf And Michener Featured

The first of two issues of Villanova's literary magazine, the Lynx, went on sale in the Pie Shoppe on January 8. Sales will continue in the Pie Shoppe until Friday, January 11.

Frank Murphy, Editor in Chief, and Barry Thornton, Associate Editor, promise the reader that this will be one of the most interesting magazines published by the students of Villanova.

Pro Format

This issue will follow in the "paper back" format introduced last year. This format gives the plublication a fresher look and makes it seem more professional.

In addition to the poetry and prose submitted by the undergraduate students there will be an added feature to this edition of the Lynx. Personal interviews with Bennett Cerf and James Michener will also appear.

Low Cost

Inasmuch as the greatest part of the cost of the magazine has been taken from the students' activities fees, the cost will remain at twenty-five cents. Copies can be obtained after sales close by contacting Circulation Editor Maurice McCarthy.

Next Deadline

The editors announced that they expect the deadline for the next issue to close sometime after the semester break.

Placement Division Plans Government Business Interviews

The Placement Office announced that the recruiting season got off to an active start on Thursday, January 3. A total of twenty-four corporations and government divisions will be interviewing students up to January 11.

No interviews will be held from January 14 to 30. For interviews during February 1 and 6, seniors may sign up between January 7 and 11.

Career books have now arrived in the Placement Office and engineers are urged to stop in and get a supply for their division and distribute them in their buildings.

Audience To Encircle Novel Stage Of Miniature Experimental Theatre

A new look has come to Room 101 in the Classroom Annex building. What had originally been a classroom a year ago has been transformed by the Graduate Theatre Department into an unusual type of little theatre.

About 75 seats have been arranged in three concentric rows around the stage which is located in the center of the room.

The stage itself, about six feet on a side, is designed with no backdrop, because the audience is to completely encircle it.

Mr. Richard Duprey, of the Graduate Theatre Department, explained that this type of threatre would be beneficial in conducting experimental theatre ideas and in conveying the play's message to the audience. "No one will be more than three rows from the action," he added.

He also indicated that, taking advantage of the proximity of the stage to the entire audience, a play ultilizing audience participation will be presented later in the Spring semester.

Three full-length plays are scheduled for this theatre in the near future, in addition to the regularly scheduled plays in Vasey Hall. The first of these will probably be at the end of February.

All three plays will be so presented as to take full advantage of the theatre's novel aspect, according to Mr. Duprey.

Junior Week Comes In April Peter, Paul And Mary To Sing

The annual Junior Class function of Junior Week will be held this year the week of April 22 to 27. Highlight of the week will be the Friday night Peter, Paul, and Mary concert.

Beginning on Monday, April 22, the week's festivities will start when the juniors will entertain their mothers and show them the campus. An athletic smoker on Tuesday evening will count as that day's contribution to the week.

On Wednesday the scene will shift sportswise with the Junior vs. Senior Muff Day. No definite plans have been formulated concerning Thursday's activities. On Friday there will be a concert in the Field House featuring the much touted singing trio, Peter, Paul, and Mary.

The social activities of the week will conclude with a dinner dance to be held at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia. Richard Maltby and his Orchestra will provide the entertainment.

Further details concerning these and the other happenings of the week will be made known at a later date.

Spanish Club Fiesta "La Noche Espanola" To Be Held January 11

A literary-musical fiesta entitled "Noche Espanola" will be presented by the Spanish Club in Vasey Hall Auditorium on Friday night, January 11, at 7:00.

The evening will be divided into three parts: musical, two one-act comedies; and a closing address by the Consul of Spain in Philadelphia, Dr. Victor Sanchez-Mesas.

Professor Vito J. DiVincenzo, club moderator, will emcee the first part of the program. The highlight of the musical program will be a presentation of Spanish selections by the group of Villanova Singers known as "The Spires."

VU Foreign Students Represent 29 Nations

One hundred thirty-one foreign students representing 29 nations from five continents are enrolled at Villanova University.

Three countries from the Soviet Bloc are included — Cuba. Poland and Yugoslavia.

Spain follows Cuba in foreign student enrollment at Villanova with 14 students. Nationalist China follows with 12 and India with 11. Australia, Columbia, Iran, Iraq, Italy, Mexico, Nigeria, Panama, the Philippines, South Korea and Venezuela have multiple representation.

Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, England, France, Greece, Ireland, Jamaica, Jordan, Lebanon, Netherlands Antilles and Switzerland are other nations represented in the current Villanova student body.

Council Hears Final Report; Renaming Of C&F Announced

By Joe McCarthy

The Villanova Student Council completed its business of the first semester just previous to the Christmas break. Highlighting the meeting were reports from all the committees assigned with the disposal of Council resolutions.

Joseph A. Tate, Council President, gave the initial report of the Student-Faculty Committee from the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President. In the report approbation was accorded to the March 18 date as the official Student Council holiday.

The Commerce and Finance Building will also be renamed in honor of the late Rev. Joseph Bartley, OSA. The official announcement will be made at an appropriate date in the future.

The present policy of the Board of Trustees regarding the policy of not sanctioning political speakers on campus was again sustained. The requested change in the vacation schedule for 1963-64 was tentatively termed improbable while the resolution seeking an earlier posting of the examination schedules received approval, pending action by the various deans.

What appears to be an annual cry each year concerning the football policy of the university was raised again with a motion by James Howley requesting another official promulgation.

At the request of Jim McErlane, Vice President for Educational Affairs, white parking guide lines have been painted on the west end of the parking lot. This action was taken in lieu of the number of minor traffic tie-ups caused by the absence of the lines.

Other notes: The NFCCS petition seeking a vernacular Mass proved of little importance as the Ecumenical Council "beat them to the punch." But, it is more or less typical . . . Student Court legislation is now before the Administration after approval by the Cabinet and the Ways and Means.

More Notes: No nurses, faculty, or classrooms in St. Rita's Hall after it is vacated a year from now, according to report by Junior President John Hagerty. Also speculation about it being used as a recreation hall is taboo . . . Vice President Howley resumed his position in respectable fashion — two motions; also a patch . . . And the Spirit Committee snatched off another sum of cash, putting them over their budget.

Final Notes: The disheveled element of Villanova will be subjected to the generosity of the Council which has authorized purchase of etiquette and manners pamphlets to be placed in the Library and lounges . . . Perhaps someday the Student Congress, instead of mutely accepting the minutes, will question its numerous omissions.

Sequential Donations By Science Foundation Aid Teacher Education

A series of succeeding grants equivalent to $150,000 will be made to Villanova University by the National Science Foundation for the purpose of conducting Summer Institutes for high school teachers of science and mathematics during 1963, 1964, and 1965.

Announcement of the grants, which wil support a "sequential" type of institute was made this week by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova's President.

An original grant of $50,000 has been named to begin the program this summer. Subsequent similar grants will be made, according to the proposal, during the next two summers.

Fifteen to eighteen graduate credits may be obtained over the three year period and may be applied to a Master's Degree in Secondary Science.

Participants must be high school teachers (junior or senior high school) who are engaged in teaching high school science or mathematics with a minimum of three years experience. In some cases the experience requirement may be waived, Father Hubbert said.

Who's Who Winners Honored At Banquet By Alumni Association

The Who's Who Banquet was held on Tuesday, December 12, at the Falcon House on West Chester Pike.

The dinner was held to honor the thirty-six senior recipients of this academic honor awarded by the national Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova, Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, Vice-President of Student Affairs; Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Moderator of the Student Council; Miss Boyle, Dean of Women; Miss Jean Large, President of the Alumnae Association, attended the dinner.

Fr. Appicci, the Master of Ceremonies, introduced the two guest speakers, Miss Large and a representative from the Alumni Association.

Fruitless Feud

Unfortunate and mildly ridiculous are apt terms to describe the feud between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Amateur Athletic Union.

In the eyes of the world this squabble, if allowed to continue much longer, could take on scandalous aspect proportional to the racial strife which the South experiences time and again.

The question involved are well known; which body should have the job of recognizing athletes for international competition and a dispute over certain eligibility rules.

In their debates over the question, both organizations have been practically unyielding, almost to the point of being obstinate. Even pleas from the White House have failed to completely clear-up the differences.

Perhaps a solution would be to merge the organizations into one new large one which would incorporate the features, functions and responsibilities of each. Another would be to set up a separate organization which would be solely responsible for determining international eligibility for U.S. athletes.

General Douglas MacArthur has been appointed to arbitrate the dispute. If the organizations accept his decisions, and with mounting public pressure they probably will, perhaps peace will once again reign in the world of cinders and boards.

Lights And More Lights

As 1963 proceeds from infancy to childhood, the worthy Villanova maintenance department has put aside its collective snow shovel long enough to remove the Christmas decorations which have augmented the campus lighting system for the past several weeks.

On the whole the decorations were effective in conveying the Yuletide spirit to the students and passerbys on Lancaster Speedway. As usual the blue bedecked tree before the monastery won our unofficial first prize, despite electric trouble in the latter part of the holidays.

But we believe that Dougherty Hall's were just slightly overdone. Fewer bulbs in each of the displays would have aided the atmosphere of the display. And the yellow strings over the roof probably aided the visitor from the North Pole in his navigation more than they enhanced the appearance of the building notwithstanding the wind damage done just before New Year's Day.

The University is to be commended for once again displaying the campus in a manner befitting the season, but perhaps next year, Dougherty will lose some of that Coney Island touch and return to a more serene beauty.

Rule Changes

Today, the Congress of the United States convenes for the Eighty-eighth time.

We feel that much should be said by the American people to their representatives on Capitol Hill during this session about two important procedural questions.

The first question concerns the power of the House Rules Committee which has the ability to prevent a major bill from even being given a chance to stand up and be voted on. By bottling up a particular bill, a committee of fifteen men (it may revert to twelve unless the House acts) has the power to thwart the wishes of many more of their colleagues.

An even more frustrating practice is the Senate's filibuster by which a bill can be literally talked to death. The cloture rule presently can limit debate but a two-thirds vote of the Senate is required to invoke it.

There is talk of changing the rule to allow a favorable majority vote to invoke the rule.

The outcome of these changes and debates may well determine whether a Southern conservative minority is going to foil the programs of the majority once more.

The Villanova Merry-Go-Round

Mute Villanovans

By John Roberts

Last year the Villanova basketball team did not lose a home game. It was a team well-backed with student support; probably because it was a consistant winner. Students clamored for tickets to the games and when the team was on the floor, the Palestra sounded like the inside of a kettle drum.

This student support at the games was commonly referred to as "spirit". The Villanova fan got used to the feeling of walking out of the Palestra a gloating winner. But that was last year.

Musty Thinking

Some people contend that a good team will create spirit in the student body, but the thinking behind this is all wrong. Of course there will be lots of spirit if the team is a consistent winner.

It's easy to back a winner. But, what happens to the so called spirit if the team doesn't seem headed to the N.I.T. or the N.C.A.A. playoffs.

Dissipated Spirit

In the case of Villanova, it seems as though the spirit quickly dissipates and the student enthusiasm degenerates to almost complete apathy. This is not the way it should be.

I am one of those people who contend that a lot of student spirit will go a long way in giving a team the moral lift it needs to get over a particularly tough game. Those who say the proof is in the pudding need only take a look at the facts.

West Virginia Fiasco

Last year's team played West Virginia before an almost totally biased West Virginia crowd at Morgantown and lost by six points. The same Villanova team beat the same West Virginia team by fifteen points when the game was played in front of a pro-Villanova crowd at the Palestra.

The total difference in the point spread seems to indicate that a spirited home crowd added about twenty points to the team score. In other words the student spirit was a big factor in lifting up the team and making a winner out of a loser.

Princeton and Silence

In Villanova's first game this year a small group of Princeton rooters, who were outnumbered about fifty to one, frequently made enough noise to be heard over the not-so-tumultous roar of the Villanova students.

It wouldn't have been hard for the Princeton rooters to get the idea that they were playing the Pennsylvania School for Mutes at Villanova. The silence was that loud.

More Silence

At first I dismissed the lack of noise as a side effect of the shock of watching the team go down in defeat, but the deafening silence was again prevalent at the next few games at the Palestra.

The spirit of the Villanova students seems to be dwindling fast and the apathetic silence that emanates from the apathetic onlookers of the Villanova cheering section reverberates through the Palestra like a flea's heartbeat. The Palestra sounded like a library. The silence was loud, enduring, and deafening.

Disillusionment

I have observed our ostensibly disillusioned cheerleaders crinkle their faces as if to inquire whether or not the "V" sign has come to mean "silence please."

On occasion I have watched a few spirited students rise and come out with a lusty cheer, and then abashed sit down to what almost seems like admonishing looks from nearby spectators.

In general the Villanova students have displayed an appalling lack of enthusiasm for a good team. They should know that it is a good team headed by a good coach and possibly with a little more student support it will be a great team.

My chief concern is not that the student body will give up hope for the team but rather that the team will give up hope for the student body! Don't let this happen.

Counterpoint

Enlightening Disclosures

By Joseph A. McCarthy, II

Among more of the enlightening disclosures during the recent Christmas vacation was finding by a national magazine that the Villanova Athletic Department was unable to afford gloves for its football squad in the Liberty Bowl appearance.

This development, according to the "Bible of Contemporary Sports", Sports Illustrated, leaves the follower of Villanova sports with a rather confused impression. Then again, the value of this and other publicity can never be underestimated. Very simply, an accurate determination of its monetary value is all but impossible.

The statement, nevertheless, attributes our misfortune to a "semi-deemphasized" program "in football." Regardless of the truth of the contention, the Villanova student, friend, and alumnus should not be content with reading this type of commentary.

And yet, this is the appearance which the present program has given to others. And it certainly appeared in this manner to an objective and widely-read reporter of Sports Illustrated.

In order to alleviate this impression, it is not advocated that Villanova play schedules similar to those of Alabama, Mississippi, and their likes. Even these teams have their easy games. But they do play games that test their strength.

Perhaps, if Villanova were to return to a ten-game schedule and while doing so add at least one or two, if feasible, teams that consistently dominate north-eastern football in most years there would be less unfavorable judgments.

Last year they successfully defeated Wichita, ranked 18 nationally. This year, the squad matched efforts against Oregon State, number 15 nationally. And the comments from all sources, including Sports Illustrated were favorable, though in a losing cause.

The inclusion of a contest where Villanova will be expected to prove themselves would be of great value to the spirit of the team and the school. But now, as the situation appears, the football team should continue to be the favorite in all their games.

* * * * *

The Liberty Bowl again was a brilliant organizational success but a moderate monetary failure. Contrary to Sports Illustrated's view that the game has no future due to the cold, we might suggest to Mr. Dudley that he remove his project from the the depths of the frigid winds and cold (which are prevalent even in mid-summer) of South Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium to somewhere more reasonable such as Franklin Field or Connie Mack Stadium were capacity attendance is less and the Delaware River is more distant.

A GUIDE FOR THE UNMONEYED

R. L. Sigafoos was a keen, ambitious lad, and when he finished high school he wished mightily to go on with his education. It seemed, however, a forlorn hope. R. L.'s father could not send the boy to college because a series of crop failures had brought him to the brink of disaster. (R. L.'s father raised orchids which, in North Dakota, is a form of agriculture fraught with risk.)

It was, therefore, squarely up to R. L. He could go to college only if he worked his way through. This was a prospect that dismayed him. He had a deep-seated fear that the task would be too great, that he would never be able to carry on a full, busy college life and still find time to do odd jobs and make money.

Racked with misgivings, R. L. paced the streets, pondering his dilemma. One day, walking and brooding, he came upon a park bench and sat down and lit a Marlboro cigarette. R. L. always lit a Marlboro when he was low in his mind. R. L. also always lit a Marlboro when he was merry. The fact is there is no occasion—happy or sad, pensive or exuberant, cheery or solemn—when Marlboro with its fine filter and fine flavor is not entirely welcome, as you will discover when you go to your favorite tobacconist and buy some, as we—the makers of Marlboro and I and R. L. Sigafoos—hope you will do real soon.

Sitting and thinking and smoking a Marlboro on the park bench, R. L. was suddenly interrupted by a small, quavering voice which said, "My boy, you are troubled. Can I help?"

I gave a fencing lesson to the Dean of Women

Seated beside R. L. was a tiny, gnarled man with wispy, snow-white hair. His skin was almost transparent, showing a delicate tracery of fragile bones beneath. His back was bent, and his hands trembled. But his eyes were bright and clear. R. L. looked into those eyes, into the wrinkled face. He saw wisdom there, and experience, and kindness. "Do you think, sir," said R. L., "that a boy can work his way through college and still enjoy a rich, full campus life?"

"Why, bless you, son," replied the stranger with a rheumy chuckle, "of course you can. In fact, I did it myself."

"Was it very hard?" asked R. L.

"Yes, it was hard," the stranger admitted. "But when one is young, all things are possible. I, for example, used to get up at five o'clock every morning to stoke the furnace at the SAE house. At six I had to milk the ewes at the school of animal husbandry. At seven I gave a fencing lesson to the Dean of Women. At eight I had a class in early Runic poets. At nine I gave haircuts at the Gamma Phi Beta house. At ten I had differential calculus. At eleven I posed for a life class. At twelve I watered soup at the Union. At one I had a class in Oriental languages. At two I exercised the mice in psych lab. At three I gave the Dean of Women another fencing lesson. At four I had qualitative analysis. At five I went clamming. At six I cut meat for the football team. At seven I ushed at the movies. At eight I had my ears pierced so that at nine I could tell fortunes in a gypsy tearoom. At ten I had a class in astronomy. At eleven I tucked in the football team. At twelve I studied and at three I went to sleep."

"Sir," cried R. L., "I am moved and inspired by your shining example!"

"It was nothing," said the stranger modestly, shaking his frail white head. "It was just hard work, and hard work never hurt anybody."

"Would you mind telling me, sir," said R. L., "how old you are now?"

"Twenty-two," said the stranger.

"What responsibilities will you start with at W. E.?"

Exciting ones. With plenty of room for your professional development. Western Electric's business depends on new ideas. And new engineers take responsible, immediate part in projects that implement the entire art of telephony — including electronic telephone offices, computer-controlled production techniques and microwave transmission. On many of these exciting advances in communications, Western's engineers work closely with engineers from our research team-mate, Bell Telephone Laboratories. For Western Electric to maintain the Bell System's ultra-high quality standards, extraordinary manufacturing, process and testing techniques are required. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors.

For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric career opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write College Relations Coordinator, Western Electric Company, Room 6306, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team comes to visit your campus this year—or during your senior year.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: ALAN DANN

"My machine wants to talk to yours" is a familiar line to Alan Dann (A.B., 1955). Alan is a Staff Assistant for Data Communications Sales in Southern New England Telephone Company's New Haven Office.

Alan came to his new promotion well prepared. He began his three years with the company as a Commercial Representative recommending communications services to businesses. Later, he handled an assignment that taught him what he needed to know about computers. This led to his most recent promotion.

Alan Dann and other young men like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

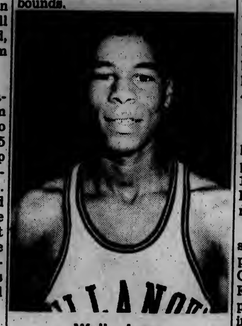
Kraftmen Fourth In ECAC Tourney

by Tom Bruderle

The Second Annual Quaker City Tournament ended Saturday night, December 29, with St. Joseph's College as the Tourney Champions. The Hawks defeated Bowling Green, 58-57, via a last second basket by Jim Boyle in the opening round. Villanova fell next 59-54. In the final round, St. Joe's defeated Brigham Young University, 76-64.



Brigham Young Surprise

The big noise in the Tournament, however, was Brigham Young. The Cougars came to town with an unsightly 3-5 record and minus the team's top scorer. Yet, BYU defeated La-Salle in the opening round 84-73.

The Cougars then surprised highly-rated Providence College 81-78, earning the right to meet the Hawks. Thanks to Steve Courtin's 24 points (the tournament's MVP) and Tom Wynne's 21, the Cougars were dropped 76-64.

Villanova Fourth

The Wildcats finished fourth in the tournament despite an opening 72-54 victory over Manhatten. Wally Jones was top-scorer with 16 points while Co-Captain Jim McMonagle chipped in 17. Jim Washington, who continues to improve with each game, had 12 points and 15 rebounds.

Next came the Hawks. At halftime Villanova had a 32-27 spread and, at one time, the Cats held a 30-21 lead. With 16:36 left in the second half, Eric Erickson left the game with an eye cut and this appeared to be the turning point of the game. When Erickson left, the score was 36-33 in favor of the Main-Liners. When he returned a little more than ten minutes later, the Cats were behind 50-45, and they never caught up.

O'Brien High

Co-captain Jim O'Brien was high man for the Cats with 19 points and a game high total of 13 rebounds. Washington and Erickson had 12 and 11 points respectively.

Providence was the next obstacle for the Wildcats and it proved to be a big one as the Cats were stomped 78-59. Ray Flynn was the chief culprit as he poured in 34 points, 26 coming in the first half.

The Friars shot 30 for 60 from the field for 50% while the Wildcats were a cold 26 for 80, 32.5%. Both teams snared 50 rebounds each. John Thompson, a 6-10½ junior and Bob Kovalski, a 6-8 sophomore had 11 and 7 rebounds respectively. Jim Washington collected 18.

ed to a 57-37 lead with the second half 10:40 old. At 6:21 Jack Kraft began to substitute freely and the Wildcats were home.

Overtime:

Before the season began, Kraft believed that the bench, like last year, would be weak. When Jones fouled out early in the second half of the Niagara game, Ben Kenny filled in with 10 points. Once again the bench stepped in when Jones' knee "locked" in the Manhattan game. Kenny came in and scored 6 points; also Richie Richman performed adequately. Although Jones is hard to replace, Kenny and Richman have been surprising . . . Villanova had a cool 37.6% (32 for 85) from the field while Detroit had an ice-cold (30.1%) 25 for 83.

Baker Runs 99 Yards For TD As Wildcats Are Edged 6-0

by Tom Finan

"Sadism", cried the Holy Cross CRUSADER when Oregon State was named as Villanova's opponent in the Fourth Annual Liberty Bowl. Many people (including some Villanovans) asked themselves how Villanova was to beat a team that had the nation's top passer and pass-catcher.

Nevertheless, before 17,048 cold fans and a nation-wide color TV audience, Villanova dropped a heart-breaking 6-0 squeaker to the West Coast Beavers.

In a game similar to the Boston College loss, the Wildcats again won the statistics. Villanova took first downs, 30-11. On the ground, with Billy Joe leading the parade, Villanova's rushers ripped the Beavers for 246 yards to the visitors 176.

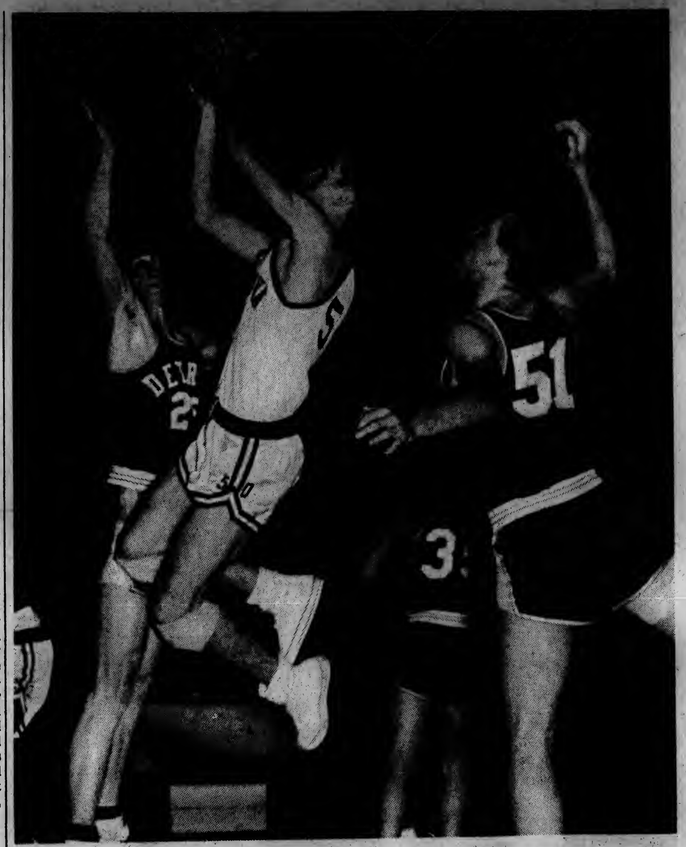
In passing, the famed Baker-to-Burke combination clicked for only a 15 yarder. Baker's total aerial efforts amounted to 123 yards, coming on 9 completions on 21 attempts. In total offense yardage, the Wildcats went for 309 yards to OS's 299. As it turned out, the Beavers needed only 99 of those yards.

Baker Scores

Bill Sherlock, kicking into a brisk wind, dropped a 52-yard punt on the Beavers' one-foot line where it was downed by Larry Glueck on a great effort. With the Beavers' backfield operating out of their own end-zone, Villanova went into an eight man line, to stop the expected line plunges.

However, Baker decided to try a sweep around left end. Al Atkinson and Al Calligaris had good shots at the Heisman Trophy winner in the end-run but he slipped away. About 15 yards later he slithered away from Glueck and romped 99 yards for the TD.

Touchdown Called Back



But the Wildcats weren't finished. On the first play of the second quarter, Joe skirted left end from the Beavers' 12, but the Main-Liners were detected holding back on the 27, and the touchdown was nullified.

Another Villanova drive was stymied when Ted Aceto threw a pass from his own 47 intended for Mike DeLone, only to have it intercepted in the end-zone by Dan Sieg.

With less than five minutes remaining in the game, Villanova was again on the march. With fourth and six on the Main-Liner 47, Richie Richman came in as a flanker. With Richman tightly guarded, Jack Clifford was able to shake loose and he was rewarded with a 19 yard pass for a first down. On the State 9 yard line Aceto went around tight end hoping to gain yardage and roll out of bounds since the Wildcats had run out of time-outs. Forced to go inside, Aceto could get but two yards and fumbled to OS, who then ran out the clock.

Seniors

For Aceto, Richman, Joe, Calligaris, Glueck, Jim Kropke, Bob Merenda, Al Reinoso, Bill Armstrong, Bob Kowalski, Arnie Buben, Capt. Charlie Johnson, Mike DeLone, Bill Barbaro, and Joe Cutroneo the Liberty-Bowl was the final game of their collegiate careers.

(Photo by John Murray)

O'Brien, Washington, Hit For 17 And 16 As 'Cats Win 77-60

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova ended a two game losing streak last Friday night with a reassuring 77-60 triumph over Detroit University before 3,965 fans at the Palestra.

Jim O'Brien, the 6-4 co-captain of the Wildcats, was high scorer with 17 points and jumped for 12 rebounds, after a 4-point, 7-rebound performance against Providence in the Quaker City Tourney.

At one point during the game, O'Brien took matters into his own hands by pouring in 8 out of 10 points at a crucial moment of the Detroit game. Right behind him was Jim Washington with 16 points and 17 rebounds.

Dick Dzik, a 6-5 junior poured in 22 points and pulled down 19 rebounds in a losing effort for the visitors.

Strong Defense

One of the chief concerns of Coach Jack Kraft was the Wildcat defense. In the past few games the Wildcats had been giving up a lot of points in the first half, with Providence tabbing 47. But, with a defense reminiscent of last year, the Wildcats held a 38-22 lead at halftime over the Titans.

The Detroiters like to snap the ball around looking for the good shot but their strategy very ofter backfired. On numerous occasions the ball either ended up in the lap of a startled fan, on in the hands of an alert Villanovan.

To complement their wild passes, the visitors brought some of their Michigan weather with them in the form of a c-cold 20% (9 for 45) from the field in the first half.

Four Minute Drought

In fact, it took Detroit 3:34 to score their first field goal while the locals piled up 10 points. When Detroit got their second field goal two and a half minutes later, the mind wandered back to the defensive efforts of the Wildcats in last year's ECAC Tournament.

The closest the Titans could come was a three point 16-13 deficit with 11:20 gone by. Then O'Brien made his move. First it was a jumper, then two rebound scores, a Wally Jones (10 points) tap and finally an O'Brien drive gave the Main-Liners a 26-13 lead.

Second Half

With Eric Erickson (12 points) scoring 8 of the Cats' first 15 points, Villanova sprint-

'Cats To Face Hawks, Owls, Quakers In Successive Saturday Skirmishs

by Tom Finan

The Villanova Wildcats will meet the Hawks of St. Joe's College this Saturday evening at the Palestra, for the Mainliners second meeting with the ECAC Tournament winner.

The Hawks quintet tallied a 59-54 victory over an injury-laden 'Cats squad in a touch and go thriller in the Quaker City City Tournament semi-final game, December 28.

Tom Wynne

Jim Lyman, and Steve Courtin, proved to be the offensive spark for the City Liners. They constituted the nucleus of the Hawks attack, along with Tom Wynne, who was leading scorer and rebounder for last season's team.

Depth: Lacking

Mentor Jack Ramsay has a squad of only eight, due to injuries and Ramsay's personal preference of carrying no more than ten players on the team.

With Billy Hoy out for the season with an injured ankle, and injury-plagued Jim Boyle remaining in doubtful status from game to game, lack of depth seems to be Ramsay's chief problem.

The Main Liners have had two weeks to practice and improve upon their mistakes and to plot new offensive and defensive strategy after their initial tilt with the Hawk quintet.

Most important, however, is whether or not the damaged knee of Wally Jones responds to treatment, so that the talented Junior from West Philly can dominate the game offensively, and break down the bristling defensive play of Jimmy Lyman.

Next scheduled action for the Blue and White is not until the following Saturday, January 19 at 9:15 p.m. at the Palestra, when they will take on the Temple Owls of Harry Litwack.

Temple got off to a very impressive start this year with their scrap against nationally ranked Kentucky. The hustling, scrambling Owls outplayed a much stronger and taller team, and held the highly-rated Big Dipper of the South, Cotton Nash to 14 points and in his own words "my most disappointing game ever."

Temple soon lost it's polish when it returned to a more normal schedule, winning five games with a scant margin total of 18 points. Leading scorers have been Darby High's Gary Kasmer and Frank Bishop from Norristown, Pa.

Potent Penn Squad

Following the Temple clash, VU next meets Ivy League representative, Pennsylvania. Led by Rhodes Scholar John Widemann, the Quakers are leading contenders for the City Series crown after their triple-overtime cliff-hanger victory over St. Joe's.

Coach Jack McCloskey will be sure to have some surprises in store for the Villanovans when they face each other at the Palestra.

Losing to top ranked Illinois in the Holiday Festival in New York City, the Red and Blue came back in the consolation game to score an impressive 80-67 rout over a strong Duquesne team.

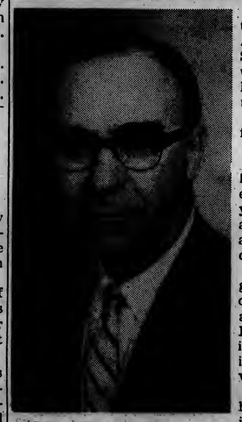
Quality And Variety Keynote Concerts In Spring Season

The Villanova Music Society this year will sponsor the annual spring concert series, the first concert to be given March 10.

William Gross, chairman of Series, stated that this year's program will include two major changes in contrast to past years.

The first major change this year will be a program featuring semi-professional talent instead of regular professional groups. This spring each group will be composed of students from the Curtis Institute of Music.



Gross stated that "Curtis is probably the finest school in the United States if not the world for applied music, and has produced such notables as, Susan Starr, Leonard Bernstein, Gian-Carlo Menotti and many others. It is in fact the Harvard of the musical world."

The second change in the series this year will be the inclusion of one short opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti, and many phone."

Admission to all concerts is free, and each will be presented on Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m., in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. The following are the scheduled concerts in the series: Suzuki String Quartet, Philadelphia Brass Quintet, Miro Woodwind Quintet, Villanova Piano Trio, and "The Telephone," by Gian-Carlo Menotti.

Lee Loevinger To Address Law Forum On Enforcement Of Anti-Trust Laws

Lee Loevinger

Lee Loevinger, assistant attorney general in charge of the Anti-trust Division of the United States Department of Justice, will address the Villanova Law Forum on Friday evening, February 8.

The scheduled topic is "Enforcing the Anti-trust Laws."

Varied Career

Attorney General Loevinger has had a varied and distinguished career as a practicing lawyer, a teacher of law, a judge, and a public servant. He is also a prolific author on law, economics, and philosophy.

A native of Minnesota, he graduated from the University of Minnesota summa cum laude and was editor of the Minnesota Law Review. He practiced law in Minnesota and was a partner in the law firm of Larson, Loevinger, Lindquist, and Fraser.

During his years of practice he specialized in legal problems involved in economic organization, particularly anti-trust problems. He also kept up active interest in jurisprudence and published many works in this field. He was an attorney with the NLRB from 1937 to 1941 and with the Anti-trust Division from 1941 to 1946.

Associate Justice

He was an Associate Justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court from 1960 to 1961 and a visiting professor in jurisprudence at the University of Minnesota Law School in 1961. He has been Assistant Attorney General since 1961.

The forum will take place at 8:30 p.m. in Garey Hall, the Law School building on the Villanova campus.

Members of the faculty and the student body are invited.

Seven Groups To Participate In Collegiate Jazz Festival

By Ed Bride

This year's Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, to be held on the Villanova University campus February 22, promises to be one of the biggest events of the year, and will surpass by a wide margin the attention brought to the university by the past two Festivals.

The first two Festivals, co-ordinated by Jim Braithwaite and Joe Zawacki, featured several noteworthy groups from the Philadelphia region; for the first time, the annual affair will have groups from all over the East. They will range from New Hampshire to Chicago to North Carolina.

More specifically, these are the seven groups that will participate in the finals: BIG BANDS — The Barbary Coast Orchestra of Dartmouth (Hanover, New Hampshire); The West Chester (Penna.) Criterions; The Duquesne Workshop Band (Pittsburgh). SMALL GROUPS — Potsdam State (New York) Jazz Quintet; Mike Michaels Trio (American Conservatory of Music, Chicago). VOCAL group will be the Harlequins, a representative of Duke University in Durham, North Carolina.

These groups were selected over groups from forty-two interested schools in a judging session at the Berklee School of Music in Boston on January 26. Judges were Robert Share, administrator of Berklee; Bill Coss, New York feature writer for Down Beat magazine; and John Hammond, A&R man from Columbia Records in New York. These men selected the finalists

Nursing Sorority Plans Dinner Dance For Next Weekend

Havertown's Falcon House will be the scene of the annual dinner dance sponsored by Villanova's women's sorority, Pi Theta Chi. The semi-formal fete will take place on Saturday, February 9.

The event will commence with a turkey dinner at 7 p.m. Musical entertainment provided by the Satellites will follow until 1 p.m.

Favors

Sorority favors will be distributed at the dinner. All invitations must be presented at the door for admission.

Tickets are $11 per couple and may be purchased from the following class representatives: Joann Dynakowski, seniors; Trish D'Alonzo juniors; Sandy Sauer, sophomores, and Annete Paczkowski for pledges. No tickets will be sold after 5 p.m. on Thursday, February 7.

This is the third year that the Falcon House has hosted the dance, the sorority's largest outside affair.

Senior Queen Contest Dinner And Dancing At Florentine Ball

The social climax of a student's career at Villanova is the Senior Dinner Dance, the most festive activity of Senior Week.

The Senior Dinner Dance tickets go on sale February 11 to 13 in the Student Council Office from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tickets are sold in table lots only with five couples to a table.

The Senior Dance will be held on February 23 at the Philadephia Athletic Club, with the reception in the Florentine Lounge of the Club from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Following the dance the seniors will be served dinner in the Grande Ballroom. Charlie Gresh will provide music for dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The Queen of the Senior Dinner Dance will be crowned by the Junior Dinner Dance Queen. Seniors who wish to place their dates in the Queen contest must submit a picture (5x7) to the Student Council Office on or before Thursday, February 7.

On the back of the picture should be stated the name, address, occupation or school of the date, along with the name and division of the senior.

Photographers from the Carl Wolf studios will be there to take pictures of the individual couples. All refreshments will be supplied by the Club. In order to maintain the cordial relations between the Club and the University, the Student Council has asked that all attending seniors refrain from purchasing anything off the campus.

The symbol of the Senior Dinner Dance, the Florentine Ball, is found in "il giglio di Firenze." The "giglio," or "fleur de lis," was the symbol of the Medici family-governor.

Big Brothers Ask Students To Help In Guidance Program

The Big Brothers of America have appealed to the students of Villanova University to inspect and participate in their program.

Initiated in 1904 and Chartered by Congress, the Big Brother Movement is the only program in which volunteer men work with boys on an individual basis.

Fatherless Boys

Under the program, one volunteer is put in touch with a fatherless boy who is in need of male guidance. Some of these boys may have minor psychological problems, but none are serious enough to require professional treatment.

The work of the Big Brothers is supervised by a professional staff of social workers who assist in meeting and participating in some activity in which both are interested on the basis of once a week.

Screening

Both the boy and the Big Brother are thoroughly screened by the association before the contact is made. The Big Brother is then given a complete file on the boy with whom he will work.

Peter Belfi '63 at present is the only Villanova student who is a member of this organization. Other students interested in lending a helping hand to others not so fortunate as themselves are urged to contact Mr. Parsons at the Tasker Office, phone DE 6-6886.

Villanova Graduates Offered Navy Careers In Technical Schools

The Navy has a need for approximately 100 Officer Candidate School graduates for assignment as instructors ashore in nuclear power missile and other technical schools.

Many students majoring in science or engineering fields are now eligible to apply for this duty through the Navy's Officer Candidate School Program.

To be eligible an applicant must have a baccalaureat degree with a major in mathematics, physics, mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, reactor engineering or chemistry. He must execute an agreement to serve four years of active duty in a commissioned status upon completion of OCS.

The normal physical qualifications apply except that defective color perception and visual acuity will be waived provided vision is correctible to: 20/40 in one eye and 20/70 in the other, or 20/30 in one eye and 20/100 in the other, or 20/20 in one eye and 20/400 in the other.

Interested persons may obtain further details by inquiring at the NROTC Office in John Barry Hall.

Villanovans Invited By Theatre Chairman To Submit Scripts

Richard A. Duprey, Chairman of Villanova's Theatre Department, has issued a general invitation to Villanova students, graduate and undergraduate, to submit original plays to the Theatre Department here.

Professor Duprey says, "It has become increasingly obvious that there are a great many Villanovans with creative talent. Even a perfunctory reading of the Villanovan, The Lynx, and other student publications clearly establishes this.

"As we seek to strengthen theatre activities here on campus, there is no reason for not doing good original scripts by our own students." He further pointed out that one of our graduate students, Jules Tasca, formerly of Penn State, won major recognition in the national playwriting contest sponsored this year by Samuel French Inc.

Villanova's Theatre Department will seek to produce the best of the submitted scripts in the near future.

Senior Dinner-Dance Queen Contest

Submit pictures of dates on or before February 7 in the Senior Mail Box in the Student Council Office. Put all pertinent information on back of picture—Name, Address, School, Your Name, Your Division.

POWER MEANS PROGRESS for engineers at WEST PENN POWER

If you are preparing yourself for a career in engineering, it will pay you to consider West Penn Power. Whether your major is in Electrical, Mechanical, Industrial or Civil Engineering, you'll find challenging work with this progressive company serving a dynamic, growing industry. Capable, ambitious engineers will find opportunities for exciting work in transmission, distribution, power station and sales engineering including work in research and computers. Talk to our representative when he visits your campus and get the full story.

At West Penn Power, engineers have a vital role in keeping our business alive and growing. In ten years, the electric power industry will double its generating capacity . . . exciting proof that you can find not only challenging engineering positions . . . but great opportunities to move into management capacities. You'll learn from your talk with our representative that West Penn is an engineering minded company that knows and talks your language. That's why today, engineers fill many management positions with our company.

If you are looking for a career where you can put your engineering skills to work . . . and have the opportunity to move ahead as well, be sure to sign up today for an interview with West Penn Power.

February Open Mixer Added To Council Social Calendar

The Student Council has placed a new date on the social calendar for the Villanova student. It is February 15.

On this date, the Student Council will sponser a Saint Valentine's Mixer which will be open to all colleges in the Philadelphia area.

The idea for the mixer was fostered at the recent Council on Student Government held here on November 25. At this meeting of the representatives and presidents of area colleges' student governments, it was noted that greater co-ordination of student government projects should be undertaken among the various colleges.

The mixer, it is hoped, will provide the chance for students of the local colleges to meet in a social atmosphere.

Announcements and tickets have been sent out to 18 colleges among which are numbered Rosemont, Immaculata, Cabrini, Chestnut Hill, Saint Joseph's, and Temple.

The dance, a stag or drag affair, will be held in the Villanova Field House from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m. and will feature the music of the Revelers. The price of admission is 75 cents per person.

Co-chairmen for the dance, Terry Cooney and Bob Mairone, are confident that those attending will find the affair an enjoyable one and are hopeful that the students of Villanova will support the mixer as enthusiastically as they have supported other social events in the past.

Shamokinaki Dance To Benefit Missions Scheduled March 29

The eleventh annual Shamokinaki Dance, undertaken by the students of Villanova for the Augustinian Missions in Japan, will be held in the Field House on March 29.

Music will be provided by the Villanovans with dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. favors will be given to each couple and a Japanese tea set will be awarded as the door prize.

Rev. Robert M. Burke, OSA, moderator of the affair, hopes to make $6,000. Father stated that letters will be sent to all the students' parents asking for contributions as sponsors.

Present at this student activity will be the Rev. Edward Hatrick, OSA, Prior of the Augustinian Community in Japan.

On Monday, February 11, a general meeting will be held in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall, to form the different committees for the dance. Anyone willing to help is welcome.

Villanova Political Union In TV Debate On Urban Affairs

WRCV, on Tuesday, January 8, televised a debate of the Villanova Political Union from Congress Hall of Independence Hall.

Work on the production began at 2 p.m. and ended at 8 p.m. The members debated on the aspects of the creation of a department of Urban Affairs. Greg Leonard of the conservative party was the initial speaker against the proposal, while Dave Gallie assumed the vanguard defense of the liberals.

Former Philadelphia mayor, Richardson Dilworth, a man familar with the problems of urban affairs, gave a brief speech on the advantages of such a department.

Mr. John J. Logue, moderator of the Political Union, expressed his delight that "the students used the opportunity between shootings to speak with Mr. Dilworth."

Mr. Logue further commented that the memory of the Congress Hall debate "will remain with the members for a long time."

ANNOUNCING A NEW CENTER OF CONCENTRATION IN SPACE TECHNOLOGY

GENERAL PRECISION AEROSPACE

To meet the nation's burgeoning requirements for space exploration, General Precision has launched an endeavor focusing on aerospace systems with strong emphasis on guidance and control. These broad efforts will be centered in a rapidly expanding complex of laboratories, developmental and production facilities.

KEARFOTT FIGURES PROMINENTLY IN NEW COMPLEX

Supported by Kearfott's widely respected scientific staff and technicol facilities, General Precision Aerospace is further strengthening its capabilities with a major Research Center for Space Sciences and a recently formed Aerospace Systems Division. Evidence of this group's commanding technical posture lies in its initial assignment, a program to provide stellar-inertial guidance for a mobile mid-range ballistic missile. And beyond this are advanced programs supplying major guidance and control systems for projected missiles and space vehicles.

IMMENSE OPPORTUNITY AT GROUND-FLOOR LEVELS

Still in its formative stage, this new scientific community is rich in openings for talented young men capable of early growth toward leadership positions. Working with a select staff of scientists and engineers, they will find a flexible atmosphere open to fresh thinking at all levels.

FREEDOM TO EXPLORE MANY CAREER AREAS

During the incoming graduate's initial year, a formal professional training program allows unusual latitude for young scientists and engineers to "get the feel" of areas pertinent to their interest. The graduates are assigned to a specific engineering division akin to their interest and qualifications and during rotation may elect permanent assignment to a specific laboratory when their interest is defined. Advanced degree holders may choose an immediate assignment parallel to their preference and training. To the right are several broad areas where current assignments exist:

Stellar & Inertial Guidance System Land & Marine Navigation
Systems Analysis & Test
Analog & Digital Equipments
Control Systems & Servo Mechanisms
Electronic Instrumentation & Circuit Development
Component Research & Development
Scientific Programming (Adv. Degree Req.)
Engineering Math Analysis (Adv. Degree Req.)
Systems Field Engineering

We invite you to consider these career opportunities in a vital field. To learn more, arrange an interview through your Placement Director or write to: Robert L. LoPresto

Exchange Corner

Students Make Own Exam Schedules

by Ray Ritter

Editor's Note:

The Exchange Corner is a round up of news which has happened or is happening at other colleges and universities and which the editors of the Villanovan feel would be of interest to the student body.

College News — Bryn Mawr College — For the second time, Haverford College experimented with a program devised by the students to let them schedule their own exams.

The new exam plan had an initial trial last May, and following this second trial, the Haverford faculty is slated to decide whether the program will be adopted permanently. Inquiries have already come from different parts of the country, and indeed, the program may be unique on American campuses.

About a month before the ten day exam period, each student completes a form indicating his courses, instructors, and the date he wants to take each test. Certain basic qualifications must be met: exams be started either at 9 a.m. or 2 p.m., senior comprehensives and tests requiring special facilities have priority, and courses or sections which entail the reading of more than twenty pages by any professor must be completed the first week.

Before the exam period, students submit to the Registrar's Office an envelope for each test on which is indicated the course number, student's name, examination time and date. This is to enable the Registrar's Office to prepare lists which allow each professor to know exactly at what time all their tests will be completed and ready for grading.

Exams are then inserted in their respective envelopes along with special instructions.

Fifteen minutes before each scheduled test, a student committee distributes the sealed envelopes to the examinee. They then can complete the tests, unmonitored anywhere in either of two buildings. After the exam, Student Committee members receive the completed exam and question paper in the original envelope, and then they turn it over to the Registrar's Office where professors can pick them up.

By this method the student can usually work out an optimum schedule which evenly distributes his exam load over a period of time — lengthened or shortened to his own desires or needs. The familiar crowding of exams one on top of another is gone; so, too is the common situation of a few early exams and a few late exams, and nothing in between but a long break.

The main advantage of the whole program is that it is working very easily in simplifying the job of exams for the students, faculty, and various administrative officials.

Unequitable Exams

The time of crisis for the student, examination week, has passed. And once again the seeds of discontent are being blown to and fro as students discuss the unfairness of "this exam" or the difficulty of "that exam."

Much of the difficulty lies, of course, in the unpreparedness of the student who took the exam. But some must be credited to the fact that make-up exams must be given.

Under the present system, make-up exams are necessary. With just 14 examination periods allotted and the myriad of courses taken by students it is nearly impossible to arrange a schedule which will avoid conflicts, especially for upperclassmen.

But the situation does deserve investigation since it is unfair to students to make them take a make-up exam which may be more difficult than the regular exam. It is also unfair to the student taking the regular exam if the make-up given to his classmate is easier.

Last year the Villanovan suggested an examination system which would eliminate conflicts and prevent students from having their major examinations bunched together in one part of the week which happens occasionally.

This system certainly wasn't the best possible one but it was a step toward more equitable end-of-the-semester testing. Perhaps the administration will investigate other systems which would be more equitable and eliminate the time-consuming and sometimes unfair make-up exams.

Lone Holdout

That idealistic leader of the French Republic is again tiring the world with his intense desire to return France to a place of dominance in Europe similar to that which it held early in the eighteenth century.

In his latest bid for prominence, and at the same time a bid for the stubborn award of the year, DeGaulle has nixed the entry of Great Britain into the European Economic Community, the Common Market.

At Brussels last week, France cast the lone dissenting vote against Britain's entry, against the yeas of the other market members: Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Luxembourg, and West Germany.

DeGaulle publicly stated that he opposed Britain's entry because the island kingdom's economy is allegedly unsuitable for the market. But actually Britain's entry would cause a weakening of France's plan to become a third major force in the world.

Let us hope that it is only a question of time before France realizes that economic and political unity must come before outdated eighteenth century notions of individual dominations in this era of nuclear threats and Soviet mistrust.

This semi-rift among the western powers could have serious effects in relations between the members of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance. Khrushchev has already stated that the result of the Brussels meeting indicates a weakening of the Western alliance. If allowed to grow wider, the attitude of France could cause serious repercussions in relation to Western defenses.

On Student Activities

Some of the more alert students may have noticed a box of epic-like booklets being distributed at registration last week. Though labeled "For Freshmen Only" these impressive looking epistles apply to the entire student body.

They comprise the 1962-1963 edition of the Student Activities handbook published by the Student Council.

Copies are available in the Student Council office, Second Floor, Dougherty Hall.

Though one semester late, the books are helpful in indicating to the individual student the variety of activities which are open to him.

Included are descriptions of the clubs' activities and the names of persons to see if one is interested in joining.

The handbook reminds us of the perennial question asked by many of the organization leaders on campus, "Why don't more students join?" True, many students are in no academic position to join any activity if they wish to remain a part of the student body.

But many others of the undergraduate congregate are in excellent position to lend a hand to student activities. Why don't they? Perhaps the lure of 69th Street or Kelly's is stronger than of Second Floor Dougherty or any of the other many locations of activities.

"The other guy will do it" is an attitude held by all too many of the student body in relation to participation in extracurricular activities. Perhaps someday there won't be any "other guy" and some of the organizations may fold.

An hour a week is really not too much to ask from a student for work on some activity. And this hour may greatly reduce the burden on other organization members.

Consult the worthy epic of the Student Council and see if some activity would suit your talents and desires.

The Real Truth About Villanova Dogs

by Ed Wilkinson

There is no doubt that all of you are aware of the fact that there are dogs on campus, through evidence of one sort or another (especially in the winter season with the ground snow-covered). BUT do you know the story behind the story? Do you know the real truth about Villanova dogs?

For an answer to these burning questions, you'll have to look elsewhere, because we don't know either.

However, we can say this: historically speaking, it has been rumored that the dogs were brought on campus in connection with the Nursing Division to serve as a kind of protection for the girls until the boys got used to seeing them (the girls) roaming around campus.

This may be a bit rash, however, even though we might perhaps admit to an understandable confusion over the issue.

Personal Interview

In an effort to clear up this cloudy situation, we sought out the Honorable Dean of Dog Division here at Villanova, Black Angus, for a personal interview. He is really quite a well-known figure around campus, this rather scholarly looking old fellow with the huge head and the watery, philosophic gaze, who has never been seen without his shiney, black, fur all-weather coat as he goes about his duties on campus.

Unfortunately we were unable to get a statement from Dean Angus. We tried to catch him the other day as he was passing through C&F Cafeteria. (He often stops in around lunch time to see that everything is in order). But he's always on the run, and we hardly had a chance to pat him on the back before he was off . . probably headed for an important meeting of some sort.

There is talk that there is one thing which has Dean Angus quite worried these days. Lately there has been a great deal of resentment over certain basic privileges which have been extended to Dog Division and withheld from the rest of the students, namely, why should the dogs be allowed to eat without coats and ties?

Cafeteria Fun

The student dog relationship in the cafeteria is surprisingly good. Dinner is always more fun for the boys when they can playfully plaster that little black curly-haired dog with nice white butter pats. And it's always good fun on olive nights to play with the dogs, who just love to play as moving targets for the boys. And the students are always very generous with their food—on many nights even giving up their whole dinner unselfishly to the happy dogs. It's surely a heartwarming sight to see one of those plump little beagles bouncing from table to table slurping down stacks of good pink ham, threatening to explode all over everybody around him.

Classroom space is another problem with Dog Division. Apparently all classes are being held outdoors at present. But lack of classroom space doesn't prevent the campus dogs from using all the facilities on campus. Frequently they may be seen in C&F building monitoring classes, or just wandering through the halls. Their favorite gathering place is the Dog Union building (Dougherty Hall), and the dogs enjoy a relaxing moment in the Pie Shoppe as much as any of the other students.

It's a common sight to see a dog or two panting happily around the Pie Shoppe greeting friends and gobbling up lunches. The students are always glad to see a loveable happy face drooling on their sandwiches and licking ice cream. And, of course, in nice weather the dogs migrate out onto the patio with the rest of the students to lie in the sun.

The Campus Canines are always well represented at campus functions. For example, you can always find a dog or two watching the intramural games, often trying to participate actively. But they are almost always discouraged with very convincing arguments by the students, such as a violent thrust of the foot, or jagged rocks, or any other thing that is handy. We can't recall if there was ever any actual Intramual Dog Team at Villanova, but then there hasn't always been as much snow as there has been this year (Oops!).

Brilliance Behind The Scenes Befalls Many Unsung Greats

(The first of a series of three articles featuring the unsung contributors to the music we enjoy—the sidemen, the arrangers, and the song writers.)

by Jan Dyroff

In these few articles you're going to hear about a few people who are really unfamiliar to you. Some will no longer be active, since my scope is the entire history of jazz, but remember behind the most brilliant solos there has to be a firm base for them. This is the story of a few of the men who make up that base.

Let's start with the very beginning and consider Honore Dutrey, trombonist. Honore had a smoother quality to his work than most of his contemporaries. He was of the New Orleans school in the earliest days but was able to tone his tailgating impulses.

He first joined King Oliver's band in 1907 and stayed with him right into the Twenties except for a hitch in the Navy during World War I. Later he worked with Johnny Dodds, Carroll Dickerson, and toward the end, Louis Armstrong.

Wolverines' Boy

On up into the decade is Min Leibrook who spans his way from the famed Wolverines around '26, to the Goldkette group, and on to the top with Paul Whitman and his Ambassador Orchestra.

Min was versatile and added to the rhythm section either with the tuba or the bass sax. He managed to play with Joe Venuti, the young Benny Goodman, and, of course, Bix. He was present at that sad recording session of the nebulous Bix Beiderbecke Orchestra in 1930.

With that we are into another decade, and into the era of one Keg Johnson. Keg's horn was the trombone. He toured with Satchmo in the early '30's and between them they came out with some rare sounds. If you've ever heard their "Mahogany Hall Stomp," 'nuff said.

Big Band Crush

In general the late thirties and early forties saw a trend toward the big bands. It was quite easy for an artist to become "lost" in the crowd. But there were also many standouts.

One of these was a drummer, J. C. Heard. J. C. was first prominent with Teddy Wilson's big band, then with Benny Carter, and Cab Calloway. Later in '46 and '47 he formed his own sextet. Since then he has been noted with Coleman Hawkins, Roy Eldridge, and Lester Lanin and his own group.

Also worthy of merit is Milt Hinton on bass. He's backed up people all over the place, Zutty Singleton, Cab Calloway, Joe Bushkin, Phil Moore, and Jackie Gleason. He has worked with the later Satch, Benny Goodman, Jimmy McPartland, and on.

For the past few years he has confined himself to studio and recording work. He's on lots of tracks and is much admired for his musical workmanship.

Bell Belts

Another bassist is Aaron Bell. He's had formal training in music and has mostly worked small combos. He headed one of his own back in'56. He's mostly confined himself to pit work for shows and for recording sessions.

The late Ernie Henry swung out with the alto sax. He was bugged for a while by the West Coast lack of employment for non-rock saxmen. But he overcame that as time went on.

Ernie sat in on a number of fabulous gigs with such greats as Monk, Kenny Dorham (a man not to be taken lightly), Max Roach and Dizzy Gillespie. Ernie was greatly influenced by Bird, but how could he miss that?

Sevrinsen Swings

One of the things that keeps the night-owl Johnny Carson up is the fact that he might, at some time, feature some of the men in the band. One of the best trumpeters in the business is in that group, Doc Sevrinsen.

Until recently Doc had been only a sideman (he came out with his own LP.) Doc's work is unsurpassed. Speaking of him Leonard Feather once said, Doc is a "first class soloist whose steady studio work has limited his jazz recognition."

And "The Curfew Tolls . . ."

by Ray Ritter

Tuesday, January 29, marked one of the darkest days in the history of American poetry. For on that day the uncrowned poet laureate of the United States, Robert Frost, died at the age of 88.

During his lifetime Robert Frost won more Pulitzer Prizes than any other poet. Robert Frost was a farmer. He was a statesman, a classicist, a teacher, humorist, and philosopher all in one. Robert Frost's books sold more than one million copies, which is a publishing record for poetry.

He was received with warmth wherever he went. A standing ovation and cheering for hours accompanied all his lectures. The aged, white-haired poet could always hold his audiences spellbound, and his tone was as to friends or neighbors in everything he spoke.

"Mending Walls" is probably the best known of his poems. It explains why "good fences make good neighbors" which is a main characteristic of Robert Frost.

Before dying he wrote:

"The woods are lovely dark and deep
But I have promises to keep.
And miles to go before
I sleep,
And miles to go before
I sleep."

He now meets his destiny of a long journey before he sleeps, and America now meets its destiny in the loss of one of its greatest literary figures. A tribute to Robert Frost, America's greatest poet is rewarding, but even more rewarding is the works and memories he leaves behind him.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf," "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," etc.)

THE CURSE OF THE CAMPUS: NO. 1

Hate me if you will, but I must speak. We college types are far too complacent. Sure, we've got plenty to be proud of. We've got atom smashers, we've got graduate schools, we've got new peaks in scholarship, new highs in academic honors. And yet, in the midst of these triumphs, we have failed dismally to make any progress in solving the oldest and most horrendous of all campus problems: we've still got roommates.

To be sure, all roommates are not bad. There is the well-documented case of Hilquit Glebe, a student at the Manhattan College of Agriculture, majoring in curds and whey, who admitted publicly that he actually liked his roommate—an odd admission when you consider that this roommate, Mervis Trunz by name, was frankly not too winsome a fellow. He practiced his tympani in his room, he kept an alligator, and he collected airplane tires.

But, on the other hand, Mervis bought two packs of Marlboro Cigarettes every day and gave one of them to Hilquit and—I ask you—who can stay mad at a man who gives you Marlboro Cigarettes? Who, upon tasting that flavorful blend of Marlboro tobaccos, upon drawing through that pure white Marlboro filter, upon exulting in this best of all possible cigarettes, Marlboro—who, I say, can harden his heart against his neighbor? Certainly not Hilquit. Certainly not I. Certainly not you, as you will find when you scurry to your nearest tobacconist and buy a supply. Marlboros come in soft pack or Flip-Top Box. Tobacconists come in small, medium, and large.

But I digress. Roommates, I say, are still with us and I fear they always will be, so we better learn how to get along with them. It can be done, you know. Take, for instance, the classic case of Dolly Pitcher and Molly Madison.

Dolly and Molly, roommates at a prominent Midwestern girls' school (Vassar) had a problem that seemed insoluble. Dolly could only study late at night, and Molly could not stay awake past nine o'clock. If Dolly kept the lights on, the room was too bright for Molly to sleep. If Molly turned the lights off, the room was too dark for Dolly to study. What to do?

Well sir, those two intelligent American kids found an answer. They got a miner's cap for Dolly! Thus, she had enough light to study by, and still the room was dark enough for Molly to sleep.

It must be admitted, however, that this solution, ingenious as it was, had some unexpected sequelae. Dolly got so enchanted with her miner's cap that she switched her major from 18th Century poetry to mining and metallurgy. Shortly after graduation she had what appeared to be a great stroke of luck: while out prospecting, she discovered what is without question the world's largest feldspar mine. This might have made Dolly very rich except that nobody, alas, has yet discovered a use for feldspar. Today Dolly, a broken woman, squeezes out a meagre living making echoes for tourists in Mammoth Cave.

Nor has Molly fared conspicuously better. Once Dolly got the miner's hat, Molly was able to catch up on her long-lost sleep. She woke after eight days, refreshed and vigorous—more vigorous, alas, than she realized. It was the afternoon of the annual Dean's tea. Molly stood in line with her classmates, waiting to shake the Dean's hand. At last her turn came, and Molly, full of strength and health, gave the Dean a firm handshake—so firm, indeed, that all five of the Dean's knuckles were permanently fused.

The Dean sued for a million dollars, and, of course, won. Today Molly, a broken woman, is paying off her debt by walking the Dean's cat every afternoon for ten cents an hour.

Serious Tone Pervades Fall 'Lynx'; Stories, Interviews Rescue Issue

Editor's Note: Above the sound of progressive jazz and amid the smoke and ashes of spent cigarettes, timed to the tinkling glasses of beverage, we were able to interview Mr. Arthur A. Molitierno — noted member of the Villanovan — on his views of the fall issue of the Lynx, the campus literary magazine.

Q. What do you think of the Lynx in general, and of the place of such issues on the college campus?

A. To begin with, I think the idea of campus literary publications is one of the best means a young and inexperienced writer has of gaining some recognition and valuable criticism.

As far as this issue goes, I do not think that anyone will reproach me for not knocking James A. Michener or Bennett Cerf. Their interviews were both interesting and informative. They brought out two of the facts of life concerning literature, the writer, and the publisher.

It is my opinion that the short stories in the Lynx were the main strong point, although I would like to have seen them extended in length. It is unfortunate that the main strong point is the only real strong point besides the interviews.

I did not expect to re-read any of Shakespeare's poems in this issue. However, I did expect more diversification in form and style. In addition, much of the poetry lacked the true basic quality of the art — communication of the experience.

Q. Would you care to comment on the short story which impressed you most?

A. It might seem a paradox or even a contradiction to some that while I would like to see some stories of greater length, the story that impressed me most was the shortest one of the five presented.

I am of course refering to E. Quentin's 'Dona Nobis Pacem.' Mr. Quentin captures for us the thoughts of an infirm religious. We do not stand by and merely watch what is happening, we are actually in his mind.

The author has combined in a few short pages the thoughts and desires that have made up a priest's memories, the small and insignificant and the crowning point of a priest's life . . . Thou art a priest . . .

The succession of Latin prayers and fact interspersed with incidentals is surely worthy of artistic note. In final analysis, 'Dona Nobis Pacem' achieves what many poems in the book fail to achieve — feeling.

Q. What would you consider to be the finest poem in the current publication?

A. Of the nineteen odd poems contained in the Lynx one stands out in my mind. There were few good poems, many mediocre poems, and lots of space fillers. In my opinion there is only one fine poem in the issue, 'Epithalamion' by Denis J. Lucey, III.

In 'Epithalamion' the first night of marriage is described with the passion and anxieties contrasted against the chill and still snow outside. Lucey's message is that of love of . . . my first-night bride . . . He has not failed in communicating that experience to us.

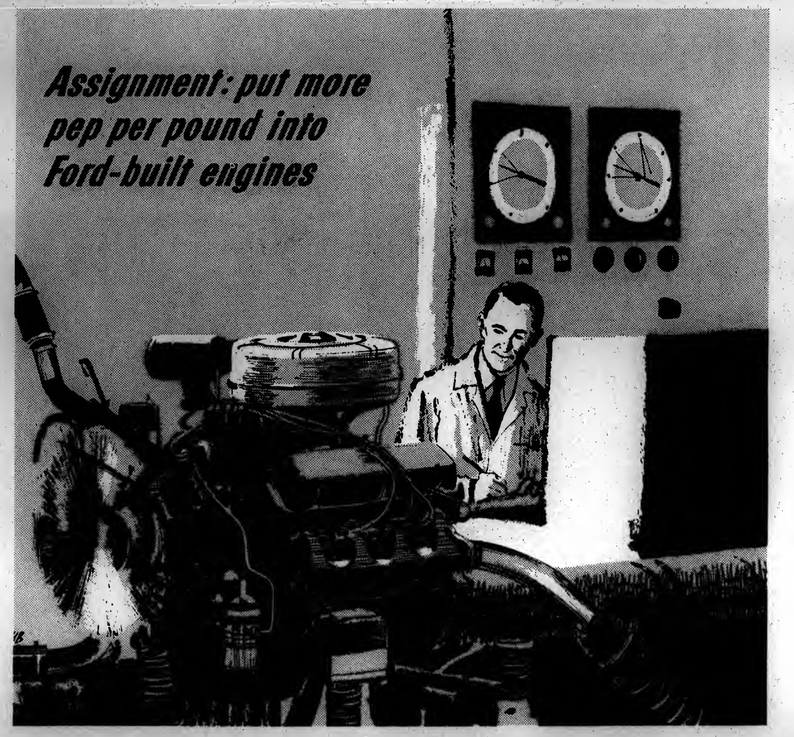
Q. What about some of the other poems and short stories in the Lynx?

A. Well I was glad to see that such people as George W. Welch and Richard C. McIntyre have not forgotten that there is such a thing as rhyme. Almost everyone else seems to have forgotten it.

The "New Deal" by George W. Welch, written in iambic tetrameter couplets, expresses the problem of living in today's society—the race of man against time and space.

'The Fraud' by Frank Murphy ranks on a par with 'Dona Nobis Pacem' and in its character portrayal of Brother Superior is one of the most interesting stories in the book. Brother Superior is a classic vibrating fraud.

Q. Could you point out some of the pitfalls a beginning poet is likely to face?



A. Well, as you well know poetry is the most concise form of literature. It says much in very little words. I have noticed in the Lynx that there is a tendency for some to say too much in very little words.

They are trying to express feelings which they have experienced all of their lives. To do this in the space of a few words is difficult, even for the poets. The case in point here is Michael E. Gill.

It appears to me that such poems as 'Black Insight' and 'Freefall' are attempting to portray too much in too little.

Q. You mentioned before that you had imagined that the Lynx would present more diversity. Could you please explain?

A. After reading the Lynx have come to the conclusion that Villanova men must be the most serious people in the world. What has happened to humor? Doesn't it have any place in literature? And what about satire, irony, and wit? Politics and the condition that the world is in today furnish the writer with parasangs of material.

Result: New family of lightweight powerplants . . . including a new V-8 that weighs 110 pounds less than the comparable V-8 it replaces

In our search to provide good performance with lighter powerplants, Ford Motor Company engineers and foundrymen have pioneered new techniques that now let us cast our engine blocks with such precision that much lighter engines are made possible.

New materials used to make cores and molds and new casting methods enable us to make engine parts with walls as thick as necessary—but no thicker. This eliminates weight of extra material which must be used to provide adequate strength with less precise casting methods.

Reducing engine weight through precision casting means more performance per pound—and since lighter engines mean overall car weight can be reduced, better fuel economy results.

Another assignment completed—another Ford First—and one more example of how Ford Motor Company continues to provide engineering leadership for the American Road.

Villanova's Richard A. Duprey To Speak On WIP Seminar 610

Professor Richard A. Duprey, a member of the Villanova Graduate Theatre Department and noted drama critic, will be the guest speaker on the first presentation of Seminar 610 to be heard on local radio station WIP.

Duprey will be heard on the Metropolitan Broadcasting Company's Philadelphia outlet on Thursday night, February 17, at 6:30.

The weekly educational program will be co-ordinated by WIP Program Director Dick Carr and Music Director Dick Reynolds.

They will present their opinions on various subjects.

Duprey will speak on drama and his new book, Just Off the Aisle. He is also drama critic for the Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times and has a syndicated drama column in several Catholic newspapers.

Scheduled to participate in future Seminar 610 presentations are faculty members from several area colleges and universities, including St. Joseph's, Drexel, Pennsylvania, Ursinus, and Penn Military.

Two more Villanova faculty members are scheduled to appear in the spring.

Red Cross Holds Spring Blood Drive

A blood drive sponsered by the local chapter of the American Red Cross will be held at Villanova on March 6 and 7.

Registration for the drive will be held on February 12 for the NROTC members in John Barry Hall. The rest of the university community will have a chance to sign on the following two days in the main corridor of Dougherty Hall.

The announced goal for the drive is 300 pints. If the goal is reached everyone connected with the university and their immediate family will be guaranteed free blood for a year.

Peter, Paul, And Mary Slated For Junior Concert Festivities

Committees will be chosen this week to make the final preparations for the Junior Week Concert scheduled for Friday night, April 26.

Marty McGuinn, recently named chairman for the concert, has announced plans to hold the feature in the Field House. Plans are now under way to have a professional sound company install a sound system to provide the best possible acoustics for the presentation which will include the popular folk singing group Peter, Paul, and Mary.

Ticket prices will be $3.00 for seats to be set up on the gym floor and $2.50 for seats in the upstairs stands. There will be no price difference for the different areas in the stands and seating will be on a first come, first serve basis.

Also to be featured in the concert, which is now scheduled to get underway at 8 p.m. is one of the groups from the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival to take place February 22.

on a basis of tapes submitted by the groups earlier in the month, and the general procedure was by a tedious process of elimination, scoring, re-hearing, elimination, and so forth, until the seven groups were decided upon.

For the final competition of February 22, there will be a panel of six judges, including Share, Coss, and Hammond. The three additional will be Rev. Norman J. O'Connor, a Paulist priest who is well-known in the jazz field as a critic as well as a great enthusiast and promoter; Sid Mark, popular Philadelphia jazz disc-jockey; and Sid Bernstein, New York booker with General Artists, and originator of the Jazz Conference.

As well as general presentation, the judges will make decisions in the following prize categories: Best (overall) Jazz Group; Best Big Band; Best Combo; Best Soloists; Most Promising Arranger/composer and the most promising in each of the other categories. This is not to be confused with "best," which implies that the group may already have reached their highest potential.

Awarding the prizes will be bandleader Stan Kenton, one of the most avid enthusiasts of jazz at the collegiate level. Kenton will fly East from his "home base" in Los Angeles to attend and help co-ordinate the show, award the prizes, and then fly back to the coast. He has repeatedly expressed his esteem, respect, and enthusiasm for this particular Festival, as well as the Collegiate Jazz Festival at Notre Dame.

An advisory committee, consisting of professional men in the field of Jazz donating their services to the Festival, was set up early in the show's planning and it includes such names as: Kenton, the Chief Advisor; the six judges; bandleader Maynard Ferguson; booker Oscar Cohen; Jazz saxist Coleman Hawkins; publisher John Maher; pianist Ahmad Jamal; Bruce Davidson of Capitol Records; vibraharpist and arranger Terry Gibbs; composer Jimmy DePreist; trombonist J. J. Johnson; and Toby DeLuca of WFIL radio in Philadelphia.

Senior Tom Semmer is general chairman of the show.

A BIG STEP CLOSER TO YOUR FUTURE

That's when the Linde Company representative will be on campus. He will be interviewing qualified engineering students who feel their future lies in research or applied engineering.

The LINDE Laboratories, for example—at Tonawanda (Buffalo), N.Y., Speedway (Indianapolis), Ind., and Newark, N.J.—provide an unusually stimulating environment for the scientific-minded to grow and develop. The many achievements of LINDE people in research and applied engineering have borne a rich harvest of progress: Over half of LINDE's current sales volume comes from products and facilities that did not even exist 15 years ago.

Plan now to save this date for the LINDE representative . . . and get one step closer to your future. Contact your engineering placement office for an appointment.

HAWKS, QUAKERS EDGED BUT NOT OWLS

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's unpredictable cagers took on the Big Five last month and the city came out second best. The local's opening encounter was with the St. Joseph's Hawks which the Cats won in overtime 63-61.

On January 19, Villanova met Temple's equally unpredictable Owls with the latter coming out a 50-49 winner. The University of Pennsylvania came next and the Penns were dropped 63-62.

Erickson scores

With four seconds left in the overtime period of the first encounter, Wally Jones whipped a pass into Eric Erickson, who had slipped behind the Hawk defenders, for the final basket that gave Villanova a 63-61 victory before 9245 stunned fans at the Palestra.

Villanova held a 30-21 lead at halftime and moved to a more comfortable 44-31 spread with 3:42 remaining in the game. With Tom Wynne (27 points) providing the impetus, however, the City-Liners ripped off 10 straight points to make the score 44-41 with 9:20 left.

Jim McMonagle hit with a big driving hook and the Cats led 54-46 with 3:47 to go. The Hawks went on another streak, outscored the Cats 10-2, and with 56 seconds to go, Steve Courtin dropped in the tying basket.

Villanova goes ahead

In the overtime, the Blue-and-White jumped to a 61-56 lead, only to have the Hawks tie it with 37 seconds left. Villanova called time-out with 12 seconds remaining to set up the winning basket. Jim O'Brien had 16 points followed by Jones, McMonagle and Jim Washington with 14, 12 and 10 respectively.

On the following Saturday, Villanova dropped a heart-stopper to the Temple Owls 50-49. The Wildcats had command throughout the first half and led at the break 34-24. A Jones jumper with 9:56 remaining in the game made the score 45-36, but the Wildcats attack then came to a jarring halt.

With Dan Fitzgerald, a 6-5 Owl soph, grabbing rebounds off both boards over the out-positioned Wildcats and scoring, Temple moved to a 49-45 lead with 2:55 to go.

A Richie Richman jumper and a drive by Washington (14 points) made it 49-49 with 1:15 showing. Fifty-four seconds later, Temple's Elmer Snethen converted a foul toss for the winning basket.

The Cats still had a chance with O'Brien on the foul line with two seconds left, but the 6-4 senior missed. Jones led the locals with 15 points while Fitzgerald was high for Temple with 13, in a game that saw Villanova score only 15 points in the second half.

Then Penn

Like the Temple game, the Villanova-Penn clash wasn't decided until the final two seconds. With the score 62-61 in favor of Penn, Sid Amira fouled Wally Jones and the former Overbrook star sank both shots to give Villanova the win.

Cats lead early

Villanova led 11-8 with 10:00 left in the first half but for the next 21:40, Penn was in the spotlight. At half time the Quakers owned a 29-23 lead with John Wideman and Amira providing the spark. The Quakers kept the pressure up in the second half as Dave Robinson began popping from the outside.

The Wildcats stayed within 10 points but began to move only when Wideman and Robinson were benched with four personals each. With 11:05 to go, O'Brien made a running steal and scored with a jumper.

The Main-Liners picked up eight more points sandwiched around two foul shots by Ray Carazo (12 points) and one by Bruce Moore. At 7:28 a two-pointer by O'Brien tied the score at 53-53.

Drives by McMonagle (7 points) and Wideman, and jumpers by Wideman again and Jones knotted the score at 57. Following a foul shot by Wideman, Wally scored from 15 feet to give Villanova the lead for the first time since the first half.

After Robinson and O'Brien traded baskets, Amira converted two charity tosses with 11 seconds to go. Nine seconds later, Amira, ironically, fouled Jones who made both shots.

High man for Villanova was Washington with 20 points and 15 rebounds, with Jones and O'Brien chipping in 16 each.

Pistol Team Meets Varied Successes In Regional Frays

The Villanova Pistol Team, captained by Joseph A. Hack, met with varied sucess at its January meets by topping M.I.T. and dropping West Point and Annapolis.

The M.I.T.-Villanova contest took place on January 28. The Wildcats broke their losing streak with a 1312-1160 final tally. A slight mixup in firing schedules apparently did not mar the over-all picture of the meet.

Villanova recently was home team to the Midshipman team. The fates augered ill and the home team came up on the short side of the scoring sheet with a 1382 to 1311 loss. High scorer was Gary Leidecker, of Germany, with a 260 out of a possible 300 points.

Back in the first week of the year on January 6 the local shooters lost in a match with the Black Knights of the Hudson. The cadets fired their way through to a 1398 to 1305. win. High scorer in the meet was Villanova's George Sinclair with 283.

The Villanova pistol range has been noted by authorities as being one of the top notch ones on the east coast, both in appearance and quality.

SALUTE: TOM ROBINSON

On his first assignment with Bell of Pennsylvania, Tom Robinson (B.S., 1961) was assigned to the General Engineering Department. As a long-range planner, he handled economic studies involved with providing better telephone service.

On one such project, Tom planned the introduction of a new type of telephone with push buttons instead of a dial. Here as on other studies, Tom was urged to include his own ideas in his work. And many were accepted. Because of his success in handling assignments like this, Tom was recently promoted to the Equipment Engineering Group, his latest step forward.

Tom Robinson and other young engineers like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

Frosh Cage Quintet Possess 4-1 Slate; Temple Next Opponent

The Villanova Wildkittens are in the middle of one of their most successful campaigns of the season having tallied a 4-1 record, with the only loss being a two-point decision to a talented University of Pennsylvania quintet.

High man for the yearling hardwood squad has been former All-Public and All-Catholic sensation, Richie Moore, who has been averaging a mighty 30 points a game. Fulfilling all preseason expectations with plenty to spare, Moore appears to be an outstanding sophomore prospect for next season's team, which will be hard hit with June graduation and possible academic difficulties.

Another mainstay of the club is guard Bill Melchione, whose 20 points a game have proved him a very valuable asset in a closely contested game. The former All-State selection from Bishop Eustace High in Pennsauken, New Jersey is the playmaker and strategist for the freshman squad.

City Series Prospects

With their consistent pattern of victory the Blue and White apprentices are in very strong contention for the Big Five championship. Having knocked off Temple, LaSalle and St. Joe's and losing only to Penn, the 'Kittens face the same schedule in the next few weeks, with the addition of West Chester and Seton Hall.

Their next competition is slated for Saturday afternoon at 3:30 at Temple High. Following that game, the Hawks of St. Joseph's College will be the next opponents of the Frosh on Wednesday, February 13 in the Field House.

of opportunity in data processing
at IBM?

Growth and discovery: The development and application of data processing at IBM open a new world of exciting opportunities for individual career growth. Data processing is producing some of the most far-reaching developments of our age. Each basic advance in technology and application requires new concepts. Ideas—new thinking and new ways to approach problems—are needed. For the individual who likes to discard conventional solutions and find new ideas, there's room to grow in IBM.

IBM offers graduates with Bachelor's or advanced degrees in Engineering, the Sciences, Business Administration, Economics, or Liberal Arts challenging assignments in the marketing of information systems and equipment. These opportunities increase with each new system that is designed to meet the growing needs of business, industry, government, research, education, and space. Each technological advance and each new application can enlarge the scope of your own career at IBM.

A wide range of positions: Rewarding opportunities will exist in more than 190 IBM Sales and Service Offices, located in major cities throughout the United States. Positions open include:

Marketing-Sales: The IBM Data Processing Representative is a consultant to his customers. He calls on customer executives, giving timely information, presentations, and demonstrations for better business management and controls through data processing.

Systems Engineering: IBM Data Processing Systems Engineers are men and women who study customer requirements in depth, devise the best approach, define a preferred machine and operational solution, and assist in the implementation of this solution.

Customer Engineering: The IBM Customer Engineer is a specialist in precision data processing machines and systems. He is responsible for the installation, maintenance, and functioning of IBM's vast line of electronic and electromechanical equipment.

Opportunities for advancement: IBM offers you extensive initial training, both in the classroom and on the job, in the area of your special interest. This training continues as you advance along a planned career path leading to professional or managerial positions. IBM also offers company-sponsored education programs to keep you abreast of developments in your field, and a tuition-refund plan to give you financial assistance for graduate study.

Company-paid employee benefit plans are comprehensive, and include life insurance, family hospitalization and major-medical coverage, sickness and accident pay, and retirement benefits, to name but a few.

CANISIUS

Tonight highly regarded Canisius, led by All-American candidate 6-5 Bill O'Connor, invades the Palestra to take on Villanova. At the time of this writing Canisius was sporting an 11-2 record with an encounter with a strong Bowling Green five being had last Saturday night.

The pair of defeats came at the hands of fifth-ranked Arizona State in the Queen City Tournament final 67-63 and powerful St. Bonaventure 71-69.

For the third straight season O'Connor leads the Griffins in scoring, averaging 26.1 points per game. He is hitting on better than 50 per cent of his shots. He also leads in rebounds, averaging better than 10 per game.

By the end of the season "Okie" is expected to own just about every Canisus scoring record.

Contrary to what many might believe, however, Coach Bob MacKinnon's quintet is not a one man show. Besides O'Connor MacKinnon has two other players hitting in double figures. They are 6-3 junior guard Tony Gennari (13.7) and 6-4 senior center Tom Chester (11.7), an excellent rebounder.

Rounding out the starting front line is 6-3 soph Dick McClory (9.0). Gennari's running mate at guard is 5-11 senior playmaker Pat Turtle, who does a fine job in setting up his mates. Turtle, O'Connor, and Chester, the tri-captains, are the only seniors on the squad.

A great deal of the Blue and Gold's success can be attributed to its fine bench. The leading reserve in the forecourt is 6-4 soph Frank Swiatek, who led last year's freshman quintet with a 21.3 average.

At present, seeing only reserve duty, he is hitting for five points per game. Top reserve at guard is 6-0 Tim O'Mara, possessor of a fine jump shot, who is averaging 5.6 points per game. Other reserves are guards Joe Bossert and Joe La Duca and forwards John Brennan, Jack Oberding, and Larry Harrigan, All are sophomores except Bossert, a junior.

Big Problem

The one big problem Canisius has is in the rebound department. At 6-5, O'Connor is the tallest Griffin. Lack of rebounding strength is what hurt them in their losses to Arizona State and St. Bonaventure. It was also the cause for some close games with other teams which had little strength other than height.

Thus, Canisius will have a difficult time with the likes of Jim Washington, Jim McMonagle, and Jim O'Brien under the boards tonight.

In last year's meeting between Villanova and Canisius, O'Connor had one of his best nights of the season, leading the Griffins to an 80-76 upset victory at Buffalo. Tonight the Wildcats will be out to avenge this setback. It will be a test of the offense-minded MacKinnon five against Jack Kraft's defense-minded Villanova squad.

Bill O'Connor

If the 'Cats are able to contain O'Connor tonight, they ought to gain their revenge.

HOLY CROSS

On February 8, Villanova meets the Crusaders of Holy Cross at the Palestra. This will be the second meeting for the clubs in their long and illustrious basketball history.

The last time the teams met the 'Cats came up with a 30-28 victory (oh yes, the game was played in 1924). And so, thirty nine years later, Holy Cross finally gets it's shot for revenge.

While they didn't expect to have a good season with only five letterman returning the Crusaders have come along fine and managed an 11-3 record at this writing.

Not a big team by anybody's standards the Crusaders have come by their fine record through a solid team effort. As one Holy Cross official put it "This is a five-man operation, small and skinny by today's standards but able to do a lot of things well, making for good sound basketball."

The team was paced by Pat Gallagher (6-2, junior) and Pete O'Connor (6-3, senior). Gallagher is the leading point getter, averaging 16.3 a game. O'Connor, though, has just been sidelined with an arm fracture which will keep him out for the season.

H. C. has also been bolstered by the return of co-captain Bob Foley. Foley was out five weeks with a double fracture of his left (shooting) hand.

Memphis State Stunned 59-54 By Defense Minded Villanova

by Tom Bruderle

Under the protection of recently named Junior-Pilot, Jake Nevin (who has the official ring), Villanova journeyed to Memphis State where they stunned the hometowners 59-54.

Ten days ago Memphis State defeated nationally ranked Mississippi State 71-65 and a victory over Villanova would enhance States post-season tournament record. But the Wildcats had different ideas.

Strategy

Villanova's strategy was an air-tight defense with pressure on the two guards bringing the ball up. This defensive measure proved so effective that MSU could take only 47 shots from the field for the entire game.

Of those 47 shots, the Tigers hit on 22 of them for a 46.8 percentage to Villanova's 40.0 percent. The difference, however, appeared to be on the foul line.

With 8:21 left in the game and the score 44-40, MSU went into a press. Villanova continued to score, however, and the Tigers remained at the heels of the Wildcats.

Memphis State then began to pick up personal fouls in their attempts to steal the ball and Villanova capitalized on the opportunity.

15 for 18

On the foul line, Villanova was 15 for 18, with 10 for 10 coming in the last 8:21 of the game when State began to press.

Although Memphis State had the lead five times in the first half, it was never by more than two points. Villanova led four times with its largest lead at halftime, 28-23. With five minutes left in the first half, a jump-shot by Eric Erickson gave Villanova a lead that it did not relinquish.

O'Brien in the Clutch

Aided by Jim O'Brien's clutch shooting Villanova led MSU by eight points with 10:58 left in the game only to have the Tigers come back strong. Memphis State's George Kirk drove for a two-pointer to make the score 51-48 with 2:17 showing, when he was fouled. He missed the toss and Villanova grabbed the rebound and let the Tigers run the clock out fouling in their attempts to swipe the ball.

Wally Jones tallied nine points with 5 for 5 from the foul line in the last eight minutes.

Despite his low output, Jones had an outstanding floor game. O'Brien came through with 14 points which was matched by Erickson (season's high) and Jim Washington.

Sam Iorio, Richie Richman and Warren Winterbottom coming off the bench turned in fine games.

Memphis State had averaged 80 points per game.

Villanova grabbed 37 rebounds, 10 by Washington and nine by Jim McMonagle who had four points. Memphis State had 32 rebounds. High scorer for the Tigers was Hunter Beckman, 6-5, with 17 points (4 in the first half) and Dave Hillman, 6-6. 16.

VU 49 Duquesne 45

Last Wednesday Villanova met Duquesne at the new Pittsburgh Civic Arena in a game that was hard to believe. At half-time the score was 13-12 in favor of the Wildcats, with Villanova hitting 18 per cent to the Dukes' 12 per cent.

In the second half the Wildcats moved out to a more commanding lead with some key baskets by Erickson, and then froze the ball for the final five minutes. The Arena had been recently used as a hockey rink and the cold surrounding of the court appeared to have influenced both teams' shooting.

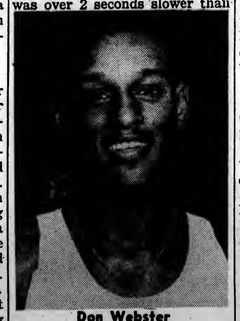
'Cats Cruz And Webster Combine Superb Efforts To Pace Squad In Inquirer Games Last Weekend

by Larry Everling



Staging a great comeback after a rare shutout the night before, the Wildcat track squad took two firsts, three seconds and a bunch of also rans to make a good showing at the Nineteenth Annual Inquirer Games at Convention Hall.

Welcome to the Club

Rolando Cruz junior via Puerto Rico, joined the ever expanding 16 foot club. By capturing the Jensen pole vault in the Inquirer Games last Saturday night, Cruz erased the old record set by Don Bragg in 1959. Sad to say this seemed bush league compared with the Flying Finn, Pentti Nikula, who did a mere 16-8¾ inches in his home country. Cruz bettered the old 16 foot barrier by a ¼ inch. Previous members, both Belitza and John Uelses fought it out for second with Uelses winning out. The LaSalle sophomore cleared 16-1 in the Melirose meet the night before in Madison Square Gardep.

Good Start

The Kennett Square comet, Don Webster, turned in a good time, 50.5, to win the 440-yard event over ex-Colorado ace Bill Toomey. Muscling his way into the lead on the first turn, Webster held off a late challange by Toomey and Olympian Earl Young, who should stick to outdoor racing. Smooth striding Webster played it smart by bearing wide on the turn and speeding on the straightaways to win his specialty. His time, however, was over 2 seconds slower than the fantastic 48.3 turned in by Wendell Mottley of Yale last week in the Boston AA games.

Heartbreaker

Sophomore Tom Sullivan didn't quite have it to beat Toronto's Bruce Kidd in the Inquirer mile. Kidd, with an awkward style that just keeps winning races for him from one to six miles fought off a great challange by Sullivan, the defending champ, to win in the slow time of 4:08.7. Sullivan layed back in the pack until the last quarter, then spurted to challenge front running Kidd. Tom made a great effort but Kidd just streaked on the straight-away and pulled away to win by six yards.

The previous night, Tom O'Hara, a Loyola of Chicago student, roared to a 4:01.5 win over Gary Weisiger at 4:01.8 at New York.

Other Winners

Bill Crothers, the be-spectacled Canadian, returned to the 1000 yard run after being thumped in the mile the previous night. He won going away in the good time of 2:10.6 over Gary Weisiger, Jim Dupree, John Reilly and Ernie Cunliffe. Crothers in the 1000 yard and Kidd in the two and three mile runs seem unbeatable.

Igor Ter-Ovanesyan jumped 26 feet, 10 inches on Friday night to set a world indoor record and defeat Ralph Boston for the first time. Valery Brumel beat John Thomas in the high jump for the seventh time with a 7-2 scaling. Seems as if Brumel has beaten Thomas umpteen times.

The German girls continued to shine with Jutta Heine picking up a lot of pictures and few victories. A 15 year old high school sophomore, Debbie Thompson, got off to an excellent start and won handily in the women's 50 yard dash. Miss Heine seems better suited to 200 meters since she is world champion in it.

Relay Defeats

Georgetown won the two-mile relay at Convention Hall with a fine last half mile from Ed Duchini who overcame a slight Villanova lead and defeated the Wildcat anchorman, Vic Zwolak. Vic was trying the shorter race for the first time. Noel Carroll, the Irish soph, ran a brilliant third leg on the relay making up thirty yards and giving the Cats a three yard lead. With more work they should be ready for the AAU meet with a winner.

The green sophomore mile relay finished last but to the best Texas Southern. Smooth-striding Ray Saddler anchored the Texas team to an impressive win. More experience needed as the Cats came in fourth.

Tidbits

Charlie Hammock came in second in the afternoon 50 yard hurdles event but nobody holds a candle to Hayes Jones a winner for the 38th time in succession. Jack Yerman won the Ben Ogden 600 in a record 1:11.2. Paul Drayton finished first in the 50 yard dash strengthening himself for the 200 meters at Tokyo. Conspicuously missing from the weekend meets were distance star Pat Traynor and shot-putter Billy Joe who like this reporter didn't make the meet.

Intercollegiate Jazz Festival To Receive Radio Coverage

The American Broadcasting Company, through its local affiliate, WFIL, will give nationwide radio coverage to the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival to be held at Villanova on February 22.

Competition is divided into three categories and prizes will be awarded in accordance with each. As an upshot of the Festival the winners can expect bookings in various east coast jazz spots.

Each winner will receive $250 and the runners-up will receive scores from the Berklee School of Music in Boston. All of the entrants will obtain exposure through the ABC coverage and possibly through a set of video tapes to be prepared for educational TV.

Bands Vie

The three areas of competition are the Big Band with the Barbary Coast Orchestra from Dartmouth, the Duquesne Workshop Band, and the West Chester State Criterions. The vocal group, the Harlequins, is from Duke University in North Carolina.

The combo contestants are the Jazz Quintet from Potsdam State College of New York, the Mike Michaels Trio from the University of Pennsylvania, and the Jazz Disciples from the American Conservatory of Music.

Player's Prize

There will be prizes awarded for excellence in each instrument. The best saxist or clarinetist will receive a Selmer Series 9 clarinet; for the best trumpeter there is a Constellation trumpet from the C. G. Conn Company; for the drummer, cymbals from the K. Zildijian Company; and for the trombonist a

'Villanovans' To Play At Shamokinaki Dance

A general meeting was held on Monday, February 11 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall at which time the committees were formed for the eleventh annual Shamokinaki Dance.

The dance will be held in the Field House on Friday night, March 29. Featured will be the Villanovans who will play for dancing from nine to one. Favors will be provided and will be given to each couple attending.

The purpose of the dance is to help finance the growing Augustinian Missions in Japan. In accordance with the purpose for the dance will be the awarding of a Japanese tea set as a door prize.

Aside from the direct proceeds from the dance itself, Father Robert M. Burke, OSA, moderator for the event, has made arrangements for letters to be sent to all parents, asking them to be sponsors. With the combined success of both programs, Father Burke hopes that the missions will gross close to $6,000.

On hand as a special guest will be the prior of the Augustinian community in Japan, Rev. Edward Hatrick, OSA.

Fashion Designer To Judge Senior Dinner Dance Queen

Representatives from two major magazines, McCall's and Sports Illustrated, will aid this year in the judging of the Queen of the Senior Dinner Dance contest.

John Weitz, who received the Sports Illustrated Award for Fashion Design, will be among the judges who choose the five finalists of the contest. The queen will be chosen the night of the Senior Dinner Dance, February 23, at the Florentine Lounge of the Philadelphia Athletic Club.

Preliminaries

McCall's Magazine will conduct the preliminary judging of the Queens, from their photographs.

Following the Dance the seniors will be served dinner in the Grand Ballroom of the Club. Charlie Gresh will provide music for dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Photographers from the Carl Wolf studios will be there to take pictures of the individual couples. The Student Council has asked that the students only use the refreshments supplied by the Club.

A specially selected Student Council committee has assumed the responsibilities of making this year's affair successful. The committee is headed by general co-chairmen Robert V. Mairone and James H. Shiels.

Program Printing

Program and printing are under the direction of Marion C. Wagner and Richard L. Billon. Reservations can be procured from J. Andrew Collins and John J. Driscoll, James R. Howley and Arthur W. Wolf are in charge of the favors and Mary O'Leary is in charge of invitations.

Leo F. Ratigan and Frank J. Gilbride will take care of the music for the dance. Art consultant Joseph C. Ruggiero and publicity chairmen George Bavosa and Alphonse P. LaMastra round out the rest of the committee.

Science-Law Relationship Discussed By Loevinger At Third Law Forum

By Jim Brennan

Lee Loevinger (left) signs guest register prior to his talk before the Villanova University Law Forum on Friday evening, February 8th Looking on are Villanova Law Dean, Harold G. Reuschlein, (extreme right) and Professor Donald W. Dowd (center), Chairman of the Law Forum.

The third Villanova Law Forum of the year was addressed by Lee Loevinger, assistant attorney general in charge of the Anti-Trust Division of the United States Department of Justice, on Friday evening, February 8.

"Enforcing the Anti-Trust Laws" was the scheduled topic, but during the brief introduction of Mr. Loevinger by the Dean of the Villanova Law School, Harold G. Reuschlein, it was made known to the audience that the contents of the assistant attorney general's speech were not definitely known.

It later proved that Mr. Loevinger's oration dealt mainly with the combining of science and law, rather than with the planned topic.

A Little Humor

Mr. Loevinger opened his talk with a short humorous story concerning Oliver Wendel Holmes and then went on to declare that enforcing the anti-trust laws is just like enforcing any other laws. Qualifying this, he said that you have to read the laws and the previous cases dealing with the particular subject concerning you.

Mr. Loevinger feels that one should pay no attention to anyone's opinion but should just apply the laws as best he can and let the courts do the rest.

In giving an example of his work in the Anti-trust Division, Mr. Loevinger related to the assembly that he has been in consultation with the attorney general regarding a first indictment

Graduate Theatre To Present Japanese War Drama 'Kataki'

The head of the Villanova University Graduate Theatre Department, Mr. Richard Duprey, announced that the opening play of the season will be Kataki by Simon Wincelberg.

There are only two characters in the play; an American tail gunner, who was shot down in World War II, and a Japanese soldier. The two men find themselves on a coral atoll in the Pacific with only one knife between them; and since the Japanese can only speak Japanese most of the dialogue is done by the American.

Playbox

Kataki will open on February 22 and continue on the 23, 24, and on March 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, 10 in the Playbox, the new theatre in the round. The Playbox is located in the front of the Classroom Annex Building seats 62 persons, and is 2 rows deep.

There are two casts for this play so that each one will play on alternate nights. Playing the part of Kimura, the Japanese, will be: Mr. Richard Harshberger, who is assistant director of admissions and speech instructor at Villanova; Mr. John Gilhooley, a Villanova graduate student and holder of a B.A. from Syracuse University will be his alternate. The part of Alvin, the American, is played by Jerry Paonessa, B. A. Villanova, and David Rabe, B. A. Loras College, Dubuque, Iowa.

Paulist Fathers To Conduct Juniors', Nurses' Retreats

The annual junior men's and all women's retreats will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, February 27 and 28 and March 1, in the Field House and University Chapel, respectively.

Retreat cards can be picked up Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday, February 25 and 26, in the center lounge, Dougherty Hall.

The open exercises begin Wednesday evening at 7:30, and will be followed by a conference, benediction, and confessions.

Two Paulists

The Retreat Master for the junior men will be Fr. John Kelly, CSP, who is the Vocation Director for the Paulist Fathers. Fr. Kelly gave last year's junior retreat, and his talks were found to be entertaining as well as spiritually enlightening. The women's retreat will be conducted by another Paulist Father, Fr. Bernard Lohmann, CSP.

Thursday's full schedule opens with an 8 a.m. Mass for both resident and day students. Conferences will be held at 9:30, 11:00, and 1 p.m. Confessions will be heard immediately after the second and third conferences. The 3 p.m. Holy Hour closes out the afternoon exercises but residents must return at 7:30 for night prayers and confessions.

Nocturnal Adoration

Nocturnal adoration has been a tradition during the Villanova Annual Retreats. All retreatants are urged to spend an hour before the Blessed Sacrament; it will be exposed after the Holy Hour. Day-hops may bring their family and friends on Thursday evening to join them in their period of Adoration.

On Friday, conferences will be held at 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. The retreat will close with Mass and general Communion at 12 noon.

Conference On Latin America To Study Politics, Economics

The Intercollegiate Conference on Democracy and Development in Latin America will be held on the Swarthmore College campus February 15, 16, and 17. Some 300 students from over 100 colleges and universities throughout the country are expected to attend and take part in the discussion seminars which will be led by 25 outstanding scholars and experts in the field of Latin American affairs.

Sophisticated Perspective

The purpose of the conference is "to provide American students with a more sophisticated, theoretical perspective on the politics of Latin America and their relation to the contemporary economic and social revolution," said Blake Smith, the student chairman of the conference. "The conference will consider whether democracy is equal to the challenge of economic development in Latin America, as a case study for all of the developing nations."

Ambassador Chester Bowles, Presidential Assistant for Asian, African, and Latin American Affairs will deliver the keynote address Friday night, February 15 in Clothier Hall. His speech will be preceded by welcoming remarks from Dr. Courtney Smith, President of Swarthmore College. Following Bowles will be Senor Cleantho De Plava Llete, Executive Director of the Inter - American Development Bank, who will speak on "Economic Development and Social Change in Latin America."

Saturday's sessions will begin with a speech by Professor George Blanksten, Chairman of the Northwestern University Political Science Department, on "The General Theory of Politics and Development as Applied to Latin America," in Clothier Hall.

Speakers, Panels, Seminars.

Following Professor Blanksten's speech, the delegates will break up into four groups to hear panel discussions of "Latin American Political Movements and Their Relation to Social Change" by the visiting authorities.

On Saturday afternoon the delegates will meet in smaller seminars, each led by two of the authorities, to discuss the major socio-political groups in Latin America, such as the agricultural sector, the middle class, and the military.

Saturday evening's program will begin with a panel discussion on "The University and Politics in Latin America," followed by smaller seminar discussions on "Student Politics in Latin America."

The Conference will conclude Sunday morning with a round table discussion on "Democracy and Development in Latin America." Among the panel members will be Professor Edwin Lieuwen of the University of New Mexico, author of Arms and Politics in Latin America; and Professor Robert Alexander of Rutgers University, author of Communism in Latin America.

Literary Symposium On Utopian Novels Planned For Spring

Frank Sauers, Secretary-Treasurer of the Literary Society, has announced that a general business meeting will be held tomorrow, Thursday, February 14 at 10:30 a.m. in 204 Vasey Hall.

At this meeting, plans for a forthcoming symposium will be announced. The proposed symposium, which will be held at the Society's March meeting, will deal with the Utopian novels such as Aldous Huxley's Brave New World and George Orwell's 1984.

Other plans for the semester will be discussed including the awarding of the Villanova Literary Prize which will be given to the student who has published the best literary work in the Lynx.

The award will consist of a permanent plaque on display in the Reserve Book Room of the Library. The recipient will also receive a scroll or some other award to be decided upon later.

Psychological Service Office Offers New Reading Program

As a means of assisting students to read faster with better understanding, the Office of Psychological Services is offering a new program of reading improvement. This course, featuring the nationally known Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Technique, will begin Monday, February 18, 1963. Thus, Villanova becomes the first college or university to offer this course as a student service.

Because of the special nature of this program, only those students who have attained the Dean's List will be admitted. Therefore, any student who made the Dean's List last school year (1961-1962) or this past semester, is eligible.

Classes will meet three times per week for ten weeks. Although no academic credit will be given, this course will offer an unusual opportunity to learn a more efficient reading-study technique. Special emphasis will be placed upon application of this method to study material, including the development of greater comprehension and increased organization ability

New Officers Assume Duties For Semester

Villanova's Radio Station Gets WIP Record Donation

Philadelphia radio station WIP has donated over one thousand 45 rpm records to Villanova campus radio station WWVU.

The records, mostly those that were popular from five to eight years ago, were removed from the WIP active files to make room for recent acquisitions.

Bill McCloskey, WWVU announcer and an employee of WIP, made arrangements for these records to be given to Villanova with WIP's newly appointed Music Director, Dick Reynolds. Approval of the move was given by WIP General Manager, Harvey L. Glascock, who also expressed a strong interest in WWVU.

After careful screening many of the records have been added to the WWVU files and will be programmed on the daily shows between two and 11 p.m., Sunday through Friday.

WWVU Music Director, Frank Quattrone, said that the addition of the quality music provided by WIP will add greatly to the professional sound that WWVU is striving for. WWVU Program Director Frank Sauers expressed the thanks of the entire WWVU staff to the management of WIP for their continuing co-operation with WWVU which enables WWVU to better serve its listening audience.

Red Cross On Campus For Blood Donations

NROTC members are being signed up today, Wednesday, February 13 to donate blood to the local chapter of the Red Cross. The registration is taking place in John Barry Hall.

The rest of the student body will be afforded the opportunity to sign up to donate their blood on Thursday and Friday of this week. February 14 and 15. This registration will take place in the main corridor of Dougherty Hall.

The actual donating of the blood will take place on campus Wednesday and Thursday, March 6 and 7. The goal of the chapter is 300 pints of blood.

If this goal is reached, everyone connected with the university and their immediate families will be guaranteed free blood for a year.

Rocket Society Head Will Address Meeting On Rocket Structure

Tomorrow morning at 10:30, all students and faculty members are invited to attend a lecture by Mr. James E. Brown, Jr., moderator of the Rocket Society of Villanova University, on the engineering aspects of rocket construction.

Mr. Brown contends that "many teen-age and college students who are constructing rockets on their own at the present time do not realize that they are not toying around with paper 'Fourth of July' rockets."

Mr. Brown cites as an example the remarks made by a professional rocket engineer, Mr. Hugh Reilly, New Products Manager of the Thiokol Chemical Corporation. During a lecture delivered to the Rocket Society on November 15, 1962, Mr. Reilly commented that "the professional rocket engineers are never totally sure of how a particular missile will perform until it is tested. Much of today's experimentation is still guess work and many tests result in violent explosions."

Any junior interested in working on the Junior Week edition of the Villanovan please attend a meeting Thursday at 10:30 in the Villanovan office.

PORTRETTE

'Just One More' Shiels

A senior political science major from Meriden, Connecticut, who possesses untiring devotion and interest in extra-curricular activities and who exhibits the magnanimous quality of leadership, is Jim Shiels.

This senior's background and impressive list of activities show him to be a firm opponent of lethargy.

Last semester he was chairman of the Senior Float, which won first prize; he was Decorations Chairman for Sullivan Hall on Nick Basca Weekend. Jim is now chairman of the Senior Dinner Dance.

Shiels has been an active member of the Blue Key since its inception. He also belongs to the Steering Committee and Sanctuary Society. He is the underclass editor for Belle Air. For three years he was the University Sacristan under Father Whitley.

As a member of Turf 'n Tinsel, Jim has given several memorable performances, such as Magnolia Marbolt in Southern Comfort and Athena in The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga, both of them leading roles.

As chairman of the Dinner Dance, Jim said, "Because of the preparations that have gone into this formal affair, I'm sure that everyone will have a good time."

His list of activities shows how much time Jim has for his own pleasures. His time is divided between academic and extracurricular affairs, but somehow he always has enough time for "just one more."

Marketing Club To Share In Drexel Institute Conference

Villanova University will participate in a Marketing Day Conference at Drexel Institute of Technology on March 12, announced Associate Dean of Commerce and Finance Dr. Myron S. Heidingsfield.

The program has been formulated by the marketing clubs of nearby colleges, and will bring together college marketing majors and business executives of the Delaware Valley area.

The luncheon speaker will be Matthew J. Culligan, the new president of the Curtis Publishing Company, and he will weave together in his remarks the overall outlook of marketing functions of sales, advertising, research, and management.

The Student Marketing Day Committee has selected a central theme, "The Outlook for Marketing in the 1970." and approximately 500 college students are expected to attend the conference.

Registration will take place at 9:30 a.m., orientation at 10:00, followed by two hours of panel discussions. A free luncheon, financed by local industries, will then be served.

After the luncheon, tables will be set up where small groups of students and one or two business executives will discuss various areas of marketing. The topics of these "spheres of influence" will be made known to the attending students beforehand, in order that they will be able to choose the topic of discussion.

Controversial Movie Presented By Council In Vasey Auditorium

Art Christiano and Richard Billon, co-chairmen of the Student Council's Movie Committee, have announced the future campus movies.

On Wednesday, February 20, On the Waterfront," will be presented. This controversial prize-winning movie is based on the book by Raymond Allen about the Newark, New Jersey labor-union priest. Marlon Brando, Karl Malden, Eva Marie Saint, and Lee J. Cobb star in this production.

The Two-Way Stretch, starring Peter Sellers, Stalag 17, Helen of Troy, and The Charge of the Light Brigade will be coming features. There will also be selected short subjects consisting of documentaries on Communism, Holy Week, Father Pio, and others. The movies will be shown on weeknights to give the students free weekends.

The admission charge will be twenty-five cents. The shows will be at 6:30 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

A Question Of Security

Security Or Publicity

Last week, Secretary of Defense McNamara held a televised news conference at which he exposed previously top secret evidence in an attempt to prove that all offensive weapons had been removed from Cuba. To establish his point, he used intelligence reports and the procedure for attaining such reports. But why did he risk the threat to the nation's security by exposing our intelligence procedures.

Officially, the purpose of this conference was to silence criticism of our downgrading Soviet power in Cuba and to inform the American people. However, it appears that the primary purpose was to appease the press — to satisfy the press that the administration was telling the truth.

Since the Cuban crisis, the American press has continously criticized the "management" of the news by the administration. The purpose of this "management," according to the press, is to avoid political embarrassment, while the administration maintains that it is for the sake of national security. Which interpretation is correct?

The present administration is very adept at public relations but this does not justify a claim of censorship due to political problems. The motives of the administration are primarily in the nation's interest, but the motives of the press are not.

The American press, since it is guaranteed "Freedom of the Press," assumes the right to know and print anything concerning the national policy, not in the interest of educating the people but rather of creating sensational stories. In its drive for a profit through circulation, the press has seldom observed the practice of "self-restriant" for the sake of national security.

There would have been no need for last week's exposition if the press had believed the administration. If we are to survive the Cold War tensions, the American press must put the welfare of America before the welfare of the press.

Strike Legislation

The nineteen day strike of the Transport Workers Union, which nearly crippled the city of Philadelphia, has brought forth outcries for state or federal legislation to prohibit transit strikes.

That a community of several million people should suffer hardships because of a few thousand strikers does seem grossly unfair. Traffic tie-ups, accidents, absenteeism and lateness of workers, and the losses incurred by business establishments because of the strike have amounted to millions of dollars.

It is not likely that the commuter will tolerate being caught between the squabbles of management and labor unions much longer. Before turning to the government to provide adequate legislation to prevent a recurrence of the strike, perhaps it would be wise to try to solve the problem on a local scale.

One solution might be to break up the monopoly of the Philadelphia Transportation Company and to provide franchises for two or possibly three transit companies. Buses and trolleys could be managed by one company and the subway and elevated by another.

A strike on one company would not throw the entire city into a state of confusion. Likewise, a strike would be less likely to occur it a competitor company would gain by it.

Difficulties might arise from such action which would have to be ironed out. Perhaps a better solution might be arrived at.

In any event, some definite action should be undertaken to prevent the breakdown of transportation facilities in the city. Legislative action might be the answer. First, there should be consideration of other alternatives.

Snow And Milkshakes

WWVU's talk show, taped in the Pie Shoppe during the activity period and played on the air last Thursday night, contained some rather interesting comments on campus activities.

The most widely discussed problem on the show was the snow removal situation. The interviewed students were almost unanimous in their opinion that not enough was being done to alleviate the snow conditions existing in the parking lot after a storm.

There are of course two sides to every question. The University has a relatively limited number of men in the maintenance department and other activities vital to the operation of school must go on regardless of the weather conditions.

On the other hand conditions that endanger and cause discomfort cannot be allowed to remain. Although a relatively adequate job has oeen done on the campus proper, the parking lot has remained in poor conditions. Granted that the job is difficult but a university of this size should be able to cope with the problem.

Not as prominent in the comments but nevertheless occupying a considerable amount of time was criticism of the new milkshake machines in the Pie Shoppe. The majority of students have greeted the additions behind the counter with attitudes ranging from disdain to outright contempt.

We realize that the management of the Pie Shoppe is trying to improve its service to the student body by eliminating some of the waiting and congestion. The main purpose of the Pie Shoppe is to serve the students. When the quality of the product is lowered more than the service is increased, the student suffers.

It is up to the management of the Snack Bar to determine whether the machines will stay. We hope that when they make their decision they keep the student in mind.

Counterpoint

Some Cloaked Difficulties

By Joseph A. McCarthy II

Last spring, the Crimson, the student-run newspaper of Harvard College, published six scathing editorials publically criticizing the University's President, Nathan Pusey.

Pusey, himself a Harvard alumnus, has held his present position now for ten years and is only the 24th man to do so. This fact indicates in itself the importance of holding such a staggering position.

Prompting the chilling editorial comment of the Crimson was Pusey's assuming the position of Dean of Arts and Sciences two years ago when Presidential advisor McGeorge Bundy moved to Washington.

In the editorials, Pusey was blamed for everything from a ten per cent increase in the board and room, to silence on such vital issues as revamping general education, and federal aid.

To the Crimson, Pusey emerged as unable to "make relevant decisions and lacking leadership and ability to maintain his job.

Whether or not the criticism by the Crimson is wholly justified is a matter of speculation. And, at the time its editorial position created a vigorous controversy.

But, there is little doubt that the President of a university should be the guiding influence by which the university operates. Apparently Pusey's time and efforts are so consumed as dean of a division that he is unable to adequately fulfill his duties as President.

These situations or ones similar doubtlessly exist in other colleges and universities but it was Harvard's god-like reputation that naturally brings its shortcomings to the forefront of national comment. It is the position of president, more so than any other office, that can result in the most lasting effects on the betterment of a university.

This can be seen by drawing many paralels. For example, any President of the United States, in order to be a effective one, sets the policy by which his entire administration operates, such as Kennedy does.

A weak president of anything can only result in stagnation, sometimes corruption among those under his authority, or at best a period during which little is accomplished and much that has been accomplished in the past begins to decay. So, it is not only important but also imperative that any institution of the Twentieth Century must strive to find a strong, dynamic leader.

For Instance

For instance, we might note all the phases of student leadership here on the Villanova campus and those who hold organizational responsibility.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

There are many individuals that work long hours for a particular project, which offers no personal reward, except that of self satisfaction in the thought that they have helped others.

As chairman of the Chamber Music Concert Series this year, the situation arose where five individuals, after much effort, and time, would go unheralded in their efforts. I, therefore, would like to express my deep gratitude towards these five individuals for their unflagging help in making the concert series possible.

My thanks are first extended to Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student Activities, who has made the concerts possible by providing funds and an understanding ear for problems.

The signing of the artists for this year's program is attributed solely to Miss Joan Dolgonos, a student at the Curtis Institute of Music, without whose help the quality of artists secured, would not have been possible.

The work done by Mr. James Marshall, of the E. E. Department, Barry Byer, President of the Villanova Music Society, and Arthur Feldman, Vice-President, was found invaluable in making decisions.

To close, the concert series is an open invitation to intellectually interested students on the Villanova Campus, to come and enjoy GOOD music.

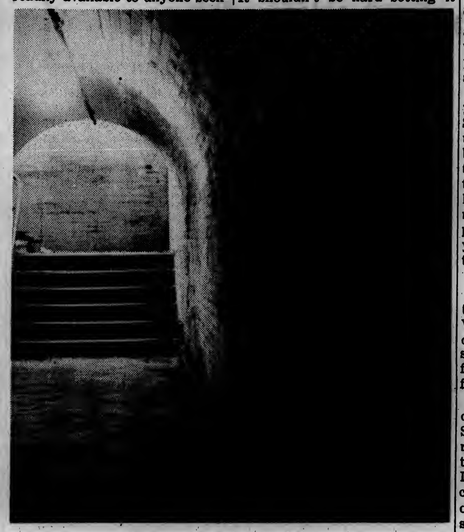
Safe From Madding Clouds



By Ron Gladis

Recently I've found that each of the Catholic colleges in the city has something which sets it apart from the others. LaSalle has its student stereo room, while St. Joe's has its fabulous cheering section.

We at V.U., believe it or not, have a fallout shelter.

Oh, it isn't anything big now, but we could make it so. I'm sure you've seen it . . . it's the wet, soggy underpass connecting the two sides of the Villanova Pennsy station.

The cost of the shelter is relatively low compared with the far more expensive ones we hear so much about. However, it is readily available to anyone seeking refuge from the great mushroom.

Villanova's claim to fame.

A Little Lady

But to anyone desiring to take an extended tour of the place, watch out for the little lady sitting in the booth at the exit collecting donations for the Main Line Relief Fund. Guided tours are now in effect along with programs. You can't tell the bomb from a PRR train without a program.

Fallout shelters seem to be the big thing now. How convenient it is, right next to a train station! This way, if the PTC goes on strike during the fallout, you can always take a train.

I don't know where you'd be going, but when you get there, it isn't. To see what you may eventually miss, you could ride to City Hall and visit the Mayor and his council; then again, you could go out and see the working man.

Disillusioned Set

The present construction of this shelter will remain unaltered for if plans were made for its rennovation, many an unimaginative romantic might be somewhat disillusioned. Anyway, if they did change it, the snow-removal job done on the parking lot is indicative of what they could do.

The shelter will definitely fill the void created by the ever-growing "I'm-better-than-you" contest among local colleges. Our fortress, while passing the specifications of the MLCD (Main Line Civil Defense) and the UMWU (United Mine Workers' Union), did not, however, pass the qualifications set down by the NAAT (National Association for the Advancement of Tunnels).

Precedents

This could be countered by setting up at Villanova the NAAFS (National Association for the Advancement of Fallout Shelters). Its chief purpose as an organization would be to service the committees that were appointed to figure out something for the organization to do. It shouldn't be hard setting it up . . . we've already got many of these organizations on campus.

The Civil Defense authorities have, in recent years, stepped up their demand for fallout shelters in every home (not, however, mentioning universities). Basing their theory on the inevitability of war, they claim that the shelters are a necessity.

Until recently, Villanova has refuted this project on the grounds that every good theory might be disproven. The Soviets, some time ago,—5 (five) years, to be approximate—disproved the theory that what goes up, must come down . . . they sent the first man into space!

* * * *

Now it's time for the situation . . . You're in the Pie Shoppe (where else?), sipping a milk shake—forget it, make that a coffee—forget it, make that a . . . forget it—you're in the lounge.

You have a two-minute warning. The bomb will fall. As everyone runs down to the shelter, you hear a conductor on a passing PRR train, shout "Oh no! another PTC strike!"

You run. You glance back . . . she's nice!

At the shelter, every kind of student is present, sort of a meeting of Dougherty East and Dougherty West. You're now inside, the entrances and exits are covered up with Villanova Jazz Festival posters. You look around--hysteria.

And Our C&Fers

On your left, a group of C & F students are playing pinochle. Farther on, seven engineers are trying to figure out why the lights won't work. Next to them is a psychology major with his finger on the "off" button.

The scene is a tragic one. Someone moans he can't get WWVU on the radio. Using inverse logic, you now try to find out why they never called Fedigan Hall a fallout shelter.

Helpful Nurses

Nurses are standing around, helping injured football players. The Arts students are standing around trying to ascertain where would be the best place for a party. The law students are standing around.

You now want to know why you never took up Fallout 101. Someone yells, "The nurses are revolting!" You've been at Villanova three years, so you know that already. You finally come to realize that you might be here quite a while, when the air raid siren wails—All Clear! The place has just started bugging you—literally — so you're glad to leave.

* * * *

Thinking of a situation like this makes you feel good that Villanova has a fallout shelter, obscure as it may be. You now start appreciating life, teachers, four-hour labs, solid with the feeling of security.

You walk back to your everyday life, thinking that if the Supreme Court should ever ban religion from public fallout shelters, yours, at least, is private. It's all over. You're safe. You're confident. For you know that out of uncertainty rises both substance and passionate advocacy, without which neither can survive (huh?)

The Rising Curtain

Broadway Sleeps

By Paul Norton

Gentlemen, be seated. We've lost our beautiful mornings and the English are learning how to speak. Everything is not quite coming up roses—at least not on Broadway. The lullabyes for this season on the Big Street are the current musical comedies, most of which contain innate sleeping qualities.

Why the dim stand?

Last week during my annual effort to be really "in," (let's face it,—a state we all seek) I carefully scrutinized a recent issue of New Yorker (a very tweedy mag) to see what musicals Broadway had to offer for the big green weekend. Fortunately, poor jud is dead because he'd be mighty disappointed if he took a look around at his neighbors on the Great White Way.

Rodgers and Hammerstein

"Way back when" Rodgers and Hammerstein introduced the new style musical comedy, they virtually revolutionized the industry with the adapted book form of play. Prior to the advent of R & H as a team, musicals, for the most part, were light frothy bits of nothing built on melodic tunes and plush sets.

Oklahoma added new breadth and seriousness to musical comedy with a carefully constructed dramatic plot based on Lynn Riggs's play, Green Grow the Lilacs. This gave to the world the possibility of a whole new art form and to America a specifically germane type in musical theater. Its uniqueness could accommodate an endless variety of situations.

The Past

Previously, American playwrights and composers had leaned heavily on the European operetta style coupled with a generous overdose of music hall comedy.

Now twenty years and only about five smash hits later, we are faced with a problem of patterned, stereotyped, not-so-always-neatly wrapped shows. These depend largely on stock comedy situations, unperfected material, and lusterless music to carry them across. Producers throw shows together with a sort of add-water-and-stir cup of instant success. The lowered tastes of American audiences have allowed this desecration.

'Oliver!' an Exception

A quick glance at the current offerings reveal a hodgepodge of merely pleasant evenings, perhaps with the exception of Oliver! This is as yet an unreviewed English production, but advance reports of $20 balcony seats indicate some promise.

Most of the Broadway shows, though, are only passable fare. Even the much heralded How to Succeed is just a good show that is able to relate its success to America's currently favorite court jester, the corporation man.

The rest run the gamut from Anthony Newley's attempt at the avant garde in Stop the World through an enjoyable but corny Mr. President to a sickening sweet ditty called The Sound of Music. One might add a thankful note, though, to Richard Rodgers's music as the sole saving point in both S.O.M. and No Strings. Otherwise they contain nothing more than weak and/or common plots.

Little Me, Eh?

The newest potpourri is Patrick Dennis' Little Me which can be summed up as "Eh?" and that's providing you like Sid Caesar. It will be followed later this month by Tovarich and the usual late season material. If tradition for spring hits hold out there may be a hit to follow other vernal successes like South Pacific, Oklahoma, and My Fair Lady.

So, with respect to their memory, may we close on a note of hope for some better entertainment to strengthen Broadway's position and continue to raise muscial comedy nearer to that nebulous aura of art.

Dean Of Women Witnesses Growth Of Nursing Division

By Liz Kovach

The women students being in the minority on the Villanova campus, there is a need for a capable person to guide them through their college years. Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women, fills this need in an expert manner.

Being Dean of Women is a difficult position to fill, but if this position is held on a predominantly male campus, then the responsibilities and problems that accompany it are doubled. In the case of Miss Boyle this difficulty does not seem to exist and one wonders how she has been able to accomplish this feat.

Dean Boyle

But after observing this lady, part of the mystery of her success is solved. She performs her job with such enthusiasm and with an honest desire to help that many problems just seem to disappear under her capable handling.

Miss Boyle joined the Villanova faculty of the then new Division of Nursing in 1953. She had the distinction of being the first lay woman faculty member of that division.

After 3 years the administration of Villanova University asked Miss Boyle to accept this appointment as the first Dean of Women. She has held this position for 7 years. At the same time that she became Dean, Miss Boyle's faculty status was elevated to that of Associate Professor in Nursing.

During her ten years at Villanova she has witnessed the growth of the women student body in nursing from a handful to well over 200 today, the opening of various student activities previously closed to women, and the opening of the Division of Engineering to women. Two years ago all divisions at Villanova began to admit faculty daughters and most recently she has seen the start of the new program in medical technology.

Disciplinarian

As the first Dean of Women, Miss Boyle has the added responsibility of laying the precedent for any future Deans of Women to come. The primary function of her office is the housing of women students, acting as disciplinarian, aiding in the student activities for women, and counselling of the women students.

Aside from the above mentioned there are numerous "self-designated" duties which she performs because of here sincere interest in the welfare of the women students on campus.

Miss Boyle stated that during the first few years the girls who came to Villanova felt a bit like pioneers, but they soon adapted to this type of campus life and are now very happy here. Part of the reason for the quick adjustment of the girls is due to the fact that they have had a person like Miss Boyle.

Always Ready

A great deal of preparation is needed for a person to capably fill the position of Dean of Women and Miss Boyle is well prepared for it.

She graduated as a registered nurse from Bryn Mawr Hospital School of Nursing; obtained her Bachelor of Science in Nursing Education from Villanova University and in 1956, she obtained her Master of Science in Education from the University of Pennsylvania, with a major in counselling and guidance.

The job is not an easy one but Miss Boyle said that she enjoys it and after observing her calm and efficient handling of her numerous duties one is inclined to believe that she really does like it.

About Interviews

Best Foot Forward

By Blue Key Society

Many seniors are now being interviewed for positions upon graduation. Perhaps some of these hints for a successful interview may help them.

1) Be prompt!
2) Find out all you can about a firm so that you will be able to ask intelligent questions.
3) Make a good first appearance — be well groomed, neatly and appropriately dressed.
4) Be alert and responsive.
5) Let the interviewer offer his hand first. Say "How do you do" not "hello".
6) Don't smoke, unless the interviewer is smoking and offers you a cigarette. Never walk in smoking or chewing gum.
7) Wait to be invited to sit down before you take a chair.
8) Look at the interviewer when you speak to him.
9) Never rush the interview.
10) Don't pretend to know everything — no one will expect you to.
11) Under no circumstances carry tales from one employer to another.
12) Let the interviewer bring up the salary question.
13) Never be inquisitive about the papers on the interviewer's desk.
14) Be careful not to miss the "interview-is-over" clues.
15) Don't beg for the job. Never telephone or try to high-pressure the company. Keep your dignity.

"Ella, Ella And Her Fellas . . ."

By Jan Dyroff

At five o'clock the Academy of Music was still. Ella Fitzgerald had just arrived from New York and she was tired. About the only sign of life was the early stage crew setting up the backdrop.

Three and a half hours later Ella was tired no longer. It was February 3 and Ella was moving out at her concert. She was playing to a packed house, PTC strike aside. They were queued up outside trying to get in, but the doors were closed.

From the first Ella made a mixture of uptime things and ballads. The audience warmed quickly and were just waiting to boil over. From "Green Dolphin Street" at the start she led into the first show-stopper, her famous rendition of the Duke's "A Train."

Ella played to the crowd, interrupting her songs to make comments on a whole raft of subjects. She noted the full house and quipped. At one spot she began coughing in the middle of a song and came out with, "Excuse me folks, but there's something else in my throat besides me."

Voice Range

Displaying her remarkable voice range she impersonated some of her contemporaries, Dinah Washington, Peggy Lee, and others. She also did Joe Williams, and, of course, Louis Armstrong in the now classic "Mack the Knife."

Scatting her way through many of the numbers, Ella used her voice as an effective instrument in the band more than as a straight song. Even in the scatting Ella has that wonderful power of a personal interpretation: for instance, the sax style of Slam Stewart could be picked out.

Choice Combo

The combo in back of Ella was one of her own choosing, and a very good choice it was. The quartet was made up of Don Abney on piano, Les Spann on guitar and flute, Jimmy Hugart on bass, and Gus Johnson on drums.

Throughout the entire concert the piano work of Don Abney was particularly good. He carried a smooth continuity throughout the evening.

Smooth Stop

The evening came to a halt with series of up and down tempo medlies. Ella thanked the people and started to leave, but they called her back. So she threw the next number out to the audience and somebody yelled "Do Moonlight In Vermont!"

Ella did "Moonlight" and it was really like a sunset after a beautiful day. The audience wanted more but Ella called it an evening and exited on the promise to return again someday.

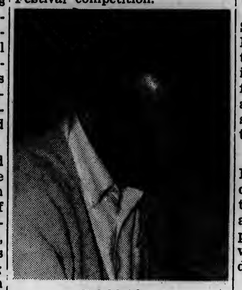
Top-Rank Jazz Artists Hail IJF

By Eddie Bride



First, let's get one thing straight. I am not going to marry Stan Kenton!

This may come as a shock to any chronic listener of WWVU or anyone trespassing Sheehan Hall when my record player is going full blast, but let the rumors cease here. This is not a column about Stan or his music, but I believe that any introduction to the Advisory Committee of the Jazz Festival should be preceded by one comment about its head: Kenton is one of the most sincere, intelligent, distinguished, and self-sacrificing musicians in the field today.

The Chief Advisor of the third annual Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival has long been an advocate of the promotion of good college jazz talent. A bandleader for over twenty years, Stan is so enthusiastic about this type of affair that he is taking time out from his activities on the West Coast to make a special trip east for the Festival, during which he will act as a show co-ordinator and present the prizes.

He is convinced that a great deal of experimental big band jazz will come from colleges in the future, and he thus does everything he can to promote its expansion.

This summer, for example, Stan will appear in a concert at Lake Compounce in Bristol, Conn., with one of the high-ranking groups of this year's Festival competition.

Sid Mark

Included on the active advisory committee is the panel of six judges, all well-established in the field of jazz.

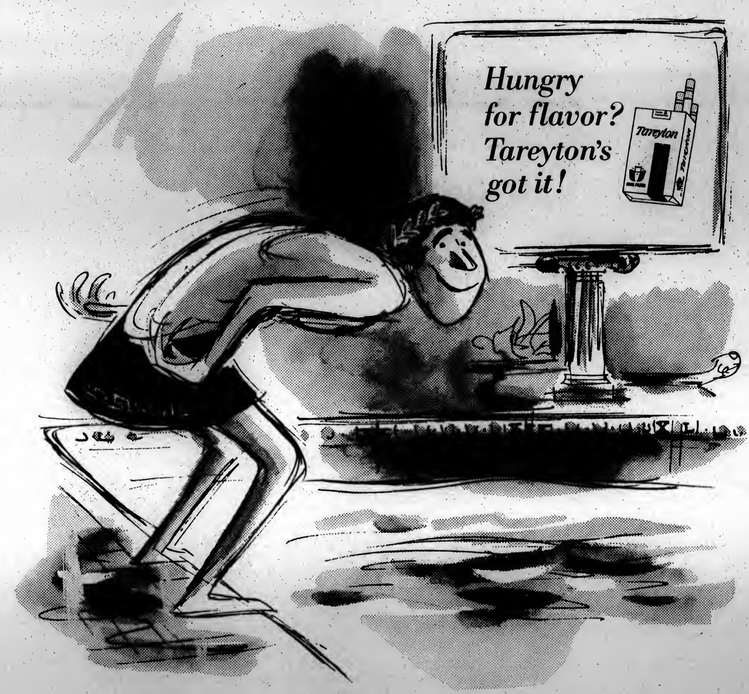
Philadelphia jazz disc-jockey Sid Mark has been the local contact for the committees. His ideas and references have been one of the main cogs in the wheel that is now rolling so well. He is well though-of by many jazz musicians, to the point where both Maynard Ferguson and Horace Silver have named compositions after him.

Another of the judges is Bob Share, administrator of the Berklee School of Music in Boston. Both his influences and ideas have been most helpful from the "presentation" angle, and he could very well be considered the "New England Contact."

Rev. Norman J. O'Connor, C. P. is the most widely respected clerical enthusiast of the art in the country today. He has been affiliated with the former Newport Jazz Festival, and he is well-known for his panel-type discussions via the air waves.

Bill Coss, New York feature writer for Down Beat magazine, is the sole repeater on the panel of judges. Coss and Berklee's Share have combined to form an important link in the "publication-instruction" chain that is so important to the structure of modern American music.

Sid Bernstein, a top executive with General Artists in New York City, is a new member to the judging panel, and could be considered the New York representative. Among other contributions, Sid has arranged for the appearance of this year's winners at the Poconos Jazz Festival this summer.



Maynard Ferguson

John Hammond, one of the top A&R men from Columbia Records is also a newcomer to the Villanova Festival, but he has had one particularly important connection with collegiate shows in the past. His signing of Paul Winter, winner of the 1961 Georgetown Festival, verifies his enthusiasm. The Winter Sextet has since become the first jazz group ever to appear at the White House, at the President's request.

Hammond, Coss, and Share constituted the preliminary judging panel, which screened dozens of tapes at the Berklee School of Music on January 26, and came up with the seven finalists. They are joined by Rev. O'Connor, Bernstein, and Mark for the finals February 22.

There were other great assistances in the publicity and information aspect. Musicians like Maynard Ferguson, Terry Gibbs, and Carmen McRae all agreed enthusiastically to be associated with such a worthy endeavor. (The former two expressed their enthusiasm in interviews over radio WWVU.)

This list makes up roughly one-half the top-rank figures who have been helping Villanova University achieve a Festival of national importance. However, I'd better call it at that, lest I smash into a PPG. ad.

Separate individuals will also be honored. The most promising soloist in reed, rhythm, or brass will receive a scholarship for a six week summer course at the Berklee School. The best composer/arranger will attend the Kenton Stage Band Summer Clinic at the University of Connecticut.

Bookings Promised

Bookings will be made available as a result of the Festival. Those offered so far are co-booking with Peter, Paul, and Mary here at Villanova. For this summer there is the Pocono Summer Jazz Festival and possibly Lake Compounce in Bristol, Connecticut, with Stan Kenton.

The Festival will be covered by the local mass media in both the spoken and the printed word. Bill Coss, New York feature writer will cover the affair for Down Beat.

Kenton, for twenty years one of the most controversial modern jazz bandleaders, is the Chief Advisor for the Festival, and is so enthusiastic about collegiate jazz that he is making a special trip east to attend and help co-ordinate the show. Bernstein, the originator of the Jazz Conference and a top executive with General Artists and the Poconos Jazz Festival, will be on the judging panel.

Other judges will be: Rev. O'Connor, radio personality and long affiliated with the former Newport Jazz Festival; Bob Share of the Berklee School of Music, one of the most respected schools of its kind in the country; Philadelphia jazz disc-jockey Sid Mark; John Hammond of Columbia Records, who signed Paul Winter, the winner of the 1961 Festival at Georgetown University; Bill Coss, New York feature writer for Down Beat magazine.

The whole thing started two years ago when Jim Braithwaite and Joe Zawacki decided that it might be interesting to have a jazz show for schools in the area and, to insure attention, they added prizes. Last year's judges were Coss, pianist Bernard Peiffer noted jazz players; Toby DeLuca, music head of radio station WFIL in Philadelphia, and Bruce Davidson, promotion director of Capitol Records in Philadelphia.

Jazz Bible

Already this year, Down Beat often referred to as the "jazz bible," has run one article on the Inter-collegiate Festival; another is slated for their next issue. Auditions, which will be held by tape recordings, will also be covered by the magazine when Coss and Bob Share review the tapes at the Berklee School of Music on January 26.

This year's Festival competition is being coordinated by seniors Tom Semmer of Pittsburgh and Phil Bosche of Harrisburg, both active in previous shows at Villanova, and sophomore Eddie Bride of Bristol, Conn., a member of the campus radio station and long a jazz enthusiast.

Quattrone Appointed As Associate Editor; Other Editors Named

Effective at the beginning of the second semester, several staff appointments have been made in the editorial division of the Villanovan.

Frank D. Quattrone, former news editor, has been appointed associate news editor for news and features. Joseph A. McCarthy remains associate editor for sports and the editorial board.

Replacing Quattrone will be Jan M. Dyroff as news editor. Robert Seiger has been appointed format editor. Peter Hering and Peter Levin have joined business manager Peter Cassidy on the business staff as advertising managers.

Appointed assistant editors are Michael A. Magro, assistant news editor; Thomas J. Finan, assistant sports editor; and Robert J. Burke, assistant copy editor.

Edward C. Farrell, editor-in-chief, commented on the appointments: "We feel that the staff will operate better and be in more of a position to function adequately as the staff of the weekly newspaper of Villanova."

The reason for the appointments was given as an attempt to increase the efficiency of the staff and to relieve some of the work load on the present editors.

Loevinger Speaks At Law Forum

against a bank in Minnesota for fixing the rates of interest.

He assured the audience that this meeting contained no prejudicial feeling

Mr. Loevinger's speech dealt with the application of scientific principles of law.

He asserted that anti-trust law is concerned extensively with economics and that it involves the whole law view and the society in which it exists.

"It is a field so complete that it is an apt one for the marriage of law and science."

In repudiating those who say that scientific machines should not be used in law, Mr. Loevinger stated that we must understand science and that not to do so only shows an unwillingness to use our intelligence.

According to Mr. Loevinger the future of mankind lies in the relationship between law and science.

Jurimetrics

The term devised by Mr. Loevinger for this combination of law and science is "Jurimetrics." He defines this as the scientific investigation of legal problems. Mr. Loevinger qualified this system by avowing that it can not be used in all cases but must be determined on a case to case basis.

He feels that this method of inquiry is most useful for the factual assumption of the premise of the law.

A question and answer period followed the talk, at which time Mr. Loevinger was asked if he thought judicial decisions would be made by computers. Answering, "Of course not," he went on to say, "A computer can only bring to bear all the information you put into it and can never do anything that has not been programmed for it. If it can be expressed in mathematic symbols, it can be put into a computer."

Weekend Guest Cards To Be Made Available Starting February 15

Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, OSA, Vice-President for Student Affairs, and Rev. John J. Curran, OSA, Vice-President for Financial Affairs, have approved the weekend guest privilege proposed by the Student Council.

The program will go into effect the weekend of February 15. There will be no charge for the meals and accomodations.

Implementation

Under the plan, resident students will be allowed to have weekend guests eat and sleep on campus. Necessary arrangements for space must, however, be made on Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday of the week for which the permission is desired.

The host student will obtain a weekend guest permission card from the Student Council office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall on the appointed days. The student must then see to it that the information requested is obtained. He then returns the card to the Council office during the appointed hours.

The hours will be: Tuesday, 11:30 to 12:30; Wednesday, 12:30 to 1:30; and Thursday, 1:30 to 2:30. During this time, one member of the committee will be in the office.

The information requested on the card will include the approval of the person whose room is being used and the permission of the prefect on the floor.

When this card is returned a courtesy meal card will be issued. This will be collected at the head of the ramp.

'Villanovan' Editors Participate In Annual Collegiate Press Meet

Five editors of the Villanovan represented Villanova University at the second annual Intercollegiate Press Meet held at Holy Family College on Friday, February 1.

The conference, sponsored by the Tri-Lite staff of Holy Family, aims at the mutual journalistic co-operation among the colleges and universities in the area.

Dr. Boyle Keynotes

Valerie Slivka, Tri-Lite's editor-in-chief, introduced the keynote speaker, Dr. Regis Boyle, noted journalist and educator from Washington, D.C.

Dr. Boyle lectured the representatives of Villanova, St. Joseph's, Immaculata, and Holy Family on "Editorial Policy in College Newspapers," a topic of current interest in the news and of particular interest to the audience.

Following refreshments, Villanovan editor-in-chief Ed Farrell led an informal, combined news and features panel discussion, in which each representative participated.

The editors of the Immaculatan and the Tri-Lite seemed to profit most from the lively discussion. With Farrell and Pat Temple-West, editor-in-chief of the Hawk, answering most of the questions presented by the smaller publications, the participants learned of their various systems of news coverage, selection of features and staffs, and the actual printing and business ends of college journalism.

Attending the Press Meet along with Farrell were Associate Editors Joseph McCarthy and Frank Quattrone, News Editor Jan Dyroff, and Feature Editor Art Molitierno.

Mid-Season Finds VU Swim Team 6-3; Coach Developes Top Relay Squad

By Tom Finan

The Villanova University swimming team is currently enjoying a successful but rigorous aquatic season. The Mersmen have compiled a 6-3 record, with the most recent victory being last Saturday's 66-25 rout over American University of Washington, D.C.

The talent-laden squad has turned in consistently fine performances against some of the best competition in the East, in regularly scheduled meets. Villanova placed second in this year's Eastern Collegiate Swimming Association Relays after Maryland carried off first place.

Defeating Seton Hall, Fordham, West Chester, Penn, New York University and American University, the Blue and White has bowed to Princeton, Army and Yale. Their next meet will be held tonight, February 13 at 8:00 p.m. in the Field House, against the Explorers of LaSalle College. After that they will face Lafayette on February 20, Rutgers on February 27 and will round out the season on March 9 against Navy.

All American Record-Breaker

Mainstay of the squad and "most consistent winner" is the All-American from Orange, N.J., Dick McDonough. Record-breaker seems the most appropriate adjective to describe McDonough, who is a Dean's List student and a holder of a President's scholarship for his academic work.

Team mates quip that Dick breaks an opponent's pool record everytime he swims, simply by not "messin around". He has smashed a total of five pool records this year alone, and six VU records. Currently, he is the NCAA champion in the 100 yard butterfly, the ECAC champ in the 200 yard butterfly and in the 220 yard freestyle.

Coach Ed Geisz has developed new strategy in an attempt to utilize even further the Olympic talents of the Junior, Social Studies major. He has included Dick in the 400 yard freestyle relay event, along with Jack Geoghegen, Paul Winn and Rich Girdler.

Villanova freshman, Ray Donnelly, here begins anchor leg of 400 yard freestyle relay en route to 3:32.1 win over Penn frosh.

(Photo by Joe Harrison)

This powerful quartet is capable of great doings. Proof of this may be seen from the recent meet with Yale, in which these national champions in the 400 yard freestyle event were pushed by the Villanovans to a new national record.

Intramural Council Commences Semester With Amateur Night

By Ray Heitzman

The Intramural Council will hold its Annual Amateur Night in Vasey Hall Auditorium at 7:30, Tuesday February 26. Any students with talent in such things as singing, magic, and comedy are invited to participate.

They can either contact Bob Shayer, who is in charge of the function; or pick up an entry blank in the Intramural Office in Alumni Gym. Medals will be awarded to the first three places.

Spring Schedule

The spring semester will be a busy one in the way of intramurals. Softball, which will begin on March 25, will be run by Jack Peters.

Entry blanks can be picked up after March 1 either from him or from the Intramural Office. The same rules which apply to football and basketball in the way of rosters will apply for softball.

Beginning on April 1 there will be a singles tennis tournament. Paul Schmidt will be coordinating this activity for the Intramural Council. Also on April 1 volleyball will begin under the supervision of Jim Murphy.

Toward the end of April there will be held the Intramural Golf Tournament under the direction of Chuck O'Reilly. On the first of May will be held the annual outdoor track meet at the stadium. This will be under the dirication of Phil Gormley.

As usual, Junior-Senior Athletic Day will be held during Junior Week. At this time, the Class of '64 will try to seek revenge for the defeat they suffered as freshmen.

The day will consist of a series of events similar to Muff Day. It will be under the direction of Bob Shayer, who will see that no irregularities result during the day.

Playoff Dates

The Intramural Basketball playoffs will be held on the 13, 14, 19-21 of March. This will leave a month and a half left on the Intramural schedule.

Some officials are needed for the above games as well as for the softball leagues. Anyone interested can contact Phil Gormley in Room 128, Sullivan Hall.

Frosh Beat Temple As Four Wildkittens Hit Double Figures

Villanova's freshmen team breezed past Temple High last Saturday afternoon, 94-78, at the South Hall gym. Richie Moore paced the Wildkittens with 20 points while Chuck Cadwell tossed in 23 counters for the losers.

Dion Von Derlieth and Bernie Schaeffer scored 19 apiece while Lou Benn chipped in 13 to give Villanova four players in double figures.

Bill Melchione came through with his usual fine game as playmaker.

The Wildkittens led throughout and left the court at halftime with a 54-39 lead and a 54 per cent shooting average. Bernie Schaeffer completely dominated the board for Villanova.

With about ten minutes remaining the coach began to substitute freely making sure everyone on the team saw action.

The Wildkittens have now won six out of seven contests and will seek their next victory against St. Joseph's tonight in the Field House at 7 p.m.

Ice Hockey Team Lacks Experience; Underclassmen Fill Starting Berths

By Roy Baron

Villanova's ice hockey team has experienced many a rough game in this rebuilding season. The team was hurt badly by the loss of many of last year's stars through graduation. The fact that there were no holdover seniors made the problem of fielding a good team even worse.

Thus, the freshmen and sophomore classes were looked to for replacements. The inexperience of these replacements for graduated seniors is reflected in the record, which stands at 0-6-1.

The squad is led by Captain Hal Canty, a junior, who has done most of the coaching himself. He deserves a great deal of credit for being able to reorganize last season's holdovers and integrating them with the freshmen. This he has done with an eye to the future.

The first line for the Wildcats has been responsible for just about all the scoring thus far. Canty centers this line with a pair of sophs, John Clement and Dick Thackery, on the wings. Clements is the team's leading goal-getter.

Second Line

The second line is headed by junior Ken Kilmartin at center. He has been working with a pair of freshmen wings, George Genise and Mark Clement.

The third line also features a junior center, Leo Mullin, and a pair of frosh on the wings, John Barry and Paul Puchalik. Canty has put an experienced junior on each line with the hope that they could help develop the inexperienced players.

Starting Defense

Charlie Zaccaria and Billy Greene, both sophs, are the starting defensemen. They are backed up by soph Hilary Russell and junior Frank Driscoll, and then by frosh, Bob Birmingham and junior Paul Gerrior. These boys have come along quite well recently and should be even better next year.

The goalie for the Wildcats is Bernie Trott, a freshman. He already has shown a great deal of ability in tending the nets.

Four different ways to make going more fun than getting there

You can see why one of America's favorite outdoor sports is driving Chevrolets, with four entirely different kinds of cars to choose from. There's the Jet-smooth Chevrolet, about as luxurious as you can go without going overboard in price; the low-cost Chevy II, a good-looking car that would send any family packing; another family favorite, the sporty Corvair, whose rear-engine traction will make you think that ice and snow are kid stuff; and for pure adventure, America's only sports car, Corvette—now in two all-new versions with looks that can stop traffic like a rush-hour blizzard. Picked your favorite already? The next thing is to take the wheel at your Chevrolet dealer's. If that doesn't have you thinking of places to go, maybe you'd rather just have a ball around town!

Over The Shoulder

by Tom Bruderle

As did everyone else, I expected a win over Holy Cross last Friday night. With a win it would be easier to point out the improvement shown by Jack Kraft's Wildcats so far this season.

But now I'm in the position of a bloke who is trying to explain his recent improvement in General Biology II despite the fact that his parents found a half-burned test with a darkened 51 on it.

Problems

Villanova was beset by two problems before the season even began. First, Jim Washington, at center, had to be worked into the offensive pattern. The 6-7 sophomore had the talent, it was just a matter of bringing it out.

The Princeton fiasco was just that — a fiasco. Washington was simply not ready for that game. Beginning with his eight points and nine rebounds in the 73-61 victory over Toledo, he has improved in every game thus far. Against Penn, Washington tallied 20 points and grabbed 15 rebounds.

Erickson Fills In

With George Leftwich out of action for the year, Eric Erickson had to be groomed as his replacement. Coach Kraft believed that the loss of Leftwich hurt more than the loss of Hubie White because, "We had counted on having four men returning who knew each other's moves, and from here, work on our center."

Like Washington, Erickson played a sub-par game against Princeton, and he, too picked up eight points and nine rebounds against Toledo. So far this season he has proved to be a better than adequate running mate for Wally Jones. Erickson dropped in the winning basket in the 63-61 win over the St. Joseph's Hawks.

Another problem facing Villanova was the injured knee of Wally Jones. Wearing a brace, Jones is still not as mobile as he was last year and his jump-shot occasionally suffers. Despite his injury, Jones had a fantastic night against Canisius last Wednesday night scoring 21 points and handing off for eight assists. The Junior sparkplug is averaging 14.9 points per game.

Villanova Co-Captains Jim O'Brien and Jim McMonagle have shown great improvement over last year. O'Brien is currently averaging 12 points per game and his side-kick 10 ppg. While McMonagle has scored on tap-ins, O'Brien has established himself as a definite threat with his long jumpers from either corner.

Greater Use of Bench

As was the case last year, Kraft expected to have a weak bench this year, but circumstances have produced good individual performances. Ben Kenny whipped in 10 points in a losing 73-71 effort to Niagara when Jones was saddled with personals.

Subbing for either Jones or Erickson, has been Richie Richman who has played some fine ball. Sam Iorio has played well with his best game against Memphis State where he scored a timely basket and blocked a couple of shots.

Warren Winterbottom scored a key basket and made two vital steals against Memphis State while Joe McGill and Jerry Stefanic have seen limited action due to injuries. Don Ficca, who recently joined the team, has seen limited action.

'Cats Humble Canisius 79-60, As Jones Tabs 21 In Rout

By George Nicolaus

If there were any tournament scouts at the Palestra last week, the Villanova squad which they saw Wednesday night must have impressed.

In scoring a 79-60 verdict over a highly regarded Canisius team, whose pre-game credentials included an 11-3 record plus the nation's fourth leading scorer, the Wildcats kept the nets warm by hitting 35 of 64 shots from the field while turning in one of their most impressive defensive showings of the season.

This defense pressure was very noticeable in the backcourt where Canisius sorely missed regular Pat Turtle who viewed the rout with a cast encasing a recently fractured ankle.

Just Three

Where the Golden Griffins usually can count on their guards for twenty points a game, they received exactly three from the trio of little men who appeared in their backcourt.

On the positive side of the ledger, four of Jack Kraft's starters shot 50 per cent or better from the field with Eric Erickson an amazing 6 for 7 and Wally Jones hitting 8 of 12 from the floor and five in a row from the foul line.

During the first half both teams looked sharp with Villanova in the person of Jones and Erickson very accurate from the outside while Canisius was countering by working the ball underneath of Bill O'Connor who wound up the game's top scorer with 24 points.

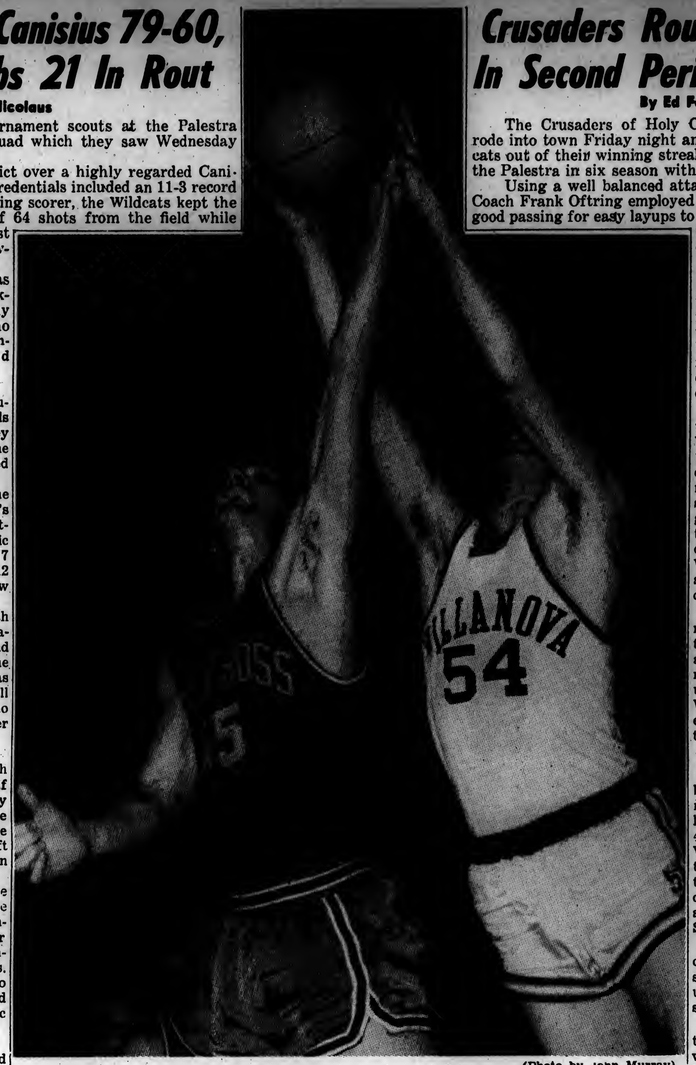
Five Straight

The Wildcats did spurt with five minutes before the half when five straight points by Jones broke a 28-28 stalemate and then Sam Iorio's three point play with five seconds left gave Villanova a 40-32 margin going to the dressing room.

The six quick points which the Wildcats tabbed to begin the second half were the most important of the game. After Erickson, Jones, and Jim Washington hit consecutive field goals, the boys from Buffalo began to press — both defensively and offensively — neither tactic helped them.

Dazzling Passes

Wally Jones ate up a confused substitute guard named Joe Bossert with some characteristic ball-handling which frequently (eight times officially) resulted in a dazzling pass to Washington or Jim O'Brien all alone underneath.



With seven minutes remaining and Villanova leading 63-45, Canisius sophomore Dick McClory became disenchanted with basketball in general and momentarily took up a boxing career with Wildcat Jim McMonagle, a not very reticent partner.

Neither landed a punch even Cassius Clay would talk about, so little Charley Eckman saw no point in continuing the bout and disqualified both from any further on-the-court-action.

And Then It Was 23

Two minutes later the game was decided with Wally Jones doing the honors. By handing off an assist to Sam Iorio and then adding six points on his own, Jones brought the count to 71-48 with 4:37 remaining.

Coach Kraft acknowledged this tremendous individual effort (21 points plus 8 assists) by sending Warren Winterbottom into the game to replace Jones as the 2512 spectators roared their approval. Big Jim Washington received similar tribute two minutes later when replaced by Jerry Stefanic.

Crusaders Rout Mainliners In Second Period Comeback

By Ed Farrell

The Crusaders of Holy Cross from Worcester, Mass., rode into town Friday night and jousted the Villanova Wildcats out of their winning streak and into the worst defeat in the Palestra in six season with a 77-62 trouncing.

Using a well balanced attack the hot-handed charges of Coach Frank Oftring employed eagle-eyed jump shooting and good passing for easy layups to outscore the Cats 49-30 in the final twenty minutes of the contest.

Some Letdown

After a victory such as that against Canisius two night before, the Wildcats were bound to have a letdown but no one expected it to result in 15 points on the wrong side of the ledger for the hometowners.

The first half was as most of the initial periods have been for Villanova most of the year hitting well and building up a modest margain before the locker room break. But the second half saw the Main Liners offense grind to a halt as they gave up the lead with 16:04 to go on a drive and two foul shots by John Wendelken. This made the scoreboard read 40-38 in favor of the visitors.

The tight Cross defense had much to do with the writing of the script during the second half as Crusader Joe Kelly did a remarkable job of containing the usually elusive Wally Jones. Jim Washington was prevented from even seeing the ball much of the time in the final period.

Thing of Beauty

The visitors' offense was a beauty to all but the Villanova rooters. The hot hands of Gallagher and Wendelken yielded 42 of the Cross' points. When Villanova used its usually effective switching zone defense in the first half and the beginning of the second period the jump shooters from the "The Old Bay" State scorched the nets.

When the Cats switched to close guarding of the outside shooters, men were found open underneath and easy layups resulted.

The Crusaders spotted height to the Cats but made up for it with tremendous hustle especially on the part of Kelly and Pat Gallagher.

52.9 Per Cent

The Crusaders hit on 27 of 61 attempts from the floor for 52.9 per cent while netting 23 of 32 charity tosses. In field goals the Cats were a relatively cold 25 for 74 giving them 33.4 per cent. In the foul department they hit on 12 for 13.

Jim Washington was high for the home team with 17 points followed closely by Jones who connected for 15, Jim McMonagle had 12, with Eric Erickson scored 6.

For the visitors Pat Gallagher fired a scorching 50 per cent of twenty attempts from the floor and four for five from the free throw mark for 24 markers. John Wendelken wound up with 18, Bob Foley, 13 and Tom Palace, 12.

O'Connor Out

The Crusaders were without the services of their leading scorer, Pete O'Connor who is recovering from an injured wrist, and Bud Knittel who was down with the flu.

On the Villanova side of the disabilities' ledger was Jones whose knee was obviously bothering him for most of the game.

Ex-Ace Drayton Is Only VU Winner As Boardmen Falter In Baltimore

By Larry Everling

The crisp new Baltimore Civic Center proved a poor host to the Wildcat trackmen last Saturday night. Shut out from the winner's circle except for former star Paul Drayton in the 60-yard dash, Jumbo Elliot's charges will have to wait until next year.

The 6,182 who turned out for the meet saw records fall in the pole vault and the shot put, and a new American indoor 60-yard women's record set in a preliminary heat along with Drayton's meet record.

Off Form

Last week's winner at the Inquirer Games, Rolando Cruz and Don Webster, were off form. Cruz was defeated by Henry Wadsworth of the Army and by the pit conditions along with his step-measuring on the runway. Wadsworth cleared 15-7½ with Cruz and Maryland's John Belitza tying for second at 15-2½. All the vaulters had landing difficulty as the pit was inadequately cushioned.

Cruz had wanted another brilliant 16-foot vault as a testimonial to Jimmy Curran, his coach at Mercersburg Academy, who died last week.

Webster, pushed around on the turns, never had a chance in the 600-yard event won by Jim Johnson of Norfolk State in 1:13.0. Maryland's Chris Stauffer was second.

Irons Steals

Jim Irons, another of the five Canadian distance stars, sped past Vic Zwolak on the last lap to win the mile run by six yards in the slow time of 4:10.9. Zowlak and Pat Traynor set the pace until that fatal lap when Irons kicked to victory.

The catch in this is that Irons went to Villanova for a short period until he got homesick for the North Country.

Other Events

Tom Sullivan coudn't handle the extra mile and went down to France's Michel Bernard in the two mile. The time was 8:54.0.

Both relay teams tasted defeat. Georgetown won the two mile in the disappointing 7:35.2. North Carolina College edged the Cats' mile relay in the slow time of 3:21.7.

Noel Carroll was upset in the 880 by Maryland's Dick Smith in 1:54.4. Carroll, however, is going to be a great one.

Drayton overcame a freak accident (crashing into an open door) to win the dash going away in the fast time of 6.1.

IJF Committee Plans Are Finalized; Countdown For Jazz Festival Begins

by Mike Magro

The third annual Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, which has attracted the attention of jazz enthusiasts both locally and nationally, will be presented this Friday, February 22, in the University Field House.

This year's Festival is under the co-ordination of Tom Semmer, Ed Bride, Phil Bosche, and James Dunn, all of whom had to work literally from scratch in order to piece together the show, since nearly all those connected with the past two festivals had graduated last year.

Dunn, the only surviving member from the previous two committees, assumed the chairmanhip of this year's staging committee. Marion Wagner and Andy Collins coordinated the programs and the printing for the show. The enthusiastic response of the student body made the work of the committee much easier.

Ferguson Course

The New Hope Academy of Arts, of New Hope, Pennsylvania, has donated a $595 scholarship to the first prize winner. The scholarship covers the cost of an eight week course at the academy to be taught by Maynard Ferguson. It will be a course in style and the ways of music.

This year, for the first time, the senior class extended free invitations to all the faculty, administration, and seminarians for the Festival. Nearly eighty per cent have cordially responded to date.

Groups from all parts of the East, as far north as New Hampshire, to Chicago on the west, down to North Carolina in the south, will compete in the annual affair. Seven groups have been chosen out of forty-two interested schools, by a team of

Queen Contest Highlights Senior Week Dinner Dance

This year's Senior Week will be highlighted by the crowning of the Senior Dinner Dance Queen on Saturday, February 23.

The weekend will kick-off with the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival on February 22 and commence the following day with the Dinner Dance.

The Philadelphia Athletic Club will be the site of the Ball, with the reception in the Florentine Lounge of the Club from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

After dinner in the Grande Ballroom, music for dancing will be provided by Charlie Gresh from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Representatives from McCall's Magazine will conduct the preliminary judging of the contestants, while John Weitz will choose the Queen. Mr Weitz is the recipient of the Sports Illustrated Award for Fashion Design.

Mary O'Leary, who is in charge of the contest, announced that the finalists will not be night of judging.

Favors will be presented to both women and men. The former will receive a pewter plate with the seal of the school etched in it, while the latter will be given a 21-ounce brandy snifter.

Photographers from the Carl Wolf studios will be at the event to take pictures of the couples.

Villanova Will Host Vienna Boys' Choir

The Vienna Boys' Choir will give an exclusive Philadelphia area performance at Villanova University on Tuesday evening, March 12.

The concert will be held in the University Field House from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tickets for the affair will be one dollar and will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe on February 21.

The Boys' Choir has gained world-wide renown, having appeared on television both in America and on the continent. The choir has also appeared several times on the Ed Sullivan Show, and has recorded six long-playing albums to-date.

'Kataki' Will Have Premiere In Graduate Theatre Playbox

by Robert Campbell

The opening of Kataki on Friday evening, February 22, at 8:15 will mark a new era in the theatre production of Villanova University.

The debut of Kataki is not a simple, ordinary grand opening, but the beginning of a new period for the Graduate Theatre Department. After months of planning and hard work, the Theatre Department has been able to procure classroom 101 AC and transform it into the Playbox, a new type of theatre which is to become a major part of the rich tradition of the university.

'Kataki'

Kataki, a play chosen to introduce this new theatre-in-the-round, is a new story of a Japanese soldier and an American who are marooned on a coral atoll somewhere in the South Pacific. Since each person recognizes the other as an enemy, and since one cannot speak the other's language, the outcome should prove very interesting, especially when it is found that they have only one weapon, a knife, between them.

On opening night, the part of Kimura, the Japanese soldier, will be played by Richard Harshberger, who is Assistant Admissions Director as well as instructor in speech. He speaks virtually no English in the part, and speaks almost entirely in Japanese. The bulk of his role is in Council Asks Library Policy; Favors Semester Re-alignment

The Student Council last week passed legislation that will request the Administration to reevaluate its policies concerning the Library and that will put the Congress on record as being in favor of a re-alignment of the semester schedules.

The Library resolution met with practically no opposition and passed just short of a unanimous vote. The motion, as suggested by its maker John Delaney, will seek to investigate the areas of expansion and open stacks.

The semester re-alignment proposal, submitted by Jim McErlane, will seek to schedule the first semester so that it will begin immediately after Labor Day and terminate just previous to the Christmas holidays.

The resolution, however, found staunch opposition from several elements of the Congress. Talented debate followed between the advocates and those who sought to have the Congress

Show, Candlelight Ceremony Climax Sorority Initiation

Pi Theta Chi initiation ceremonies for approximately thirty pledges will take place this evening in Dougherty Hall. The activities will climax a week of pledging for the women students.

The first event will be a variety show for the 115 regular members of the sorority. This will be given by the pledges. Following the show, the Candlelight Ceremony will take place in Dougherty Hall. This will be the actual initiation process.

Among the requirements for membership in the sorority are: a 2.00 cumulative average, passing of a test on the sorority constitution, writing of a 50 word essay on reasons for joining the sorority, memorization of the Greek alphabet, and the writing of a sorority song.

The Candlelight Ceremony will commence with the lighting of candles by the president, officers, and regular members of the sorority. The pledges' names are then called by the president and their candles are lit individually. At this point they become members.

Among the members of the Initiation Committee are: Lillian Lamb, Faith Connor, Jeannie Burke, Judy Colla, Cecile Mugnier, Sue Hagner, Elizabeth Collins, and Carol Trevisan.

Villanova ICG Hosts Successful Workshop

The Villanova chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government last week hosted the second annual Regional workshop.

Attending the workshop were some fifty participants representing eight of the fifteen schools in the Southeastern Philadelphia Region of the statewide organization.

The workshop sought to inform the members of the value and uses of parliamentary procedure, the workings of both the regional and state organizations, and policy preparations for the upcoming regional and state conventions.

State Confab

Villanova Chairman Phil Bronzi commented that the workshop "will be a very integral organ of regional solidification and even now proves to be an important aid for all members in the three-day state convention during April."

Bronzi and Parliamentarian Tom Burke both echoed the opinion that attendance at this Thursday's meeting and the next three or four subsequent meetings is expected for those that intend to represent the chapter in the conventions.

Junior Class Officers Pick Committee Heads For Junior Week, 1963

With Junior Week in the near future, the Class of '64 held a meeting on Thursday, February 7, to organize the various committees and to announce the respective chairmen. A complete resume of the Week's proceedings was also presented.

Junior Class President John Hagerty asked for complete cooperation among the class members in the preparations for the weekend. He announced that all those interested in participating on any of the committees should watch the Junior Class Bulletin Board in Dougherty Hall for announcements concerning meetings.

Chairs Chosen

Marty McGuinn, Chairman of the Concert, made the following appointments: tickets, Bob Cardone, Ed Weille, and Jim Napolatano; publicity, Ken Kilmartin and Chuck Stockinger; radio, Terry Cooney; floor plan, Bob McGarry; program, Bob Rose; lay-out, Dick Tucker; advertising, Mike Clarkson and Pete Cassidy; and writers, P. J. Smith, Jack Geghegan and Frank Quattrone.

A schedule of the week's activities is as follows: Monday, April 22, Mother's Day including a variety show; Tuesday, April 23, Annual Junior-Senior Muff Day; Wednesday, April 24, Sports Highlights Smoker; Friday, April 26, the Annual Concert featuring Peter Paul and Mary; Saturday, April 27, the traditional Junior Dinner Dance which is being held at the Sheraton Hotel ballroom, the entertainment will be proced by Richard Maltby and his orchestra.

Student Group To Participate In Theology Evaluation Poll

Jim McErlane, the Executive Vice-President for Educational Affairs of the Student Council, submitted a measure that a poll be taken concerning an evaluation of the theology courses offered at Villanova.

The evaluation will deal with the textbooks employed, presentation of the courses, and their practical applications. A qualified group of students will be selected on the basis of their scholastic achievement in the courses outlined to participate in the evaluation.

Approximately forty students will be chosen from the student body excluding the Student Council; an additional ten to fifteen will be selected from the Student Council proper. The evaluation will also be open to anyone interested in taking it.

Tom Furst, Co-chairman of Academic Affairs, stated that a questionaire will be given to each of the students participating.

The members of this group are to answer questions and to evaluate each course they have studied in their four year undergraduate program.

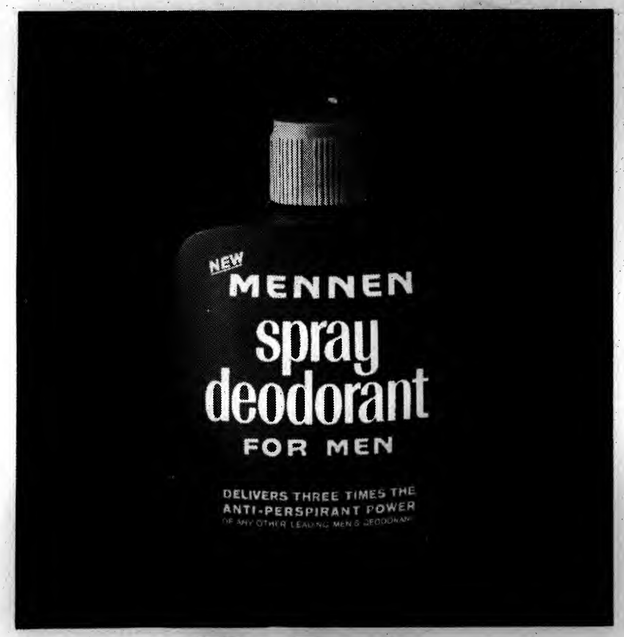
Furst mentioned that an official list containing the names of the student will be published at a later date. They will then be contacted by the Student Council Office and instructed as to their individual functions in regard to the poll.

The Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, and the Student Faculty Committee have approved the proposed measure and granted permission to conduct the survey.

Author Speaker Series To Be Aired In Spring

"The Writer Speaks," a series of half-hour interviews with several of the most outstanding authors in America today, began on Wednesday, February 13, on WCAU radio.

Some of the authors to be heard include such literary giants as: McKinlay Kantor, Irving Stone, Ian Fleming, Ayn Rand, Erskine Caldwell, and Theodore H. White.



These men will discuss the works which have made them great, offering deep insights into the research, philosophy, and hard work that made The Agony and the Ecstasy, Tobacco Road, and The Making of the President runaway best-sellers.

"The Writer Speaks" offers an unusual and outstanding opportunity to all Villanovans interested in the literary arts.

Turf 'N' Tinsel To Present Previous Musical Comedy Hit

The Turf 'n' Tinsel Club has announced that the musical comedy Jessica James, run previously in 1955, will be presented in the Field House on April 18, 19, 20, and 21.

The cast is in the process of being selected, but it is certain that former stars Joe Ruggiero, Al LaMastra and Ed Javorowski will have lead roles.

The setting for the show is the hillbilly section of the Appalachians. Jessica, the main character, is attending a finishing school as the comedy opens.

Jessica's father, Pa, was a bank robber and was killed during a holdup. He was later allowed to return to earth as a ghost to right himself by locating the money stolen by his gang and returning it the rightful owners.

Jessica now is the only person who can see or speak to Pa. Since this is so he calls her home from school to help in his search.

Assisting them in their pursuit is a Pinkerton man whom Jessica met while at school and Pa's angel, who gives him several clues to locate the money. The pace of the comedy then quickens and adventures include a train robbery.

The show will be directed by Betty Green who has been the director for the last five comedies. The music was composed by Bob Whelan, Secretary to the Athletic Director, and founder of Turf 'n' Tinsel.

Careers Considered

Robert Boland, chief psychiatric social worker from the Child Study Center, will speak this afternoon in room 209, Commerce and Finance Building at 2:30.

Mr. Boland will consider social work careers with particular emphasis on the psychiatric setting inherent to them. He will cover the aspects that would be of interest to undergraduate students interested in social service.

The chairman for the session will be Dr. John E. Hughes, chairman of the Department of Sociology.

LKD Fraternity Plans Party In Moose Home

Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity announced recently they are giving a party at the Moose Home in Norristown on February 21, the eve of Senior Weekend, which will be open to the senior members of all the fraternities on campus.

At this meeting President Bill Shea also announced that LKD's annual Communion Breakfast will be held on March 3 at the Horn and Hardart restaurant in King of Prussia.

March 23 was given as the date of their Dinner Dance which will be held at The Springhaven Golf Club in Wallingford.

Bryn Mawr Professor Hosts First Lecture Of IA's Spring Series

The first lecture of the Industrial Administration Department and the Society for the Advancement of Management's Spring Lecture Series was presented in room 110 C & F at 8:00 p.m., Monday, February 18.

Professor Morton S. Baratz of the Economics Department of Bryn Mawr College spoke on "The Economics of the Postal Service." Rev. Philip F. Barrett, OSA, Dean of Commerce and Finance at Villanova, was the chairman.

There will be a meeting for all interested in working on the Junior Week Villanovan on Thursday, Feb. 28, at 10:30 in the Villanovan office.

The Troubadours Three (from left, Tim Hauser, Tom Picardo, Jim Ruf) will be featured on the Rex Morgan Show, Thursday, February 21 at 1 p.m., on WFIL-TV, to promote the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival.

PORTRETTE

Semmer Jazz Salesman

Adding new dimensions to Villanova's affinity for good music is the annual Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, one of whose leaders has been receiving extensive play in local and national press services.

That complex man is Tom Semmer senior finance major from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and general chairman of the Festival.

Tom's interest in the IJF was generated through his handling of the Maynard Ferguson-Four Lads Junior Week Concert last year. Because of the overwhelming success of this venture, the transfer from Notre Dame University was asked to act as Chairman for the forthcoming Festival. The rest is history.

But the Tom Semmer known to avid readers of the UPI national radio wires and the Philadelphia Daily News has facets other than enthusiasm for the intangible art of jazz.

Few know that Tom has served for over a year as Secretary to the Dean of Student Activities. He is Secretary of Blue Key as well.

As might now be obvious, Semmer's activities, especially in connection with the Festival, have been generally directed toward his immediate future goal—industrial sales promotion; for he has been selling a product — jazz — and developing himself and his approach in the process.

In his own words: "The greater part of my education at Villanova has been my extra-curricular activities. They've given me insights into the business world, taught me to live and work with fellow students."

The experience Tom has gained through his work for the Festival and his other extra-scholastic activities should provide a more-than-adequate foothold for his plunge into the highly competitive world of sales promotion.

Lincoln Authority McMurtry Spoke Of So-Called Failures

Contributing to the celebration of Lincoln's birthday the History Department recently sponsored a lecture by Dr. R. Gerald McMurtry on "Lincoln's So-called Failures."

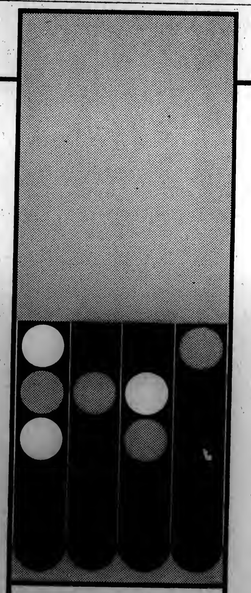
Dr. McMurtry of Lincoln Memorial University is a widely recognized authority on our sixteenth president. He is presently director of the Lincoln National Life foundation of Fort Wayne, Indiana.

As former editor of the Lincoln Herald he has written much on the life of the Great Emancipator. One of his greatest achievements was the acquisition for Lincoln Memorial University of the largest Civil War library in the world.

Three of Lincoln's victorious defeats were touched upon in the text of the speech. The first was the alleged romance with Ann Rutledge, which never took place and, hence, never disturbed Lincoln.

The second was his failure to be elected to the House of Representatives; this was a moral victory. He was blocked by the State legislature from achieving an actual victory.

Thirdly was Lincoln's failure to overcome Douglas in the Senatorial race. This gave him much publicity and ultimately the chance to become the presidential candidate for the Republican Party.



After the lecture the session was thrown open to a question and answer period. The lecture was well attended.

United or Divided

The Free World has been heartened and encouraged during the past few months over the apparent dispute between Russia and Red China. Their dispute centers on basic doctrine and policies.

It has been the hope of the Western world and other free nations that this Communist disagreement would lead to the weakening of the Soviet bloc at the same time that it would sap the aggressive strength of the Red Chinese.

However last week Premier Khrushchev declared openly the friendship that exists between the two major Communist powers. Whether this friendly atmosphere does actually exist is a question that is almost impossible to answer.

This declaration does however point out that relations among the Red powers may be different than what actually is released or rumored outside the Iron Curtain.

There is, most probably, a serious rift between the two powers but there is also probably an almost unknown sense of unity which causes the powers to join forces when the going gets rough. For both realize that the old adage "united we stand, divided we fall" can apply to the Communist powers.

Perhaps Khrushchev was reminding the free world that "we Communists are really friends." Then again he may have been merely trying to build up an image of unity where none really exists.

In either case it is necessary that the Free World not count too much on friction between China and Russia to weaken their aggressive power or mitigate their aggressive intentions.

The free world should be prepared to defend itself against a completely united China and Russia even though the Allies are relatively sure that differences do exist.

Letters To The Editor

The Lost Library

To the Editor.

Having made my initial visit to the library in search of books to aid me during the present semester, I have found to my dismay that many of the books I sought were already in the custody of members of the faculty.

No doubt other students have found the same thing to be true, even as it is true every semester.

The frustrating fact is not that they are always beating us, the students, to the stacks for the sought-after volumes, but rather that they are holding these books for periods as long as several months.

I suspect that many of these books are cramming obscure shelves in offices and merely collecting dust while they could be being put to more profitable use by the students.

Perhaps upon reading this, each member of the faculty would do the entire student body a favor by considering my two point plan for sharing the wealth the library was intended to yield.

First of all, a check could be easily made of offices, top shelves, and like places where a stray book might be found. If, by some chance, such a book is located and no continuing need is had for it, drop it off when next a visit is paid to the gray-stone "storehouse of knowledge."

The library staff may even grant an amnesty on fines or, if not, such fines can probably be taken as income tax deductions.

Secondly, books that might be desired for continuing reference could be placed on the library's reserve shelves.

In this way, ready access to them might be maintained while still not depriving students of the benefits these volumes offer.

Thanks..... from all of us.

Edward C. Coffey '64

Ed. Note: If a member of the faculty has withdrawn a book from the library that a student needs, the student may ask the Librarian to request the return of the book and place it on reserve for him.

Lax Liberalism

To the Editor:

The Villanova Conservative Club is offering now, and has offered in the past an excellent lecture series composed of the leading personalities in their fields.

However, sad to relate, we are dismayed at the dismal showing of Villanova's faculty members, not only at our lecture series, but also at the other lectures sponsored on this campus.

An integral part of a student's academic life is the knowledge he gains outside the classroom.

Certainly no university can fail to provide an adequate program of extracurricular educational opportunities and expect to improve the general intellectual fiber of the student body.

We desire to know why the faculty will not take the initiative in this matter and sponsor an adequate lecture series? Is it because they feel there is nothing more for them to learn?

Such an attitude can best be described as intellectual arrogance of the first magnitude.

Or is it that the faculty fears the impact of new ideas? Are they so complacent in their doctrinaire liberalism that nothing short of a thermonuclear explosion will shake them from their complacency?

The few lectures that the faculty has sponsored have been at best feeble attempts at an adequate program.

There is too great a tendency to rely almost entirely upon local lecturers with little effort expended upon atttempts at procuring the services of nationally-known personalities in their fields.

For example, in the remaining four months of the current academic year we have a selection of at least a half-dozen leaders in the political and economic segments of our national life.

Among the personalities engaged by the Villanova Conservative Club are Senator J. Strom Thurmond (D.-S.C.), an outspoken leader of the Southern bloc in the United States Senate, (Friday, May 9th), Dr. William Peterson, the nationally renowned economist of the Wall Street Journal and New York University (Thursday, April 4th), and Representative John Ashbrook, a young Republican Congressman from Ohio who has proved himself to be a vigorous disciple of his political philosophy in Congress (Friday, March 8th).

This lecture series is the handiwork of Villanova University students with severely limited resources. If such a program could be compiled by our group, what wonders could Villanova's faculty produce?

Cha-Cha-Cha

To the Editor:

This is going to be a rather informal letter to the editor; but nevertheless, its purpose is quite just and I hope the results will be effective enough to prevent any recurrence of the act in question in the future.

It concerns the playing of the School's Alma Mater to the beat of the latest rock 'n roll record. This occurred Saturday evening at the Nursing Sorority Dinner-Dance and needless to say, there were many of us present who were thoroughly appalled and thought it to be one of the most vile and disgraceful of acts to be perpetrated by any Villanova student.

The musicians responsible for the action were a thrown-together group consisting of Villanovans who when told to stop playing the Alma Mater disrespectfully could do nothing but muster up a sly, silly smirk.

After two full choruses of our school hymn they finally broke into a rock 'n roll rendition of "knick-knack-patty-whack."

I hope you can understand not only my point of view but the feelings of many other Villanovans who were truly hurt to see anything like this happen after four years at VU. Perhaps by printing this with your own views on the subject, a repetition of this will be avoided in the future. With Villanova's interest at heart, I remain,

Blue Key Unlocked

To the Editor,

As a faithful reader of the Blue Key, I have discovered something a bit alarming. I no longer have further need for a mother!

My dress, conduct, the food I eat, and the friends with whom I associate can all be found within the realms of my "Blue Key Handbook for Boys and Girls of All Races, Creeds, and Colors."

The Blue Key has explained to me how to shake hands and with whom I should be shaking hands. Through many tedious hours in the privacy of my bedroom, I have learned the proper way of eating soup. I was even told how to conduct myself during a job interview.

Quelling the choking sensation in my throat, I went to my first interview, which was the Reynolds Tobacco Company. To regain my self-confidence I quickly looked over my Blue Key clippings from the Villanovan, and then saying the magic words "Yek Eulb" and swallowing the clippings at the same time, I entered Mr. Reynolds' office.

"Sire," I screamed, rolling myself before Mr. Reynolds, "Dost thou have work for me?" Then in the midst of licking his shoes I recalled my Blue Key advice. Picking myself up from the floor, I informed Mr. Reynolds of Law 187291 of the Order of the Blue Key: "Thou shalt not shake hands with the interviewer unless he deigns to do so first."

He merely glanced up at me and said, "Shuddup and sit down." It greatly offended me not to be able to show him my Blue Key handshake, which had taken me thirteen weeks to master.

After he bade me to sit down, I remembered one of my favorite Blue Key slogans, "Never sit on the floor during an interview." Stealthily I slid up from the floor and into the nearest chair, under Mr. Reynolds' glaring eyes.

If it were not for my intensive Blue Key training, I would have made a most tragic mistake. After I sat down, I pulled out a pack of cigarettes! Fumbling, I began placing one in my mouth! In the midst of lighting one I recalled my Blue Key advice. I became panic-stricken! I had almost disregarded Rule No. 482796: "Do not smoke until the interviewer does so."

After this near mistake I employed Rule No. 1792813: "Jest about a foolish act and pretend you did not mean it." Using this advice, I crushed my cigarettes under my heel and said, "I don't know how anyone could smoke such filthy things!"

Then recalling that this was the Reynolds Tobacco Company and that I had just stepped on a pack of Winstons, I reverted to Rule No. 146227: "Pretend you never wanted the job anyway." Laughing ruefully as Mr. Reynolds hurled me from his office, I remembered that I had obeyed another Blue Key commandment: "Do not mention salary until the interviewer does."

Master-Sleuth Cracks Hat Mystery

by Ed Wilkinson

Always first on the scene to cover a vital issue in the public service, we your emergency reporters (i.e., rarely called upon but in an emergency), hereby interrupt this issue of the Villanovan to bring you the following special news bulletin (Bulletin! Bulletin! Bulletin!)

There is a hat hysteria sweeping the campus! Yes, it's true. Just look around you once. More and more, what do you see weighing on the minds of Villa-novans as they come in out of the rain?

Yes. Hats! If not Russian fur hats, then other hats equally as alien (and probably far more a threat to our security, as may easily be seen from the example shown above).

Yes friends, we're living in troubled times. Are we the victims of some nasty subversion plot? Is there really a team of Russian torture experts on campus doing research in the Villanova cafeteria?

Not Hair

At first it appeared to be merely a typical non-conformist, anti-barber movement, but soon it became starkly evident that this was something far more serious. No, it was not hair that was darkly festering atop the heads of those poor devils, it was bushy black Russian Cossack Hats!

And what a shocking realization it was, too! Here, right in our own family, in open defiance to the Campus Conservatives, an awful Russian hat-wave was sweeping the campus. (And who would have expected a hat-wave in mid-winter?) (No. It's too late to turn back!)

Something had to be done. Ever conscious of his duty to the public, this reckless cub reporter took the burden upon his own shoulders, paying no heed to the personal danger involved in what he was about to do.

Slippery Cossack Capper

Courageously he set out to track one of the leaders of the Russian cap movement, following in his every footstep, waiting for the best moment to strike. He got a lucky break right from the start. His friend generously let him use his special Dick Tracy Land-Jet to keep up with the slippery Cossack Capper, and not many days after, he caught up to him.

Then, without hesitation, he leaped upon him mercilessly with this vicious truth-thrust, "Uhhh excuse me, sir, but could you tell me something about that hat you're wearing?" "Yes," was his guarded reply. Hah! He had him now. Boldly he pressed on.

"Why it is, sir, that you wear that subversive Russian Cossack Hat which is undermining the security of our campus?" "I like it," he answered. He was set on evading me. I could see that very plainly.

The Truth Comes Out

Enraged, I now grabbed him and violently smashed, "But are there any other reasons, sir?" "Yes," he admitted. Ah Hah! Now we have him. Go ahead, admit you're a secret red agent and a dangerous fellow besides.

"What is it? What is the real reason?" I demanded. With a shrewd smile playing about his lips, he said softly . . ."It keeps by head warm." (Dummm Daah Dummm Dummm!)

I staggered back, buckling under the full weight of this astounding disclosure. Before I could catch my breath, he dashed off, disappearing into the sunset. Why, by George, how simple. Why didn't I think of it?

He wasn't a red agent after all. There was no subversive movement on campus, it was all a terrible mad-cap scare. There was no cause for all those torch-light protest processions and hangings-in-effigy. We could all go home and forget about it. The Great Hat Mystery had been been solved! (Wild cheering here).

The Rising Curtain

'Tovarich' Moves Slowly

by Paul Norton

Heading for Broadway now is a new musical starring Vivien Leigh and Jean-Pierre Aumont. Tovarich finished a three week run here in Philadelphia a few Saturdays ago and is now on its way in Boston before opening in New York later in the month.

This is an interesting show from a reviewer's box because it is full of promise, full of nothing; it clicks and it doesn't click. This is one of those things whose success one doesn't like to predict because either you'll be dead right or hopefully and most pleasantly surprised by its final polish.

Fairly Good

The show as a whole is fair to good but it has a long way to go before it is any more than that. At its best it is pulsating, colorful, and enjoyably loud. However, too often it loses its punch and the story lacks the necessary continuity and evenness to give a centralized final effect.

After a snail-paced opening, the show progresses slowly to the first production number, a clever piece of minor key music with a lively beat and some fast dancing. These large scale ensembles, while well staged and excellently choreographed, seem to make up the foundation of the show with the story built around them, rather than having them integrated into the plot.

The first act finale in a Russian cabaret in the bowels of Paris is a masterwork of color and dancing. Only here do the staging and costumes show themselves to their best.

Final Elements

Unfortunately, the dramatic elements which give this musica its warmth all occur in the final minutes of the evening. This provides two incidents that collide with the general tone previously set and produces a nearly ludicrous conversation between the two principals.

Finally after a few moments, chandeliers lower onto the stage and dancers sweep in and out of a weak-looking ballroom. It would be difficult to judge how many musicals have had this type of ending. Not only does it appear contrived to fill in an empty ending but it almost reverts back to a pre-war operetta technique.

Here, the production reaches a point of the lowest imitation when Miss Leigh makes her last grand entrance as a sort of Russian Scarlet O'Hara bedecked in — they must be rhinestones—in the tradition of the rest of the scene.

Few Stoppers

The remainder of the actors are adequate and sometimes pleasing, but never great. Jean Pierre Aumont oils his way through the plot with what I suppose you'd call charm. It is obvious that both Aumont and Miss Leigh have the play depending on their names rather than on their talents as musical comedy stars. The minor characters, backed by a finely co-ordinated chorus, are all good, especially the two American children who manage a couple of show stoppers.

To sum up, may I take defense in a reviewer's prerogative. Readers criticize the critics for expecting every show to be a smash hit Tovarich is entertaining but it will not appear unique, original, or exceptionally witty to seasoned theater goers.

Intercollegiate Jazz Festival

Pictured on these pages are the six instrumental groups that will be participating in Friday's final competition in the third annual Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival.

Above and to the left is the POTSDAM STATE JAZZ QUINTET, from the State Teachers College at Potsdam, New York. Besides the standard rhythm section, the group adds an alto sax and valve trombone, to form a not-too-orthodox combination of sounds that was highly intriguing to the judges.

This page, center, are the WEST CHESTER STATE CRITERIONS, from the State College West of Villanova. Leader, holding trombone to the left of the group, is Bob Curnow, a talented arranger and composer, who also led the group to second place in last year's Festival. Besides doing arrangements for all the band's numbers, Curnow has one or two compositions that should prove to be quite interesting in the show on Friday.

And if you can't guess it by the picture, the bottom photo on this page is the Ivy League representative in the Big Band category — THE BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA of DARTMOUTH COLLEGE. The modern jazz they play borders on the far-out side, and the judges felt that their controversiality was a necessary element to Friday's presentation. They have an impressive background, and are extremely talented, from playing to composing and arranging.

Hosts Musicians In Competition

At the head of this page is one of the more exciting bands at this year's festival — THE DUQUESNE WORKSHOP BAND. Headed by Paul Hubinon and Ray DeFade, this band has two or three writers that should some day compare with Slide Hampton of Maynard Ferguson fame. Their LaVere release of "Gospel Goodness," written by their pianist-organist J. J. Kennedy, III, is typical of the modern Afro-Cuban-Slide Hampton-Waltz.

Below are the JAZZ DISCIPLES from a variety of schools in Chicago, including Roosevelt University and the American Conservatory of Music. The bass player, Ken Chaney, does most of the writing and arranging, and we are looking for him to do a number called "Intercol," which, we suspect is an abbreviation for INTERCOLLEGIATE, etc.

And the tall photo is that of MIKE MICHAELS TRIO, representing Penn. Strangely enough, there is no one in the group named Mike Michaels, but there's the Ivy League for you. The trio is extremely versatile, and will present a pleasant opening for the show.

The vocal group, the HARLEQUINS from Duke University, borders on the Four Lads-Hi Lo's type of music, and will add variety and good music. They failed to submit a picture in time for this edition.

Class Of 1965 Plans To Entertain Orphans

Charles Zaccaria, Sophomore Class Vice-President, announced on February 7, that the class would sponsor a spring project.

Co-chairmen John Calabria and Bob Spellman said that on Saturday, April 7, the class will entertain orphans of one of the homes in the area. Orphanages under consideration are Saint Mary's, Saint Joseph's and Saint John's.

Entertainment for the orphans is to be handled by Cobi Brothers. Publicity is being arranged by Ken Cronin. Anyone interested in working for this project is advised to contact one of the chairmen.

judges, to participate in the finals.

The groups are divided into three major categories: Big Bands represented by The Barbary Coast Orchestra of Dartmouth (Hanover, New Hampshire); the West Chester Criterions (Pennsylvania); The Duquesne Workshop Band (Pittsburgh). Small groups will include: Potsdam State Jazz Quintet (New York); Mike Michaels Trio (American Conservatory of Music, Chicago). The Harlequins of Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, will be the vocal group.

Festival Archives

The history of the Jazz Festival is a unique and interesting one. The Class of 1962 in their junior year were under the direction of class president Jim McMonagle. Jim was conferring with Father Kenny, the Director of Athletics, for an activity to fill in the Friday night of the upcoming Junior Week. Father Kenny suggested that the activity be inexpensive, whereupon the idea of using the talent of the surrounding schools was brought to light.

Jim mentioned these ideas to Jim Braithwaite, a jazz enthusiast, who immediately suggested a jazz show. Jim McMonagle asked Joe Zawacki of WWVU and the Villanovan, who was also a jazz buff, to co-ordinate the show. Together they concluded that competitive performances would enhance the show even more.

The lack of money limited the action taken till the inspiration of using college musicians and prizes solved the problem. The first festival made an excellent showing and was considered a great success. The first prize winner was Jeff Haskell of West Chester State.

Two In a Row

The show was such a success that it was scheduled for a repeat. The prizes were increased and plans were set for the following year. The Jazz Festival had participants only from the Philadelphia area and was a great success in attendance and professional opinion. The promotion of jazz on the college level appealed to everyone in the field.

The originators and co-ordinators of the first two festivals graduated that year and it seemed as if the Jazz Festival was to be doomed to an insignificant death. But Jim Dunn, member of the team which produced the first two shows to return, organized a new committee and promptly began to make ambitious plans for a third Jazz Festival.

The plans and ambitions of these students and the fruits of their labors can be witnessed this Friday at the biggest intercollegiate jazz festival in the area.

NOTICE

There will be no VILLANOVAN next week. Deadline for the March 6 edition will be February 26.

It was announced by Vice President Jim Howley that Roger Bride had resigned as Co-Chairman of the Spirit Committee and that Vice President Jim McErlane had appointed sophomore representative Tom Furst as Co-Chairman of the Cultural Affairs Committee.

In a humorous note, the Ways and Means Committee noted that the Villanova-sponsored entry in the Bakersfield Baby Alligator Contest was disallowed due to late entrance.

Complete Cinema Schedule Is Announced By Committee

The complete schedule of forthcoming Student Council movies, all of which are shown in Vasey Auditorium, was recently announced by the Movie Committee.

Tonight at 6:30 and 9, Elia Kazan's award-winning drama, On the Waterfront, will be shown. The controversial production, in black and-white, stars Marlon Brando, Eva Marie Saint, and Karl Malden.

Two Way Stretch is slated for Wednesday, March 20. This British comedy features Peter Sellers, star of The Mouse That Roared.

On Tuesday, April 9, Helen of Troy will be shown. Starring Rossana Podesta and Sir Cedric Hardwicke, this film based on Homer's Iliad will be seen in CinemaScope and color.

Errol Flynn and David Niven share the leading roles in The Charge of the Light Brigade, the movie for Wednesday, April 24.

On Wednesday, May 8, William Holden may be seen in Stalag 17, in the role which won him an Academy Award for best actor of the year.

The final movie the Council is presenting will be Shane, an adult western starring Alan Ladd and Van Heflin.

These features will be presented twice on the days listed, at 6:30 and 9 p.m. The admission is $.25.

pantomime.

Opposite him playing the American will be David Rabe, from Loras College, Dubuque, Iowa. Dave plays the part of Alvin, the awkward, frightened young airman whose lack of brains is made up for in the final analysis by his greatness of heart.

According to Mr. Duprey, the play will run as many performances as there will be an audience to listen.

The performances are scheduled for February 22-24; March 1-3; March 9-11 at 8:15 p.m. except on the second, when the performances will be at 8:45. In addition, on February 23 there will be a matinee at 2:00 and on March 2, one at 6:00 p.m.

Tickets may be obtained in the Pie Shoppe, at the Graduate Theatre Office, or at the door.

Literary Awards Given For Artistic Merit In Villanova's 'Lynx'

Last Thursday, the Literary Society announced the initiation of future presentations of awards for outstanding literary contributions to the University's literary publication, The Lynx.

Each issue of the publication will delegate new awards, thus enhancing the quality and variety of the publication. Award winners will be honored by personalized plaques, while the major awards will be hung permanently in the University's Library Reserve Room, for future admiration and honor.

The rules and regulations pertaining to the presentations of these awards were also discussed.

The society has a symposium planned for April in which five student speakers will participate, discussing and examining the writings of Aldous Huxley and George Orwell, particularly Brave New World, and 1984.

These controversial works will be the foundation of criticism and opinions by the speakers. Also planned in the literary vein will be a lecture by Mr. George Murphy of the English Department.

Inexpensive Flight Package Offered For Summer Vacation

A cut-rate group flight to London has been planned by Villanova authorities in co-operation with the Philadelphia Auto Club Travel Service for the coming summer.

The group flight will be composed of twenty-five or more people who are willing to fly to Europe and after separate vacations return together. The group will be made up of members of the Villanova University community.

The purpose of going under the group plan is to save approximately thirty-eight per cent on the normal trip fare by Pan American jet. The round trip fare to London is approximately $310 to London and return.

The group will leave Philadelphia on July 16 and will disperse on the following day to follow their own pursuits. The group will reassemble at the London airport on August 14.

For further details concerning this plan contact Dr. Heidingsfield, Associate Dean of Commerce and Finance, in his office in the Commerce and Finance Building. Dr. Heidingsfield's phone number is LA 5-4600, extensions 362 and 363.

Frosh Basketball Team Nipped By St. Joseph's In Tight Finish

Saint Joseph's Freshman basketball team blew a seventeen point half-time lead and then staved off a last minute Villanova rally to down the Wildkittens last week at the Field House by a 76 to 71 count.

The Hawklets, paced by a pair of pint sized wonders, handed the 'Cats their second loss of the season, dropping the log to 6-2.

Five-Foot Men

The heroes of the visitors' attack were 5-10 Billy Oakes and 5-9 Bill McFadden. Oakes tossed in 19 points to pace St. Joe's offensively while McFadden flipped in twelve of the Hawks final fifteen points to nip Villanova's comeback rally in the bud.

Cold Streaks

McFadden replaced Steve Chapman when the latter left the game in the second half with an injury.

The 'Cats lost the game in the opening half when they hit a cold streak and allowed St. Joe's to build up a 41-24 margin at the half.

The second half comeback by Villanova was paced by Lou Benn, Richie Moore and Bernie Schaffer. Ben was the hustler for the 'Cats in the final half, roaming all over the court and picking off a bushel of steals to set up scores.

Gap Closed

Villanova closed the gap to six with only a few minutes to play in the game. At this point Chapman was injured and McFadden came on the scene.

Twelve in Three

The dimunitive frosh flipped in twelve points in the remaining three minutes to preserve the victory for St. Joe's and avenge an earlier defeat that was handed to the Hawklets by Villanova earlier in the season.

Melchionne Paces

Bill Melchionne and Moore were the leading lights in Villanova's on-again-off-again offense, Melchionne getting 20 and Moore tossing 14 counters.

Standing before the clock that has timed several of their record breaking performances are the four members of the 440 yard free style relay team, (L-R) Rick Girdler, Dick McDonough, Paul Winn, and Jack Geoghagan.

Nittany Lions Down Wildcat Rifle Team With Power And Aim

The Villanova rifle team was defeated Saturday, February 9, by Penn State, 1434 to 1380. Considered by many as one of the top ten teams in the nation, Penn State proved to be too strong for the Wildcats.

The high shooter for the Nittany Lions was Tom Anderson with a torrid 290 out of a possible 300. His teammates supported his efforts, with none of them below 285.

Three in 280's

The Wildcats put up a stiff fight despite State's overwhelming power. James Garafalo, Art Blades, and George Walko fired in the high 280's but the lack of depth in the young team proved to be too great.

Wildcat Swimmers Trounce La Salle For Seventh Triumph In Ten Outings

By Tom Finan

The Explorers of LaSalle College fell victims to the Wildcats last Wednesday as the Villanova swimming team tallied its seventh victory of the year.

Highlight of the 67-28 trouncing was the stellar performance of All-American Dick McDonough, who won the 100 yard yard freestyle in 49.2 thus smashing this old mark of 49.4.

Another outstanding feature of the meet was the record-breaking victory of the 440 yard freestyle relay team. Composed of Rick Girdler, Paul Winn, Jack Geohagen and McDonough, the relay squad triumphed in 3:20.3 thereby breaking the old standard of 3:20.9.

A third pool record was broken Wednesday as the 500 yard freestyle was won by LaSalle's Bruce Trainor in 5:37.5, eclipsing the old mark of 5:41.2.

Frosh Victory

The freshmen swimming team is currently enjoying a 6-1 season, with the only loss being to a talented Army squad. The Wildkittens, under the direction of Jack Lumsden, scored a 63-32 triumph over Monsignoir Bonner on Friday, February 8.

Monsignoir Bonner is the National Catholic champion and consistently turns out a talented squad every year. In this meet with the Green and White, the Villanovans established six new Freshmen records.

National Championships

The swim squad will return to action this afternoon, when they will meet Lafayette in the Field House Pool at 4:00 p.m. This weekend, the varsity will be inactive as Villanova will host the National Catholic Interscholastics on Friday and Saturday, with the finals being slated for Saturday evening at 8:00 p.m.

Vasey Auditorium To Be Scene Of Intramural Amateur Show

By Ray Heitzman

Tuesday, February 26 will be the date for this year's Intramural Amateur night. The show will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium with Bob Shayer acting as chairman. Other members of the committee helping him will be Tom James, Paul Dixon, Al Lupcho, and John Fenlon.

For those who possess talent along the lines of singing, music, variety and comedy acts, there is still time to participate in the show. Entries close 6:00 P.M. in the Intramural office on February 20. Auditions will be held that night commencing at 8:15 in Alumni Gym.

Due to a heavy Intramural program this semester, two members of the Student staff have been appointed Directors. The sophomores appointed are Paul Smith, a pre-medical student; and Phil Gormley, an arts student. Gormley will be in charge of the Basketball Playoffs and the Intramural Track Meet; Paul Smith will direct the tennis tournament.

The teams which will participate in the playoffs will be chosen on March 11. One team will be picked from both the 10:30 league and the 2:30 league and three teams each from the rest of the Alumni leagues and the Field House league.

The Chinese Bandits have compiled the best record so far, 11-1. Close on their heels in the same 2:30 league are the P. J's. In the 10:30 league the Pussy Cats and the Cellar Dwellers are battling for first place. The rest of the leagues are very close with no one team dominant.

Hockey Team Falters In Finale As Strong Lafayette Wins 7-3

Villanova's ice hockey team closed out its season last Saturday with a 7-3 defeat at the hands of Lafayette. The Leopards got off to a fast start on their home ice with three quick goals in the opening minutes. After this flurry the Wildcats were able to hold them in check.

Midway through the second period the 'Cats caught fire. Leading scorer John Clement tapped in the rebound of a shot by George Genise to make the score 3-1.

The deficit decreased to 3-2 a few minutes later when Mark Clement tipped in a long shot by Bob Birmingham, who had taken a pass from Captain Hal Canty. The Leopards came back though, scoring a disputed goal with only seconds remaining in the period.

Hosts Ice Contest

The final period began with another three goal spree by Lafayette. This made the score 7-2, icing the victory for the hard-checking hosts.

Cats Split With N.Y. Squads; Down Redmen, Lose To Bonnies

By Larry Everling

The weakest St. John's team this reporter has ever seen succumbed to Jack Kraft's five last Wednesday night, 52-32.

With no shooters to speak of and a hounding Villanova defense, the Redmen of Joe Lapchik looked like the weakest team the 'Cats will face all season.

Eric Erikson hit a jumper with 19:33 to play in the first half and the home team was never behind. Paced by Jim O'Brien and Jim Washington the Cats led at halftime 24-14. It looked more like a high school game than major colleges.

The St. John man-to-man defense was hard to crack, especially for Wally Jones, who was sandbagged by Donnie Burks for the first half.

Burks

Good field, no hit, is the tag on the Redman captain. He was a great scorer in high school, mostly on the fast break, but seems tied down by the inability of his teammates to run. On the asset side, his defense is amazing. The guarding of Jones, a difficult task at best, was the best job done this year.

Wally adjusted in the second half however, by using his picks more effectively and finally wound up with ten points.

Second Period Surge

With Wally, Washington and McMonagle leading the way, the Cats moved out to a commanding lead early in the second half. Holding the visitors scoreless for nearly seven minutes while the Field House fans screamed, the Villanova five took complete charge of the situation.

Potpourri

The improved play of Sam Iorio has taken some pressure off Washington. Sam deserved a lot of credit for his dedication. Butch Winterbottom sparkled in floor play the other night with his usual hustling tactics. Best line of the evening — Flush the Johns.

Shocked By Bonnies

Shocked by a seven minute dry spell, the Cats were trampled by the Bonnies at Buffalo. With Fred Crawford and Mike Rooney, just off the couch, leading the way the Brown Indians dominated every phase of the game.

Barry Herbert and Bob Barnek grabbed the rebounds and a la Bob Cousy, flipped down-court to Crawford and his fellow run and shooter, Rooney, who danced and slashed his way for sixteen points.

The Bonies hit a devastating 49% in the first half to the cool 'Cats 25%. Crawford, shooting long jumps and underhand slop, had a poor night however with 3 for 14. His defense leaves that important half of the game to be desired.

Long Night

The Bonnies never let up and destroyed the Cats 79-58. Wally Jones led the visitors with 17 points but couldn't hit until late in the second half. Washington pulled down 10 rebounds but had little help off the boards as the Bonnies crashed the boards, then ran and ran.

Soph hotshot Rooney, an early season problem, overcame his trauma and showed great potential. Best line — Hey Rooney, where's your psychiatrist?

Two-Mile Relay, Cruz Garner Firsts In NYAC Track Meet Last Weekend

by Brian Banmill..

New York track fans, known for their thrist for record-breaking performances, were not disappointed Friday night, as the New York Athletic Club played host to two world-record performances and five meet records before the near-capacity crowd of 15,178 at Madison Square Garden.

World Indoor Marks Set

Jim Beatty, America's mighty mite of the mile, and Russian high jumper Valery Brumel set new records. Beatty fought off a last minute surge by Tom O'Hara of Loyola of Chicago to win the Baxter Mile in 3:58.6. O'Hara, who had never broken four minutes, crossed the tape in 3:59.2, stamping himself as a brilliant U. S. star of the future.

Brumel surpassed his own indoor mark of 7-3½ with a jump of 7-4 in the high jump.

Wildcats Star

Although many new records were made at Madison Square Garden perhaps the most surprising and outstanding event of the night was Villanova's triumph in the Two-Mile Relay. The Wildcats upset favored Georgetown in a driving duel to the wire.

Pat Traynor, Vic Zwolak, Tom Sullivan, and Noel Carroll combined to win in the time of 7:33.6. Sullivan set it up on the third leg, outfighting Georgetown's Ed Duchini, and Carroll saved it by barely holding off John Reilly with a 1:50.6 anchor half.

Another Wildcat, Rolando Cruz, again proved his pole-vaulting ability with a second 16 footer. His first trip into orbit came two weeks before, at the Inquirer Games in Philadelphia, as he became the first man to clear the mark in Convention Hall.

After clearing 16 feet on his first try, the bar was raised to 16-3½. Cruz almost succeeded on all three attempts, and on one occasion was over the bar, but knocked it off on the trip down. Rolando's prediction: "I think I'll do 16-6 this year."

Oddly enough, Cruz broke the meet record previously held by a former teammate, ex-Villanovan Don Bragg, who vaulted 15-7 in 1961 at the Garden.

Don Webster lost the runner-up position in the 440 to Colorado grad Bill Toomey. Toomey evened the score with Webster, who defeated him in the 440 run at the Inquirer Games two weeks ago. Wendell Mottley of Yale captured first place with a 0:48.5 jaunt, only three-tenths of a second off the indoor record.

Ex-Villanovan Paul Drayton was tied for second place in the 60 yard dash by Sam Perry of Fordham. Perry tied the meet record of 6.1 in the preliminary, but the final was won by Dartmouth's Gerald Ashworth in 6.2.

Perhaps the most outstanding record was the one set in the Two-Mile Run by Bruce Kidd of Ontario who ran the distance in 8:39.0, the second fastest indoor two-mile in history, and the best of his career. Only Murray Halberg of New Zealand is ahead, with the world indoor record of 8:34.4.

Hardcourt Heroes Look To Bid For Second City-Series Title

by Roy Baron

The Villanova basketball squad meets Xavier University in the Palestra on Saturday in the initial game of a four game-eight day grind.

The other games are against West Chester on February 25, St. Peter's on February 28, and LaSalle on March 2.

Coach Jim McCafferty has a strong Xavier club despite a 9-13 record at this writing. The team is led by a pair of 6-7 juniors, Bob Pelkington and Joe Geiger. Pelkington is the team's leading scorer and rebounder, averaging 16.2 in both departments. His rebound average places him fifth in the nation.

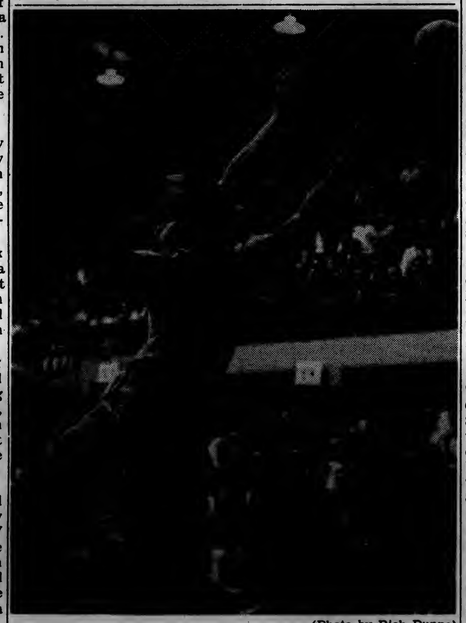
Geiger is hitting for 11.2 points per game. Rounding out the forecourt is 6-3 senior Lou McDermott with a 9.3 average.

An injury suffered in an auto accident by Captain Jimmy Enright, the only veteran at guard, has forced McCafferty to go with a pair of sophs in the backcourt. They are 6-0 Steve Thomas, the squad's second leading scorer with a 14.4 average, and 5-9 sparkplug Joe McNeil.

Villanova will be looking for revenge against this club after last season's 87-66 trouncing at Cincinnati.

West Chester, with a 7-11 record at present, will bring a fine shooting team into the Villanova field house. Coach Tony Hopkins has been going with three sophomores in a starting that has a great deal of potential.

The starters, all hitting in double figures, are expected to be Bill Yelsh, Charles Hottenstein, Richie Beckett, Bill Hanson, and Captain Joe Warners.



Small College Power

New York's Madison Square Garden will be the scene of the contest with perennial small college power St. Peter's of Jersey City, N.J.

The Peacocks have a 10-7 record thus far, but the suspension of four players, including the team's captain, because of continual violation of training rules is bound to hurt them badly. Coach Don Kennedy's club is led by Tim Kehoe, who sports a 17.6 average.

The 'Cats then return to the Palestra to face LaSalle in a city series game. The Explorers presently possess a 14-5 record. 6-6 Frank Corace leads the team in scoring with a 19.3 average.

He combines at forward with 6-7 sophomore George Sutor (13.9), the leading rebounder with an 11.5 average. 6-8 Walt Sampson is the center, and Bill Raftery (14.4) and Tony Abbott (13.6) are the guards.

The Villanova Wildcats defeated the University of Buffalo last night in the Field House, 69-47.

Athletic Policy Of University Subject Of Council Discussion

The Villanova Student Council last Wednesday evening hosted the Rev. Thomas Kenny, OSA, a member of the University Athletic Board, in an inquiry into the present and future athletic policy of the university.

The discussion took place as a result of a Council invitation stemming from a resolution sponsored by Vice President Jim Howley. The purpose of the discussion was primarily to answer any questions that might have arisen instead of a strict definition of policy.

The feeling as was indicated by many of the questions of Council members is that, in view of the past two seasons, Villanova should expand its policy to include stiffer competition.

Finances

Fr. Kenny cited that "personally I would like to play better prestige teams" but that "we (the University) do not have the equipment; that is mainly money."

He further pointed out that football is not a money-making sport as far as colleges are concerned and that this is particularly true of Villanova.

It was also pointed out that Villanova would continue its present policy of a nine game slate against colleges about the same calibre as Villanova. He also noted that the time and opportunity for the establishment of a Catholic League has passed and seems improbable at the present time.

Twenty-two members of the Vienna Choir Boys pose before a picturesque setting. The choir will perform on March 12 in the Field House. Story appears on page 5.

Philosophy Professor Doctor Vernon Bourke Speaks On Augustine

The Fifth Annual St. Augustine Lecture will be presented on Sunday, March 10 at 3:00 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Dr. Vernon Bourke, Professor of Philosophy at St. Louis University and Augustinian and Thomistic scholar, will deliver the lecture entitled "Saint Augustine's View of Reality."

Dr. Bourke received his Doctorate in Philosophy from the University of Toronto in 1937, and lectured at St. Michael's College in that city from 1938 to 1941.

He joined the faculty at St. Louis University in 1941, and has remained there to the present. Dr. Bourke's field of research has been the history of medieval philosophy and ethics, specializing in the thought of St. Augustine and St. Thomas Aquinas.

Other Lectures

Some of his important speaking engagements include the Marquette University Aquinas Lecture in 1947 entitled "St. Thomas and the Greek Moralists," and the Boston College Centenary Lecture, consisting of ten discussions on "Will in Western Thought" last November.

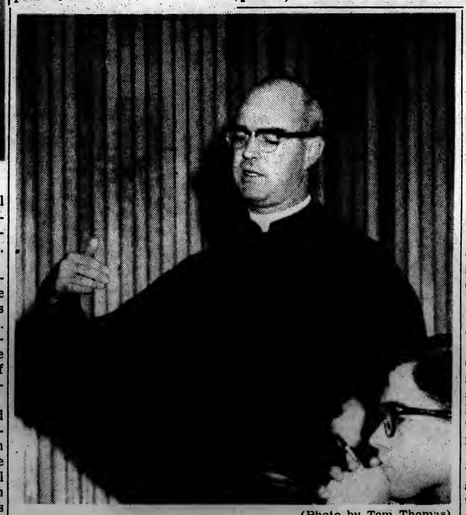
Cooney And Galie To Debate In Tournament At Georgetown

The most important tournaments, as far as national prestige and calibre of competition are concerned, lie in the near future when the Georgetown Debate Tournament gets underway.



This weekend the team of Cooney and Galie, which will represent Beta Gamma and Villanova in the District Competion, will travel with another team to Georgetown to attend probably the largest and toughest tournament in the nation with the exception of the National Finals held at West Point.

The Georgetown tournament attracts teams from across the country. It is a gruelling, power-paired, switch-side tournament in which the teams are paired according to their records as the tournament progresses.

The debate club has been active every weekend since February 8 and 9. The second semester, which is really the busy semester as far as debate is concerned, began for the debaters with the Kings College Debate Tournament on February 8 and 9.

The club represented by T. Cooney, J. Griffin, T. McStravick and Dave Galie did not place among the top teams, however. Dave Galie was given the seventh best speaker award in a tournament that hosted 120 debaters.

Saint Patrick's weekend, the team will travel to Wilkes-Barre and Kings College for the District VI competition. The tournament qualifies five teams to compete in the nationals at West Point in April. There will be about forty teams competing in the district competition.

Mid-Semester Grades Indicate 20 Students Having 4.00 Averages

The bi-annual saga from the Recorder's Office, commonly known as the Dean's List, is once again gracing the pages of the Villanovan.

The list of the honored 637 may be found on page 11 of this edition.

Leading the list are 20 students who have obtained the pinnacle of academic success by achieving the remarkable feat of posting a 4.00 cumulative average for the first semester.

Among the elite are Walter Bailey, a member of the editorial board of the Villanovan, Robert Hartman, a chemical engineering student, and Sister M. Mercedes, a nun.

When completely unraveled the IBM product measured 9.2 meters, which in American notation is 30 feet. The number of students on its expanse represents 15.7 per cent of the entire undergraduate enrollment.

Those who achieved a 4.00 are:

Robert J. Burke, Mechanical Engineering, Jr.

Walter R. Bailey, History, Jr.

Thomas M. Castagna, Arts, Sr.

Paul F. Cherenack, Math, Sr.

Robert A. Coogan, P L, Sr.

John P. Corra, Electrical Engineering, Sr.

Robert E. Delaney, Accounting, Sr.

Gloria A. Ferraro, Nursing, Sr.

Sister M. Mercedes Flynn, Nursing, Jr.

Andrew M. Gabriel, Mechanical Engineering, Jr.

Lecturer Of Latin From Eire To Speak On Virgil's 'Aeneid'

Dr. John O'Meara, Lecturer in Latin at University College, Dublin, and currently affiliated for the second time with the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton, will give a lecture on March 11 at three o'clock in Room 209, Commerce and Finance Building.

During his second visit to Villanova, Dr. O'Meara, a prominent scholar in Augustinian studies, will give an address: "Augustine the Artist and the Aeneid." Dr. O'Meara will be remembered for his noteworthy lecture of two years ago, the third in the series, Saint Augustine and the Augustinian Tradition, Charter of Christendom: the Significance of the City of God This lecture was subsequently published by the Macmillan Company.

Dr. O'Meara has authored a study of Porphyry which he prepared during a year at the Institute for Advanced Studies, and he has returned to Princeton to do further research this semester.

Dr. O'Meara has penned some translations from the Greek and Latin Fathers of the Church and is particularly well-known for his book, The Young Augustine, an up-to-date statement on the status of current scholarship of Saint Augustine's early years.

'Belle Air' Coming

The 1963 Belle Air is on its way to another successful year. Joe Ruggiero, editor-in-chief of the yearbook, said last week that more than eighty per cent of the book has already gone to press. This is record time and presupposes an early deadline and may possibly mean an early publication.

There will be many special and new features in this year's Belle Air. One such special feature will be a new and different opening selection. There will also be a totally new layout of the faculty. This year's Belle Air promises to be one of the biggest and best in its history.

Father Edward Lundy Hosts Senior Retreat Beginning Wednesday

The annual retreat for the seniors will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, March 13, 14, and 15 in the Field House.

Retreat cards can be picked up Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday, March 11 and 12, in the center lounge, Dougherty Hall.

The open exercises begin Wednesday evening at 7:30, and will be followed by conference, benediction, and confessions.

Thursday's schedule opens with an 8 a.m. Mass for both resident and day students. Conferences will be held at 9:30, 11:00 and 1 p.m.

Confessions will be heard immediately after the second and third conferences. The 3:00 p.m. holy hour closes out the afternoon exercises but residents must return at 7:30 for night prayers and confessions.

On Friday conferences will be held at 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. The retreat will close with Mass and general communion at 12

The retreat master for the senior men will be the Rev. Edward Lundy, CSP, who is assigned to the Paulist center in Boston, Mass.

Nocturnal adoration has been a tradition during the Villanova Annual Retreats. All retreatants are urged to spend an hour before the Blessed Sacrament; it will be exposed after the Holy Hour. Day-hops may bring their family and friends on Thursday evening to join them in their period of Adoration.

Maria Puszynski Crowned Senior Dinner Dance Queen

Mary O'Leary, contest chairman, recently announced the names of the finalists and the Queen of the Senior Dinner Dance, the Florentine Ball.

The queen was Maria Puszynski, escorted by Bob Marshall, C&F. She was crowned by Patricia Lestia, date of Bob Finneran, who was the queen of last year's Junior Dinner Dance. The queen received a dozen red roses and wore a crown of white carnations.

Maria, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Puszynski, is a twenty-one year old Senior Fashion design major at Chestnut Hill College, and has done modeling for various church, academic, and social groups.

Her escort, Bob Marshall, is a Senior Marketing major who has participated in the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps program, men's glee club, and choraleers. Miss Puszynski and Mr. Marshall plan to be married late in the summer.

The names were announced at the Philadelphia Athletic Club the site of the Senior Dinner Dance. The three finalists were: Helen Gillespie, date of Ken Holman, C&F; Patricia O'Brien, date of Bert Valery, C&F, Carol Anne Robinson, date of John Flannagan, C&F.

Representatives from McCall's Magazine conducted the preliminary judging of the contestants, and John Weitz chose the queen. Mr. Weitz is the recipient of the Sports Illustrated Award for Fashion Designing.

The attendants and queen received 14 karat gold charms as a remembrance of the affair. Favors were in the form of etched pewter plates for the women and a 21 ounce brandy snifter for the men. The Philadelphia Athletic Club was decorated in an international manner.

Music Society Hears Puccini's 'Turandot'

The Villanova Music Society in its second meeting of the semester presented recordings of Puccini's Turandot last Wednesday evening in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The society plans to have a number of live concerts this semester along with its weekly meetings. A return of folk singers Jim Croce and Joe Salviolo is also being planned.

The society is also offering tickets to members at half price for the concert to be given at the Field House by the Vienna Boy's Choir.

Council Will Conduct Senior Religion Poll

The Student Council will conduct a religion poll among select members of the senior class.

The following students are requested to pick up a copy of the poll questionnaire in the Student Council office on March 6, 7, or 8.

New York Editorial Position Prize In Book Review Contest

The winner of a unique book review competition will receive a summer editorial job with a major New York publishing firm. Salary, board and winner's round-trip traveling expenses will be paid by the sponsor, Grosset & Dunlap, Inc., publisher of the Universal Library line of quality paperback books.

The competition is open to all current undergraduates of accredited colleges and universities in the United States. It will run from March 15 through May 1.

Set Books

The review of no more than 500 words must be on one of twenty-four Universal Library paperpacks specified by the publisher. These are titles used by many instructors as required or supplementary reading in literature, history, sociology, the arts and other subjects. Books by James Baldwin, Joyce Cary and others promise the student that his time will be spent fruitfully even if he has no current course in which one of the twenty-four titles is used.

There will be twenty-five second prizes of twenty five Universal Library titles each and twenty-five third prizes of ten Universal Library titles each.

Grand Prize

The winner of the grand prize will be a regular member of the Grosset & Dunlap editorial staff for nine weeks, from July 1 to August 31, 1963. He will participate in conferences with others of the editorial department, sit in on sessions with authors, agents, artists, book production specialists — in short, he will be in a working laboratory of the book publishing field and be paid a salary of $100 per week, too.

Columbia University is co-operating in the project by agreeing to house the student in one of its dormitories. The Columbia authorities have given their support in the belief that the competition has a worthwhile educational objective.

Rules and information about the competition are available at the college store and local book stores or the student and professor can secure them by writing to "Book Review," Grosset & Dunlap, 1107 Broadway, New York 10, N. Y.

Duquesne, University Show Stopper At Intercollegiate Jazz Festival

The Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, held Friday evening, was acknowledged as an overwhelming success by all who witnessed it.

The Paul Hubanon-Ray De Fade Orchestra of Duquesne University captured the award for overall talent as well as the prize for the best big band. The Potsdam State Jazz Quintet won the prize in the combo division, while the Harlequins of Duke University were judged as the finest vocal group in the show.

Individual awards were also presented by the judges. Bob Curnow of West Chester was selected as the best instrumentalist in the Trombone category. Aside from this award, Curnow was also contracted by Stan Kenton's band.

Joe Roccisano took the award for Potsdam in the clarinet division, Paul Hubanon of Duquesne won the prize for the best trumpet, and Bill Gallagher of West Chester for the most promising drummer.

Awarding the prizes to the winners in the various catagories was Stan Kenton, the celebrated band leader, who flew from his Los Angeles home to attend the musical spectacular.

The final competition was judged by a panel of six men including Robert Share, administrator of the Berklee School of Music, Bill Coss, New York feature writer for Down Beat, and John Hammond, an A & R man from Columbia Records. Assisting them were Reverend Norman T. O'Connor, a Paulist priest well-known in the jazz field as a critic and promoter: Sid Mark, popular Philadelphia disc-jockey; and the well-known Sid Bernstein, New York booker with General Artists and originator of the Jazz Conference.

Seven groups in all participated in the Festival. The Big Band group consisted of the Barbary Coast Orchestra of Dartmouth College, The West Chester Criterions, from West Chester State Teachers College, and the Duquesne Workshop Band of Duquesne University.

Small groups included the Potsdam State Jazz Quintet from Potsdam State College, The Mike Michaels Trio, from The University of Pennsylvania, and the Jazz Disciples of the American Conservatory of Music, from Chicago.

The vocal group category was represented by the Harlequins of Duke University, winners in their division.

PORTRETTE

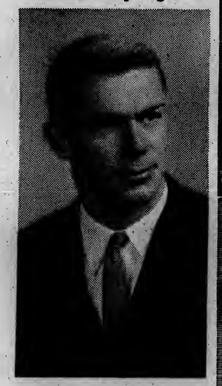
Quiet Campus Rebel

Violating a seemingly age-old dichotomy between athletics and scholarship is one Jim O'Brien, senior chemistry major from Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania.

Delinquent youth that he is, O'Brien has consistently refused to recognize the "necessity" of divorcing the two, and has persisted in pursuing a course accenting them equally well.

Few are unaware of forward Jim's talents off the backboards. The big co-captain's steady play has been an important factor in leading the Wildcat five into National Invitational Tourney competition.

First in Class



But a mere handful know of his academic achievements. Ranked first in his class, Jim can be counted among the ranks of Delta Epsilon Sigma, the national Catholic honor society.

And the overall achievement of this quiet rebel against campus conformity has not gone unrecognized by a certain responsible committee which has named him to the national Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

Jim, a member of the Villanova Chemical Society, has served as Treasurer of his Junior and Senior Class, as well as Student Council representative in his sophomore and junior years.

O'Brien eyes a Ph.D. in physical chemistry as his most immediate post-graduate goal. "After completing my schooling," saieth the tall one, "I will probably turn to teaching. A career in industry is possible, but teaching is more probable."

Malvern Prep's gift to Villanova is generally regarded as a quiet kind of guy who lets his actions speak for him. But speaking for the Wildcats with whom he has played for the past three years, Jim asks only one thing:

"Although this year's basketball team has been up and down, the selection committee of the NIT has deemed us worthy of a bid to the tournament. Some of the student body may be disenchanted with our in and out play, but the team hopes that the student body will unite behind it and give good support in the national tournament."

Graduate Theatre Department To Present 'Don Juan In Hell'

The Graduate Theatre Department announced that its second play of the current season, Don Juan in Hell, will open Friday, March 28, in The Playbox in the Classroom Annex.

The play is actually a long dream sequence from act three of George Bernard Shaw's Man and Superman. In production of that play, the sequence is actually removed. About ten years ago Paul Gregory's Drama Quartet first took the sequence separately and produced it under the title of Don Juan in Hell.

Basically, the play tells the story of Donna Ana, the woman seduced by the legendary Don Juan in Mozart's Don Giovanni, and her trip through hell. Here she meets her lover Don Juan who yearns for heaven, and constantly argues with his host, the Devil.

The play structure itself is that of a Shavian innovation in theatre, the discussion play. Shaw has said of this type of play: "It will fulfill the true business of the playwright changing us all from bewildered spectators of monstrous confusion to men intelligently conscious of the world and its destines."

Don Juan in Hell will be directed by Mr. George Herman, Assistant Professor of Theatre. The production dates are March 22, 23, 24; and 29, 30, and 31. Tickets will go on sale March 17.

Barry Thornton Wins Initial 'Lynx' Award From Literary Society

William Gross, President of the Literary Society, has announced the foundation and presentation of the Society's literary award for outstanding contribution to the University's literary publication, the Lynx.

Winners of the award will receive personalized plaques, while their names will be placed on the Honor-roll plaque which is on permanent display in the Reserve Room of the University Library.

An award will be presented with each semester edition of the Lynx by the prominent guest speaker of the Literary Society.

Barry Thornton was presented the first award for a poem he wrote in 1962 which won national honors by being published in a national anthology of poetry.

Thornton, of Allentown, Pa., is a junior psychology major and holds membership in the Glee Club and Psychology Club.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Throughout his entire life Socrates searchingly sought an answer to the question: "can virtue be taught?" This is the theme of Plato's Meno and much of the early Platonic corpus.

Notwithstanding one of the assumptions upon which Catholic education is founded, namely its ethical value and the teachability of virtue, the most obtuse observer of the festivities at the Philadelphia Athletic Club on Saturday evening, February 23, could hardly fail to have been embarrassed at the misdemeanors of all too many seniors.

And Honesty

Virtue, at least the virtue of honesty, is a lesson that these seniors have learned at one time or another during the past sixteen years, but these students have not learned their lesson well.

And yet, the nation's graduate and professional schools and citizenry are expected one year hence to have confidence in the veritas (the word is taken from Villanova's escutcheon) of such men.

Saturday evening proved to be a singular discredit to the American ideals of integrity commemorated on the previous day which initiated the senior-week-end, Washington's Birthday.

Limited Commendation

Arthur Wolf is to be commended for his polite but firm announcement, his tactful and euphemistic language (in an admittedly delicate situation) while appealing to the honesty and integrity of the many offenders.

The result proved to be a useless attempt to recover many ill-gotten pewter dishes and brandy snifters.

James Shiels and his committee members were subsequently obliged to canvass the tables in order to repair the damages in a last ditch effort to help bring to fruition the conscientious plans which characterized an otherwise superb evening.

Socrates is correct in insisting that virtue can not be taught, even to college seniors.

We say nothing of another virtue, sobriety, a desideratum on the part of many college students. We say nothing of manners for they went out of style with the Victorian Age.

Newman's definition of a gentleman, equally Victorian and decidely old-fashioned, was notably absent in the conduct of countless noise makers who were altogether lacking in refinement, taste and propriety.

A Noble Entreaty

To the Editor:

I have been currently following one green clad dimpled freshman appearing with the Villanova swimming team for the past month. He first came to my attention on January 12, 1963 when he backstroked down the West Point pool.

I have become infatuated with this lad and it has come to my mind that a fan club might be in order here. It is on this point that I request your assistance.

Through extenuating circumstances I have not been able to ascertain the real name of this illustrious sportsman, only hearing those many fans cheer him as "Dimples Frey."

Herein lies my problem. Could you please send his real name so I may enlighten the fans.

Watching the papers with hopeful eyes I remain desperately yours,

Name Withheld

ED. Very Happy to oblige. Our hero is Robert H. Frey, a member of the Class of 1966. He is 5' 10" and wieghs 150 lbs., and swims the backstroke for the freshman team. He is a graduate of Fordam Prep, New York and is presently a student in the Commerce & Finance Division. Mr. Frey resides off-campus at 423 Conestoga Road in Wayne, Pa. His telephone number is listed as Mu-8-0949.

Junior Retreatants

To the Editor:

To those who took last week's retreat with the view of bringing themselves closer to God, they know what an excellent job Father Kelly performed.

And I am thankful that God gave me the grace and the opportunity to come to a deeper understanding of what He expects of me in my finite life on earth.

However, this letter is intended for those poor, ignorant, vain few who are suffering from the conformist delusion that they are better than God!

To this group of closed-minded individuals (who are students of higher education only in a nominal sense—never an intellectual sense) last week's retreat presented nothing more than two days of no classes and, above all, an opportunity of "victory"! Not victory in the ordinary sense of the word, but a debased, prejudiced, illogically founded "victory"—let us say the "conformist victory."

By this I mean the type that for the past one, two, three or more years have voluntarily exiled themselves from God! To them the annual retreat is something that really presents a challenge.

If they can get through it (if they attend at all) without Once going to confession, receiving and feeling the magnificance of the Blessed Sacrament, or walking up during a conference, they have really made it.

Now they have another year to forget about God and their obligations to Him as their Creator and they won't have to have their sinful state jeopordized by another retreat master that did not quite reach the comedy level of Red Skelton.

To illustrate what I mean let me cite a few remarks which I heard from Juniors taking last week's retreat. "I'm not going to Church again until Christ comes down off the cross!" This idiot can't even comprehend that his Creator had His blessed hands pierced by spikes for things such as he just remarked.

Moreover, he probably would bawl like a two-old if he cut his finger. Among some of the other remarks, on which I won't comment, were "I know I'm probably in the state of mortal sin, but I made myself a promise that I'm not going to confession until I'm twenty-one then I'm going to completely change my life!" (Of course this poor soul, supposedly intelligent, doesn't realize that he could be dead tomorrow!).

Finally there is the one we have all heard, "Oh! Birth control is all right. We have to regulate the population."

I wish these fools would wake up and realize that these "fun-with-the-opposite-sex", "Mass by necessity; but never the sacraments," "If I go to hell; I go to hell" attitudes probably have them on the turnpike to hell—Toll Free.

If this letter makes but one of my fellow Catholics get back to God and a realization of what He has, is, and is willing to do for them it will have achieved its purpose.

On The Retreat

Retreat period, to most of the student body, is generally a time for slumber periods interrupted by trips off campus after turning in an IBM card. But to the Juniors last week, the annual retreat finally began to take on real meaning

The retreat master did an excellent job in getting his message across and succeeded in keeping the vast majority of the students in attendance alert, something that is very difficult to do.

Retreats in the past have been either too boring or too light. But this retreat got across to many of the student body, no easy task in dealing with large numbers in the highly unsuitable (for a retreat) Field House.

The chaplain's office is aware that this particular retreat master is skilled in his vocation since this is the third time that he has appeared at Villanova.

If retreat masters of his calibre and ability continue to come to Villanova, the general spiritual welfare of the student body cannot help but be improved

Florida At Easter

by Ray Ritter

Gold Bug - Western Maryland College - Now that the new semester is well under way and the vows of getting off to a clean, organized, and studious start have once again been broken, students are looking ahead to the next vacation.

Spring vacation is the time when many students, after planning and saving, look forward to a real sun-type relaxing time in Florida.

This year at Daytona Beach, Florida, the "World's Most Famous Beach," there is an added inducement - a Spring Folk Festival with some of the top names in folk singing listed to entertain the expected crowd of 50,000 college students.

Peter, Paul, and Mary

Present plans indicate the appearance of the Brothers Four, Peter, Paul, and Mary, the Huntsmen, and the Folksters.

A group of outstanding athletes including basketball players Ed Beck and Bob Pettit, and at least ten well-known football players including Ray Berry and Don Shinnick will be with the students on beach and in the coffee houses.

There will also be a jazz combo of University professors. The charge for this entertainment will be a nominal fee of $1.

For Amateurs

In addition to the professional entertainment, there will be an opportunity for college students to pack up their own musical urges along with guitar, banjos, and other instruments, and display their talents at the hootenannies at the "Bandshell" near the beach.

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute - Troy, New York - To meet the growing demand for college graduates qualified for management of modern science, engineering, and research establishments, Renesselaer Polytechnic Institute will open a School of Management, effective this month, Curricula will be provided on both graduate and undergraduate levels.

The new school will consist of: 1) undergraduate courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Management, 2) provide instruction and departmental administration leading to a degree, 3) graduate study with advanced courses leading to the Master of Science, 4) management development programs for executives aimed at increasing their effectiveness, especially in the decision-making and forward planning areas, 5) conference seminars and management counsel for national and local business and industrial firms, 6) research supported by business and industry, government agencies, and educational foundations.

It is emphasized in this program the need for management education based upon mathmetics, and engineering courses.

Paul Hubanon, co-leader of the swinging Duquesne Workshop Band—winners of the big band division of the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival—is seen exhibiting some of the jazz artistry that earned him first prize for the best trumpet of the contest.

Maynard, Stan Compete At IJF

by John Cahalin

Jazz, that wild understandable noise no un-doped person can possibly understand, has blown up to immense proportions in the past few years.

Villanova has not been left out of this upsurge, as can readily be seen by the third annual Intercollegiate Jazz Festival.

The show has grown from a local diddle, boasting local talent, to a professional show featuring the upper crust of collegiate jazz in the East. This high society of collegiate jazz is almost undistinguishable from professional talent.

Stan or Maynard

The judges, as it is rumored, almost resorted to extreme physical violence in the decision of a winner. They certainly had a just cause. The main conflict was the awarding of the top prize to one of the two big bands: the Criterions of West Chester, and the Duquesne Workshop Band, the Festival's answer to Kenton and Ferguson respectively.

In the judging of these two bands one has to look even deeper than style for a true examination. It appears that the judges were swayed too much by the colorful showmanship of the Duquesne Band.

Granted, they were by far above the level of a college band, but the question is, were they superior to West Chester? Duquesne had a good hard sound. The Criterions also had a good hard sound—and something else a little hard to believe, a good soft sound.

Balance Makes Difference

Duquesne lacked the balance, not only of composition, but also the balanced sound—or dynamics—that the Criterions have mastered. In last year's Festival the Criterions, also under the capable leadership of Bob Curnow (who incidently has been signed by Kenton), were described as "nearly perfect." This year they made it.

Another important part of the big band is its core of soloists. Here again West Chester has an edge. Duquesne had two ultra-fine horn men in the persons of Paul Hubanon, and "another" Kennedy who blew french horn like it should be blown.

Ray De Fade, the sax soloist for Duquesne, was a technical wiz; however, jazz is the expression of ideas rather than a series of connected finger exercises.

The Criterions had a good, well-rounded solo section headed by unbelieveable Bob Curnow on bone, and "Joe Morello" Gallagher who received the award for best drummer. What the Criterions didn't have was a "Ray Charles" french horn player.

Potsdam Five Swings

Joe Roccisano brought to Villanova one of the finest quintets around—college, professional, or what you will. All five pieces blended into one well-coordinated sound that really swung. They did an especially fine job on "I'm Gonna Go Fishin' ", incorporating a tough combination of 6/8 and 4/4 time a la Brubeck . . . very well done.

That wailin' sax man (Joe Roccisano) should have copped the best Overall Award besides the award he received for best reed man, he was all over that sax. Joe even cuts a few of the established pros. Carl Sullivan on valve bone did an especially fine job or rounding out the front line.

Troubled Jazz Disciples

The Jazz Disciples came a long way, and had an even tougher road to travel when they arrived here. Unfortunately positioned last in the show, they had to perform for an audience tortured by heat, cold, and billows of smoke.

Obviously disciples of the Jazz Messengers, the Jazz Disciples just didn't have the goods even though they did have a modern sound. The lead trumpet went dry and was accompanied in his efforts by two mediocre sax players.

The Harlequins group could have sung "Sweet Adeline" in waltz tempo and still received the award—they were the only vocal group in the contest.

Michaels Trio, Tops

Saying that the Mike Michaels Trio was the best doesn't hold much water. That they were the most overlooked would be closer to the truth. Mike Michaels was ivory clear and his ideas were plentiful.

However, the outstanding musican of the group was Bob Pitcoff on bass. He did things on his ax that would give violinists trouble. The trio did a drawer rendition of "Senior Blues."

It says in the program that the Barbary Coast Band has appeared at the Elbow Beach Surf Club in Bermuda. This is a nice place for boys from Dartmouth. They might have placed in the preceeding festivals, but fell by the wayside amidst the stiff competition this year.

Job Well Done

While the judges were out drawing blood, the Walt Whitman High School Band, from South Huntington, Long Island, under the direction of Clem De Rosa, exhibited a fine brand of jazz on the high school level.

Although it was rumored that Tom Semmer and Ed Bride, coordinators of the show, had forgotten what a classroom looked like, they obviously remembered what a Jazz Festival is.

They did an exceptional job. Every phase was well run— the sound, stage, etc. However, it was a bit anti-climactic when Stan Kenton handed out the first place award ahead of schedule. Outside of this faux pas, the Festival was a tremendous success.

And I now propose this 'twilight' toast to Sod Rerling, hic, who made it all possible.

Fifty Miles To Nowhere

by Joe Deighan

When John F. Kennedy became president two years ago, he promised to get this country moving. Little did he know that he would be fulfilling his promise when he recently mentioned that Teddy Roosevelt required the marines to take a physical fitness test.

Kennedy was made aware of the test by Marine Commandant, Gen. David M. Shoup, who reported it to him as an historical curiosity.

Mr. Kennedy was interested in finding out how well our present-day marines could handle the test set down by President Roosevelt in 1908, so he suggested that Gen. Shoup order a group of gyrenes to go through the maneuver.

Public Insulted

This is when the mania set in. Several marines from various sections took the President up on his challenge, but then the craze-happy American citizens got into the act too. The public in general took the President's statement as an insult and off they went.

There was a run on canteens, compasses, and knapsacks in all the department stores, and telephone booth stuffing became a bore. Philadelphians who had complained about walking to work during the recently settled transit strike could now be seen hiking through the woods on Saturday mornings.

The President, by passing the remark about the marches achieved more success with his physical fitness program than he did with all his previously organized efforts. The original test of Teddy Roosevelt stipulated that the fifty mile hike must be completed in twenty hours.

One group of middle-aged rowdies admitted that they could not step off 50 miles in 20 hours but to compensate for this deficiency, they vowed not to eat any solid food during the course of their hike but added that they would have to stop as many places as they possibly could to consume their "liquid" lunches.

Kennedys Represented Well

President Kennedy was seriously considering taking the hike test himself but his back condition prevented the idea from getting any further than the consideration stage. The Kennedys however were not without representation.

Attorney General Robert Kennedy, first string end on the White House touch football team, reversed around Great Falls, Virginia, outdistanced four Justice Department aids to Camp David, Maryland. His score was 50 miles in 17 hours and 50 minutes, not bad for a white collar worker and father of seven.

Shoemakers were smiling, boy scouts couldn't call their equipment their own and gas station owners were crying in their fuel but the "drive-to-the-drugstore" American was walking for the first time in years.

Foot doctors raised their prices and are taking patients by appointment only, but no one has taken the warning. The proud American with the sore feet will return to driving his car very soon and rationality will have been restored but everyone will have had a good time while it lasted.

Marines Prove Themselves

With blisters and sweat as evidence, the marines, from the highest rank to the lowest have proven themselves to be physically fit. Brig. Gen. Rathvon McClure Thompkins, walking stick and all, set out amongst a throng of laughter to chalk up his fifty miles and stopped the laughter very quickly when he finished ninth in a field of 34. One marine lieutenant covered the distance in record time, 9 hours and 50 minutes.

The most publicized hiker was one who did not even attempt a hike. President Kennedy's chunky press secretary, Pierre Salinger, in a moment of extreme optimism, said that he was going to walk the fifty miles.

Everyone was surprised and admired the rotund Salinger's courage. Mr. Salinger, however, after coming to his senses with a look in the mirror called off plans for a hike of his own and said, "I may be plucky, but I am not stupid."

Renowned Vienna Choir To Visit Campus In Sole Area Performance

The Vienna Choir Boys will perform in the Villanova Field House in their only performance in Philadelphia on Tuesday, March 12. The performance is at 8:30 PM and the admission price is one dollar per ticket.

It might seem incongruous, but had it not been for the publicity attributed to the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, Villanova might not have had the opportunity to hear this exceptional choir. Their long history is even more amazing.

Two members of the Vienna Choir Boys are seen here rehearsing a portion of their program to be presented at Villanova in their only Philadelphia area performance.

One of the oldest and most appealing musical organizations in the world, the Vienna Choir Boys dates back nearly 465 years to July 7, 1498, when the Holy Roman Emperor Maximillian I, a great patron of the arts, ordered the organization of a boys' choir to participate in the performances of religious music in the Court Chapel in Vienna.

A dozen boys were engaged and the choirmaster, in addition to directing their musical activities, was granted funds for their board and education. When the boys' voices changed they received "mustering-out-pay" plus their fare home.

If they decided upon a course to study, they were sent to an ecclesiastical state boarding school — generally a Jesuit college — on a three-year scholarship from the Emperor which covered tuition and living expenses.

After the death of Maximillian, other Hapsburgs subsidized the Choir and its renown spread throughout Europe. Joseph Haydn and Franz Schubert were members during their childhood.

With the fall of the Hapsburg monarchy at the end of World War I, the Choir was supported by private funds and by the income derived from its tours which began in 1926. In addition to performing sacred music, the Choir turned to folk songs and costumed operettas.

As little ladies in hoop skirts and white-wigged gentlemen in brocaded breeches the boys were unforgettably delightful in Mozart's, "Bastien & Bastienne", "The Apothecary", and other works by Mozart, Haydn, Strauss and Offenbach.

In 1932, Impresario S. Hurok brought the Choir to the United States where they immediately charmed audiences and critics. For six seasons they toured North America performing their unique programs to packed houses.

The outbreak of war curtailed their activities when the late Father Josef Schmitt, their rector, was imprisoned by the Nazis because he refused to permit the organization to become a propaganda medium.

With the end of hostilities, he reorganized the group and by 1948 their captivating entertainment was again featured in concert halls throughout the nation and the world.

Featured in "Cinerama", and on television with Perry Como, and on other shows, the Vienna Choir Boys are currently making their nineteenth tour of the U.S. under Mr. Hurok's aegis; that is to say, this is the nineteenth group to visit here, since boys' voices have a way of changing.

Band Director Named

Mr. Joseph Colantonio has taken on his new duties here as director of the Villanova University Band. Mr. Colantonio, a native Philadelphian, is widely known in musical circles as a band leader of rare talent and versatility.

Presently director of the concert and marching bands at the University of Pennsylvania and at La Salle College, his experience working with college groups will be a definite advantage to the musical program here at Villanova.

Mr. Colantonio received his degree in music from West Chester state college and has studied under such notables as Dr. Lucien Cailliet, the renowned arranger, composer, and conductor, and under Professor L. Polizzi, a famed band director and teacher in Milan.

His experience with bands has been on all levels of music education. He has instructed and taught in many of the Catholic schools in the Philadelphia Archdiocese and is presently band director at Holy Spirit High in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

His marching and concert bands have consistently taken top honors in marching, concert, and stage band productions both nationally and locally. While acting as director at Dougherty High School, his band twice won the All-Catholic competition in Philadelphia.

Mr. Colantonio is a member of the National Music Educators' Association and the Pennsylvania Music Educators' association. He is also a member of the National College Band Directors, the National Catholic College Band Directors' Association, and a member of the Music Educators' National Advisory Board.

Mr. Colantonio was quite impressed with the potential which he has found in the Villanova Band. His aim, working closely with the administration and the band members themselves, is to develop this musical organization of ours into the leading Catholic Band in the area.

Mr. Joseph Colantonio

Mr. Herbert Fiss, director of the Villanova Band since the fall of 1956, was forced to resign from this capacity because of pressing and conflicting schedules with other musical groups. The great strides which the group has taken in these past few years is due, in no small way to the untiring and devoted efforts of Mr. Fiss. However, Mr. Fiss will remain here at Villanova as director of the Villanova Singers.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

EXCELLENT CAREER DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITIES for Engineers and Physical Scientists

The Naval Ordnance Laboratory (NOL) located in a desirable suburb of Washington, D. C.—now one of the nation's leading research areas—offers seniors in Engineering and the Physical Sciences unique career development opportunities in: Missile Guidance and Weapons Systems . . . Space and Re-Entry Components, Underseas Weapons, Fire Control, Sonar, Fuzes, and Influence Detectors . . . Meteorological Rockets, Aerodynamics, Hydrodynamics, Explosives, Propellants, Acoustics and Pressure Fields . . . Infrared, Nuclear Physics, Solid State and Mathematics.

'Kataki' In Playbox Great Success; Action And Ideas Share Spotlight

by George Welch

For the three weekends between February 22 and March 10, the Villanova Graduate Theatre Department has and will be presenting Simon Wincelberg's play Kataki (the Enemy).

Both the play and its presentation by the Villanova players are well worth an evening spent in the amicable and intimate atmosphere of the new theatre in the Annex, the Playbox.

Upon entering the Playbox one has the feeling that he is stepping directly onto the stage, that he will become a participant in the play, and no longer be separated from its action and meaning by the two dimensions of the proscenium, or the unscalable heights of the elevated stage.

Theatre Walls

The walls of the theatre disappear, and the audience becomes the container of the drama. Quite literally, one has the feeling that, in the Playbox, the walls have ears.

The theatre, however, is only one facet of the experience, and it is the play and players who give it life, interesting and satisfying life.

Kataki has provided the words, and the Villanova players have provided the action, each in a degree of excellence that should command not only the attention of the students at Villanova, but the broader attention of the public outside of the University.

Limited Success

Kataki was previously presented as a television program and a professional stage play. In each case it enjoyed a limited success.

In this present production at Villanova it arrives at a summit of achievement in entertainment and expression, chiefly through its means of presentation. The play itself asks many questions, some which are fundamental to life in our age.

What is a nation? What is a culture? These are questions that have assumed a singular importance in the life of every person living in the Twentieth Century, but they are not intrinsic to only one age, they are intrinsic to the history of Man's attempts at civilization.

Intrinsic Questions

Just how important is your national culture to your life as a human being, as an individual? Does it set you apart from other men, and them from you? Is there hope that mankind can reach an understanding between individuals?

Can you answer these questions? It would seem, with a moment's reflection on history, that such concepts as national pride and cultural heritage are clear to the individual only during times when his way of life is threatened by change; when there is conflict; when two or more ways of life produce war.

The understanding that comes in this moment is not, however, that of a collective consciousness. It is solely in the realm of the individual mind. Each man enters into single combat trying to bring together his knowledge of his way of life, and his intuition of human nature.

Fickle Fate

It is through this understanding that Simon Wincelberg has conceived of the structure of his play. Two soldiers, one a Japanese, and the other an American aviator are the "fickle finger of fate" marooned on a desert island.

There is no common language by which they can communicate with each other.

The major portion of the play's dialogue is delivered by the American, Alvin (played by David Rabe and Jerry Paonessa on alternate evenings). The part of Kimure (played by Richard Harshberger and John Gilhooley) however, is no less important, nor no less eloquent for its silence.

Ample Acting

Only a small portion of any experience can be conveyed by speech. The larger portion is always there, submerged in a quiet darkness of expression and movement.

The beauty of the realm in which this fuller understanding exists is amply portrayed by the actors. They move about the sandy floor, under the close scrutiny of the audience, as if performing a dance.

The lighting dramatically highlights the intensity of a moment, and as the play moves deeper and deeper into its time span of eleven days, all else is forgotten except that island, and the two men isolated within its boundaries.

Audience's Imagination

The range of the play's expression and meaning are limited only by the imagination of the audience. The imagination used in producing the drama (by director Richard Duprey) although impressive, can only carry the viewer to a threshold from which he must interpolate and extend the ideas.

The drama, itself, achieves an integrity of three-dimensional expression that encompasses the acting, the timing of special effects, lighting, and setting that rivals anything done before at Villanova, and that will present a challenge for future productions to equal.

If there were faults in this production, they will soon be forgotten under the sweeping wave of the overall impression. If the lighting does not seem realistic, then realism will seem ugly when the memory of a loved-one and the agony of separation are projected in the intensity of a blue spot, and the dramatic shadows on Kimura's face.

War Theme Dominated Campus Life As Seen In 1943 'Villanovan'

by John Roberts

Twenty years ago — F. D. R. was in his fourth term as president, America was at war in Europe, Villanova was celebrating its centennial anniversary, and most of us were in diapers. . .

The war feeling was prevalent and pervaded the country. It displayed itself in various ways around the Villanova campus.

War Dominant

In the third week of Feb. 1943, 115 Villanova students were drafted for active duty. The Bell Telephone Co. had an advertisement in the Villanovan urging students to make only the most necessary calls and to make those calls as brief as possible.

Another war-inspired novelty on campus was the vigorous physical fitness program for the students, which was in anticipation of the imminent possibility of being drafted into the service.

The entire infield of the stadium track had been converted into an obstacle course for the student conditioning program.

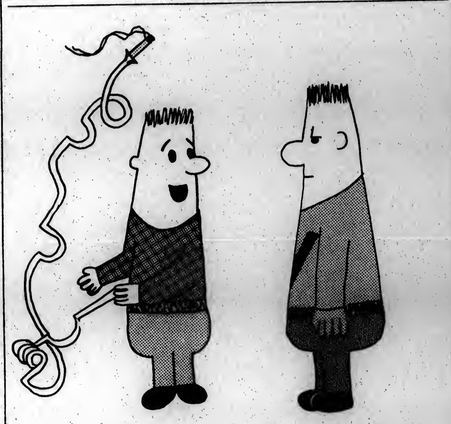
Navy Beginning

The Naval V-12 college training program, the forerunner of the present NROTC, was preparing for operation and the student council was in charge of an intense campaign for the sale of war bonds and stamps on campus.

On the boarding scene, the system of point rationing cut by about 90% the school's supply of restricted foods and the windows of the cafeteria had been painted black because of the mandatory dawn to dusk blackout.

Activities Continue

Despite the inconveniences of the war, college activities continued. Villanova graduated 73 in its first winter commencement exercises on January 31, 1943. Preparations were being made for the centennial celebration in May and the debating team planned an ambitious schedule including such teams as Haverford, Manhattan and Fordham.



Rosemont continued to be the favorite hunting grounds of lonely Villanova students seeking female companionship.

Still Sports

In the sportlight, the intramural department conducted an amateur boxing tournament on campus which was won by Alumni Hall. The wildcat basketball team, under the tutelage of the now departed Al Severance, flashed to a 19 and 2 season, losing only to Seton Hall and the Coast Guards of Manhattan Beach.

The track team placed first in the N.Y.A.C. mile relay, posting the remarkable time of 3:23.1, which is barely 2 seconds slower than our relay team this year. Our football team, however, had a rather poor season, winning only 4 of 8 games.

Those days of yesteryear were hard but had their advantages; a ride on the Red Arrow Transit Lines was the same price as a Coke—5c. (oh for the good old days!)

"It filters 99 per cent of the nicotine."

SNEAK PREVIEW

AN INVITATION

for you to see, in a conceptually different kind of cycle showroom, a completely NEW LINE of MOTORCYCLES never before offered in this area.

Products of Central Europe—where weather conditions and tough roads demand only the HIGHEST QUALITY to insure the long life of any vehicle—these motorcycles, for a good many years, have combined RUGGED DURABILITY, UNSURPASSED STAMINA, and the SUPERB APPEARANCE that is the product of an evolutionary process of advanced design.

Only because of our direct contact with the importers of these machines are we able to offer them at unbelievably LOW PRICES—SO LOW that you may realize a savings in excess of 20% over currently available machines in their respective displacement classes.

In cold cash, this means $175.00 of the normal purchase price of other cycles stays in your pocket . . . and, on an investment of only $600.00 or so, this is quite a savings! Incidentally, this $600.00 figure is not the average cost on what we've got: our prices start at a humble $165.00.

The models available are: a 350cc OHV single, a 250cc single, a 175cc with Earls front suspension, two 125cc machines, a 50cc Mo-ped and a 175cc scooter.

IN ADDITION to anyone taking delivery on any of the above machines before the date of March 31, 1963, we will not only assume the normal FREIGHT and SET-UP CHARGES, but will also give you a discount of 5% for your helping us to get an early start.

If you wish to see these motorcycles and perhaps take advantage of our pre-season offer, write for time and place to:

Of Days Gone By

by Liz Kovach

Viewing the University of Villanova of today, one cannot help wonder how it was when it was first established.

Upon the death of Mr. John Rudolph, the estate known as Belle-Air was purchased by the Brothers of the Order of Hermits of St. Augustine for $18,000.

In 1843, the first classes of the newly organized college were opened. Among the subjects taught were Greek, Latin, French, English and mathematics. Classes were held in what was formerly the spacious kitchen of the mansion-house and the students were lodged in the attics.

Typical Day?

There were no complaints on the part of the students and as a matter of fact they were all very happy at Villanova.

It mattered little as to where the classes were held because for them education did not need specific surroundings.

A typical day for the students was the following:

The boys arose at 5:30 AM, they had prayers at 6 and Mass at 6:30. There was breakfast at 7:30 and recreation until 8:30, after which classes were conducted until noon. At noon there was examen, Angelus, and dinner followed by recreation until 2 PM. Studies were resumed until 4:30 with recreation until 5 PM. From 5 to 6 was study hour and spiritual readings were held from 6 to 6:30. Angelus and supper at 6:30 and recreation until 7. From 7 to 8 was another study hour with prayers til 8:30 and everyone in bed by 9 PM.

From the above it is quite evident that the fathers believed in a good balance of prayer, study and recreation for their students.

No Snuff

Among the rules, silence was demanded in the refectory; dormitory; study hall; and wash room. Also the following privations were enforced:

No liquor
No tobacco
No snuff
No bad conduct
No absence
No idleness
No negligence
No injustice

One cannot help but feel that with the eyes of today's youth such regulations would be considered unbearable. But they could not have been too bad since generation upon generation sent their sons to be educated at Villanova.

Countless changes have taken place in educations, on the campus itself and in the rules of Villanova. And yet, a sigh escapes for the passing of that attitude toward education; for the days when what counted was what you learned and not the modernness of the buildings.

HAIL TO THE DEAN!

Today let us examine that much maligned, widely misunderstood, grossly overworked, wholly dedicated campus figure—the dean.

The dean (from the Latin Deanere—to expel) is not, as many think, primarily a disciplinary officer. He is a counselor and guide, a haven and refuge for the troubled student. The dean (from the Greek Deanos—to skewer) is characterized chiefly by sympathy, wisdom, patience, forbearance, and a fondness for homely pleasures like community singing, farina, spelldowns, and Marlboro Cigarettes. The dean (from the German Deangemacht—to poop a party) is fond of Marlboros for the same reason that all men of good will are fond of Marlboros—because Marlboro is an honest cigarette. Those good Marlboro tobaccos are honestly good, honestly aged to the peak of perfection, honestly blended for the best of all possible flavors. Marlboro honestly comes in two different containers—a soft pack which is honestly soft and a Flip-Top box which honestly flips. You too will flip when next you try an honest Marlboro, which, one honestly hopes, will be soon.

There is not a dry eye in Yutah

But I digress. We were learning how a dean helps poor, troubled undergraduates. To illustrate, let us take a typical case from the files of Dean S. . . . . of the University of Y. . . . . (Oh, why be so mysterious? The dean's name is Sigafoos and the University is Yutah.)

Wise, kindly Dean Sigafoos was visited one day by a freshman named Walter Aguincourt who came to ask permission to marry one Emma Blenheim, his dormitory laundress. To the dean the marriage seemed ill-advised, for Walter was only 18 years old and Emma was 91. Walter agreed with the dean, but said he felt obligated to go through with it because Emma had invested her life savings in a transparent rainhood to protect her from the mist at Niagara Falls, where they planned to spend their honeymoon. If Walter called off the wedding, what use would the poor woman possibly have for a rainhood in Yutah? The wise, kindly dean pondered briefly and came up with a brilliant answer: let Walter punch holes in the back of Emma's steam iron. With steam billowing back at the old lady, she would find a rainhood very useful—possibly even essential.

Whimpering with gratitude, Walter kissed the dean's Phi Beta Kappa key and hastened away to follow his advice—and the results, I am pleased to report, were madly successful!

Today Emma is a happy woman—singing lustily, wearing her rainhood, eating soft-center chocolates, and ironing clothes—twice as happy, to be candid, than if she had married Walter . . . And what of Walter? He is happy too. Freed from his unwanted liaison with Emma, he married a girl much nearer his own age—Agnes Yucca, 72. Walter is now the proud father—*step*father, to be perfectly accurate—of three fine, healthy boys from Agnes's first marriage—Everett, 38; Wilhelm, 43; and Irving, 55—and when Walter puts the boys on a lead and takes them for a stroll in the park on Sunday afternoon, you may be sure there is not a dry eye in Yutah.

And Dean Sigafoos? He too is happy—happy to spend long, tiring hours in his little office, giving counsel without stint and without complaint, doing his bit to set the young, uncertain feet of his charges on the path to a brighter tomorrow.

McErlane Motions Semester Schedule To Be Re-Aligned

A motion recently submitted the Student Council by Jim McErlane seeks a re-alignment of the semester schedules. Under this proposal the first semester would commence immediately after Labor Day and end just previous to Christmas.

The re-vamped term would then include final examinations, as well as the regular Thanksgiving holiday. This will allow the student a three to four week, combined Christmas vacation-semester break.

The second semester will begin about the eighteenth of January and terminate by the middle of May. Between these tentative times there will be an opportunity for a week-long spring vacation in addition to the existing Easter break.

McErlane's Logic

The logic behind McErlane's proposal is a streamlining of the long first semester. As it now stands, the fall term — extending from mid-September to mid-January — includes a three week Christmas vacation followed in rapid succession by just one full week of classes and then final exams.

The more compact first semester would then allow a re-scheduling of the spring term, which could be stretched to provide student vacations in more pleasant weather.

McErlane, Executive Vice President for Educational Affairs, said that the proposal must first be submitted to the Student-Faculty Committee headed by Father Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, and later proposed to Father John A. Klektoka, OSA, President of Villanova, for final approval.

Klein Gives Talk

Dr. Walter H. Klein, Chairman of the Industrial Administration Department, will deliver a lecture to the Southeastern Chapter of the Pennsylvania League of Nursing on March 12.

The talk, entitled "Communication Problems and Patient Care," will be given at Smith, Kline, and French laboratories in Philadelphia.

Shamokinaki Dance Features Villanovans' Big Band Sound

Continuous entertainment will be the keynote of this year's Shamokinaki Dance, to be held in the Field House on Friday night, March 29.

The Villanovans will provide dance music, while the Revelers, a private band detached from the University but composed of two Villanova University Graduates and three Villanova seniors, will play during intermissions.

Begun two years ago in October, the Revelers are characterized by their versatility of rhythm and mood. States member Mark Galgano, 'We can recreate all types of music from the sounds of Duane Eddy and Chuck Berry to 'Moonglow' from 'Picnic' ".

Tom Donohue '61, now a mortician, and Bill Donohue '63, coleaders of the group, play guitar. Vince Donohue '62, now teaching at Bonner, plays bass, Pete Culhane '63 drums, and Mark Galgano '63 sax.

Dance Proceeds

The Revelers' experience ranges from mixers, proms, dances, fraternity parties, to wedding receptions. They have played at Penn, St. Joe's, Holy Family, and Holy Child, besides performing here at Villanova.

Proceeds from the dance, are expected to bring in $6,000, which will go to the Augustinian Missions in Japan. In accordance with this purpose, a Japanese tea set will be awarded as a door prize.

Committees

General Chairman for the dance, will be Jay Delaney, last year's Ticket Committee Chairman, and moderator for the affair is Rev. Robert M. Burke, OSA.

Also returning from last year's dance committees are, Publicity Committee Chairman, Ron Fenstermaker, and Ticket Committee Chairman, Roger Lazar, who was Coat Committee Chairman.

Program Committee Chairman this year is Bruce Howson, while finances are the responsibility of John Roach. Paul Wachtler has charge of decorations, and refreshments will be handled by Gene McTague.

Tickets, which will go on sale March 11, at $2.00 per couple until March 26, after March 26, the price will be $2.50. This is the only social function at Villanova during lent, and its low price has made it a traditionally popular affair.

Pi Theta Chi Vice-President Margie Stupak initiates freshman Maureen Carr into the sorority. In background, Jackie Greco appears with lighted candle, symbol of membership, during the ceremony.

Candlelight Ceremony Marks Induction Of Sorority Girls

The initiation period of the pledges to Pi Theta Chi Sorority was terminated on Wednesday evening, February 20.

A candlelight ceremony marked the induction of thirty pledges into the sorority. (Pi Theta Chi is the University's only sorority.)

This year's initiation committee hopes to have set a precedent by introducing a candlelight ceremony into its induction services.

Hell Night

The pledging period extended from February 14 to February 20. Hell-Nite festivities took place on February 20 prior to the induction ceremony. Skits and songs were presented by the pledges for the entertainment and edification of the sorority members.

Marjorie Stupak, vice-president of the sorority, led the ceremony in the absence of Mary O'Leary, president. The vice-president began the proceedings by lighting her candle, and then the officers' candles were lit in succession.

When all the officers' candles were lit, the vice-president called the name of each pledge, and the pledges proceeded to light their candles. As her candle was lit each pledge was presented with her pledge-paddle.

Judge John Murtagh To Speak At Law Forum On Law And Morality

The final Villanova Law Forum will present the Honorable John M. Murtagh, Chief Justice, Court of Special Sessions of the City of New York, speaking on "Public Law and Private Morals."

Previously this year, the Forum has brought to the campus the noted New York Attorney, James B. Donovan, a Bemis Professor of International Law at Harvard, Louis B. Sohn, and the Assistant Attorney General, Antitrust Division United States Department of Justice, Lee Loevinger.

The Forum programs are arranged by Professor Donald W. Dowd, and the presentation is made possible by the generosity of Thomas J. Reilly, Esquire, of the Delaware County Bar.

The purpose of these sessions has been to invite students to view the law in its broadest public dimensions.

This last meeting will take place on Thursday, March 14, at 8:30 p.m. in Garey Hall.

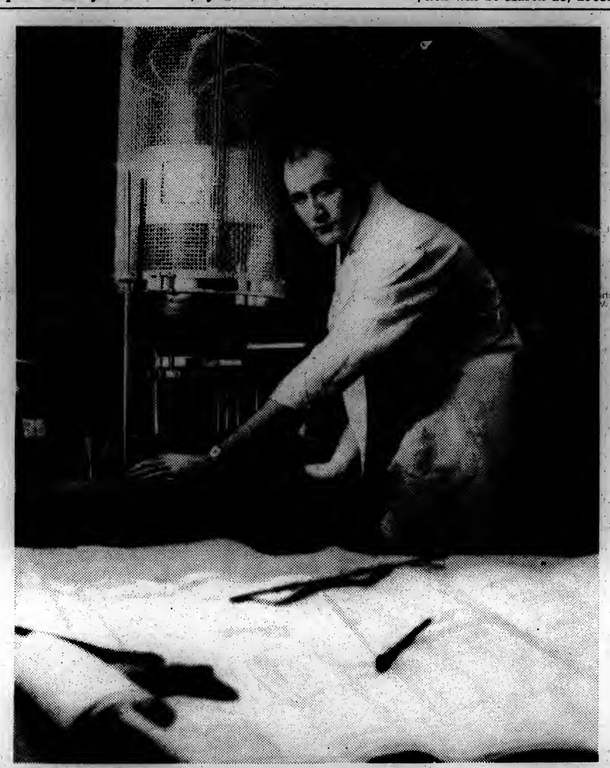
Contribution Deadline Nears For The Next Issue Of 'Lynx'

Frank Murphy, Chairman and Editor-in-Chief of Villanova's Literary publication, the Lynx, has announced that the tentative deadline for articles is March 22.

The publication welcomes material in the form of poetry, short stories, essays and one act plays. Manuscripts may be submitted to any staff member or temporarily at Rm. 311 Sullivan Hall.

Anyone wishing to join the staff is also asked to report there. Also announced was the appointment of two sophomores, members of the general staff, to the editorial board.

John Ryan of Bayshore, Long Island, N.Y. will assume the position of copy editor. He is a member of the Blue Key Society and is active in many class functions.



John Sargent of Tulsa, Oklahoma; will fill the newly created position of exchange editor. He is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity and the Rugby Club.

Also appointed was junior Jim Dwyer to the position of publicity director.

Musical Competition

Lycoming College, Williamsport, Pennsylvania, will sponsor an Inter-College Musical Competition on May 9 and 10, 1963. Any student jazz, rock and roll, or vocal group may apply. There will be representatives present from Capitol Records, Inc., Penn World Attractions, and others to be announced later.

Applications and information may be obtained from your director of student activities or by writing to IMC, Box 35, Lycoming College, Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Deadline for application will be March 15, 1963.

"What responsibilities will you start with at W. E.?"

Exciting ones. With plenty of room for your professional development. Western Electric's business depends on new ideas. And new engineers take responsible, immediate part in projects that implement the entire art of telephony — including electronic telephone offices, computer-controlled production techniques and microwave transmission. On many of these exciting advances in communications, Western's engineers work closely with engineers from our research team-mate, Bell Telephone Laboratories. For Western Electric to maintain the Bell System's ultra-high quality standards, extraordinary manufacturing, process and testing techniques are required. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors.

For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric career opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write College Relations Coordinator, Western Electric Company, Room 6306, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team comes to visit your campus this year—or during your senior year.

Conservatives To Present Ashbrook Speaking On His Political Outlook

The Villanova Conservative Club, which has brought many prominent speakers to the campus in the past, will present a lecture by Congressman John Ashbrook of Ohio on Friday, March 8.

Mr. Ashbrook will speak to the club and the student body in general on "Why I am a Conservative" in room 110 of the Commerce and Finance building at 3:30 p.m. The faculty is invited to attend.

Mr. Ashbrook has been an outstanding leader in Republican activities for the past ten years including Young Republican National Chairman in 1957.

Among the prominent speakers which the club has brought to the University in the past are Dr. Anthony Buscaren, who spoke on "Soviet Foreign Policy" and Dr. Daniel L. Revis, who presented a lecture on the "Cuban Situation."

Outstanding personages invited to future club meetings are Dr. William Peterson, a professor at New York University and a writer for the Wall Street Journal, who will speak on "The Wonderful World of Modern Economics" and Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina who will present his views on "The Muzzling of the Military".

Each semester the club tries to procure paper back books on conservatism and related subjects for the members of the club. The past semester the members were each given copies of "Economics in Our Lesson" by Henry Hazlitt and the "Facts on Communism," volumes one and two, by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Rep. John Ashbrook

The Conservative Club has planned many and various activities for its members in the future. Among the activities anticipated is a seminar to be presented at Princeton University this April and a possible trip to a forum at Hunter College in New York, presented by the National Review.

Club Pools

The club will also sponsor car pools to other colleges in the area where prominent speakers are being presented.

Last Wednesday, February 27, the club presented a panel discussion on the "Problems of the American Economy."

The three panelists included George Watts of the University of Pennsylvania and the president of its conservative club, Lora McMeekan of Bryn Mawr College and Anthony Cazzaro of Villanova who is the editor-in-chief of the Conservative Club's publication Libertas. Following the panel discussion there was a period of questioning from the audience.

Voice Party Cops Frosh Vote With Winners Becker And Hill

by Mike Magro

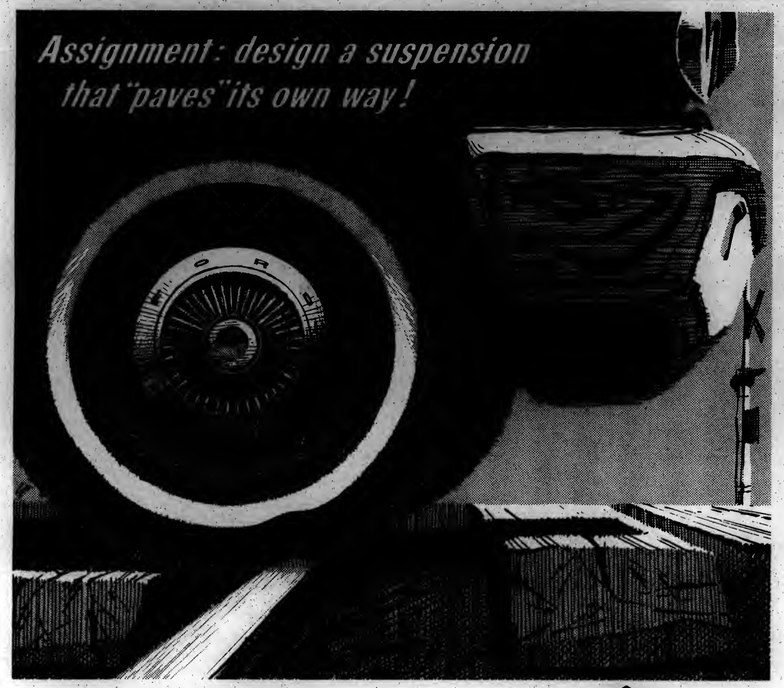
Al Becker and Mike Gill were elected to the Student Council as representatives of the Class of 1966 in elections held on February 20.

Both winners, members of the Voice Party, finished well ahead of all but their closest opposition in the election that turned out to be a two way race between the winners and the candidates of the Rite Party.

Becker, a resident of Tolentine Hall, finished with 197 votes in his successful bid to represent the Resident Freshmen. Second was Bob Dean who tallied 124 votes. Greg Galland polled 43 votes and Tom Glennon had 25.

Glennon was, however, disqualified for failure to submit his expense accounting to the Student Council Election Committee before the Tuesday deadline.

In the running for the Day-Student Representative slot Mike Gill of Wayne, Pa. won in a virtual landslide over Trinkett Grubb. Gill tallied 183 votes to the Nurse's 94.



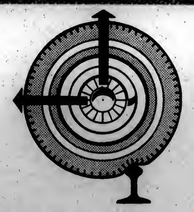
There were five candidates for the position. Bill Thomas received 58 votes, John Stevens polled 38, while Robert Jansen got 28.

The winning party based their campaign on what Gill termed, "a policy that led us away from making impossible promises."

A total of 401 members of the class votes in the election. This is 32% of the 1252 eligible voters in the class.

Gill's father, Marty, who graduated from Villanova in the early 1930's,was at one time President of his class and was active in Alumni activities.

Sophomore elections, orginally scheduled for the same day were cancelled when only one candidate was nominated to fill the vacated Day-Student Representative position. That nominee, John Roberts, thereby won by acclamation.



Result: "Cushion Recoil" provides a dramatically smoother ride in 1963 Ford-built cars

The challenge given Ford engineers was to design suspensions that would permit wheels virtually to roll with the punches—not only in a vertical plane but fore-and-aft as well. Conventional suspension systems provide only a partial solution to road shocks by limiting wheel recoil to an up-and-down motion.

The solution? Exclusive Cushion Recoil suspension design in all Ford-built cars for '63! Cushion Recoil, with cushioning action in a fore-and-aft plane as well as vertical, smothers the jars and jolts of rough roads, adds to your comfort, safety, and driving pleasure. Even the thump of freeway tar strips is reduced, and on deeply rutted roads you experience better control of the car. Furthermore, your Ford-built car is spared the wear and tear of road-induced vibration.

Another assignment completed—one more example of engineering excellence at Ford and new ideas for the American Road.

SOAKS UP ROAD SHOCK. Exclusive Ford Motor Company Cushion Recoil action moves back as well as up for a smoother ride.

Wildcat Merman Capture Lead In Athletic Club Swim Meet

by Brian Banmiller

The Villanova University swimming team captured another first on Sunday by taking the lead in the first half of the Senior Middle Atlantic Diving and Swimming Championships of 1963, held at the Philadelphia Athletic Club.

In gaining first place in the men's division, the Varsity 400 yard freestyle relay team set a new district and resident record of 3:27.2, breaking the old record of 3:31. The foursome, composed of Paul Winn, Rick Girdler, Jack Geoghegan, and Captain Dick McDonough, have excellent chances of becoming All-Americans.

Butterfly

Captain McDonough also placed first in the 100 yard butterfly with a time of 54.9. Jack Geoghegan won the backstroke in 1:00.5. Freshman Ray Donnelly took the junior butterfly with a time of 57.2.

In attaining the lead the Villanova Varsity collected 75 points. Abington Swim Club came in second with 58 points.

The second half of the Middle Atlantic Championships will be held this Sunday at the Philadelphia Athletic Club.

On Friday evening the Wildcat mermen travelled to Trenton for the "Trenton Times" AAU Open Swimming Meet. Villanova, the defending champions, placed second, being edged out by Peekskill Military Academy.

Philadelphian Carl Robie broke Dick McDonough's 100 yard butterfly record of 56.4 with a swim of 55.9. Rick Girdler took first place in the 100 yard freestyle, and Paul Winn finished third in the same event.

Dunk Rutgers

The Villanova Aquamen paid a visit to Rutgers last Wednesday, and walked away with 59-36 victory, earning eight first places out of a possible eleven.

Record-breaker Dick McDonough set another one, this time in the 200 yard butterfly. McDonough broke the old standard of 2:05.3 with a speedy clocking of 2:04.9.

Sophomore sensation Rick Girdler captured a double win, taking both the 200 yard and the 100 yard freestyle. Girdler also swam in the 400 yard freestyle relay which took first.

Intramural Council Announces Eligibles For Playoff Series

by Ray Heitzman

The following teams have been listed as eligible for the Intramural Basketball playoffs by the Intramural Athletic Council.

Of these teams fourteen will be in the playoffs.

In the 10:30 league, the Fussycats and the Collegians are eligible. The Chinese Bandits and the P. J.'s are the teams eligible in the 2:30 league. The Whiskey A, the Cagers, and the Loose-Hangers have been picked as the eligible teams in the 4:30 league.

In the 6:30 evening league, four teams are eligible: the J. K.'s, the Raider's, the Swishers, and the Ardvarkes II. In the later 7:30 league, the Celtics, the Jesters, the Gunners, and the M. L. C. A. A. are eligible.

In the Field House League, the eligible teams are the Bulldogs, the Magnificent Seven, the Rebel R's, and the Frosh Five.

Umpires Needed

Umpires will be needed for the upcoming Intramural Softball League. Those who are interested can contact Phil Gormley at 128 Sullivan. Entry blanks are now available for teams that wish to enter the Softball League this Spring.

Seton Hall To Remain Tough Despite Injury To Werkman

by Richard Pazdan

Want the definition of a team in trouble? Try Seton Hall.

Having one of their finest seasons in years the Pirates were suddenly stunned last week when Nick Werkman, the nation's leading scorer, injured his instep against Providence.

It now develops that Werkman's instep should heal, but he may be developing arthritis in the injured leg. In this event, even if he should come back the return would be a painful one.

Coach Richie Regan is optimistic concerning his star pupil. Regan said that Nick should be ready to play against Georgetown when the Hall takes on the Hoyas in Washington the Sunday.

However, if arthritis did develop, "the rest would be up to Nick." previous to his injury the 6-3 junior was averaging 31 plus points a game to lead the nation.

If you're looking for an easy win forget it. Nick the "Quick's" replacement, 6'5" soph, Joe Barlik tossed in 14 points against the NIT-bound St. Francis (N. Y.) five in a come-from-behind victory last week. Want a few more reasons why even a Werkmanless Seton Hall wouldn't be easy?

Try 6'5" Richie Dec and 6'2" Randy Chave. Dec led Seton Hall against St. Francis by tossing in a game high of 20 points and Chave was second with 17.

If that's not enough how about 6'7" soph center Harrison Slaton and Golden Sunkett? If this all fails there's always Bob Plocinik (oh yes, he's 6'9").

All in all this is basically a good solid ball club. They've won 15 out of 20 and only three men on the squad are seniors. They're big and fast and have one of the finest scoring machines in the East. Werkman or no it should be a real fun night.

Mahan Names Alumnus As New Line Coach For Football Squad

Villanova Athletic Director announced last Thursday the appointment of Joseph Faragalli as line coach under head football coach Alex Bell.

Faragalli, captain of Villanova's 1953 team, has been head coach at St. Thomas More High School for the past four years after serving as assistant there for one season in 1957.

The three-letter performer entered the service for two years upon graduation and then assumed his duties at St. Thomas More in 1957. He has taught at Penn Treaty Junior High School for five years.

Faragalli, 33 years old, is married and has three children, Sylvia, 7, Michael, 4, and Gary, 2.

All Villanova Staff

Bell was most happy to have Faragalli join his all Villanova staff that includes backfield coach Joe Rogers and freshman mentor Ed Michaels. Bell explained, "Faragalli is a top coach and has had great success with developing top college players. We are most fortunate in having him join the staff."

Sinclair Fires 275 As Pistol Team Wins; Next Meet March 16

The Villanova pistol team made a clean sweep of the Intercollegiate pistol sectionals, held at Bucknell University on February, twenty-third.

All-American George Sinclair sparked the team to victory over seven top competing teams with a 275, followed by Mike Benson with a 261, team captain Joe Hack with a 259, and Dennis Wolf with a 256.

The Villanova squad took all the top honors in the individual meet. Sinclair led the field with a 278, Mike Benson with a 270, and Joe Hack also fired a 270 score.

This is the second time in the past three years that Villanova has taken first place. The in between year they finished second behind a strong Navy team.

First All-American

Sinclair is the first man from Villanova to become an All-American shooter. He has achieved this honor three years running and may be selected again this year.

The team's next meet will be held on March 16 at the Coast Guard Academy. This is one of the biggest individual meets in the country, totaling 300 competing shooters and is very important for a successful season.

Fall Football Schedule Includes Nine Foes; West Chester Opener

Villanova athletic director Art Mahan has announced a nine game football schedule for the Wildcats for 1963.

Head football coach Alex Bell will have five home games with four away contests.

Villanova will open with neighborhood rival West Chester at the Main Line Stadium on September 21. The four remaining home dates are with Buffalo, Oct. 5; George Washington, Oct. 19; Holy Cross, Nov. 2 and Quantico Marines, Nov. 16, to windup the season.

Away dates are with Toledo, Sept. 28; Boston College, Oct. 12; Xavier, Oct. 26 and a Friday night game at Detroit on Nov. 8.

Toledo, George Washington, Holy Cross and Quantico are new opponents. It will mark the first meeting with Toledo, while the Wildcats have only played George Washington once previously in 1920. Holy Cross and Quantico were on the schedule two years ago.

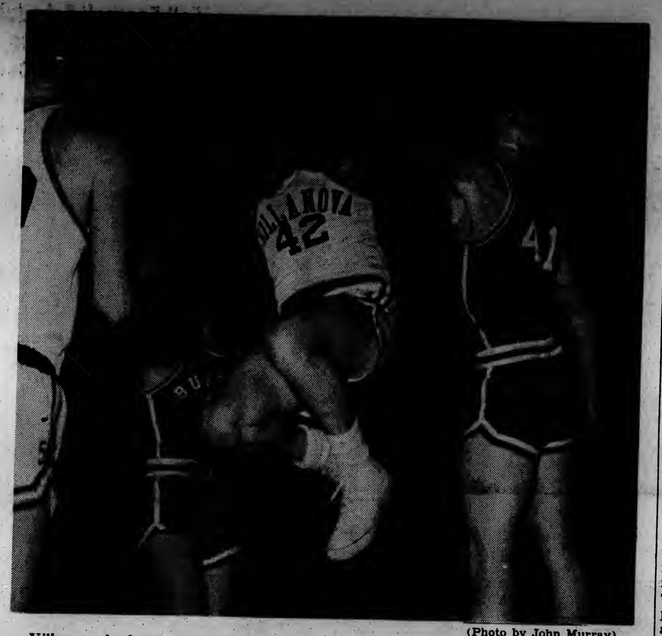
THE ANSWER IS:

Get Lucky



the taste to start with... the taste to stay with

THE QUESTION IS: WHAT IS THE SLOGAN OF THE MOST POPULAR REGULAR-SIZE CIGARETTE AMONG COLLEGE STUDENTS? If you missed that one, go to the rear of the class. Everyone should know that fine-tobacco taste is the best reason to start with Luckies, and that taste is the big reason Lucky smokers stay Lucky smokers. Prove it to yourself. Get Lucky today.

Indoor Track Season Climaxed By AAU Championship Meet

by George Nicolaus

The 1963 indoor track and field season came to a climax in Madison Square Garden Saturday, February 23, with the running of the AAU national championships.

With berths on the U. S. Pan-American team up for grabs, the competition produced very few surprises with the old (excuse me, Mr. Brundage) "pros" producing the expected results with one notable exception.

One Mr. Penti Nikula, a blond pole vaulter from Suomi (according to his warm-up jacket), finally ventured below the Arctic Circle and into the company of his peers. Perhaps Penti was frightened by the 16,212 people on hand, or maybe homesick for his native Finland (there were no reindeer visible in the Garden that night), or perhaps the foot-inch system of measurement confused him.

Mount Everest

Anyway, he made 15 feet look like Mount Everset before clearing it on his third attempt, passed at 15-6, and finally received the most polite applause of the evening after going out at 16 feet.

Dave Tork won the event with a catapult of 15-6, while Rolando Cruz, John Uelses, and Henry Wadsworth also cleared this height but tied for second on the basis of misses.

The 1000 yard run was a race until Canada's Bill Crothers decided it didn't have to be, as he kicked with a lap to go and breezed home six yards over Bill Lingle in 2:09.8. Villanovan Noel Carroll started poorly but closed fast to fifth position.

Best Race

The best race of the night was Jack Yerman's narrow victory in the 800 yards over newcomer Jim Johnson of Norfolk State. Yerman's time of 1:09.4 was a new American record in what was supposed to have been no-contest. Johnson has looked good all winter, and he was rewarded by an invitation to join the U.S. team in Sao Paulo this April.

Gary Gubner of N.Y.U. put his 16 pound toy 62-6 and grumbled something to the television cameras about being disappointed.

Villanova's young mile relay team of Ron Hangey, Larry Livers, Stan Kozlowski, and Don Webster ran their best time of the current indoor season but finished fourth behind Maryland State in 3:18.2.

Oh yes, a little guy named Beatty ran a 3:59.0 mile.

Jim Elliott's athletes found the K of C Meet more to their liking the following Friday.

Profit From Lesson

Noel Carroll profited from his AAU lesson and the absence of Bill Crothers to win the 1000, in a very fine 2:09.2. Big Noel closed with a tremendous rush to nip Dick Smith of Maryland and Georgetown's John Reilly.

Rolando Cruz had the fewest misses in clearing 15-6 and took first over LaSalle's John Uelses for his third pogostick win of the year. Nikula was ill and did not participate.

The mile relay team continued their improvement and won the second fastest section in 3:17.8 with Don Webster 48.7 on the anchor.

Billy Joe, putting for West Chester Athletic Club was five feet better than a poor AAU effort with 58-4½ behind Gubner's 64-6½.

Hammock Third

Charlie Hammock, one of seven V.U. athletes at the meet, looked like an IC4A threat with a third in the 60 yard high hurdles.

Two Separate Matches During Single Day Test Kegler Squad

Villanova's varsity bowling team made up its late start this season by competing in two separate matches on February 16. In the afternoon the Cat keglers bowled in the National Collegiate Matchgame Championships in Philadelphia.

That evening they put the capper on a busy day by journeying to Asbury Park, New Jersey for a three-game match with Monmouth College.

Second Place

Vying for top honors in Philadelphia against a field of 18, Villanova copped second place being outscored by Pitt 8283 to 8260. John Brennan was the big man for the Wildcats averaging 191, earning him seventh place in the 'all-events' competition.

The weary Mainline bowlers were edged 2799 to 2786 by Monmouth in their nightcap.

The following week saw the VU pinmen match strikes and spares with some tough foes in the First Invitational Collegiate Matchgames in Paterson, New Jersey. The tournament was won by the host squad Paterson State despite Williams' 204 average which paced the Cats to a five game total of 4820. Villanova had to settle for fifth place in this outing.

Moderator Rico

Because of the folding of the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling League due to financial troubles, the keglers of Moderator Sal Rico have been having some difficulty in obtaining matches so far this season.

The squad has been successful in securing dates on successive Saturdays with Newark College of Engineering and Seton Hall. They are also slated to participate in the Eastern Intercollegiate Doubles Championships on March 23.

'Cats Seek Third IC4A Title In Attempt To Retire Trophy

by Lois Greyson and Carol Burton

As the indoor track season comes to a close Villanova University is found in the 42nd IC4A Indoor Championship to be held in New York City March 9th.

As in the past the Main Liners are a contender for the team title along with favored Harvard and Yale. The Wildcats won the team title four out of the last six years and need this win in order to retire the indoor trophy.

It does not look as if the squad will have an easy job of this and it is most probable that it will be up to the mile relay event to determine the winner.

Ivy League

There is not much generally known about Harvard or Yale. They do not travel the indoor circuit and are involved mostly in their own meets with the other Ivy League schools.

What they have shown in those meets have given them the right to be co-favorites. There is a very good chance that the 'Cats will come through when the pressure is on and win the title and trophy.

Point Gainers

For points Villanova will depend upon Rolando Cruz in the pole vault, Noel Carroll in the thousand yard, Tom Sullivan in the mile, Vic Zwolak and Pat Traynor in the two mile, Charlie Hammock in the high hurdles, and the mile relay team.

With the inconsistency of the fibre glass poles, one never knows what the vaulters will do. Rolando Cruz should be able to win the pole vault.

The only other 16ft. pole vaulter, John Belitza of Maryland, will not be at this meet. Cruz's main competition will come from Dick Plymale of Army who cleared 15ft. ten and ½ inches outdoor last year.

In the thousand yard run Noel Carroll will have to come through with as good a race as last Friday when he captured the thousand yard run in the New York K of C games with a time of 2:09.2.

John Reily of Georgetown, 1961's National AAU champ will push Carroll to his best. Carroll beat Reily last week in the K of C meet but it was very close. Frank Tomeo of Fordham will also be a factor to contend with.

Young Tom Sullivan will have his hands full in the mile run with Deardorff of Penn State who has run below 4:10, and Bob Mack of Yale IC4A two mile champion of the last two years, who has run the mile in 4:08.6 this year.

Two Mile Event

The two old men of the team Vic Zwolak and Pat Traynor will both be in the two mile run. These men have been running well this season and should finish in the top four in this race.

Zwolak had a surprise victory in the IC4A mile last year but it would be no surprise if he won this year. Traynor who has trouble running on the boards with his big feet is looking better all the time.

Senior Charlie Hammock in the 60 high hurdles is starting to score in the big meets and mature to the point of not worrying about opponent . . . which has held him back in the past.

Close Event

The mile relay, all sophs, Ron Hangey, Larry Livers, Stan Kozlowski, and Don Webster have run the second best IC4A time and it has dropped steadily each week and should give IC4A champion Morgan State a real race.

It looks like Villanova with its depth will be able to out-score the other schools by one or two, saved by those mentioned and a fourth by the two mile relay team (Al Jackman, John Angevine, Marty Ferko, and Jim Orr).

With the loss of Billy Joe in his speciality, the shot put, there is a minus four points which would have been very helpful to a team win.

This gives the Ivy League schools a chance for these points and they will most probably get 4 of the 5 places. Gary Gubner of NYU will get first place without a doubt and probably try for another world's record.

Basketball Review

Louisville, shot a normally adequate 44.6 per cent from the field hitting 25 for 56. Villanova, however, hit 29 of 56 for 51.8 per cent.

A Ram Scare

Against West Chester, eight days ago at the Field House Villanova had what might be the scare of the season. With 18:40 showing on the clock, the Cats were down 37-30 to a nine-win ten-loss West Chester five. With the help of two pounding drums in the stands Villanova outscored the Rams 20-3, in the second half and went on to defeat West Chester 71-59.

Jim Washington scored 23 points and grabbed 19 rebounds. Jim McMonagle and Jim O'Brien tallied 11 and 14 respectively while Erickson hit 10. Having a rare off-night (3 for 17) Wally Jones scored 7.

Charley Hottenstein, a Temple rejectee, scored 15 points, with 13 in a row in the first half to give the Rams a 33-30 lead at halftime and gave Villanova a scare.

Last Thursday night, Villanova rallied to defeat upset-minded St. Peter's 72-59, in Madison Square Garden.

With Washington and McMonagle getting some opening baskets, the Wildcats led 17-7 with 11:00 minutes to go. The Peacocks then went on a tear that saw 6-5 George Kennedy score 13 of the North Jerseyites next 19 points. At halftime the score read 30-29 in favor of St. Peter's

With the second half 2:07 old, Jim O'Brien sank a jumper to put the Cats ahead for good at 33-32. The Main-Liners pulled away and with 11:00 showing in the game, had a 54-42 lead.

Washington high

Washington was high man for Villanova with 21 points and 17 rebounds while O'Brien, McMonagle and Wally Jones scored 14, 13 and 12, respectively. Kennedy had a game of 23 for the Peacocks while Tim Kehoe tabbed 20.

Villanova shot 40.2 per cent (29 for 72) and grabbed 54 rebounds. The Peacocks shot 38.9 (23 for 59) with 48 rebounds.

St. Patrick's In New York

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova became the ninth team to accept an invitation to the twenty-sixth annual National Invitation Tournament to be held March 14-23 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

The Wildcats have made two appearances. The last was three years ago when Villanova bowed to Utah State in the opening round.

On February 25, the day of the West Chester game, Villanova received a "feeler" from the NIT. Later that night the Cats almost blew the "feeler" back to New York after trailing at halftime, 33-30. Fortunately, the Blue-and White came back strong and defeated the Rams 71-59 and accepted the bid the next day.

Since the 50-49 loss to Temple, Villanova has won ten of their last twelve games. According to Coach Kraft the difference has been in the team's defense.

In their first 12 games (6-6), Villanova yielded an average of 62.9 points per game while scoring 66.4, themselves. In the last 12 games, the Wildcats have given up 56.7 ppg. while scoring 64 ppg.

The teams in the NIT are Wichita, Villanova, Miami of Florida, Providence, Canisius, Memphis State, LaSalle, DePaul, St. Louis, Fordham and St. Francis of Brooklyn.

Court Warriors Gain Tie With Penn For 'Big Five' Basketball Crown

LaSalle again called upon boxing's Cassius Clay for some words of wisdom last Saturday night, but the Explorers didn't quite live up to his "LaSalle by six points" prediction as they were dumped by Villanova, 63-47.

Before the season began, the Wildcats were given little or no chance in the Big Five against a tall LaSalle squad, a well-balanced Pennsylvania team and experienced St. Joseph's five, Coach Jack Kraft's amazing charges defeated these three, losing only to Temple, and finished in a dead heat with Penn with a 3-1 record.

Ironically enough, the only team Villanova was expected to beat was Temple.

A tie-breaking game against the Quakers may be in the offing, and this Friday night is open if necessary.

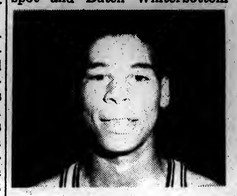
In city competition, the Hawks finished with a 2-2 losing to Penn and Villanova while defeating LaSalle and Temple. The latter two teams finished in a last place tie with 1-3 records. Temple's only win was over Villanova while the Explorers defeated Temple.

Villanova's main task before 9,274 at the Palestra last Saturday night was to contain LaSalle's two mammoths, 6-8 Walter Sampson and 6-7 George Sutor.

With Jim McMonagle in early foul trouble, the brunt of this unenviable job fell to 6-7 Jim Washington and 6-4 Jim O'Brien. Together, the LaSalle team was 0 for 8 from the field, they scored five foul shots, all by Sampson, and grabbed but 13 rebounds.

O'Brien, meanwhile, had 10 points and 13 rebounds to go with Washington's 15 points and 22 retreives, which tied a Palestra seasonal record set, oddly enough by George Sutor.

While Washington and O'Brien were battling under and over the basket, Wally Jones tickled the net for a season's high of 28 points.



In winning their fifth in a row and tenth of their last twelve games since the loss to Temple, Villanova had one of its coldest shooting nights from the field.

The Wildcats were 18 for 55 for a cold 32.7 precent while LaSalle was 16 for 61 for 26.2 percent. The game was played on the foul line as LaSalle was 15 for 25 and Villanova 27 for 36. Individually, Jones was 10 for 11 and O'Brien 6 for 6.

For the first seventeen minutes of the opening half, the contest was relatively close. Villanova owned two five point leads, but each time the Explorers rallied. With two tap-ins by Washington and foul shots by O'Brien and Jones, the Main-Liners left the floor at halftime with a 32-24 lead.

McMonagle Gets Fourth

In the opening seconds of the second half, McMonagle picked up his fourth personal foul. Eric Erickson, playing alongside of Jones, went into McMonagle's spot and Butch Winterbottom came in to play alongside of Wally. Villanova never lost its momentum and held a 42-28 spread with 10:45 to go.

A few minutes later, LaSalle moved to within nine points but a foul shot by Richie Richman and back to back jumpers by Jones regained Villanova's 14 point margin.

With 6:02 showing, Erickson fouled out, and 46 seconds later McMonagle joined him on the bench with his fifth personal. Nevertheless, LaSalle could make little headway and eventually lost by 16 points.

Frank Corace was high man for the lack-lustre Explorers totaling 21 points followed by Tony Abbott's 10.

Tonight Villanova meets Seton Hall at South Orange and, barring a City Series clash with Penn, the Main-Liners next game will be at Madison Square Garden against DePaul, of Chicago, on Thursday, March 14, at 7:30.

La Salle's George Sutor battles Villanova star center Jim Washington as the Wildcat attempts a goal in City Series clash last Saturday night. Contest featured Wildcat triumph 63-47, en route to second straight Big Five title.

Wildcat Five Revives, Topples Four Teams; Pockets NIT Invite

Recovering nicely from the 79-58 thumping suffered at the hands of St. Bonaventure, Villanova defeated Buffalo, Xavier, West Chester and St. Peter's, and in the process, earned an invitation to the NIT to be held later this month.

The Wildcats got back on the right side of the scoreboard with a 69-47 triumph over Buffalo at the Villanova Field House. The Bulls came in with NCAA tournament hopes and played cautious ball taking only the good shots.

Popping accurately from within 15 feet of the basketball and from the corners, Buffalo trailed Villanova 33-25 at halftime despite some fantastic play by Wally Jones.

In the second half the Wildcats began to move. After an 0 for 7 first half, Jim O'Brien hit his first four field goal attempts and the locals outscored the visitors 21-6 in the first 11 minutes.

On defense, Villanova disrupted Buffalo's methodical attack as Jim Washington blocked several shots. With Washington's paw in the air, the Bulls began rushing their shots. Then came O'Brien's tear and the Cats were home. Jones was high man for Villanova with 18 points followed by rapidly improving Eric Erickson with 16. O'Brien's 13 points all came in the second half.

Xavier Next

The following Saturday, Villanova faced taller Xavier and they too were toppled, 73-59. Seemingly forgetting about his braced right knee, Jones scissor-kicked for 10 field goals in 18 attempts and six for eight from the foul line for a game and season high of 26 points.

Jim Washington scored 18 points and pulled down 14 rebounds, while Erickson came through with 16 points. Despite these heroics and the Wildcats 34-29 lead, Villanova was behind four times in the first half, once by five points.

Cats Streak

With 13:12 to go in the second half, the Main-Liners led the Musketeers 49-46. Jones then went on a five point streak, and with a goal by Erickson, the Cats were up 56-46.

Last Law Forum Of Year Features Administration Judge John Murtagh

The final Villanova Law Forum of the year will be addressed by the Honorable John R. Murtagh, Administrative Judge, Criminal Court of the City of New York. This final meeting will take place tomorrow night at 8:30 in Garey Hall.

A graduate of the City College of New York and of the Harvard Law School, Judge Murtagh has had a long and distinguished career as an administrator and as a judge, with specialization in the area of criminal law.

He was Commissioner of Investigation of the City of New York from 1946 to 1950, Chief City Magistrate from 1950 to 1960, and Chief Justice of the Court of Special Sessions from 1960 to 1962.

Judge Murtagh has not only been active in the administration of justice, but has been a keen observer and critic in this field. He is the co-author of the book, Cast the First Stone, which deals with the problem of prostitution in a large city, and of Who Live in Shadow, a careful study of the problems of narcotics and narcotics control.

Prior to Judge Murtagh the Forum has presented New York Attorney James B. Donovan, Louis B. Sohn, a Bemis Professor of International Law at Harvard, and Lee Loevinger, the Assistant Attorney General, Anti-trust Division, United States Department of Justice.

Judge John Murtagh

These gatherings are arranged to stimulate students to view the law in its broadest public dimensions.

The Forum programs are formulated by Professor Donald W. Dowd, and the presentation is made possible by the generosity of Thomas J. Reilly, Esquire, of the Delaware County Bar.

All members of the faculty, student body, and general public are invited to attend.

Grad Theatre Offers 'Don Juan In Hell' For March Production

The Graduate Theatre Department plans to have its latest play-in-the-making, Don Juan in Hell, continue where Kataki left off. Kataki, with its last performances on the weekend of March 17, will yield to Don Juan in Hell, scheduled to open the following Friday. "This will insure a continuous period of productions for over a month's time," said Mr. George Herman, Don Juan's director.

In the period of about a week between the two plays, the Villanova Playbox will be transformed from the sunny South Pacific atoll of Kataki to the blazing inferno of hell for Don Juan.

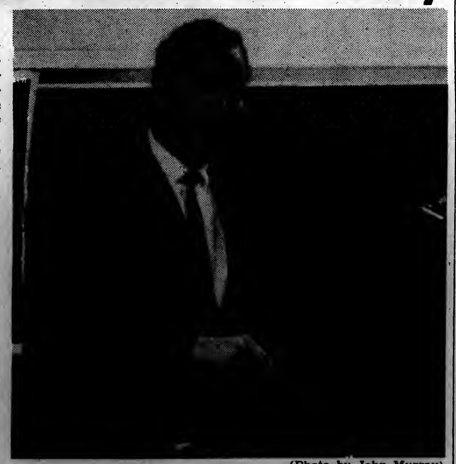
Ohio Republican Ashbrook Reveals Conservatives' Reasons And Theory

By Tom Gillespie

Congressman John Ashbrook (R-Ohio), speaking on the topic, "Why I Am a Conservative," before a standing-room-only audience of 300 said Friday that "the Kennedy Administration Liberals are irresponsible."

Ashbrook was speaking before the Conservative Club in the first of this spring's lecture series.



The Ohio Congressman criticized President Kennedy's tax cut, domestic peace corps, deficit spending and welfare proposals, on grounds they are insufficient or unnecessary. Mr. Ashbrook said of Kennedy Liberals, " . . . more often than not, they have more programs than problems."

Quotations

Quoting a brief excerpt from a book by Presidental advisor, Arthur Schlessinger, Private Indulgence and National Power, the Congressman described Liberals as "dangerous" national leaders who "under-rate the intelligence of the average American and wish to make the Federal Government the center of American society."

On Conservatism, Mr. Ash-

Six Student Council Members Ousted Because Of Absences

Six members of the Student Council were tentatively ousted from their seats during last Wednesday's meeting. The action resulted from repeated absences.

Those struck from the rolls were Fran Kelleher, Bob Mairone, John Lucey, Bill Banmiller, John Callahan, and Bob Wright.

The Congress commenced the action in an effort to consider legislation seeking an investigation of the Villanova NFCCS. Final consideration of the NFCCS resolution, however, was tabled until the next meeting.

Also heading the business of the evening was a motion sponsored by Vice President Jim Howley seeking the establishment of a mandatory physical education course. The motion sparked considerable feeling among several of the Congress members.

Objections

Treasurer Leo Rattigan replied to Howley's affirmative arguments that physical education is of utmost importance in today's society with the objections that the university cannot afford such a program at the moment and that the purpose of Villanova is primarily to give its students an academic education. After further comment and debate on the subject, the resolution was defeated.

Chairman Joe Tate and Vice Chairman Marty McGuinn co-sponsored a resolution to inaugurate a three-day reading period previous to the start of Field House Resounds In Campus Appearance Of Vienna Choir Boys

Last night the Villanova Field House resounded to the celestial strains of the Vienna Choir Boys in their second outstanding appearance on the campus. The Choir's first appearance at Villanova was thirty-five years ago.

The boys, in their only engagement in the Philadelphia area, presented a program of fifteen songs and one comic operetta. They are currently making their nineteenth tour of The United States, under the direction of Impresario S. Hurok.

Arrangements for the Choir's appearance were handled by James McErlane, William Gross and James Dunn, under the direction of Father Richard Appicci, Dean of Student Activities.

Bill Madden of WWVU handled the sound and James Dunn managed the stage settings and lighting. Emcee for the event was Student Council President Joseph Tate.

Attending the concert last evening was an esteemed alumnus of the choir and a member of the Villanova History Department since 1955, Dr. Alexander Rudhart. Dr. Rudhart was a member of the Choir from 1940 to 1944. Also attending was Mr. Samuel Singer, music critic, of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Arrangements Committee wishes to thank Mother Stella of Rosemont College for the use of mirrors, and to all who devoted their time to ticket sales.

The Vienna Choir Boys concert marked the opening of a new era in music at Villanova. All concerned with the affair were gratified by the magnificent turnout at the songfest.

Moderator Appoints Farrell And Associates Junior Week Editors

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, has announced the appointment of Edward Farrell as editor of the Junior Week edition of the Villanovan for 1963.

Farrell is presently editor in-chief of the regular weekly Villanovan and is a junior electrical engineer.

Subsequently announced by Farrell are the following appointments to editorial positions of the Junior Week edition: Arthur Molitierno, associate editor, James McErlane and Frank Quattrone, news co-editors, Ed Wilkinson and Jan Dyroff as feature co-editors, Joseph McCarthy and Roy Baron, sports co-editors, Andy Lovas and Marti Podolsky, art co-editors, Richard Stoughton photo editor, Michael Ferrara, format editor, Betsy Massiniso and Pat Blake, copy co-editors, and Ray Ritter and Joseph Kudless as circulation co-managers.

In commenting on the special edition, published on April 22 as part of the Junior Week festivities, Farrell stated: "The Junior Week edition requires the work of many juniors who write, edit and proof the paper as well as perform the many other duties associated with its publication. With the help of as many juniors as possible, the issue should be one of the best in recent years."

Belle Masque Society Stages Farce 'The Imaginary Invalid'

by Gerard Trippitelli

The Belle Masque Society will present Moliere's farcical comedy The Imaginary Invalid in Vasey Hall Auditorium on the evenings of April 3 through April 6. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

This will not be a literary production. Therefore, it will not be taken literally from the original text, but will be taken from a translation adapted for the modern stage for the enjoyment of a modern audience.

The play is being directed by Mr. Thomas Nevins, who is attempting to present it as Moliere would have done, that is, as a farcical comedy. Mr. Nevins, who has done research on Moliere and his comic method, will conduct a special student discussion about the play on Saturday afternoon, April 6 at 2 p.m.

The leading roles are as follows: James Mason as Argan the Imaginary Invalid; Carol Schmenkel of Rosemont as Toinette the maid; Cathy Lyons of Holy Family as Argan's daughter, Angelica; Mary Byrne of Villanova as Argan's wife, Beline; Kenny Resinski as Argan's brother Berald; Bill di Paolo as Angelica's lover, Cleante; and Bill Byrne as the booby, Thomas.

Tickets for the production will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe on March 25 at the price of one dollar apiece.

• • • •

On March 22, Belle Masque will compete in the Chestnut Hill Drama Festival with the presentation of The Ladder, an avante garde play by Germaine..

Last year Belle Masque won the contest with the modern greek farce, Helena's Husband. Other schools which will be represented in the festival are St. Joseph's, La Salle, and Chestnut Hill.

• • • •

A former Belle Masque member, Victor Buono, has been nominated for an academy award for the best supporting actor in Whatever Happened to Baby Jane. While at Villanova, he appeared in several productions such as Billy Budd in which he played the part of Cloggort.

Turf 'n' Tinsel Names Men To Characterize Zeke, Pinky, Fungus

Selection of the cast for this year's annual Turf 'n' Tinsel production Jessica James is nearing completion.

The production, run previously in 1955, will be presented in the Field House on April 18, 19, 20, and 21.

Having as its setting the hillbilly section of the Appalachians, Jessica James will be directed by Betty Green, director of the last five productions.

Barry Thornton will play the role of the leading character Jessica. Ed Jaworowski will play Jessica's father, Pa, and Al LaMastra her mother, Ma.

Joe Ruggiero is cast in the role of Pinky, a Pinkerton man, and Granny will be played by Roger Sheehy. Bob Spellmyer and Ted Gotsch will play Flotilda and Fungus respectively.

Fungus, Zeke, and the sheriff will be played by Bob Frattaroli, Jim Harwood, and Dick Campion, respectively. Bill Armstrong will take the part of Andy P., and Frank Gilbridge, the Engineer.

Rusty Miller and Jim Roberts will play Pinky No. 1 and No. 2, respectively, and Jim Howley will play Foreigner No. 2. Foreigner No. 1, T., Charlie W., and Jim B. have yet to be cast.

Volunteers Requested From Capable Juniors To Teach Basic Truths

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine has announced that volunteers are needed to teach basic religious principles to the mentally retarded at Pennhurst on Tuesday afternoons from 2:30 to 5:30.

Twelve Villanovans went to Pennhurst on March 5 to take care of about one hundred and fifty mentally ill. These people who have a mental capacity equal to age six or seven range from teen-agers to middle-agers.

This Villanova program started with twenty-six students four years ago. Since then it has progressively dwindled to almost nothing, but three weeks ago it was finally revived.

Another project of this organization is teaching those Villanova Freshmen who have not gone to Catholic High School. The reason for this is to give them a background for their study of theology. Interested Juniors, who would like to teach these courses next year are now being sought.

Mr. John Brady of the Philadephia Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, who is an instructor at the John Bartram High School, is conducting a course for people who want to learn to teach these religion subjects. Several Villanova students are taking these courses from Mr. Brady.

Anyone interested in the CCD and its work is asked to contact Father Jack O'Rourke in Room 1 Sullivan Hall.

Singers Start Spring Tour; New Record Album To Be Cut

By Bob Beattie
of the Villanova Singers

The Villanova Singers began their spring swing on Friday, March 1, at St. John's University, Jamaica, N. Y, in joint concert with the St. John's Women's Glee Club.

On Saturday, March 2, they moved to the Purchase, N. Y. campus of Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, and, on March 3, returned to Rosemont College for the Eighth Annual Intercollegiate Choral Festival.

Herbert Fiss led the Singers in the presentation of "Shenandoah," "Vienna, My City of Dreams," and Porter's "Begin the Beguine" at St. John's.

At Manhattanville, the programming assumes a more liturgical note. The Newberry arrangement of "Psalm 150," "Crucifixus" by Lotti, and Ruffo's "Adoramus Te, Christe" were enthusiatically received.

The manhattanville evening included joint renditions by the two glee clubs of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee," and "Gratius Agimus" from the "Gloria" of his B Minor Mass.

The degree of excellence and the perfection of tone achieved were a tribute to Ralph Hunter, the Manhattanville College director, and to Mr. Fiss. Indeed it was an unforgettable experience for all who were privileged to have heard it.

The New York engagements included entertainment by the Spires, Villanova's own folk singers under Tom Picardo's direction. They will be heard this evening, March 13, in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall, and will soon release a long-playing record.

NROTC Drill Squad Takes Second Place In Pittsburg Meet

The Villanova Varsity NROTC Drill team recently took a second place in the basic drill competition in the University of Pittsburg, Invitational Drill Meet.

The team also finished fourth in trick drill, competing against top teams in the East and Mid-west, among them Queen's Guards, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Military College, and Pittsburgh.

The University of Pittsburgh garnered first place in overall point total, accumulating most of its points in the trick drill competition. The Villanova platoon, operating with only the more qualified members of the team, utilized its new routine successfully.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Annual Shamokinaki Dance Ticket Sales Start March 29

by Ron Fenstermaker

Tickets for the eleventh annual Shamokinaki dance, to be held in the Field House on March 29, will go on sale March 19 in the Pie Shoppe at $2.00 per couple.

The Villanovan, with the assistance of the dance moderator, Rev. Robert M. Burke, OSA, collected information on the history and tradition of the annual affair.

In September 1952, three Villanova students, Brad O'Brien, Don Wilson, and Gene O'Donnell, plus Immaculata students Eleanor Ryan and Joan Davis met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Brien to say goodbye to Rev. Thomas Purcell, OSA.

Father Purcell was to be sent from Villanova to become the first Prior of the Augustinian Mission in Nagasaki, Japan. It was decided among the five students that a farewell dance should be held in Father Purcell's honor.

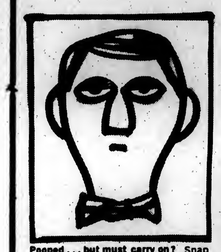
The dance was named Shamokinaki, a combination of Shamokin, Pennsylvania, Father Purcell's home town, and Nagasaki. The affair was primarily a square dance, but there also was straight dancing.

The first Shamokinaki Square Dance was held in the Field House on January 9, 1953. Dan Hurley's group provided the music and professionals led the square dancing.

In 1954, Rev. Edwin Grimes, OSA, stated "Villanova's Shamokinaki Committee last year raised enough money to build a new monastery in Japan."

Because of this success, the dance was held again in 1954. However, it was decided that the affair should be during lent to increase attendance, since it is a University policy not to permit any other social functions during this season.

The second annual Shamokinaki dance was held on March 9, 1954. The ten piece orchestra of Charlie Gresh provided music, and Father Grimes moderated this and the next Shamokinaki.



Charlie Gresh's orchestra also played for the third Shamokinaki, held on March 11, 1955. Over $1,000 was raised by this dance.

Rev. Michael O'Donnell, OSA, was the moderator for the next four Shamokinaki dances. Norrie Elwell's group played for the fourth Shamokinaki, which was held on March 2, 1956, and produced $3,100 for the Japanese Missions.

The Villanovans played for the fifth Shamokinaki on March 22, 1957. With the exception of Lou Denison's orchestra on March 7, 1958, the Villanovans played for every Shamokinaki from then until the present.

Amateur Night

Of the eight participants in Amateur Night, a jazz combo, the Del Fi's, won first prize as the spring intramural season opened Monday night, March 4. Garry Smith, playing a honky-tonk piano, took second place. Pete Cahill and Ernie Abbate performed a comedy sketch to capture third place honors.

Pre-Law Society Sees US Attorney-General On Washington Trip

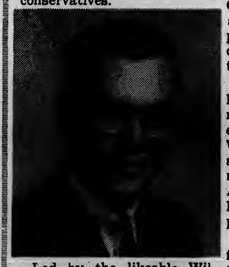
The Pre-Law Society of Villanova recently made a field trip to Washington touring the administrative heart of the Capitol.

Highlighting the trip was a twenty-minute interview with Attorney General Robert Kennedy, the highest ranking legal officer in the United States. During the interview, the members of the society were afforded the opportunity to ask any question of the Attorney General.

The questions ranged far afield and covered a wide variety of topics, from labor to politics. Under the latter category, Mr. Kennedy was asked if he had any aspirations to the presidency in 1968.

Kennedy Quizzed

In reply he answered with an emphatic "no." But the negative was couched in such Washingtonese jargon as to intimate to some members of the society that they could expect to see his name on the ballot in five years.



Prior to the interview, the members of the society made the rounds of downtown Washington. Their wanderings took them to the Supreme Court, the Library of Congress, the National Art Gallery, and the National Archives.

PORTRETTE

Softspoken Chairman

Of all the organizations on campus, the Conservative Club — figuratively speaking, of course—is currently making the most noise. The chairman of this vociferous group is Bill Williams, senior political science major.

Last year, the softspoken Williams was chairman of Villanova's Freedom Forum, the purpose of which was to study Communism. But after a closer look, it was ascertained that most of its members were conservatives.

Led by the likeable Williams, then, they dissolved quite successfully into the Conservative Club, which has been carting into the University guest lecturers by the number.

Off campus, Bill is tied closely with the Intercollegiate Society of Individualists (ISI), a national student conservative organization set up to distribute conservation literature and to procure speakers for the various colleges.

When quired on his methods of obtaining for Villanova such prominent speakers as John Ashbrook (Rep., O.) and Strom Thurmond (Dem., S.C.), Bill answered that his direct trips to Washington, D.C., to see and speak with the Congressman in person has been the most effective. His association with ISI and his outside contacts also help immensely.

Williams, formerly active in ICG, IRS, and the Student Council, was a campaign assistant at the National Republican Congressional Candidates' Conference in Washington during the summer.

This resident of South Hadley, Massachusetts, who was recently honored by his selection to the national Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges, will invest his next three years in law school. As might be inferred from Bill's past record of interests, politics just may follow.

"My interest in political affairs stems from the realization that we are facing a crisis of major proportions spiritually, economically, and politically, and that we are failing to meet the challenges. The world-wide Communist movement," Bill continued, "is threatening the very existence of Western civilization. My desire is simply to help stimulate the rebirth of values and ideals which are so necessary if we are to survive as a free people.

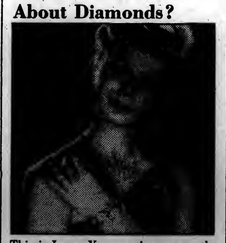
Burke Regional Candidate For State Speaker Of ICG

Thomas Burke, a senior Pre-Law major last Saturday was elected to the position of Speaker and Chairman of the Southeast Philadelphia region of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government at its annual regional convention at Ursinus College.

The election of Burke as Regional Speaker automatically made him the region's candidate for State Speaker at the Pennsylvania State Convention April 18-20 in Harrisburg. It is the second successive year in which a candidate from Villanova has been elected to the position.

Under consideration of the Convention was the Revision of Pennsylvania State Constitution.

Each of the nine committees reported out recommendations regarding the constitution, several featuring original legislation proposed by Villanova delegates.



Appointments

Jerry Cardamone, a junior English major, and Joseph McCarthy, a junior Arts major, both served the convention in appointive positions. The former was appointed as Chairman of Education and Social Welfare Committee and latter as the Timekeeper for the convention.

'Success Assured'

With all nine member schools present with 125 delegates, the convention surpassed last year's effort by a nominal amount. Charter President Phil Bronzi commented that "in view of the regional success, a successful showing at the state convention is almost assured.

Villanova Political Union Hosts Conservative McDowell

The Villanova Political Union will present its first debate of the semester. The resolution: That the United States should cease all aid to Yugoslavia. (in the Physics Lecture Hall of Mendel Hall at 7:30 p.m.)

The special guest speaker of tonight's debate will be Arthur G. McDowell, who is presently the Exclusive Secretary Treasurer of the Council Against Communist Aggression and Director of the Department of Civic Education and Government Affairs of the Upholsterers' International Union.

Mr. McDowell was also elected President of Lincoln-Civil War Society of Philadelphia in 1955 and 1956. He has been a lecturer at the National War College at Fort McNair on non-military methods of combatting Communist aggression, and at the National Military-Industrial Conference of Chicago.

He has also been active in anti-Communist labor unions in Europe and in North Africa.

This debate is the first one since the Union's television debut on WRCV's program "Concept" which was acclaimed by the student body and the television station audience as a success. Since then the Union has been busy, arranging future debates in which they intend to bring to the campus many prominent speakers.

Applications and literature concerning the Union will soon be available for those students who wish to become members. The Union, which has been operating with a limited membership, has succeeded in gaining wide attention on the campus and in the area.

Students interested in joining the Union should attend the debate tonight to observe the Union's three parties in action. Following Mr. McDowell's talk the three parties will enter into what they hope will be spirited debate.

Press Club Formed To Spread On Campus Catholic Literature

The official opening of the Catholic Press Club, sponsored by Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student Activities, occured on Wednesday evening, March 6.

The function of the club throughout the academic year will be to emphasize Catholic publications in the form of magazines, pamphlets and paperbacks. This will done by posting major articles from magazines on bulletin boards and setting up displays in the main Library.

Various magazines such as Ave Maria, America, Catholic Digest, and Sign will be distributed on campus to the students, and others, will be placed in the magazine racks at reduced student rates.

Accompanying these magazines will be a complete assortment of Catholic paperbacks.

On Next Year's Snow Removal

Another winter is coming to an end. But during this winter as in all past winters, every snowfall has brought two transportation problems to Villanova: snow-covered roads and snowy campus paths. The University has no control over the former problem, but it should be able to solve the latter.

Why should an average snowfall hamper student transportation so long? Snow transforms the pathways into three distinct phases. Initially, the freshly fallen snow requires students to blaze a path between buildings, then the trampled snow changes to slippery, rutted ice which eventually melts turning into slush and puddles. This final phase is the most treacherous to the shoes and trousers of the student pedestrain. These phases are especially obvious to those traversing the crowded paths around Alumni Hall.

The caretakers are kept more than busy clearing the main roads, and, of necessary, they must put off the footpaths until the damage is done. What then is the solution?

One solution would be to hire resident students to clear the walks immediately after the snowfall. An untouched wealth of manpower is available for such a task. Besides earning some spare money, the students could develop a pride for an improved campus.

Of course there would be difficulties in organizing such a program, but these could be adequately handled through the cooperation of the administration, the Student Council, and the student body.

If this program were inaugerated, next winter's snowfalls would no longer cause students to wade from building to building.

Commuters, Arise!

The right to strike is a right sacred to labor. Without it labor, as an organized force, would be powerless. They would be set back a half a century.

With this right goes a corresponding duty. That duty is to use their right wisely, to their betterment, but not to society's detriment. Too often this duty is forgotten.

Since 1963 dawned on history the greater Philadelphia area has been plagued with labor troubles in the transportation sphere. What has been their cost in monetary and human values?

The first strike, with Philadelphia Transportation Company, affected Villanova at most only indirectly. The second walkout by the Red Arrow workers scored a blow directly at the University community.

That the Red Arrow in recent years added an extra station at the nether end of the campus is testimony to the numbers making use of the rail factilities. How many countless more are dependent on the bus routes throughout the Main Line?

But now the buses lie idle. The tracks are rusting on their ties. There is a picket line of token size at the 69th street terminal. Negotiations seem to have broken down.

The strike seems to be a shabby affair. The union wants a cetrain package and considers its demand are unreasonable. The company considers the package economically unfeasable and can see naught but the reason of its position.

Rather than bend the company threatens liquidation of its assets. Is this what is meant by a public utility? Does the public consits merely of the railway brotherhood and the Messers Taylor? If not, what is the public, and what are their rights?

Counterpoint

A Strike For Difficulty

by Ed Farrell

Too often the cry is heard around campus that a teacher is too rough or another teacher shouldn't give as many tests as he does, etc.

But did the student ever stop to consider what would happen if school life was too easy instead of too difficult as they now contend it is?

A Tougher Schedule

The students at the University of Milan recently completed a 21 day sitdown strike and won their demands for a tougher course schedule. Incongruous as it may seem to many of the elite at our fair university, these students actually realized, while still in school, the necessity of being prepared to challenge their contemporaries in the "outside world."

These students demanded and received tougher courses, more difficult examinations, and something to say about arranging their own schedules.

They realized all too well that the spoon-fed student will find the outside entirely too difficult to suit his easy going tastes, while the student who faces up to the challenges of a rough curricula will find it easier to compete successfully against others after graduation.

Extraordinary Situations

Admittedly, there are some situations which are extraordinarily difficult. For instance, three major tests in one or two days time is enough to discourage almost anyone but the bookworm. But even in a situation such as this, a maximum effort to do as well as possible would be far better than a situation in which any test which a student is faced with would require ten out of fifty minutes to complete.

The students of Milan have demonstrated something often found in students in Europe but not found often enough in American schools.

The Europeans realize that their predominant purpose is an education, while too many of their American counterparts are in school only for the diploma and a good time. Unfortunately, the ratio of the true student to the good timer is far too low, even here at Villanova.

The Tougher the Better

If more students would realize the fact that studies come first and begin to appreciate that difficult courses are in the long run more beneficial than the snap A-B courses, the academic spirit will improve considerably.

Luckily the serious students at Villanova do not have to strike for more difficult courses. They probably wouldn't get much help.

Villanova Merry-Go-Round

Expulsions: Just And Fine

By Joe McCarthy

If memory serves one correctly, there has been quite a hue and cry about student apathy by the Student Council. And yet, there also seems to be no adequate measure taken to combat this difficulty.

But last Wednesday evening, a remarkable occurrence took place at the Student Congress meeting. Measures were taken against six of the membership resulting in expulsion.

The six given official ouster were Bob Mairone, Fran Kelleher, Bill Banmiller, Bob Wright, John Lucey, and John Callaghan. It appears that these men had missed their quota of meetings, three during the year.

Vicious Crackdown

In a vicious crackdown on apathy within itself, the Council bounced these six and pointed out that some ten others are in danger of being removed from their seats. And this is just and fine.

Perhaps the action has been a long time coming. The more that are removed, the more effective the Council will become in effecting more lasting programs and legislation.

Of the six removed, two were Co-Chairmen of one of the more powerful committees of the Council, the Social Affairs Committee.

Both Mairone and Kelleher were charged with enforcing legislation regarding campus organizations.

No Representation

Two others, Bill Banmiller and John Callaghan, have left their organizations without representation, the Band and the Beta Gamma Debating Society respectively. Instead of complying with the requisites of the office for which they ran, they have proved to be grossly negligent in their obligations.

Another of those ousted, John Lucey, only three months ago received formal recognition in the Villanovan, from his fellow classmates, and from the Council itself when he was approved, along with 33 other seniors for membership in Who's Who Among American College Students.

Last Wednesday's expulsion casts a poor reflection either on the person himself or upon those that were responsible for his selection.

The last, Bob Wright, of which there is little known, either good or bad, appears to be just a non-entity as far as the Student Council is concerned.

Recognizing the fact that several of the absentees might have reasonable excuses, there can still only be one general conclusion; that there are serious conflict-of-interests charges to be brought against many of the members.

If a student has sufficient interest or desire to run for any position, he should at least be willing to do his best, as is expected of him, or resign that position. The Council should not be a means to Who's Who or the history-form.

For this reason, let us now suggest that the Council continue this procedure. Perhaps, then there will be a more even distribution of interest and work among the burdened on Council.

We might also suggest that measures be taken against those who do attend, but do nothing otherwise. And there appears to be quite a few that fit into this category.

Consequently, there might be a great deal more accomplished with the interest of the student body and Villanova in mind while at the same time evoking less criticism of the Council.

Blasphemy! What's That?

by Jan M. Dyroff

Platitudes! Do you realize how many platitudes and "nice" things cross your path every day? When is the last time that something really insulting has been seen in print?

Albert Camus, the late French man of letters and Nobel Prize winner, used to cut up the local government by taking quotations from French literature. The official censor wouldn't dare blue-pencil something by Montaigne or Voltaire.

While that may work in the provincial press in Algeria, it certainly wouldn't do here. People just don't dig Voltaire, except perhaps for Pangloss and his "This is the best of all possible worlds!"

Anyway, we were walking down the corridor in Dougherty Hall the other day and we saw this cat chuckling to himself. A happy man is the vanishing American, but then much is vanishing these days. Didn't there used to be something called the P&W?

To get back to the happy man, it seems that he had just wandered out of the Day Hoppe Cafeteria where there was a Student Council meeting.

He said, "Gee, these residents are sure lucky. At home if I get bored in the evening all I can do is go out and get in a rumble or play pool or something, but these residents can always come here to these meetings and get a good laugh."

There, that might insult the Student Council. But wouldn't it be even more insulting to ask the students how many of them ever attend the meetings, even if just for laughs?

How about insulting our campus Conelrad intercom? Yes, Virgina, there is a campus radio station. Some day hoppes I know think that WWVU is a myth, like Sisyphus. But it isn't. Ask any of its three listeners.

Oh yes, there is also someone else you can ask if WWVU exists. That is Newton Minnow, chairman of the FCC. One of his favorite pastimes is changing the frequency on the WooVoo application for FM.

I would like to offer this column to anybody who wants an excuse to feel insulted. After all, how often is someone insulted? If someone really gets violent, may I offer him or her (I deliberately omitted the nurses for they are all so charming and lovely that it would be impossible to insult them) my typewriter.

You have no idea what fun it can be sitting in a newspaper office throwing verbal darts at people. It's one of the few ways of letting off steam that isn't immoral, fattening, or illegal.

Happy Lent!

The Rising Curtain

Critical Introspection

by Paul Norton

Most people, particularly students, are generally able to tolerate numerous insults or "cuts" aimed at their national heritage or personal appearance.

However, should you throw light on their artistic taste, they howl like beaten animals, and crouch in dark corners waiting to spring on you, truly lecherous creature that you are. Of course, I'm not referring to the actors and theatre people who are the particular targets of a critical review. I mean the layman, the pseudo-critic, the prospective advocate of the "ahts."

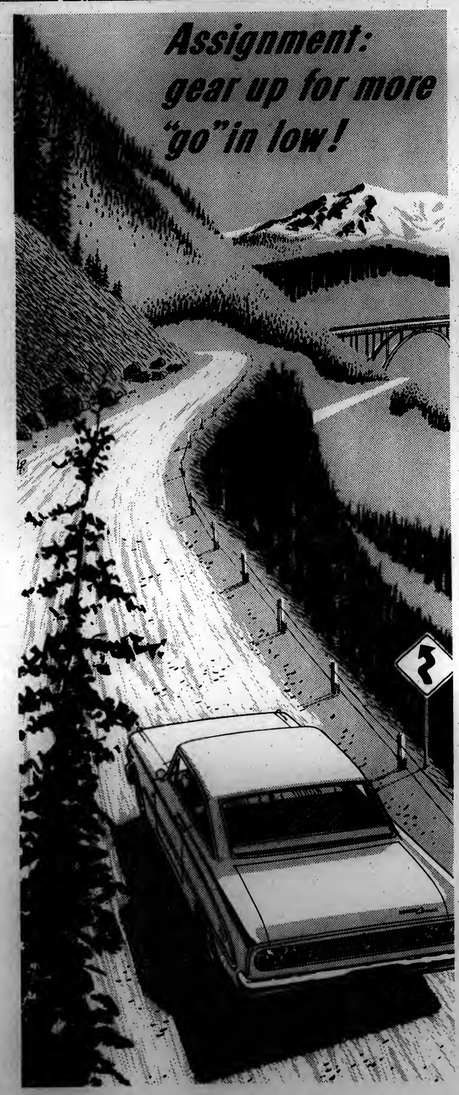
Now we all have our favorites, let's face it. Either we do like Zero Mostel or we don't.

The point is that, favorites or not, trained critics (this reviewer excluded from that category) who have any sense of personal respect for their work and love for the profession which keeps them writing, will attempt to view their material with an objective eye.

They can only set up recognized standards and judge the height to which a play rises to meet these standards.

The play's purpose or lack of it is usually a common standard of judgement. Does it entertain? Is it a well constructed social commentary? Is it a character study or a philosophical thought play?

In musical comedy, other things are brought in; such as, quality of the score, well integrated plot and music, and the dual abilities of actors to sing and act. (This is fast becoming a lost art.)



Sets and lighting play an important part in carrying an effect across the curtain's edge. If they fail, then no matter how fine the show is, the audience will be continually disturbed by the glaring errors of scenic design.

The technical aspects also extend into costume design. These create the mood and tone of the era of the story. Like the sets and lights the costumes may not be particularly noticed unless they are outstandingly bad or exceptionally well executed.

What is the position of a college reviewer? This strange breed of individuals who hover threatingly over their type writers for hours on end have double demands on them. While it is rare that they have to produce daily columns or comments, they are still obliged to meet deadlines, to view shows, and to prepare the actual reviews.

Few men of college age are experienced enough in the theater to judge art with any great degree of accuracy. We can only hope to learn by our mistakes and find some time here and there to do some studying on background material.

Having been recently attacked by a fellow collegian, I feel smugly conceited. I have evoked something; be it love or hate, at least it wasn't indifference. My written word finally made an effect and perhaps did some good. This appears as the ultimate compliment for a critic.

Result: All 3-speed manual transmissions in Ford-built cars with V-8's now are fully synchronized in each forward gear

To get more "go" in low, Ford engineers were asked to upgrade the conventional 3-speed transmission to give drivers more control in all three forward gears—to make "low" a driving gear—and they tackled the problem imaginatively.

Their achievement, another Ford First, is the only U.S. 3-speed manual transmission with all three forward gears fully synchronized! No need now to come to a complete stop when you shift into low—and no clashing gears! It lets you keep more torque on tap for negotiating sharp turns and steep grades. It makes driving more flexible, more pleasurable.

Another assignment completed and another example of how engineering leadership at Ford provides fresh ideas for the American Road.

The Suzaki String Quartet performs before a relatively meager crowd in the first of a series of five chamber music concerts.

"Then looking him straight in the eye, I said you'll break whose arm?"

Suzuki String Four Bows At First Fete; Features Schumann

by Norb Dusyn

The first concert in a series of five chamber music concerts was held last Sunday in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Fine performances of the String Quartet in D major by Mozart, the String Quartet (1904) by Maurice Ravel, and the String Quartet in A major, op. 41, No.3, by Schumann, were given by the Suzuki String Quartet.

Jay Humeston, cello, was by far the best performer of the group, His excellence with his instrument was shown in the Mozart Quartet in which violin cello plays a prominent, even solositic, part.

Yumi Ninomiya was a little shaky in her performances. In conversation with Miss Niomiya before the concert, she frankly admitted that she was "scared". This fear proved to be an obstruction to her total success in the concert.

Miwako Ninomiya, and the founder, Mr. Hidetaro Suzuki, seemed to sense the nervousness of the second violinist, because they played in a such a manner as to aid her, carrying her through her uncertainty with cautious handling of their parts.

Mr. Suzaki, first violin, began studying his instrument in 1944 in his native land, Tokyo, Japan. Since 1956 he has been studying under Mr. Eferem Zimbalist at the Curtiss Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Yumi Ninomiya, second violin, also a native of Tokyo, has been studying with Ivan Galakian at Curtis since 1961. Niwako Ninomiya, sister of Yumi, is also a student of Mr. Galamian and has been in Philadelphia since 1958. She is presently teaching at the Wilmington School of Music.

Jay Humeston cello, unlike the others, is a native of the United States, coming from Kentucky. Mr. Humeston is privileged to have been a soloist for the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Junior Students' Concert Series last spring.

The series will have four other concerts to be held later this spring.

Eavesdropper Strikes Again! Target: Dougherty Lounges

by Ron Gladis

If you don't feel like studying and you're not at all interested in a 3.00 cum, I've found the perfect place for you—the Dougherty Hall lounges.

You know them, the places where the floors are marred by carelessly flung bobby pins. Another attractive feature of the lounges is the esoteric conversation of the students (including the nurses).

The following is a good illustration.

. . . But you forget the differential exponent . . . Is she? Well, I never would have thought it . . . Hey, pledge, go to the Pie Shoppe and get me a—forget it . . . And if my daddy can pull some strings, I should be on the islands by mid-June . . . That the area is a function of . . . Hey, look who just walked in . . . Yea

. . . Well, let me say this about that, I . . . And then for kicks sometimes we throw chewing gum on Lancaster Pike and catch sports cars . . . Hawaii is nice in mid-June . . . Good old Liz! . . . I mean, I've met some girls before but never like you . . . Aw, c'mon, what do you mean we've got a fallout shelter! . . . So then he tells me that a real beer drinker only punches one hole in his beer can . . . And saw the room was in an uproar and shouted, "Order! order!" So I yell, "Two beers!" . . . Y'know, she's not bad for a nurse, that is. As a matter of fact, neither is her girl friend, for a nurse, that is . . . Y'know, I've been here too long . . .

Moving to the other side of the East Lounge:

. . . But we've come to the conclusion that underneath his phony exterior, there's a real, down-to-earth, honest-to-goodness fraud . . . So as I pull into the parking lot, I slip on the ice and mash this guy's fender; nobody was hurt, but . . . And then once in a while we sit in the Pie Shoppe and start rumors . . .Oh, boy! here come the Pi Theta Chi Choral Group to sing for us. Lovely voices, they . . . I was really in bad shape, the game before that I had a 300 game going, got nervous, and blew the second frame . . . They're no good, they flunked my boy friend right out of Villanova. How many'd he flunk? . . . Five . . . He's so big and muscular, I hope he plays ball again next year when I'm a sophomore . . . And then to cap it off, I get home and find my parents moved . . . Y'know, that parking lot's really a nice place if you're a body and fender man . . . I should have known it when I found my lunches packed in road maps . . .

The comments you have just read are both true and fictitious, although you could readily hear any of them in the Dougherty Hall lounge.

Some day, as you look over your shoulder at a soon-to-be-girl-in-white, look around and gather some of the interesting comments made.

You'll be surprised, especially when you look in your pocket for your wallet and find it gone. You see, as you were concentrating on the conversation, someone else was concentrating too.

All of which may just go to prove the old adage—something about minding one's own business.

Villanova Singers, Spires Thrill Collegiate Audiences

by Ed Bride

It's probably never been said that Villanova is getting a national prominence through its glee club (the Villanova Singers), or through their folk section, the Spires, or through the University Dance Band. It may never be said; but the fact is, that these groups are leaving a lasting impression on colleges throughout the East.

They opened at the Notre Dame Academy on Long Island on Friday evening, and thrilled an audience of townfolk and relatives of the Academy's Seminarians.

Glee Gleaners

They then joined the College of New Rochelle Glee Club for a concert on Saturday.

The combined groups opened the activities with Bach's "Gratias Agimus Tibi" to set the stage for what was to prove a revealing and highly entertaining concert. The girls left, temporarily, while the Singers voiced four Ecclesiastical selections that settled the audience, which was already surprised.

Then came a specialty. Joseph Prestileo performed Giordaono's "Amor Ti Vieta" and Lara's "Granada," leaving the crowd spellbound.

This, in turn, set the stage for thirteen talented men who call themselves the "Spires" a "group within a group," as leader Tom Picardo put it. They, of course, captured the hearts of the girls with some folk selections. Renditions of "Malaguena" and the spirtual "Glory Road" were perhaps the best numbers of the evening, with the possible exception of the Alma Mater.

High Praises

After several complimentary words (off stage) from many different by-standers that the Main Line Singers had out-done the Fordham Glee Club, we expected a let-down from the CNR group. It was quite a surprise to find them a well-disciplined and underestimated ensemble. Their liturgical selections were followed by soloist Joan Galletta and then more variety to round out a highly educational and noteworthy portion.

Villanova director, Mr. Herbert Fiss, was the picture everyone has in mind of the vocal director: baton in hand, smile on face, and in perfect control of his group. He is so knowledgeable about this type of music that he could recognize the talents of accompanist Nicholas Salvatore, who had a good chance to show his wares during "Malaguena."

CNR director James Welch, as can be expected with a Catholic girls college, was prone to use short liturgical numbers for about half the performance, but when the soloist took over, she set the stage to showcase the versatility of the rest of the chorus, also.

The affair ended brilliantly with the combined clubs rendering Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," a number which showed strong points of both groups and marvelous co-operation.

It was then time for the Dance Band to show a different kind of entertainment to the many parents and alumni present. Although not in peak form, the band fulfilled its purpose of getting the students acquainted through the magic of dancing.

The Spires were asked to perform during one of the breaks and stole the show again. This time, they were allotted more time and freedom, so that they could insert humor, dedications, and background, while having the opportunity to feature soloists Tom Picardo and Jim Croche.

The Suzaki String Quartet performs before a relatively meager crowd in the first of a series of five chamber music concerts.

Suzuki String Four Bows At First Fete; Features Schumann

by Norb Dusyn

The first concert in a series of five chamber music concerts was held last Sunday in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Fine performances of the String Quartet in D major by Mozart, the String Quartet (1904) by Maurice Ravel, and the String Quartet in A major, op. 41, No.3, by Schumann, were given by the Suzuki String Quartet.

Jay Humeston, cello, was by far the best performer of the group, His excellence with his instrument was shown in the Mozart Quartet in which violin cello plays a prominent, even solositic, part.

Yumi Ninomiya was a little shaky in her performances. In conversation with Miss Niomiya before the concert, she frankly admitted that she was "scared". This fear proved to be an obstruction to her total success in the concert.

Miwako Ninomiya, and the founder, Mr. Hidetaro Suzuki, seemed to sense the nervousness of the second violinist, because they played in a such a manner as to aid her, carrying her through her uncertainty with cautious handling of their parts.

Mr. Suzaki, first violin, began studying his instrument in 1944 in his native land, Tokyo, Japan. Since 1956 he has been studying under Mr. Eferem Zimbalist at the Curtiss Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Yumi Ninomiya, second violin, also a native of Tokyo, has been studying with Ivan Galakian at Curtis since 1961. Niwako Ninomiya, sister of Yumi, is also a student of Mr. Galamian and has been in Philadelphia since 1958. She is presently teaching at the Wilmington School of Music.

Jay Humeston cello, unlike the others, is a native of the United States, coming from Kentucky. Mr. Humeston is privileged to have been a soloist for the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Junior Students' Concert Series last spring.

The series will have four other concerts to be held later this spring.

Eavesdropper Strikes Again! Target: Dougherty Lounges

by Ron Gladis

If you don't feel like studying and you're not at all interested in a 3.00 cum, I've found the perfect place for you—the Dougherty Hall lounges.

You know them, the places where the floors are marred by carelessly flung bobby pins. Another attractive feature of the lounges is the esoteric conversation of the students (including the nurses).

The following is a good illustration.

. . . But you forget the differential exponent . . . Is she? Well, I never would have thought it . . . Hey, pledge, go to the Pie Shoppe and get me a—forget it . . . And if my daddy can pull some strings, I should be on the islands by mid-June . . . That the area is a function of . . . Hey, look who just walked in . . . Yea . . . Well, let me say this about that, I . . . And then for kicks sometimes we throw chewing gum on Lancaster Pike and catch sports cars . . . Hawaii is nice in mid-June . . . Good old Liz! . . . I mean, I've met some girls before but never like you . . . Aw, c'mon, what do you mean we've got a fallout shelter! . . . So then he tells me that a real beer drinker only punches one hole in his beer can . . . And saw the room was in an uproar and shouted, "Order! order!" So I yell, "Two beers!" . . . Y'know, she's not bad for a nurse, that is. As a matter of fact, neither is her girl friend, for a nurse, that is . . . Y'know, I've been here too long . . .

Moving to the other side of the East Lounge:

. . . But we've come to the conclusion that underneath his phony exterior, there's a real, down - to - earth, honest-to-goodness fraud . . . So as I pull into the parking lot, I slip on the ice and mash this guy's fender; nobody was hurt, but . . . And then once in a while we sit in the Pie Shoppe and start rumors . . .Oh, boy! here come the Pi Theta Chi Choral Group to sing for us. Lovely voices, they . . . I was really in bad shape, the game before that I had a 300 game going, got nervous, and blew the second frame . . . They're no good, they flunked my boy friend right out of Villanova. How many'd he flunk? . . . Five . . . He's so big and muscular, I hope he plays ball again next year when I'm a sophomore . . . And then to cap it off, I get home and find my parents moved . . . Y'know, that parking lot's really a nice place if you're a body and fender man . . . I should have known it when I found my lunches packed in road maps . . .

The comments you have just read are both true and fictitious, although you could readily hear any of them in the Dougherty Hall lounge.

Some day, as you look over your shoulder at a soon-to-be-girl-in-white, look around and gather some of the interesting comments made.

You'll be surprised, especially when you look in your pocket for your wallet and find it gone. You see, as you were concentrating on the conversation, someone else was concentrating too.

All of which may just go to prove the old adage—something about minding one's own business.

Publication Plans For 'Concept' Issue Being Formulated

Final plans are now being made for the publication of Concept, the student journal of fact and opinion. It will go on sale the second week of April in the University Shop and in Dougherty Hall.

The magazine, published annually for the first time, will feature articles and discussions written by members of the graduate and undergraduate university. The editors, Peter Murray and Paul Norton, have extended the scope of material to include the sciences, the arts, the social and business world. In this issue, humor and philosophy both hold special places.

Now in its third year, the magazine strives to serve as an organ of academic expression and attempts to foster intellectual curiosity among the student body apart from the prescribed curricula.

Featured in the forthcoming issue is a "Colloquium on the Intellectual and Cultural Outlook of a Catholic University." This is in the form of a panel discussion by two faculty members and two students. Other articles include; "Exposition on Buddhism," "Touches on Time," "Rebellion and Love," "The ambiguity of Modern Poetry,"

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Robert E. White, Professor of Chemical Engineering, is a member of the Committee of Award which will select the 1963 winner of the Kirkpatrick Award for Chemical Engineering Achievement.

The award is presented every other year by Chemical engineering a McGraw-Hill publication to the company making the most meritorious contribution to the advance of the chemical process industries and the chemical engineering profession. The award recognizes group effort rather than individual achievement.

The Committee of Award—heads of the 101 accredited chemical engineering departments in U. S. colleges and universities—will select the five best entries from among the companies nominated. The five finalists will be reviewed by a board of judges in August for final selection of the winner.

The winning company will receive a bronze-plaque at a formal dinner on Dec. 3.

A Navy Information Team will be in Dougherty Hall on Tuesday, March 19, to discuss the Navy Officer Candidate School Program with interested students.

The Naval Officer Candidate School provides a program whereby young men and women with college degrees may obtain commissions after four months schooling at Newport, Rhode Island. Application for selection may be submitted at any time after completion of the junior year.

During the weekend of March 23, the fraternities at Villanova will hold their inter-frat party and dinner dances.

Previously each fraternity held a separate dinner dance, but this year Delta Pi Mu and Phi Kappa Pi will hold their dinner dance together at the Falcon House.

Jack Collins, chairman of the Interfraternity Council, said that over 250 couples are expected at the functions during the weekend.

Dr. Stanley Weismann has announced that there is still time left to enroll in a six-week Reading Improvement Course which will be given from March 25 to May 10.

This course, stressing reading improvement, speed skills, as well as comprehension, and the reading correlation between the classroom and studies will be offered only one more time for this spring semester.

The Psychological Services Department is offering this free, non-credit, academic course to all interested undergraduates. Students may register in the department offices.

exams. The purpose behind the legislation is to give the student an opportunity to comprehensively cover the material.

The Council also established through an amendment to its Constitution Sigma Kappa as the Tutoring Association of Villanova. Sigma Kappa will now take on the same status as the Blue Key as a service organization.

NFCCS Dues

The following appropriations were announced to the Congress. A sum of $300 was appropriated to the Movie Committee for a new projector and screen and $810 to pay the NFCCS national and regional dues.

An appropriation of $550 for obtaining John Ciardi as part of the Speaker Program was defeated by the Senate. The Conservative Club, however, received $25 for the purpose of obtaining William Kinter as a speaker. The lecture will be jointly sponsored by the Conservative Club and the Student Council.

Spring Elections

Vice President Bill DiPaolo also announced that spring nominations and elections will be held on March 21 and April 17 respectively. It was futhermore pointed out to the Congress that Monday March 18 is officially the Student Council Holiday for this year and not March 15 as was rumored.

Completing the activity of the meeting, resolutions voicing Villanova's preference for the repeal of the four percent sales tax on books and establishing a Safety Belt Day in the Villanova parking lot on April 27 both received passage.

brook described it as more than just a financial theory. Conservatism is a "whole field of governmental philosophy that covers considerably more than economics alone."

Conservatives, in Mr. Ashbrook's view, are always asked to supply answers to questions which Liberals find impossible. Conservatism is a "natural American philosophy—all Americans are basically Conservatives."

Congressman Ashbrook criticized Liberal moves to expand the size and power of the Federal Government because, in his view, such Federal control of the individual always removes some individual freedoms.

"Freedom," he said, "begets morality and implies opportunity —and both of these are the cornerstones of our prosperous society — not Governmental control." He described Federal control as the most dangerous influence on the individual's Constitutional rights.

Where Liberals scoff at individual freedoms because "the individual does not know how to live and must be educated in life," Conservatives seek to preserve the Constitution and the freedoms it guarantees.

produced separately, stars Frank Thornton as Don Juan, Kathleen Harshberger as Dona Ana, his lover, and Richard Harshberger as the Devil. Mr. Harshberger may be remembered from his lead in Kataki.

An innovation with this play will be the opportunity afforded to the audience of discussing the production afterwards with the actors and directors. Criticism of a constructive nature will be heartily welcomed.

The production dates are March 22, 23, 24; and 29, 30, and 31. Tickets will go on sale March 17.

Wildcat Number Eleven, An All-American

by Roy Baron

Looking through the trophy cases which line the first floor corridor in Dougherty Hall, one notices the many large trophies and plaques of silver and gold. Certainly all of these are great tributes to Villanova teams and Villanova athletes.

Perhaps the highest tribute to an athlete is not one of these silver or gold pieces but rather the old basketball jersey bearing the number "11." Through the retiring of his jersey Villanova has cited its first All-American basketball player, Paul Arizin.

A Classic Story

To those who are not familiar with the Arizin story one might describe it as a classic story. Here was a boy who merited his scholarship to Villanova on his scholastic ability not on his athletic prowess.

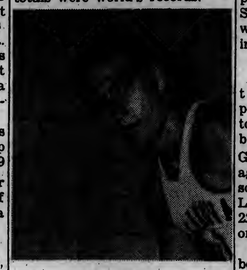
In fact, he was told by the coach at his high school that he was not good enough to play high school ball. And he was cut from the squad.

He continued to play in the recreation leagues in Philadelphia, and intramural ball at Villanova, however. After his freshman year he was asked by Coach Al Severance to try out for the team. Now that someone had shown an interest in him he was determined to prove that he did have the ability.

The rest is history. It is written in the record books of the N.C.A.A. and the N.B.A. Currently it is being written into those of the Eastern Basketball League.

Slow Start

Paul made the starting five for the opening game in his first season of scholastic ball, his sophomore year at Villanova. He was unable to score in his first game. From this slow start he improved steadily, hitting a game high of 27 points and pulling down countless rebounds.



In the 1948-49 season, his junior year, Arizin took up where he had left off, scoring 19 points in the opening game. For this he was named "Player of the Week" by the Philadelphia sports writers.

Scores 85 Points

The night of February 12, 1949 was a night to remember for the one thousand fans who were at the Main Line Field House.

That night Arizin scored 85 points in a 117-25 rout of the Naval Air Material Station. Paul hit on 12 of his first 14 shots and had a total of 23 points before the Material Center could sink a field goal.

During the second half only two shots were taken by the other four players. Tom Sabol, all alone, dunked a two-pointer and was almost booed out of the Field House for shooting. During this half Arizin scored 51 of his 85 points. Both of these totals were world's records.

Paul Arizin

Several times he refused to shoot. He kept passing the ball back out as it was thrown in to him. But his mates would immediately throw it back to the 6'4" center.

Ironic Sidelight

The most ironic fact about the whole game was that the referee, Obie O'Brien, coach at LaSalle high school, had been the one to cut Paul from the team when Arizin was a student at LaSalle.

Arizin's 28 points against Georgetown late that season broke the Philadelphia collegiate season's scoring record of 515 points set by St. Joseph's George Senesky. He finished the season with a 22 point average, second in the nation.

Tournament Standout

In the post season N.C.A.A. tournament, Paul scored 30 points in an opening round loss to Kentucky, outshining everybody's All-American, 6-7 Alex Groza. The following night against the nation's leading scorer, Yale All-American Tony Lavelli, Arizin not only hit for 22 points but also held Lavelli to only one field goal.

His senior year was to be his best. Paul opened the season with 24, 21, 30, and 32 points in his first four games. He broke the career 1000 point mark against St. Mary's, and led an unbeaten team into the Sugar Bowl at Christmas time.

Sugar Bowl M.V.P.

Villanova lost both games in the tournament, bowing to Kentucky in overtime 57-56 and to Tulane 58-55. Despite these two setbacks Paul's 50 points for the two encounters were enough to give him the Most Valuable Player Award.

Later in the season Arizin broke the Palestra scoring record with a 41 point effort against Seton Hall. He finished the season with 735 points, just five short of the all-time high for major college players, and a career total of 1,596 points. His senior season average was 25.4 points.

In a total of 17 out of 29 games at least one opposing center fouled out trying to guard Arizen. In his only meeting with Chet Giermak of William and Mary, the only major college player to score more points than he that season, Arizin scored 24 and completely handcuffed Giermak who scored only 6.

Player of the Year

He was named to the first team All-America by the Associated Press, the United Press, and Look Magazine among others. He was also named by the Sporting News as Player of the Year. In the balloting for this award he won out over a more than slightly famous Holy Cross All-American, Bob Cousy.

Rifle Team Finishes Second In Sectionals; Blades Is Top Scorer

On March 3, the Villanova Rifle Team finished second in the National Rifle Association Intercollegiate Rifle Sectionals. Fifteen teams and sixty shooters competed in the meet held at Valley Forge Military Academy.

Art Blades, team captain, fired a 287 score, the highest score of the day. The other members of the Wildcats squad, Jim Garafalo, Edward Casper and George Anderson, shot 277, 273 and 272, respectively.

Parafalo finshes fourth

In the individual meet, Garafalo, a sophomore shooter, fired a 281 to capture a fourth place medal.

Mary Ann Walsh, a sophomore nurse, received a medal as the top competitor in the woman's division. This is the first medal ever to be awarded to a female competing in a varsity sport at Villanova.

Overall, the team took eight out of a possible twenty medals and finished only a few points behind the winners, the University of Pennsylvania.

Frosh Basketball

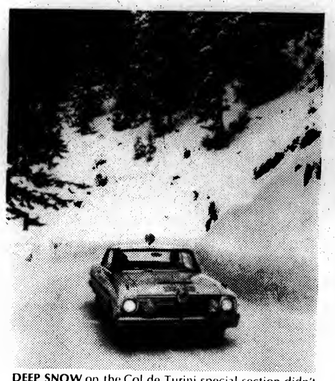
style of play. Once again they canned 93 points to out-shoot a fine Seton Hall freshman club. As usual, it was Moore, Melchionni and Benn who were the big guns. Moore poured in 26, Melchionni ripped the cords for 24 and Benn was "held" to 18.

Although they won by the fairly close margin of 7 points, 93-86, the Frosh were never in any serious trouble. They opened an early lead and held it throughout the hard-fought contest.

Seton Hall's Pirates found the Villanova offense to be difficult to contain. The Wildkittens wrecked the Jersey club with their fine assortment of shots, being especially effective from far out.

FALCON IS "NEW KING OF THE MOUNTAINS"* IN TOUGHEST 2,500-MILE MONTE CARLO RALLYE



Special edition Falcon V-8 "Sprint" defeats the world's best in final 490-mile test section on icy Alpine cliff roads . . . then outperforms every sedan on famous Monaco circuit!

Falcon picked the world's roughest winter ordeal to reveal an astonishing new brand of total performance. Four days and three nights through an inferno of ice, snow, freezing fog, endless curves —2,500 miles against an implacable time schedule, designed to try a car's reliability, road-holding and performance to the ultimate. Experts said a first-time car couldn't hope to finish—and two thirds of the 296 competitors did drop out. But Falcon not only placed first and second in its class, it defeated every car, regardless of class, on the brutal Chambery-Monte Carlo final leg, set best time among all finishers in all of the six special test sections—and showed its heels to every sedan in the dramatic three-lap elimination on Monaco's famous round-the-houses course. You couldn't get better proof of total performance anywhere!

You can read the dramatic report of the world's most rugged winter Rallye in Sports Illustrated's February 4 issue. And you can get the full story of this and Ford's other total performance accomplishments from your Ford Dealer.

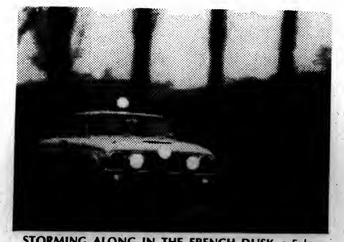
FALCONS TOOK CURVES LIKE THESE—hundreds upon hundreds of them—and proved that road-holding is not a European monopoly. In fact, Sports Illustrated magazine called them "the new kings of the mountains" and quoted a London newspaper as declaring, "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country of the world."



DEEP SNOW on the Col de Turini special section didn't even slow the "Sprint." And sure-footed Falcon also amazed the Rallye experts by its traction on glare ice.

"LACETS" is French for zigzags like these. It means "bootlaces", but to Rallye drivers it means an ultimate test of steering, stability, brakes and, above all, durability.

BEST OF ALL "TOURING" CATEGORY CARS in the three-lap Monaco circuit was the Falcon piloted by Swedish ice expert Bo Ljungfeldt. It was surpassed by only three cars, all of them two-seater sports cars in the Grand Touring category.

STORMING ALONG IN THE FRENCH DUSK, a Falcon plunges into the third night behind the special lights that let a Rallye driver see around curves, spot patches of ice, penetrate fog.

Villanova Sports Roundup

Villanova's varsity swimming team defeated Navy for the first time in ten meets last Saturday and set five records in the process.

Dick McDonough accounted for two of the new marks while Rick Girdler, the 400-yard medley relay team and the 400-yard freestyle relay team set the other three in the 'Cats 53-42 victory over the Middies.

McDonough scored his marks in the 200-yard butterfly with a time of 1:59.9 and the 500-yard freestyle (5:08.7). Dick was also a member of the record breaking 400-yard medley relay team (3:47.1).

Girdler set his record in the 200-yard freestyle, splashing across the finish in a time of 1:50.3. He also was the leadoff man on the record setting 400-yard freestyle relay team whose time was 3:15.2.

This week Villanova travels to Princeton, N.J. to participate in the E. I. S. L. Championships.

Intramural Director Ed Geisz recently announced the complete details covering the spring Intramural athletic season.

Wrapping up the winter sports season, basketball playoffs begin today, Wednesday, March 13. They will continue next Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, March 19-22. The 16 teams to compete in the tourney are to be picked from the seven existing leagues.

With bounce ball gone for another season, it is time for softball to begin. Entry forms are now available in the Intramural Office in the Alumni gym for nine planned leagues. Entries close March 21.

Umpires Needed

Umpires are needed for the games to be played on Austin, Mendel, and Simpson fields. Any interested umpires should contact Phil Gormley in Room 128 of Sullivan Hall.

The Junior-Senior Muff Day competition will be held on Wednesday, April 24, on Mendel Field. Bob Shayer will be in charge of the events. For information contact Shayer at 115 Sheehan Hall.

On April 16 Volleyball competition will begin on Sullivan and Fedigan Fields.

The annual tennis tournament will open on April 1. Paul Schmidt is handling the details in 14 Sullivan Hall.

Jones Hits Season High Of 38 As 'Cats Romp Over Pirates

by Roy Baron

Wally Jones put on his greatest show last Wednesday night, leading Villanova to a 71-64 victory over Seton Hall.

Besides helping to snap the Pirates 18 game winning streak at home, Jones broke the scoring record in the Seton Hall field house with his 38 point performance.

This victory gave the Wildcats a final regular season record of 17-8.

The two teams traded baskets for the first eight minutes. Then with 11:43 remaining in the first half Seton Hall's Sonny Sunkett picked up his third personal foul in guarding Jones, and he was taken out of the game.

Jones hit both foul shots to break the seventh tie of the game and give the Wildcats an 18-16 advantage. They were never to be headed again.

Jones followed his fouls with a jump shot giving him 13 points in less than nine minutes. A layup by Jim McMonagle gave the Wildcats a six point lead. After a time out Nick Werkman hit on a jumper from the corner. But Jim O'Brien came back with a layup, and Jones put in two more foul shots to up the count to 26-18.

Fouls Hurt the Hall

Shortly thereafter Harry Slaton, the Pirates' 6-7 rebounder, was taken out of the game with three personals. With both Sunkett and Slaton on the bench due to fouls Villanova was able to build up a 16 point, 45-29, lead by halftime.

The second half opened with a six point spurt by Seton Hall with Sunkett, back in, scoring four. After a Jones jumper the Pirates went back to work. A set shot by Randy Chave cut the Wildcat lead to two points 61-59 with 6:15 remaining. A steal by Werkman gave the Pirates their last chance to tie the score, but they failed.

Jones Ices Contest

But Wally Jones came to the rescue again, hitting another jump shot. Then O'Brien and McMonagle hit single foul shots as Villanova slowed down the game drawing fouls. After a layup by the Hall's Richie Dec, Jones came back to sink a pair of field goals to put the game out of reach with 1:20 to play.

Rugby Season Opens

This Saturday, March 16, marks the opening of the Spring season for the Rugby team of Villanova, when the Blue and White will face the West Chester Rugby Club of New York.

Coach Francis Coghlan of the History Department has "expectations of a good team and a good season" and "is hopeful for a division championship."

The squad practices in the field across from Dougherty Hall each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 3:30 and all students interested are encouraged to attend these sessions. Previous experience in Rugby is neither expected nor necessary.

Frosh Basketball Squad Drubs Penn, Finishes 11-2, Takes Big-Five Crown

by Dennis Gildea

The high-scoring Villanova Freshman cagers finished their season on a successful note this past week. They drubbed the Penn Frosh on March 4, 93-74, thereby capturing the Freshman Big Five crown.

On Wednesday March 6, they journeyed to Seton Hall where they outscored the Pirate Frosh, 93-86.

The Wildkittens' victory over Penn was one of revenge. The Quakers had edged them 63-62 earlier in the campaign, but, performing this time on their home boards, the VU Frosh had little trouble reversing the tables on their Big Five rivals.

Moore Has 27

Richie Moore, Lou Benn, Bill Melchionni and Bernie Shaffer led the scoring parade with 27, 26, 16 and 12 respectively. As a team Villanova hit on 36 of their 74 attempts from the field for a torrid 48.5% average.

Coach Devine's quintet relied mostly on long bombs from the outside to boost them to a 45 to 39 half-time lead. The Wildkittens displayed accurate shooting ability by firing their long jumpers over Penn's tight zone defense.

16 Straight

During the first five minutes of the second half, the Frosh looked positively unbeatable as they racked up 16 markers before the stunned Quakers could manage to score a point.

Melchionni and Benn refused to let a ball go by them. Their numerous steals triggered the VU fast-break which led to many easy layups.

The entire team saw action as Coach Devine substituted freely for a major part of the last half. The win enabled the Frosh to best St. Joe's for the Big Five Championship.

In their season finale against Seton Hall the Wildkittens did not deviate from their usual

Track Team Notch Four Firsts To Retire IC4A Indoor Trophy

By Tom Finan

Villanova has become the third school in track history to retire permanently the ICAAAA Indoor Championship trophy.

Five individual team victories are required to attain outright possession of this prestigious award.

Coach Jumbo Elliott's squads had won four out of the last six annual meets, so that Saturday's stellar performance in Madison Square Garden finalized the goals of Villanova trackmen.

Three Firsts

The keystone of Villanova's success was the soaring feats of Rolando Cruz, the come from behind tactics of Pat Traynor and dazzling swiftness of an all Sophomore mile relay team of Hangey, Livers, Kozlowski and Webster.

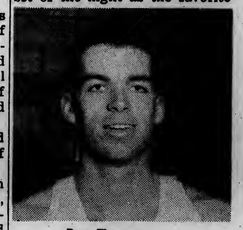
These three events comprised a hefty fifteen of VU's total of 27 points.

The evening's events began on a somber note for the Wildcats, because of the strong competition offered by Navy, Yale and Harvard. Each of these teams were thought to be a very serious threat against Jumbo's chances of getting that coveted honor.

As the evening droned on, however, it was evident to all in the crowded and smoky arena that the individual talent of the Villanova squad in certain key events would prove to be the decisive factor of victory.

Pole Vault

The Main Liners got off to a "flying" start with the two key vaults of Cruz who made 15-9 on his third try, thereby shaking off his closest foe, Dick Plymale of Army.



He then went on further to clear 16-1, on his first try, for an unofficial indoor record. However three attempts at 16-4 were not successful, but Cruz had already won the event.

These early five counters admittedly helped Coach Elliott "to feel a little better."

In the two mile event, Pat Traynor brought the 11,501 fans to a cheering frenzy as he broke out from the pack and proceeded to take the lead with 3.5 laps to go, in the 22 lap event, and scored a decisive victory in 9:02.1.

Traynor, in this, his first indoor triumph, crushed the chances of the much-favored Bobby Mack of Yale, who attempted to challenge Pat's lead at the finish but was fought off by the determined Wildcat.

The mile relay proved the upset of the night as the favorite team of Morgan State was dumped by the VU quartet of Hangey, Livers, Kozlowski, and Webster for a new meet record of 3:16.3.

Anchorman Don Webster was eight yards behind Nick Lee of Morgan State at the baton exchange, but began at once to close the gap and passed on the final lap to zoom into first place and set one of the five meet-record performances of the night.

Sophomore Tom Sullivan of Chicago finished second in the mile run, after breaking away from much-heralded Howard Deardorff of Penn State, thereby gaining four additional points.

The 1000 yard run was captured by Ireland's Noel Carroll in a 2:11:1 clocking, which garnered another five points for the Villanovans.

Finally Vir Zwolak's third in the two mile run, finishing after Traynor and Mack, was worth three points.

NIT Foes To Prove Rough For Courtmen

DePaul

By Tom Bruderle

Facing Villanova in the first game tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden is DePaul University.

The Scarlet and Blue bring in a 14-7 record against some tough competition. They split two games with seeded Marquette, and the total winning margin was but 13 points. DePaul also suffered defeats at the hands of Providence and St. Bonaventure. Victories have come over Detroit, Indiana, Bowling Green and a split with Notre Dame.

High scorer

The top point-collector for the Blue Demons is M.C. Thompson with 16.9 points per game. The 6-5 senior was picked on the Motor City Tournament team over the Christmas Holidays. The big forward also leads in rebounding with a 12.3 average.

In the other corner is 6-5 Dick Cook. Last year and this season, Cook had showed signs of greatness; however, his play has been inconsistent. Cook, averaging 14.3 ppg., has the ability to shoot from the outside and drive.

At center is 6-9 Bill Debes. During the season, Debes has improved his speed, shooting and team play but weak eyes and an inability to handle the ball have hampered him. He averages 8.1 ppg. and is third in rebounding.

Starting at a guard spot will be 6-2 Jim Murphy. Only a sophomore, Murphy is the best DePaul performer for the last 10 games.

The man who will probably guard Villanova's Wally Jones is Dennis Fruend (pronounced friend.) He is a good sound player on both offense and defense and rarely gives up the ball as the result of an error. The 6-1 junior is the key to DePaul's offensive patterns and average 9.6 ppg.

Keep your eye on Timmette Bryant if he sees action. The 6-1 junior had 26 point game performances against Marquette and Minnesota. When he was healthy, DePaul won its first eight games of the season, but an attack of hepatitis kept him out of the lineup for the next 13 games. Bryant is an expert ball handler.

Backing up the starters are 6-0 Dan Laffey, 6-4 Walt Katuzny, 6-4 Jesse Nash, 6-1 Dave White, 5-11 Greg Bush and 5-11 Tom Biebel.

Wichita

By Joe McCarthy

With the outlook in the Villanova-DePaul contest somewhat favorable to the Villanovan, there is another obstacle two days later, that of the Wichita Shockers.

The seeded Wichita squad brings to Madison Square Garden a highly touted team, one that ranks sixth in the nation despite six loses. And Coach Ralph Miller, who suffered the injustice of a losing season during his first try twelve years ago, has not undergone this experience since.

Among its 19 victories are included four that have been over teams ranked above them in the ratings. they have defeated both Cincinnati (23-1) by one point and Arizona State (24-2) by one in overtime. The Shockers also gloat about wins over Loyola (24-2) and Ohio State (20-4). All are headed to the NCAA tournament.

Their losses have come from the hands of Colorado, Tulso, St. Louis, and Bradley, North Texas State, and Cincinnati. With the exception of Colorado, they have also defeated each of these teams.

The star, leader, explanation and Paul Revere of the Shockers squad is Sophomore sensation Dave Stallworth, 6-7 and 200 pounds. Stallworth, averaging 22.8, has already started to rewrite the Wichita record book by scoring 593 points this year and pouring 46 through the hoop in one game. Both eclipsed the old school record and indicate portents of being the school's greatest.

In the backcourt, the Shockers have Len Kelley 6-1 and Ernie Moore 5-10, averaging 11.1 and 11.0 respectively. Wildcats Eric Erickson and Wally Jones should be at least their equal.

At center there is another sophomore Nate Bowman, 6-10, giving the Shockers great height up front. Bowman, though averaging 9.3 ppg, also gains note in the foul department, avreaging 4.4 per contest.

Carrying a sixteen man squad with good bench strength, Wichita has been strong offensively, and somewhat weak defensively and must be "up" for any game to win. They have hit 45 per cent from the field while averaging 73.2 per game. And with the tightened Wildcat defense of the last 13 games, the guess is that the 'Cats can stymie the Shocker offense while forcing its big men to foul, thus squeaking out an upset.

Shaw's 'Don Juan In Hell' Premieres In Graduate Theatre's New Playbox

by Robert Campbell

Don Juan in Hell, the second of a series of plays slated for the new Villanova Playbox, will open Friday evening, March 22, at 8:30 p.m.

Actually, the play is a lengthy dream sequence from act three of George Bernard Shaw's Man and Superman.

Basisally, the play tells of the seduction of Donna Ana by the legendary Don Juan in Mozart's Don Giovanni, and of her subsequent journey through hell. Here she encounters Don Juan, who yearns for heaven and who constantly argues with his host, the Devil.

Shaw's "hell" is a rather fashionable and pleasant place for those whose taste runs counter to the joys of paradise.

Actually a discussion play, Don Juan in Hell, unlike the earlier production, Kataki, will include the audience in its presentation.

During the play, the actors address the audience, conversing with them, sitting among them frequently, and on one occasion, offering them a before-dinner "cocktail."

The Paul Gregory Drama Quartet performed the last professional production of the rarely staged play a decade ago on Broadway.

Designer Thomas Nevins has constructed a set which converts the small arena of Classroom Annex 101 into a "diabolical conversation pit," replete with glowing coals, flames, stairways to "heaven," and the "diabolical palace" to which the Devil and one of his friends retire to listen to the strains of Mozart.

The production dates for this play are March 22, 23, 24 and 29, 30, 31, at 8:30 p.m. with an additional matinee March 30 at 2:00 p.m.

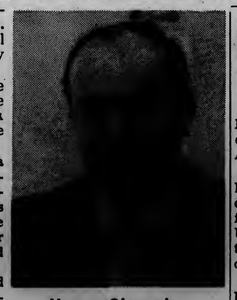
Vice-President Glascock Addresses WWVU Staff On Radio Industry

Harvey L. Glascock, Vice-President of Metropolitan Broadcasting Company and General Manager of WIP, Philadelphia, will address the staff of WWVU on Wednesday, March 27.



The theme of the address will be "College Radio in Relation to Today's Broadcast Industry." The lecture will be held in the faculty lounge on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Before the talk, Glascock will have dinner with University President Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, in the President's private dining room. Also attending the dinner will be Raymond Wilke, faculty moderator of WWVU.

All personnel of WWVU are strongly urged to attend the lecture by Station Manager Mark Devaney. The talk will also be open to the public.

Glascock came to Philadelphia three years ago when Metropolitan purchased WIP, and is credited with bringing the station its to present high standing. He was formerly General Manager of WHK, Metromedia's Cleveland outlet.

Also, WIP recently donated over 4,000 records to the Villanova station.

Eleventh Shamokinaki Dance Features Continuous Music

The eleventh annual Shamokinaki Dance, benefiting the Augustinian Missions in Japan, will be held in the Field House Friday night, March 29 from 9:00 p.m. until 1:00 a.m.

Continuous entertainment will be the keynote of the affair, the only social event at Villanova during Lent. The Villanovans will provide dance music, and the Revelers, a band composed of Villanova grads and undergrads, will play during intermissions.

Tea Set

A Japanese tea set will be given as a door prize. Programs will be given to all couples, and favors will be distributed among all ladies attending.

On hand as a special guest will be Rev. Edward Hatrick, OSA, the Prior of the Augustinian community in Japan.

Tickets are presently on sale in the Pie Shoppe and the C & F cafeteria for $2.00 per couple. The price will be raised to $2.50 on March 26; hence, those expecting to attend are urged to purchase their tickets early.

Last year, $5,900 was raised for the missions by the affair. This year, as in the past, money will come from the sale of dance tickets, collections taken among the student body, and advertisements and sponsors in the dance program.

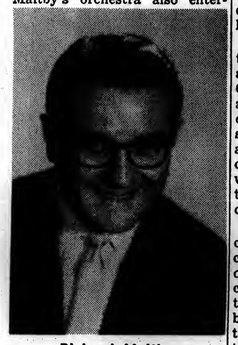
The original Shamokinaki was a square dance and was held in the Field House on January 9, 1953.

It was intended as a farewell to Rev. Thomas Purcell, OSA, who was being sent from Villanova to become the first Prior to the Augustinian Missions in Nagasaki, Japan.

Big Blast

Since the first affair was a financial success, the dance was held annually from that time. This year will be the sixth time the Villanovans will provide dance music for the annual affair.

Rev. Robert M. Burke, OSA, moderator of the Shamokinakis, hopes this year's dance will gross $6,000.



Richard Maltby's Orchestra Set For Junior Dinner Dance

The culmination of the Junior Week activities will be the Junior Dinner Dance which will be held on Saturday, April 27, in the main ballroom of the Sheraton Hotel.

Tickets for the affair will be on sale in the Student Council office after March 26 at $15 per couple. For the first week-only, full tables will be available for reservation. Four, five, six, or eight couples constitute a full table. After April 1, only three couples will be necessary to reserve a table. Individual couples will be able to make reservations after Easter.

Neil Stoneback is general chairman of the formal affair which will begin with cocktails at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:15 p.m.

Richard Maltby and his orchestra will provide music for dancing after the dinner. Mr. Maltby's orchestra also entertained at the Junior Dinner Dance of 1960. He has been acclaimed by universities and publications throughout the country. He has played for over 125 different colleges and universities.

Richard Maltby

Besides his numerous personal appearances, Maltby and his orchestra have recorded many albums and single records. The Junior Dinner Dance promises to be the highlight of the week and the perfect follow-up to the appearance of Peter, Paul, and Mary.

Dance is under the direction of a specially selected committee of the Student Council.

Majority Of Freshmen Have Completed Tests According To Director

Dr. W. Porter Swift, Director of Psychological Testing, has announced that the majority of freshman have completed the battery of tests. Those who have not completed the tests will be notified by the deans of their respective departments.

Over 1400 Freshmen and upperclassmen have taken the tests since September, while over 400 students have been counseled about their scores. Some Seniors have taken the tests voluntarily to acquire a better degree of orientation towards suitable jobs they may have talent for.

The Psychological Services Department has been building up an occupational information library consisting of catalogs from over 200 colleges and graduate schools. They have also compiled folders and pamphlets on professions, such as the FBI and the AMA, and certification requirements around the country related to these various professions.

The new Psychological bulletin board lists special school programs and fellowships available to graduate students.

Committee Postpones Spring Book Program For Lack Of Interest

The Student-Faculty Committee, in its most recent session, voted to postpone this year's "Book of the Semester" program in order to give itself time to re-evaluate the apparent cold shoulder that the program received from the student body last semester.

The selection for last semester, the controversial Conscience of a Conservative by Senator Barry Goldwater, managed to sell only a few copies out of the special order of the book in the University Shop. This, as well as the apathetic approach of the students to the program in general, was convincing enough to pave the way for the Committee's decision.

The question yet to be uncovered is whether this attitude can be traced to a lack of interest on the part of the Student Council, whose job it is to implement the program, or the student body, or whether the selection of the book itself was a basis for the student's apparent disregard of it.

Nevertheless, the program will be definitely discontinued for this semester.

Class Nominations Scheduled Tomorrow At Three Locations

Nominations for Sophomore and Junior class officers will be held tomorrow, Thursday, March 21 at at various places on campus.

The elections of officers of all student organizations must be held before April 8, 1963, Class elections will be conducted on April 4.

Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student Activities told all campus organizations in a memo last week that the requirements for election to a major post remain the same as in previous years. The names of all candidates must be submitted to the Dean of Student Activities one week prior to elections. Each candidate must have at least a 2.50 cumulative average.

The nominations for class officers will take place at three locations.

Junior (Classof '64) nominations will be held at 10:30 in 303 CF; Sophomores (Class of '65), 10:30 in 207 CF; and Freshmen (Class of 1966), 12:30, 209 CF.

The Student Council joint meeting and elections will occur on Monday, April 8.

'Lynx' Deadline

Frank Murphy, editor-in-chief of the Lynx, the literary magazine, has announced the relocation of the magazine's editorial offices.

The editors have announced that the deadline for all contributions for the spring edition is March 22. All contributions may be left in 311 Sullivan Hall.

Geology Chairman Yen Departs For Europe On Leave Of Absence

Dr. John T. C. Yen, Chairman of the Geology Department and Professor of Geology at Villanova University, departed Thursday, March 7, for a trip to Europe.

Dr. Yen, on a ten-month leave of absence from Villanova will conduct research in Austria, France and Switzerland. The subject of his research will be the biostratigraphic correlations between North America and Europe.

While in Europe he will also deliver a lecture to a German university group. He is scheduled to return to this area December 23.

A new member has been added to the Geology Department. He is Dr. John Riva.

Heitzmann Elected President Of Southeast Region PSEA

Wm. Ray Heitzmann, a junior Education major, and a member of the sports staff of the Villanovan, was elected regional president of the South East region of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, on March 9, at West Chester State College.

Heitzmann has recently been elected president of the Villanova chapter of P.S.E.A. Last year he was vice-president and publicity chairman of the local chapter. He attended the Regional Convention and the Allenbory Leadership Conference for local chapter leaders as the P.S.E.A. representative.

The Regional Convention will be held at Villanova next semester, and all students from local chapters in the area will attend this convention.

Future activities of the Association will include a speech by Father Joseph Burns, OSA, on "The Catholic Philosophy of Education." At the same time a pamphlet entitled "Catholic Education" will be distributed by the Association.

Gerald Flood, moderator, has announced the officers for the forthcoming academic year: Wm. Ray Heitzmann, president; Steve McNamara, vice-president; William Roccia, Secretary; James McGinty, Treasurer; and Richard Pazdan, Student Council Representative.

Peace Corps Representative To Speak Concerning Program

Dr. John Landgraf, former Peace Corps Representative in North Borneo and Sarawak, will visit Villanova University, on Friday, March 22 to meet with students and faculty members in West Lounge Dougherty at 10:30 a.m.

Dr. Landgraf, who is on leave from New York University where he is Associate Professor of Anthropology, served as head of the Peace Corps program in North Borneo and Sarawak from its inception. He did research for his Ph.D. while working with the late Clyde Kluckholm of Harvard among the Navaho Indians in New Mexico.

New Trainees

"Nearly 3,000 additional volunteers will man the 100 new Peace Corps projects slated to begin training this spring and summer. We want every interested person to know about these projects and the specific jobs that they could be doing," the speaker said.

Good Citizens

Volunteers, who must be American citizens with no dependents under 18, receive three months of intensive training at an American college or university in the customs, history, culture and language of the host country. Refresher courses are given in the skills that the Volunteers will use on the job. Additional training is given at the Peace Corps' training camps in Puerto Rico and in the host country.

Volunteers serve for two years and receive a living allowance to cover housing, food, clothing and other expenses, plus a readjustment allowance of $75 for each month of service.

Females Too

Married couples are eligible if both qualify for the same project and have no dependents under 18. There is no upper age limit.

Anyone interested in more information about the Peace Corps should contact Father George Riley, Peace Corps Liaison Officer, Villanova University, at LA 5-4600.

Classics Department Presents Lecture By Dr. John O'Meara

"Augustine the Artist and the Aeneid" was the topic of the lecture delivered by Dr. John O'Meara on Monday, March 11. The lecture was sponsored by Villanova's Department of Classics.

Throughout the lecture, Dr. O'Meara discussed the various levels of suggestion and literary reminiscences found in the writings of Saint Augustine. Stressing the artistic temperament of both Virgil and Augustine, as well as the role of memory and assimilation in their writings, he demonstrated how the influence of rhetoric on both contributed to the use of a poetic diction.

Judge John Murtagh Addresses Forum In Final Session Of Scholastic Year

by Jim Brennan

John R. Murtagh, Administrative Judge, Criminal Court of the City of New York, addressed the final Villanova Law Form of the year on Thursday evening, March 14. The topic was entitled "Public Law and Private Morals."

Judge Murtagh opened his lecture by praising Villanova's Law School and stating that he is sorry he never had the opportunity to study under religious auspices. Expanding on this feeling, he went on to say that one's career will be shaped by the Lord's destiny.

Because of his familiarity with the problem of alcholism, Judge Murtagh heaped special praise on the work of Alcoholics Anonymous. He feels that they have done wonders with the drinking problems, and that their work is an application of Christ's principles to a present-day enigma.

In discussing the narcotics question, he avowed that there is no reliable cure for drug addiction. The traditional approach to this problem in the United States has been the penal one, but Judge Murtagh questions the degree of success achieved by putting the offender in jail.

Concerning homo-sexuality, he stated that nothing can be found in the "behavioral sciences" to help this problem, but there is strong evidence in the writings of the clergy that these deviates have received help through the sacraments.

The main point the speaker made was that to solve these perplexities of human degradation. men must look to the philosophical and theological writings of the Church.

Judge Murtagh feels that society needs a complete revaluation of its present program. Putting people in jail is not really the answer to these human problems, for incarceration accompliishes nothing in the line of rehabilitation. The offenders are only worse when they are released.

Sigma Kappa Organization To Administer Tutor Program

The Student Council has announced its plans to inaugurate a new tutor organization, Sigma Kappa, to replace the tutoring association formerly administered by the Council.

It was decided that the administration of a tutoring society was entirely too large a project for the Student Council to handle alone. In order to provide better service for students in need of tutoring Sigma Kappa will be organized.

It is emphasized that this is entirely volunteer work. Only those students who need tutoring and those who want to help their fellow students need apply.

This type of program will aid those students who are in danger as well as provide an excellent review for their tutors. Applicants must have at least a "B" in those subjects they wish to tutor.

On Thursday, March 21, a meeting will he held to gather volunteers for administrative work of the organization. Those who are in difficulty academically and other individuals interested in aiding them should attend this meeting.

Aside from this there will be a table set up in Dougherty Hall to sign up volunteers.

Tom Stanley and Jim Friel, formerly of the Student Council Tutor Program, will carry the administrative duties of Sigma Kappa. At the end of the semester, permanent appointments will be made in an attempt to make Sigma Kappa a strong and lasting organization.

Any student desiring more information about this program is urged to attend this meeting or seek it from a member of the Student Council.

New Schedule Wanted By Student Council For Coming Autumn

The Student-Faculty Committee by unanimous vote in its last meeting, has decided in favor of the recommendation sent to it by the Student Council to apply to the administration for a change in semester scheduling beginning next year.

The change would include first semester classes beginning no later than one week following Labor Day and ending by the time classes recess for Christmas vacation. The Christmas recess would then be combined with the mid-semester break, and the second semester would be scheduled closely in line with the present set-up.

The Committee, headed by Father Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Student Affairs Vice President, Mr. James E. Whalen, Professor of Philosophy, and Mr. Joseph W. Ratigan, Associate Professor of English, and including various student representatives, has sent the motion to the administration where it is now pending their approval.

Senior Car Privilege Rules To Be Stressed By Council

Last semester, through the concerted efforts of the Student Council, the administration, and especially Mal Carton and Jim McErlane, last year's co-Chairmen of Student Activities, the senior car privilege was extended to a seven day a week basis.

The Student Council spent considerable time securing this privilege and every senior is expected to co-operate fully with the necessary regulations.

The first regulation concerns the car privilege stickers, which must be conspicuously displayed at all times when the automobile is in the parking lot.

The second regulation concerns the area in which the seniors are to park their cars. The specified area is located at the extreme rear of the main lot, directly opposite to Dougherty and Austin Halls. This semester yellow lines have been painted on the surface of the lot to aid the students in parking correctly.

This year's co-Chairman, Neil Stoneback and Jim O'Conner, stress the fact that to avoid confusion with day-hop parking, it is imperative that the latter regulation be strictly observed and that resident cars be kept in the spaces provided at all times.

The entire lot is checked daily, and even one violation of this rule will mean that the student involved will lose his permit permanently. If any infractions continue, there is a possibility that the class of '64 may lose this privilege, also.

The Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, OSA has granted forty-four additional parking privileges this semester. The total now stands at 106.

Dr. George To Speak Concerning Lincoln At Second Lecture

The second speaker in the annual lecture series presented by the History Department will be Dr. Joseph George who will speak on "Lincoln After Ford's Theatre."

The lecture will be held in room 110, Commerce and Finance Building, tonight, March 20, at 7:30 p.m.

The third lecture in the series will feature Francis Coghlan speaking on "Theodore Roosevelt and Nationalism." Mr. Coghlan will lecture in room 110, Commerce and Finance building, on Wednesday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m.

Mentzer Opens Series

Opening the series was a talk by Thomas Mentzer on "Fisher Ames and the French Revolution." Mr. Mentzer's aim was to rectify a slight on Ames made by modern historians.

Ames, who was an American statesman, orator, and political writer, was the driving force of the early Federalist movement in the United States.

A prominent and distinguished lawmaker from Massachusetts, Ames was an ardent foe of liberal or democratic movements. As a conservative he believed the French revolution of 1789 the hallmark of liberty and began a strenuous campaign to combat it.

Brass Five Featured In Chamber Concert

The second in a series of five chamber music concerts sponsored by the Villanova Music society will be held at 3:00 p.m. in the West Lounge, Dougherty Hall, on Sunday, March 24.

The Philadelphia Brass Quintet composed of Edward McCoy, first trumpet, Glen Bowling, second trumpet, Robert Moore, trombone, David Gray, French horn and Donald Blakesslee, tuba.

The student-musicans are members of the Curtis Institute of Music and the Young Audience Association, a chamber music group who travel throughout the Delaware Valley presenting concerts to student groups and schools.

Donald Blakesslee, a member of this professional student group, is one of the three major tuba players in the Philadelphia area.

Waldyslaw W. Kulski To Speak March 28 On Communism Topic

The Political Science Department will present a lecture by Dr. Waldyslaw W. Kulski on Thursday, March 28 at 8 p.m. in room 110, C&F.

The subject of his talk will be: "The Present Condition of the International Communist Movement." There will be a question and answer period following the talk.

Rev. Robert J. Welsh, OSA, will act aa chairman of the lecture.

Dr. Kulski was born in Poland in 1903, and became a citizen in 1953. He holds a Master of Law degree from the Warsaw School of Law and a Doctorate of Law degree from the Paris School of Law. He was a member of the Polish diplomatic service from 1928-1945, then spent one year in the United States as a public lecturer.

Teachers Wanted

If you are an arts and science student interested in teaching but lack education courses, Temple University can solve your problem.

The university offers a graduate program for students interested in training in the fields of secondary and special education. Russel A. Hill will visit the Villanova campus on Friday, March 22, to provide more information about the program.

Candidates receive an income of $4300 the first year, and are able to earn a Master's Degree, full certification, and job tenure as members of the program. No undergraduate education courses are required.

Contact John A. Moritz, Director of Placement, to arrange an interview.

On Dougherty's PA System

The public address system in Dougherty Hall serves the useful purpose of making the students aware of sundry athletic, educational and social events. Recently complaints have been voiced concerning the misuse of these announcement facilities.

Persons who make the same announcement three times in a fifteen minute interval should take into consideration the fact that students sometimes try to study in the lounges.

It would seem to be more effective and less annoying if the announcements were made at a period somewhat longer since approximately the same number of students will be reached. Frequently the volume is turned up so loud that it is difficult to understand what is being announced.

One of the most annoying disturbances is created when a speaker forgets to turn off the system when he is finished. A nerve-wracking buzzing noise is heard until the mistake is realized.

The confusion which arises when someone attempts to broadcast music over the system must also be mentioned. The music lasts only a short time and is usually of a blaring volume. Two different stations have been known to come over the speakers at once. There is no special time when a student may anticipate such a treat; it can come at any time.

It would be desirable to have some person or persons take over the operation of the public address system and subject it to some sort of order.

A Proposal For An Awakening

by Jan Dyroff

How often does the student allow himself to become the victim of cliched thinking? Moreover, the question might be asked how often does a teacher make use of this conditioned reflex intellectual attitude of a student to sway the student to the teacher's own way of thinking?

This situation is all too common. It was my experience to be sitting in a course in one of the humanities and to hear the professor ascribe the characteristic marks of a minorty faction of political group detrimentally to the whole of the group. What was worse, the attitude of the students cluckingly was "Yes, that is so! Weren't they all terrible men"?

Unfortunately for the student, this experience is not a singular one. We have been implicitly impressed in an almost subliminal manner that such things as communism, or socialism, or any other ideology that is alien to our own is wrong and should not be considered.

It is all too evident that when some of these "isms" influence a major portion of the world that they must be considered.

But how are they considered? Do the students read the thinkers of the alien "isms" — the Husses the Calvins, the Marxes, the Faures? Or are the students presented with a commentary on these thinkers by someone safely within the proper " ism"?

A student is cheated if he is raised in an intellectual hothouse. If the university is not the place to learn the truth, — what will be the result if "the truth" is learned elsewhere?

Tax Cut vs. Recession

Recently, President Kennedy switched to the hard sell to keep his tax reduction drive moving. Originally he argued that a tax cut would lead to long-run growth and a reduction in unemployment.

Now the stress is on the tax cut as the best hope of avoiding recession. But is there actually a recession coming? And will the proposed tax program prevent a recession?

It is rather difficult to predict a recession in our complex economy. We are presently in the 25th month of a period of recovery from the fourth post-war recession.

The last three periods of recovery from recession lasted 45, 35, and 25 months in that order. If business operates in cycles, there is a possibility of a recession in the very near future. The current recovery has started to lag.

On a percentage basis, production, spending, investment and profits have not been as great as in previous recovery periods. However a recession is far from inevitable.

Most businessmen are still optimistic although by nature cautious. Also the stock market reflects more optimism in the economy than the businessmen. However the strength of the stock market is not always an accurate picture of the future. The current recovery has started to lag.

Many experts feel that the proposed tax reduction will not prevent a recession. Actually, the proposed rate reduction is too heavily weighted in favor of relief for the lower brackets which could stimulate consumption but not capital growth and hence tend to be inflationary. The problem in the slow economic growth seems to be in private investment not consumer spending.

It is doubtful that the tax cut will become effective in time to stop the expected recession. However, Congress may wake up and pass a tax bill that will be effective at an earlier date so that the Democratic party will not suffer a recession in the forthcoming election year.

The effectiveness of the administration's reasoning, that the primary effect of a tax reduction will be the prevention of an inevitable recession, could be negative. It could very well weaken confidence in our economy and hence initiate the recession it is trying to avoid.

A Plea For Repeal

It has been noted by many of the students of the university that there now exists an unfair, undemocratic sales tax of four per cent on the sales of textbooks in the state of Pennsylvania.

For the typical student in a Pennsylvania college or university, the payment of the tax is merely another financial burden with which he must cope. Added to the formidable burden of tuitions, room, board, transportation et cetera, this tax has long been criticized by both students and non-students alike.

Finally, however, the thought has made headway in the minds of several of the state legislators. A bill is now before the Finance and Taxation Committee of the General Assembly to repeal the phrase regarding the tax on textbooks.

To this end the Villanova student is encouraged to support not only vocally but also through those means he has at his hands. It is suggested that he write to his Congressman or to the Finance and Taxation Committee directly in support of this legislation.

For, certainly the state of Pennsylvania has other means by which it can raise revenue than by taxing the textbooks sold within its confines.

Blue Key Membership

by Jim Howley
President, Blue Key

With the announcement of applications for the Blue Key, it is plainly apparent to present Key members that one should try in some way to acquaint members of the college with the present society and the reason for its existence.

From the preamble, one can draw the ultimate aim and purpose of Blue Key: To promote, develop and manifest the ideals of Villanova University. In approaching these ideals, one can see that our existence is due to being of service at all times to the University. Among the services rendered, one can list many which would include Orientation, Parents' Weekend, campus tours, and college nights at various secondary schools.

The membership of the parent organization is made up of thirty present Villanovans. This includes fifteen seniors, ten juniors, and five sophomores. The members are selected on the basis of academic standings, religious record, disciplinary record, personal interview, and primarily interest in Blue Key. These criteria are all weighed by present members who interview the applicants. Women are also admitted to membership.

The ultimate aim of Blue Key members is to strive continually to exemplify the type of graduate the University in trying to produce.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

A successful student government can only be as effective as the students it represents. The Student Council is the springboard for all campus activity and, as such, must function as a stable and productive body.

The Student Council has as its guide, three purposes: it is a student government, overseeing campus organizations and activities, recognizing and providing for the welfare of the general student body; it acts as a student service organization serving the interests of the various student concerns through specific academic, cultural, and social affairs; finally, it is a centralized communication system conveying opinions and requests between the admistration and student body.

If Villanova's Student Council is to truly represent the opinion and interests of its undergraduate constituents, it must be composed of reliable and representative members. In the next few weeks, elections will be held to determine the school leaders for the following year.

Each Villanovan should take care in choosing those representatives who are sincerely interested and dedicated and who will faithfully attend to their responsibilities.

Your Student Council can be effective only through an interested student body.

Gerhard Lang conducts the Vienna Choir Boys in concert at their only Philadelphia area performance. In performing some thirteen songs and a one act comic opera, the Vienna Choir Boys astounded the audience with their wide range of musical knowledge.

The performance was held in the Field House before a near capacity crowd of two thousand music lovers.

Vienna Choir Boys Concert Displays Outstanding Talent

by Art Molitierno

How does one say they were great in five hundred words? This is both the problem and the pleasure in reviewing the recent concert of the Vienna Choir Boys at the Villanova Field House last Tuesday.

Incongruous as it might seem, just two weeks prior to their amazing performance audiences had cheered top name jazz artists in the same Field House. As was evidenced by their applause, the audience more than equally enjoyed the program of the world-renowned Vienna Choir Boys.

The program consisted of some thirteen songs and "The Village Barber," a comic opera in one act by Johann Schenk. All were executed with a fineness, delicateness, and awareness of polished musicians.

Choir Solos

To say that there were no soloists would be a gross misstatement of fact, but to say that the entire choir is one soloist would not in the least be stretching the point.

The entire choir sang with a liquidness and movement of expression that is apropos of a finely coordinated orchestra. Preciseness, range, and intonation are among the many qualities of this exceptional boys choir.

Outstanding Sopranos

Perhaps if one would speak of soloists the first and second sopranos of the choir could not go unmentioned. In the "Canite Tuba" by Jacobus Gallus, the fine voice of the lead soprano amazed the audience with bell-like clarity of tone, wide range of octaves, and breath control.

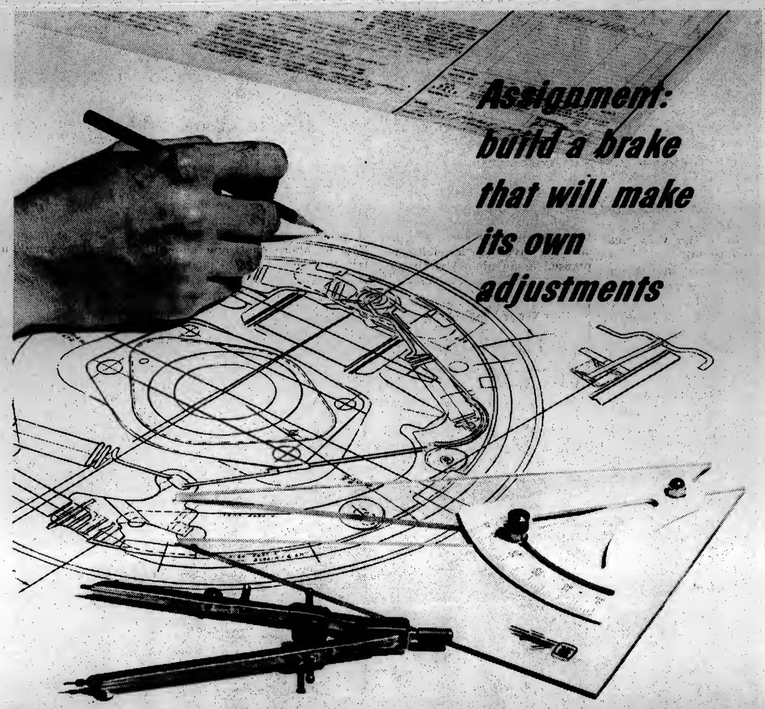
Second only to this performance was that of the second soprano in "Laudate Dominum" by Wolfgang A. Mozart. Here again, criticism can be at only a minimum point, for while executing his selection the clarity was not of the same superb quality already mentioned.

As sung by the Vienna Choir Boys, "The Village Barber" (comic opera in one act by Johann Schenk) was astounding in its professionalness. To see these twenty-two boys under the age of fourteen sing an opera is one thing, but they actually acted it out.

Comic Opera

There were on cue; they knew when they had the audience with them; they were funny; they were, in one word, fantastic. Even when the boys substituted for the girls' roles they were actors, singers, and even hams at times.

Probably the only weak portion of the concert occurred in the final segment of the program. In two duets by Robert Schuman "An die Nachtigall" and "Schon Blumlein", the second voice was extremely weak and almost inaudible to the large audience.



Apparently the all-German selections by the choir did not affect those who are not well-versed in that language.

Still Children

It was indeed refreshing to see this choir, which can trace its history back to 1498, succumb to the antics of the youngest members. During the closing numbers of the concert, various members of the choir were possessed by fits of laughter and uneasiness which only the young can understand and experience.

Villanova presented its own choir boy in the form of a faculty member. Dr. Alexander Rudhardt of the History Department, as Joe Tate pointed out, was a member of the Vienna Choir Boys from 1940 until 1944.

In response to their warm reception, the Vienna Choir Boys under the direction of Gerhard Lang performed two encore numbers, closing with none other than the English-titled "Good Night Ladies."

It's now a fact: every Ford-built car in '63 has self-adjusting brakes

"Give us a brake," Ford Motor Company engineers were told, "that will automatically compensate for lining wear whenever an adjustment is needed—and make it work for the entire life of the lining."

Tough assignment—but not insurmountable. Today, not only does every Ford-built car boast self-adjusting brakes (Falcon extra-duty bus-type wagons excluded), but the design is so excellent that adjustments can be made more precisely than by hand.

This Ford-pioneered concept is not complex. Key to it is a simple mechanism which automatically maintains proper clearance between brake drum and lining.

Self-adjustment takes place when the brakes are applied while backing up. This adjustment normally occurs but once in several hundred miles of driving. The brake pedal stays up, providing full pedal reserve for braking.

Another assignment completed—and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

Ecumenical Council Seminar Slated To Hear Bishop Furey

An Ecumenical Council Seminar will be held on Saturday, March 30 at 1:30 p.m. in Dougherty Hall, Villanova, in conjunction with the program set forth by the NFCCS Religious Affairs Secretariat of the Philadelphia region.

The keynote speaker will be His Excellency Francis J. Furey, D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, who will discuss aspects of "Inner Renewal," "Pluralism," and "The Laity's Participation in the Church."

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova, will deliver the welcoming speech. Bishop Furey, in his talks, will present his personal realizations on the Council, and discuss what the Council wants to do on each of the three major topics.

There will be panel discussions following the talk, headed by area Catholic college students and faculty members. The purpose of these panels is to give the participating students enough factual information on what the Council plans to do to enter intelligently into the subsequent individual group discussions.

Tentatively, there will be two students assigned to each of three panels. After the panels, six attending faculty members will answer pertinent questions which the students cannot answer, and each will then take charge of a group discussion.

All are cordially invited to attend and participate.

Music Society Holds Folk Music Concert; Spires Are Featured

Fanciers of folk music gathered last Tuesday night in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall, as the Music Society of Villanova presented the third in a series of folk concerts. The attraction of the evening were the twelve select members of the Villanova Singers, The Spires. In their first appearance on the campus this semester, The Spires presented a repertoire of twelve contemporary folk songs to an enthusiastic audience.

Included in the selections were such favorites as "Kilgarry Mountain," "This Land Is Your Land," "Superman," and "Green Back Dollar." The standing room only audience expressed their overwhelming satisfaction with the Spires by their eager applause.

Members of The Spires include Jim Croce, Jack Armstrong, Jim Quinn, Jan Montero, John Sperger, Santo Agolino, Mike Collins, Frank Romano, Mike Romano, Ian Lipton, Jack Blake and Tom Picardo, leader of the group.

This semester the Spires have given performances at Manhattanville College, St. John's University, Notre Dame College, Staten Island, and College of New Rochelle.

Further engagements, according to Tom Picardo, include an appearance at the Rosemont Folk Festival in May.

Attorney Donovan To Receive Degree At Commencement

James B. Donovan, prominent New York attorney who arranged the exchange of U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers and more recently negotiated the release of nearly 1200 Cuban prisoners, will be awarded an Honorary Degree during the June Commencement exercises.

Announcement of Villanova's intention to honor Mr. Donovan was made by Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President.

Donovan, a graduate of Fordham University, will be honored for his humanitarian efforts in behalf of the "Bay of Pigs" invasion prisoners who were released last Christmas.

Some of the repatriated prisoners were former students at Villanova University in Havana. The institution, which was conducted by the Augustinian Fathers, was taken over by the Castro regime two years ago, and the Priests who were in residence at the institution were arrested. Eventually they were allowed to return to the United States.

Villanova will close its 120th year with commencement exercises on Monday, June 3.

Donovan, general counsel to the Office of Strategic Service during World War II, will be one of six honored during the graduation program. Mr. Donovan will receive the Doctor of Humane Letters Degree.

Chess Club To Meet LaSalle Chess Group On Monday, March 25

The Villanova Chess Club will oppose LaSalle College on Monday, March 25. Villanova's Elite Corps of Relaxed Chessmen will face the tension and excitement of the most trying sport on campus. Not to be swayed by a possible defeat at LaSalle, the Club has also scheduled a match with Swarthmore College, with the date to be set shortly.

Victories Predicted

Both meets will be sponsored by the Intercollegiate Chess League of America. Interested observers predict complete victory for the Blue and White in both matches. All Villanovans desiring further details should contact the club president, Dennis Addonizio, 304 Sheehan Hall.

Knights Of Columbus Induct New Members At Ardmore Chambers

The Knights of Columbus recently announced that fourteen new candidates received the honors of the first degree at the Ardmore Council Chambers. During the first semester thirty-eight Villanovans were inducted into the organization.

A large semi-annual communion breakfast will be held later in the year, probably on the same Sunday the third degree is conferred. Speakers for the breakfast have not yet been announced.

The Knights have been asked by the Grand Knight of Bishop Corrigan Council, Devon, to provide two speakers for one of their meetings. The topics will be "The History and Aims of the Republican Party" and "The History and Aims of the Democratic Party." Prizes will be given to the two men or women chosen. All students of Villanova are eligible, and those interested should see Stanley Zak, 322 Sullivan Hall or Kevin Shea, 242 Sullivan Hall.

Dr. James F. Anderson (right), professor of philosophy, receives a La Salle College centennial medal from the college's philosophy department, presented by Dr. E. Russell Naughton, departmental chairman, at ceremonies on the La Salle campus. He was honored for his "scholarly contribution to Scholastic Philosophy."

Mendel Club Publishes Work In New Bi-Monthly 'Symposia'

by Tony Colavito

The spring semester is creating new activities, projects, and ideas. The most recent product of the University's academic activity is the appearance of a new paper.

Symposia, the name chosen for the two page science report, is edited by the members of the Mendel Biology Club. Through the bi-monthly publication, the club hopes to inform and entertain the entire student body with interesting scientific information.

The Mendel Club is an organization for biology students who seek additional interest in this science. The club is both intellectual and social and does not interfere with any other organization.

It is the purpose of the club to stimulate the student to new ideas and projects. Several members of this club conduct research and experiments in the field of biology at the University. Most recently, experimentation was done with color photomicrography in which color photographs of microorganisms were produced.

In addition to photomicrography, experiments have been made with chick embryos, with protozoa cultures, and algae.

The place for most research work has been in the Microbiology Lab in B-12 Mendel and in the Museum.

The Mendel Club was started in 1958 by Dr. John McClain, chairman of the Biology Department. Initially it consisted of about twenty members, but now the membership has more than doubled to forty-three.

The club meets bi-monthly usually on Thursday, at 10:30 a.m. in G-29 Mendel Hall. At these meetings, discussion and reports are carried out by the members; often films are shown reflecting biological life. In addition to the films and group discussion, many guest lectures including several members of our own faculty have presented lectures. The club will host Dr. John Berry from the Jefferson College of Medicine on Tuesday, April 2, at 4:30 p.m. The topic which Dr. Berry will discuss will be "The Function of Pathology."

The most noted activity of the Club is the library science display which is exhibited every year.

Aside from academic life, the club has had many field excursions and cave trips to study and analyze outdoor life. There have also been trips to museums, hospitals, and laboratories.

To inform the other students of scientific findings, it was necessary to publish the reports. The club has, therefore, added the Symposia to its long list of activities.

Doctor Wolfbein Talks On Automated Training

Dr. Seymour Wolfbein, Director of the Office of Manpower Automation and Training of the U.S. Department of Labor, will be the principal dinner speaker at the Spring Conference of the Greater Philadelphia Personnel and Guidance Association to be held March 25, 1963 at Drexel Institute of Technology's Activities Center.

He will discuss "Training for an Automated Age." The theme of the Conference is "Meeting Delaware Valley's Changing Manpower and Brainpower Needs."

Four afternoon panels will precede the dinner. Mr. John F. Clough, Executive Director of the Philadelphia Commission on Higher Education, will moderate a panel on professional occupations. Dr. Carl M. Grip, Dean of Men at Temple University, will chair the panel on technical occupations.

Mr. Cletus J. McBride, of the Peirce School of Business Administration, will head the panel on clerical and sales occupations, and Mr. Jack Gelfand, Supervisor of Special Applicant Services, Philadelphia District of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service, will chair a panel on skilled occupations.

Dr. John Rooney, Chairman, Psychology Department at La Salle College, Philadelphia 41, Pennsylvania, is in charge of reservations. The panels will be from 3:45—5:30 p.m., and dinner will be served at 5:45 p.m.

Political Union Holds Debate To Start Semester Activities

The Villanova Political Union presented its first debate of the semester last Wednesday with the House debating on the resolution: That This House Favors the Cessation of All Aid to Yugoslavia.

Arthur G. McDowell, Secretary-Treasurer of the Council Against Communist Aggression and Director of the Department of Civic Education and Government Affairs of the Upholsterers International Union was guest speaker for the debate.

Mr. McDowell began his speech by defining the terms of the proposition generally, and then in reference to the resolution.

He pointed out that when Yugoslavia was granted admission to the International Tradeworkers Union it did nothing to advance the Union and more often than not hindered its proper activities.

Debate Begins

Following the speech by Mr. McDowell the debate began with the first Liberal speaker Dave Galie, who spoke out against the resolution before the House. The debate continued with three Conservative speakers, three Moderate speakers and two more Liberal speakers.

After the spirited debates, Frank Dunn, Secretary of the VUPU, announced the membership voted overwhelmingly in favor or the resolution.

Thus ended the Villanova Political Union's first debate of the semester as plans were already being made for the next one in the near future. The Political Union is now expanding its membership and all students (of both sexes), who are interested in political affairs or desire to know the workings of the world around them, are invited to join.

Applications Available

Applications can be obtained immediately after any VUPU debate or by contacting one of the party leaders. Although the Union has been operating with a minimum membership it has managed to obtain wide attention for itself and the University through such activities as its televised debate on the WRCV-TV program "Concept which was aired throughout the immediate area.

The Political Union has been steadily expanding during the past year and along with the Conservative Club has stimulated political thought on campus.

Beta Gamma Debate Makes Finals Match

The Beta Gamma Debating Team returned from the District Seven Debate Finals with a 7-9 record.

Throughout his talk, Dr. Bourke convincingly showed that St. Augustine's philosophy of being diverges remarkably from that of his Platonic antecedents. Moreover, his world-view in many respects approaches an authentic metaphysical realism.

In the initial segment of the lecture, Dr. Bourke destroyed the idea that, to Augustine, being was an inert essence, devoid of causality a "what" rather than a "thing." Augustine's "essence," the lecturer stated, denotes not a Platonic form but a real being or substance, something that actually exists and operates by itself.

Navy Sounds Seniors For Prospective OCS Officer Instructors

The Navy needs college graduates for the Officer Instructor Program. College seniors majoring in mathematics, physics, chemistry, mechanical engineering and electrical engineering who will receive a baccalaureate degree in June are eligible for this program.

Postgraduate students in these fields are likewise eligible. The Navy will send selected applicants to OCS at Newport, R.I., and after graduation, they serve shore duty as instructors in nuclear power, missile, and other technical schools.

The Navy will not assign these young officers to sea duty during their entire period of obligated service. Additionally these officers should be able to keep current in their degree and, in their off-duty time, may take courses leading to a masters degree. The obligated period of service for this program is four years. Physical standards, especially visual, have been radically reduced.

This is a chance to win a commission, serve your country and at once, benefit yourself for future civilian life. For further details, all interested persons are urged to contact Captain J. E. Boyle, Professor of Naval Science, at John Barry Hall.

Seniors, Report

The Office of the Postgraduate Studies Adviser would like seniors who have received fellowships, scholarships, or other awards for graduate or professional schools to check with this office. This information is important to students seeking financial aid for postgraduate work next year.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

The Student-Faculty Committee has voted against providing excused cuts for seniors and fifth-year students, who miss classes because of job interviews.

The motion failed after debate and defeat of a previous recommendation that an additional leeway of three absenses be added to the five presently allowed to seniors for full attendance credit.

The additional three excused cuts would have been valid only for classes missed due to interviews and other related activities.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: TONY DiGIOIA

Tony DiGioia (B.S., 1960), in less than two years, became supervisor in one of the Test Centers in the Plant Department of Pennsylvania Bell. He manages fifteen people who are responsible for the installation and repair of 53,000 telephones in the area.

Tony should handle his present assignment with his customary thoroughness, when you consider his first two assignments. Shortly after starting work, he proved his capabilities by organizing a completely new microfilm filing system in the Engineering Department. And, later, he set up engineering practices covering many phases of the engineering operation.

Tony DiGioia and other young engineers like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

Foreign Nations Hold Summer Courses At Inexpensive Rates

by Jim Brennan

For those students interested in augmenting their education during the summer, information is now posted on the various bulletin boards on campus.

If you are interested in Central America, a summer session is being held in Mexico. Sponsored by Universidad Iberoamericana and Georgetown University, it will run from June 1 to August 2.

Courses will be offered in Spanish, philosophy, political science, mathematics, sociology, history, and English.

The total cost for the course will be $270, while transportation from New Orleans to Mexico City is $64.

There will be planned tours on weekends to various Mexican cities and guided trips to museums, art galleries, and historical sites.

Students seeking further information should write to Dr. Rocco E. Prorreco, Director of Summer School, Georgetown University, Washington 7, D.C.

Some British Universities are also offering summer sessions.

A course entitled "Shakespeare and Elizabethan Drama," sponsored by the University of Birmingham, will be held at Stratford-upon-Avon from July 8 to August 16.

The students will be accommodated in hotels in Stratford, and will see the Festival plays at the Royal Shakespeare Theatre. They also have an opportunity to study current production methods and acting.

The resident students' fee for six weeks will be approximately $254, while the non-resident fee will be $85.

"History, Literature, and the Arts of Seventeenth Century England," will be offered by the University of Oxford from July 1 to August 9.

There will be lectures on the various features of seventeenth century England, and the members of the course will also work in small tutorial groups, in some particular aspect of history or literature.

The classes will be held at Exeter College, where most of the resident students will be accommodated. Non-residents must make their own arrangements for lodging.

The cost for residents will be around $234, while non-residents will pay about $100.

A school in Scotland, the University of Edinburgh, will hold a course in "British History, Philosophy, and Literature, 1688-1832," from July 1 to August 9.

Each morning a lecture will take place for the whole school, covering the general topics of the period, historical and cultural. Following will be seminars in philosophy, literature and history. Students registering for the course will be asked to state which of these disciplines they desire to study intensively.

Resident cost is approximately $254, and non-resident about $127.

Anyone seeking additional information or application blanks is asked to see Dr. Joseph George on the ground floor of the Commerce and Finance Building.

There are many post-graduate fellowships being offered and senior students are asked to check the various bulletin boards in this regard.

Rugby Squad Faces Stiff Opposition Westchester Poses First Obstacle

by Roy Baron

The Villanova rugby squad faces a stiff early season test this Saturday when it takes on the New York Rugby Club. The New York club, which defeated the Wildcats 16-0 last fall, is reputed to be the best team on the East Coast. The Francis Coghlan-coached 'Cats will be out to avenge this, the biggest blot on its fall record.

Last Saturday the ruggers prepped for their crucial upcoming encounter when they journeyed to New York to take on the Westchester Rugby Club. The Wildcats emerged victorious, defeating their opponents, 17-13.

Although practice has been hindered by the weather, spirits are high. The mud and rain has failed to keep these men from turning out. More than thirty-five candidates have shown up each afternoon for practice.

Captain Luke St. Onge reports that all the players are in excellent physical condition. This is important because during the spring season there can be no substitutions during a game.

Promising Newcomers

Most of the members have returned from last fall's squad. However, these men are being pushed hard by a group of promising newcomers. Heading the list of rookies are linemen Hal Canty and Bell Belfi, and backs Bob "Bulldog" Shayer and Bill Green.

Teamwork is being stressed in the workouts, particularly among the forwards where there are more new players who are seeing action for the first time. Team play in the line is especially important on lineouts and in the scrum, which accounts for its being stressed so heavily.

Only Two Seniors

Only two seniors are numbered among those vying for jobs. They are St. Onge and Ed Field. This is a good indication of the high promise this team holds for the next couple of years.

Despite the young team, with regard to this season St. Onge has stated, "There is no reason why we cannot win the regional championship."

Numbered among the teams in the Southern Division in which Villanova competes are Temple, St. Joseph's, Penn, Virginia, Baltimore R. C., Philadelphia R. C., and the First Troop National Guard of Philadelphia. Strongest competition for the crown is expected to come from Baltimore and the First Troop.

The result of last Saturday's warmup game against the Westchester Rugby Club found the Wildcats nipping their hosts 17-13.

Leading the Villanova onsurge in the scoring department were Don Crouthamel with one try and conversion. The other three scores Edward Kurek, John Camiolo, and Tom Buckley each failed to convert the ball.

Intramural Playoffs Start For Leagues In Basketball Finale

Tournament fever has once again hit the Villanova campus, but in this case it is not being generated by the National Invitational Tournament. This week marks the playoffs for the Intramural Basketball League which will be played on the Alumni Hall and Field House courts.

Intramural directors tapped a few top teams from each league to comprise the sixteen team field for the tourney. Opponents for Tuesday's opening round of play were decided by a draw system.

Tuesday's eight survivors will meet in the quarter-finals slated for Wednesday, and Wednesday's victors will move into the semi-finals on Tuesday. Friday is the day set for the championship game which will be played on the Field House floor.

No Favorite

There has been no definite pre-tournament favorite named, but confidence reigns supreme among the ranks of all sixteen clubs.

Each participant realizes that these last few games mark the culmination of the long winter's schedule, and they are all determined to walk off the court Friday as champion.

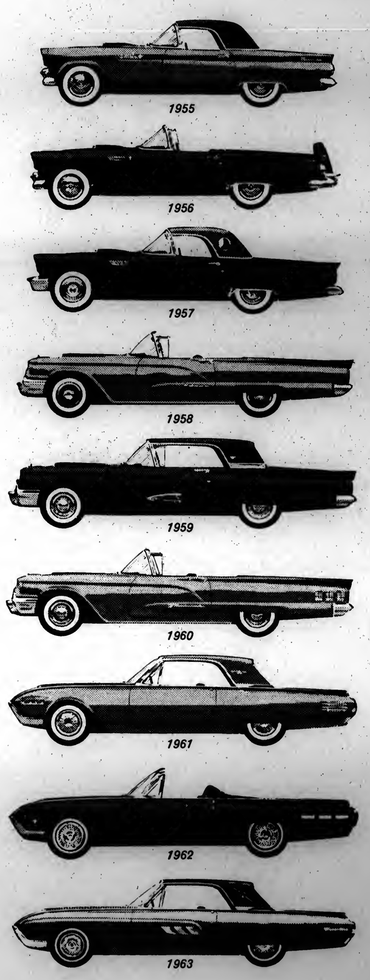
There will be no rest for Villanova's intramural athletes as softball competition is scheduled to begin the Monday following the cage tournament title game. Many teams have announced their intention of playing as of this date.

Billiard Team Scores Victory Against West Chester Squad

On March 2, Villanova's recently-created varsity Billiard Team defeated West Chester at the Chalk and Cue on Garrett Road, Upper Darby. Captain George Walko led the team composed of Pat O'Neil, Jim Arrigone, Pat DeGennaro, and Ken McGill to an easy victory.

The lone defeat was by the narrow margin of four points while the remaining members of the team scored overwhelming victories.

The two teams met again on March 9 in the Chalk and Cue in West Chester. Victories by Pat O'Neil, Jim Arrigone, Pat DeGennaro, and Ken McGill coupled by forfeitures by Don Cortellessa and George Ipekdjian gave Villanova the win by a 4-2 margin.



Future matches are scheduled with St. Joseph's and LaSalle as well as with other area schools. An intramural league is scheduled to begin on Saturday, March 23.

A handicap system has been devised for the intramural league so that all players have an equal opportunity. Anyone interested in either the Varsity team or the intramural league contact George Walko (208 Sullivan).

The story of a classic

In many ways the story of the Thunderbird is one of the most unusual in the automobile business. The whole idea of the car was born at one of the great European automobile shows. The then president of our company pointed to some of the small, lush sports cars that are always a center of attention at such shows and asked his companion, "Why can't we build something like these?"

The companion, who later became a vice president of the company, said, "It just so happens I have one on the boards. I'll show it to you when we get back to Detroit." Then as fast as he could discreetly get to a transatlantic telephone he called his assistant and told him, "Remember that car we've been talking about? Finish those sketches on it."

The Thunderbird became one of the few cars ever built that was produced essentially as the original sketches presented it. Most cars undergo countless changes in the design period. But there was a natural clarity and cleanness to the Thunderbird design that immediately captured all of us at Ford.

It was probably this clean, sharp look that won so many friends so fast when the car went into production. That first Thunderbird had its drawbacks. For example, it was too soft-sprung for true sports-car handling. But, the truth is, it was not designed in the European tradition of the fast performance car. Some people called it a sports car but we never did. We called it a "personal" car; a small, fairly luxurious car that was fun to look at and fun to drive. It had its own integrity: it was one alone.

We built the Thunderbird as a bellwether car for Ford. It was our intention to test new ideas before we put them into our Fords, Fairlanes and Falcons. The new Ford ride and Swing-Away steering wheel appeared first on the Thunderbird, for instance. However, we never foresaw the extraordinary influence Thunderbird would have on the whole automobile business here and abroad. Almost everybody offers the Thunderbird bucket seats these days. And the Thunderbird look is the most decisive styling of the '60s.

The Thunderbird is a classic, made so by a peculiar blend of magic ingredients of which we would love to know the secret. We're building cars right now we hope will become classics, but the truth is, we don't make classics, we make cars. People make the car a classic. And that's the story of the Thunderbird.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

LaCrosse-Legalized Warfare

by Joe McCarthy

The Villanova varsity Lacrosse squad will begin its third year of intercollegiate competition this Saturday, March 23, on their home field against C. W. Post College.

The 2 p.m. opening contest will constitute the start of an eleven game schedule. For the first time the team has scheduled six home tilts while traveling to their opponents' field five times.

Originally the game of lacrosse was an old American Indian game with very little respect for the rules or regulations that make up today's modern sports. The game, previous to the arrival of the European settlers, was a somewhat unfriendly affair with often as many as three thousand participating.

Generally, one Indian village was pitted against another with all its barbaric inhabitants pursuing the one ball in play. As a result of the great numbers involved and the animal ferocity that many of the original Indians displayed, there were a great many injuries, some frequently causing death.

In actuality the game was little more than legalized warfare.

The game of today has been somewhat refined, perhaps due to the physical difficulties encountered by the Indians. Now each team fields ten men with a definite, defined area of playing, approximately the size of an American football field.

To prevent injuries, all players wear helmets and gloves and there are rules to prohibit the inflicting of severe injuries. Retained from the past are the elements of rapid progression of motion, fierce body contact, and much clashing among sticks.

Team Composition

The team is divided up into a three-three-three-one offense and defense. The first three men sustain the attack and seek to put ball into the opposing goalie's net.

The three mid-fielders play both offense and defense and are allowed to proceed anywhere on the field. The last four positions are the defensive segment of the game with three defensemen defending the goalie against oncoming attacks.

Some Rules

The object which is in constant play during the contests is a hard, solid rubber ball, the same size and color as a baseball. Each team is allowed unlimited substitution. A typical game would wind up in the area of 14-11 as the final tally.

The 1963 edition of Wildcat Lacrosse will feature a squad that has been in daily practice since February 4 and a new coach, Jack Smythe. Coach Smythe had previously mentored the Haverford High School team and is currently a member of the Philadelphia Lacrosse Club, the runnerup club last year in the National Club Championships.

Captain of the team is a senior History major, Gene Melcher, 5-9, 155 pounds, who brings to Villanova his experience as captain of the Swarthmore High School team. He was also one of the three to help organize lacrosse at Villanova two years ago.

Better Organization

The squad is now composed of 27 members out of an original turnout of 34. Through the coaching of Smythe, the team has gained a greater leadership and know-how than in the past two years. In this regard Captain Melcher commented that "practices have been well-organized and the team has acquired a distinct discipline that was previously lacking."

With a nucleus of 12 men returning from last year, the Wildcats have managed to corral a defense line that averages 6-2 and 215 pounds and a group of fast, light men to spark the offense. Coach Smythe and Captain Melcher expressed extreme optimism about the coming season and asked that the student body support the squad at its home games.

Following the C. W. Post game, the club plays Tuesday, March 26 (3 p.m. at home) against Bowdoin of Maine; Thursday, March 28 (3 p.m., away) against Drexel Tech; and Saturday, March 30 (2 p.m., away) against Georgetown.

DePaul, Wichita Bow To Kraftsmen

by Tom Bruderle

As was the case last year, Coach Jack Kraft predicted that Villanova would not have much of a bench this season. On several occasions, however, Kraft has gone to his bench with surprising results.

With 10:32 left in the Villanova-Wichata fracas witnessed by 15,198, the Shockers went into a freeze with the score 42-42.

BUTCH WINTERBOTTOM

By using these stallball tactics, the top-seeded team in the NIT looked only for the good shots and soon owned a 49-44 lead with 5:25 to play. After a jumper by Wally Jones brought the Wildcats a little closer, Kraft made his move. Butch Winterbottom came in for Eric Erickson to thaw the freeze.

While Wichita worked the ball around, Jim Washington tapped a loose ball to Winterbottom who dribbled down-court and swished a jumper from the right of the circle. The shocked Shockers then fouled Washington who converted the foul shot to tie the score.

Len Kelley sank two foul shots only to have them followed by a jump-shot by Jim O'Brien as the score remained tied with two and a half minutes showing. Back in the game again, Erickson stole a pass and Wally Jones was fouled as he sank a jumper. Jones converted to give Villanova the lead, but it was almost given back!

Washington blocked a shot by Kelley over to Jones; the Cats had the ball and, seemingly, the game, with 21 seconds left. Seven seconds later, the chagrined Wildcats saw Wichita get the ball on an out of bounds play. Kelley tried a jumper and the ball went around the rim as time ran out.

Villanova qualified for the quarter-finals by dumping DePaul last Thursday night 63-51 before 14,238 fans. Despite the score, DePaul remained close throughout the entire first half and part of the second half.

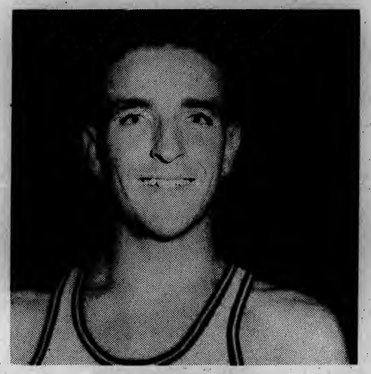
The Main-Liners were somewhat disorganized in the first half and the lead changed hands several times before Villanova captured a 28-23 spread at halftime. In the second half, the Chicagoans stayed at the heels of the Wildcats and tied the score at 29 and 33. Jones then converted a three point play and Villanova had a lead that was never lost.

In the next 9:26, Villanova out-scored the Blue-Demons 16-4 and tallied thirteen points in a row in a four minute stretch. Washington, McMonagle and O'Brien out-positioned their taller rivals as DePaul could get but one shot at the basket before losing the ball.

Jones garnered 28 points and was 8 for 10 from the foul line. His sidekick, Eric Erickson, tallied 18 points, 11 in the second half, and played a fine floor game. Washington had a game high total of 11 rebounds to go with the 7 collected by O'Brien. McMonagle turned in an outstanding defensive game and made at least five steals. M. C. Thompson was the top producer for DePaul with 11 points and 10 rebounds.

Villanova shot 40.3 per cent from the field (23 for 57) toDePaul's 37.7 per cent (23 for 61). The Blue Demons out-rebounded the 'Cats and, had it not been for Villanova's tough shifting defense, the score could have been reversed.

Wichita opened the quarter final activity by throwing a press at the Wildcats. Villanova had a little trouble going against it but fought back to tie the score several times. With 6:47 left in the first half, the Main-Liners went on a nine point streak that gave them a 27-20 lead, but the Shockers rallied to narrow the margin to three as the first half ended 28-25.



Villanova lost the lead in the early minutes of the second half thanks to the shooting of All-American Dave Stallworth, a sophomore. The Wildcats stayed with the Shockers as the score was tied at 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42.

With the game knotted at 42, Wichita went into their freeze. Although it seemed a bit premature, it worked for a while and Villanova seemed doomed. Kraft then made his move as did the Wildcats.

McMonagle led all the VU scorers with 16 points and again turned in a fine defensive game, stealing the ball several times from 5-10 Ernie Moore. Jones and O'Brien came through with 14 and 12 points respectively. Off the backboards, Washington pulled down 11 rebounds and O'Brien 7 while Dave Stallworth had 9, 6-10 Nate Bowman had 9 and 6-7 Wayne Durham had 8.

Again it was Villanova's defense that saved the Cats, as they held Wichita to their second lowest point total of the year. Cincinnati held them to 50 in their first meeting of the vear. The Shockers could manage only 49 shots but scored on 21 of them (42.9 per cent) while Villanova was 24 for 59 (40.6 per cent). Wichita out-rebounded the Cats 40 to 29.

The locals are back in action tomorrow night when they meet Canisius at Madison Square Garden. In the 76-67 triumph over Memphis State last Saturday night, Bill O'Connor scored 27 points. Earlier in the year, Villanova routed Canisius 79-60 at the Palestra and O'Connor scored 24.

JIM McMONAGLE

Last night, Providence played Miami and Marquette met St. Louis. The winners of these two games will play tomorrow night and face the winner of the Villanova-Canisius this Saturday afternoon.

Grifs To Test 'Cats Again

by Joe McCarthy

Tomorrow evening, the Wildcat basketball team will play the toughest game of the season against the Canisius Golden Griffins in the semifinal round of the National Invitational Tournament. The "toughest" because this is the only team that Villanova has had to face after humiliating them earlier in the season.

In the first encounter, the Wildcats, basking in the sunshine, support, and smoke of the Palestra, trounced the Canisius team 79-60 with Wally Jones leading the 'Cat offense with 21 points and eight assists. Even while winning they were unable to really bottle up the Griffs' leading scorer and All-American, Bill O'Connor, who tabbed game high honors with 24 points.

Canisius enters the Thursday encounter with a second round victory over Memphis State after drawing a bye in the opening round. In the victory over Memphis, O'Connor retained his reputation as one of the nation's leading scorers by pouring 27 through the hoop.

Coach Bob MacKinnon squad lacks only one element, good height to re-enforce the rebounding department.

The Palestra loss was just a game for which the squad did not get "up" for and the result of a moral letdown after losing a close game to Bowling Green

But Canisius, at its best, can cope favorably with any team in the country. They lost to Arizona State, ranked third in the nation, by a mere four points scored during the closing seconds.

The game will be a test of the Villanova defense and the Canisius offense. The earlier contest showed a Wildcat team that could do no wrong and that shot 55 per cent from the field.

Whether or not the 'Cats move into the Tournament Championship Saturday afternoon will be determined by their readiness to face a team that is far better than they appeared on an exceptional night for the home team.

Mermen Capture First Place In AAU; McDonough Sets Three Marks In ESIL

by Richard Pazdan

Villanova's varsity swimming team ran into an immovable object last weekend in the person of the Yale swimming team.

The Wildcats, competing in the Eastern Seaboard Intercollegiate Swimming Championships at Princeton University, finished fourth behind Yale, Princeton, and Army.

The meet, the twenty-third annual, took place last Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Thursday saw the Eli"s serve notice to the rest of the teams at the meet as to what was to come. The New Englanders jumped off o a quick 44 points thefirst day of the meet and were never near being overtaken.

Princeton ran a poor second on the opening day of the meet with a total of 18 points. Villanova finished the day with a fifth place standing on the strength of 10 points.

The only bright ray in the Villanova camp on the first day was Dick McDonough. Dick picked up the Cats only first of the day when he set a new pool record and a new record for the event by splashing across the tape in 5:02.3.

On Friday the junior from East Orange, N. J. established another pool and meet record, this time in the 200yard butterfly, as he came across the finish in 1:58.2.

Saturday nights competition was highlighted by McDonough becoming a triple and the Bulldogs from Yale setting a new NCAA 400-yard freestyle record. McDonough became a triple winner as he swept to victory in 0:52.5 in the 100-yard butterfly. The time broke a pool record of 0:53 set by North Carolina's Ed Spencer last March and tied by McDonough in the trials. The 0:52.5 time also tied the NCAA record currently held by McDonough.

The Yale relay team of Charles Mussmann, Ed Townsend, Steve Clack and Mike Austin was clocked in 3:11.4 This broke the old record of 3:13.4 which had been set last Saturday by Minnesota in the Big Ten Championships.

In other events, John Geoghegan finished fifth in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 49.2. The 400-yard freestyle team of Rick Girdler, Paul Wynne, Geoghegan and McDonough finished second to the Yale squad with a time of 3:14.3.

Yale finished the meet with 133points, almost doubling their nearest opponent Princeton who finished with a total score of 67. Villanova finished fourth, mostly on the basis of McDonoughs performances, with a total of 39.

As was stated by one of the swimmers concerning the Yale team "Ain't nobody can beat that team."

AAU

The story was a little different on March 3 and 10 when Villanova's swimmers won everthing but title to the building as they romped home in the Middle Atlantic AAU swimming meet held at the Philadelphia Athletic Club.

The final team standings showed Villanova's varsity in first place with a point total of 75. The Freshman array finished fifth with a score of 28.

McDonough set a record of 1:52.0 in the 200-yard freestyle, successfully defended his 100-yard butterfly crown in 0:54.8, one second oc his record, and led Villanova's varsity 400-yard freestyle relay team of Girdler, Wynne and Geoghegan to a 3:27.2 record.

Girdler also set a meet record in the 200-yard individual medley. His time was 2:12.1, breaking the old record of 2:13.4 set by Tom Williams of the Abington YMCA.

Belle Masque Society Will Stage 'The Imaginary Invalid' By Moliere

For the first time in its history, the Villanova Belle Masque Society will present the Miles Maellson adaptation of Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid. The production will open Wednesday evening, April 8, at 8:30 p.m. in the Vasey Hall Auditorium, and will continue through April 6.

The play consists of a series of small vignettes in which Argan, the main character, is visited by a number of French men and women who represent life and society in late seventeenth-century Paris. The effect of these visits on Argan, who is a hypochondriac, is the main theme of the work.

Typical of Moliere's style, The Imaginary Invalid is a farce, presented in the classical manner. It is a non-realistic play — another first for Belle Masque because this will be the first production in a year-and-a-half in which realism plays no major role.

The set, designed by Director Thomas Nevins, will facilitate the farcical nature of the play. The costumes, the most elaborate and expensive ever used by the society, will blend "traditionalism" and "expressionism."

The leading role of Argan will be filled by James Mason, a junior majoring in English education. Miss Carol Schmenkel, a senior at Rosemont College, will play Toinette the most difficult role in the play because of its length. This will be Miss Schmenkel's first major appearance at Villanova.

The Imaginary Invalid will be especially entertaining to those students who have studied Moliere. This is, in fact, one reason for its presentation by the Belle Masque Society.

General admission will be $1.00. A matinee wil be given Saturday, April 6, with a special critique to follow.

Mendel Medal Award To Go To Astronaut Major Robert White

Major Robert M. White, pilot of the X-15 rocket research plane, has been named the 21st winner of Villanova University's Mendel Medal.

The announcement was made Wednesday, (April 3rd) by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova's President. Last summer Major White became America's fifth astronaut.

The Mendel Medal, named for Abbot Gregor Mendel, the Augustinian monk who discovered the law of heredity, is presented periodically by Villanova to an outstanding scientist. 1963 marks the 35th anniversary of the founding of the Medal.

On July 17, 1962, Major White took the needle nosed research plane to a world record altitude

NFCCS Given Confidence Vote By Council In Decisive Session

In a fever-pitch and expectant atmosphere, the Student Council voted to establish confidence in and support of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. The final roll-call vote during the Wednesday evening meeting was 38 pro and 1 con, with one half vote abstaining.

The vote constituted a show of confidence in the Villanova chapter in particular and the regional and national organizations in general. The discussion of the question was at times sparked by enthusiastic debate by many of the Congress members.

Basis

The motion to investigate NFCCS was prompted by the legislation of last year that formerly put the Villanova Commission on a probationary basis for the extent of the year. The activity of this year's officers, the success of the Student Council-NFCCS sponsored mixer, and the election of three Villanovans to regional office adequately swayed the opinions of many of those who had opposed the federation in the past.

In addition to the NFCCS question, the Congress also voted to reinstate three of the six ousted representatives. The action was the result of a favorable recommendation of the Election Committee under Senior President Jim Tate.

The ousters were formalized two weeks previously when the Law School Dinner Features Awards And Guest Lecture

The Honorable Henry J. Friendly, Judge of the United States Court of Appeals Second Circuit, was the featured speaker at the decennial dinner of the Villanova School of Law on Friday, March 29.

The dinner was held on the Villanova campus, in the dining area of the Commerce and Finance Building. Through the afternoon the students and faculty received interested dinner guests desirous of visiting Garey Hall, the Law School building.

Two former Chief Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Honorable Horace Stern and the Honorable Charles Alvin Jones were honored guests. Robert P. Garbarino, Esquire, of the Villanova Law School class of 1956 served as toastmaster.

Judge Friendly spoke on "The Gap in Law Making — Judges Who Can't and Legislators Who Won't." Dinner guests were also addressed by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University.

Nine prizes were awarded for a variety of academic achievements by law students. The Vincent A. Carroll Award of $50 was presented to Ned W. Manashil for attaining the highest academic average in the second year of law study. The Law Alumni awarded $50 to John D. Silcox, the third year student who in the opinion of the faculty had shown the greatest scholastic improvement during the first and second years.

The Herman J. Obert Award of $50 for the highest academic average in the Corporations course was presented to Robert J. Jackson. The Lawyers Title Foundation Award of $100 was won by Ned W. Manashil, a senior student who achieved the highest grade in the courses in property.

For the best oral argument in the inter-club moot court contest the MacCarthy Award of $50 went to Robert Silverberg, and the Theodore L. Reimel Award of $100 was given to the Cardozo Law Club for winning the contest.

For outstanding contribution to classroom work, two prizes of $50 each were awarded: The James Rinaldi Award to C. Clark Hodgson for the first year, and the Rose B. Rinaldi Award to Alan A. Sanders for the second year.

The Roman Catholic High School Alumni Award of $100 for the highest academic average in the first year of law study was received by Mark H. Plafker.

Mothers' Day Nearing Tickets Now On Sale For Annual Affair

Co-chairmen Tom Stanley and Ed Coffey have announced that arrangements are almost complete for the twenty-fifth annual Junior Mothers' Day, scheduled for April 22.

Tickets are presently on sale in the Pie Shoppe and the C&F cafeteria from 10 am until 3 pm each class day until the Easter recess.

Juniors are asked to purchase their tickets prior to Easter because the caterers seek an estimate of the number to be present. This will not be possible if ticket sales are not completed by April 10.

At 9 am, the day will commence with registration of mothers and sons. At 10:30 am, the Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, OSA, will celebrate mass at the Shrine of Our Lady of Good Counsel.

Mothers' Day Tickets Now on Sale

In the event of inclement weather, the mass will be held in the University Chapel. Immediately following Mass, John Hagerty, President of the Junior Class, will present the class memorial to the University.

At 12:45 p.m., in the Field House, the juniors and their mothers will gather for a luncheon.

The honored guests will include the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President; Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, OSA; Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA; and Rev. John J. Curran, OSA.

After the luncheon, the winner of the Diaper Dan award will be announced. In addition, several campus musical groups will provide entertainment.

The program for the day will close at 4:30 p.m. with solemn benediction at the shrine, if the weather is favorable.

Indoctrination Trip Features Jet Flights, Father Farrell Guest

Captain A. C. Waldman, Jr. Commanding Officer, U.S. Naval Air Station, Willow Grove, Pennsylvania, recently escorted forty prominent personages in the field of Industry and Education in the Delaware Valley on a Navy cruise.

Among the passengers making this three day indoctrination trip as a guest of the Secretary of Navy was Rev. William E. Farrell, O.S.A. Assistant to the President for Development, Villanova University, Villanova, Pennsylvania.

Among the highlights of this trip, was a visit with and briefing by Vice Admiral Fitzhugh Lee, Chief of Naval Air Training. The Group also visited the Navy's preflight school, the Aviation School of Medicine and

The Rev. William Farrell, OSA spent a full day at sea aboard the U.S.S. Lexington.

Probably the most thrilling activity, not only to the observers but to the participants as well, was the viewing of jet landings aboard a carrier by flight students striving to earn their coveted "Navy Wings of Gold."

The guest cruise program has proved to be one of the most effective means of acquainting the public with the role of sea power in ensuring National security Representative Citizens participating in the program are invited on operating cruises on a not-to-interfere basis at no additional cost to the government.

The primary purpose of the training exercise at Pensacola is the attainment of Navy training objectives. This training must be accomplished repeatedly if our military forces are to maintain the required degree of combat readiness.

Campus Broadcasters Plan 'Festival Of Music' Programs

by John Mylotte

The campus radio station, WWVU, has launched the "April Festival of Music." This series of special programs, initiated April 1, will continue each day until April 30, excluding the Easter vacation period and Saturdays.

According to Frank Sauers, the station's Program Director, the purpose of these specials is to offer the listening audience a program schedule of exceptional musical quality.

The series encompasses the entire field of music with various programs featuring classical works, jazz, show music, contemporary folk fare, as well as individual artists. In addition, WWVU intends to air interviews with prominent musical personages.

Students may obtain free program guides for the festival at the office of the radio station on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. For the convenience of the student, however, the entire program is printed below.

On Monday, April 1, the festival commenced with the selected works of Ravel, the twentieth century French composer. It should be noted that, while the special classical programs are alloted to Monday evenings at 8 to 9 p.m., the regular Concert Hall program will continue in its normal hourly time slot each evening beginning at 5 p.m.

Today, the station is presenting "Sinatrama," an eight hour extravaganza starring The Thin One. The Sinatra salute runs from 3 to 11 p.m.

Tomorrow, WWVU renders a nine hour salute, from 2 to 11 p.m. on its "Front Row Center" show, which highlights the smash Broadway shows of the past two decades.

"Great Ladies of Song" will be heard for five hours on Sunday, April 7, beginning at 2 p.m. From the songs of current, popular, female vocalists, the station turns to the classical genre and the opera of Puccini on Monday, April 8, from 8 to 9 p.m.

On Tuesday, April 9, the radio station will air a special featuring the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, world renowned orchestras, and soloists who will render an hour and a half of Holy Week music starting at 9:30 p.m.

A nine hour marathon of folk music will be presented on Wednesday, April 17. The panorama of music from Blue Grass to the Kingston Trio will commence at 2 p.m.

On Friday, April 19, listeners will hear the sounds of contemporary as well as former big bands on "Salute to the Big Bands." This program will run from 2 to 5 p.m. "What'd I Say," a Ray Charles special, is scheduled for Sunday, April 21, from 7 to 11 p.m.

In the hour from 8 to 9 p.m. on Monday, April 22, the radio station will present Mozart on its special classical program. At the same time on the following day, the records of Peter, Paul, and Mary will be heard. In conjunction with their Junior Week engagement, a live interview with the trio will highlight the show.

For jazz aficionados, the station has gathered several works of "The Jazz Greats" such as Stan Kenton, Count Basie, and Maynard Ferguson, which will be aired on Wednesday, April 24, from 2 to 11 p.m.

Okany To Address VU Political Union About Congo Policy

A member of the Nigerian Mission to the United Nations will start off the Villanova Political Union's debate on UN Congo policy on Monday evening, April 10.

The Honorable Gilbert Okany will tell the Union members why his nation, the largest of the sub-Sahara African nations, supports a policy which, although it has the strong backing of President Kennedy, has come under considerable criticism in some Congressional circles.

The Union meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Chemistry Lecture Hall of Mendel Hall and all students are invited to attend. The actual resolution before the House is: Resolved, that this House supports United Nations policy in the Congo."

The Union officers and party leaders will have dinner with Mr. Okany and the membership will hold a brief reception for him at 7 p.m. in the Mathematics Seminar Room.

Financial Troubles Are Obstacles As TNT Finalizes Plans For Show

Financial difficulties not previously anticipated are proving to be a serious obstacle in planning this year's Turf and Tinsel production Jessica James.

"A major avenue of revenue has been blocked, costing us over $1,000," stated T 'n' T president John Lucey, "and the deficit must be offset through increased ticket sales".

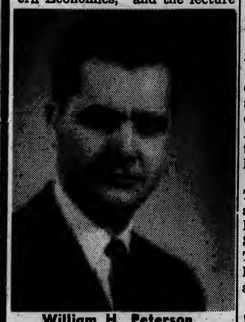
"We are, therefore, urging all Villanovans to do their part, if not in direct connection with the show, then in publicizing the traditional affair among their friends and relatives," the president requested.

The annual T 'n' T production, a part of the Junior Week festivities, was begun in 1934. The club has put on a show annually every year since 1948.

This year, the Jessica James audience will witness the likes of football players Merenda, DeLone, Thomas, and Armstrong, featured in a ballet. A cast of approximately fifty characters and dancers, twenty-five percent larger than last year's, will perform.

Ticket salesman will canvass the dormitories early next week, and at this time tickets will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe. Members of the cast will also carry a supply of tickets.

The setting for Jessica James is the hillbilly section of the Appalacians. Former T 'n' T stars Joe Ruggiero, Al LaMastra and Ed Jaworowski will perform in a cast of eighteen characters.



The show will be directed by Betty Green, who has been the director for the last five comedies. Music was composed by Bob Whelan, Secretary to the Athletic Director, and founder of Turf and Tinsel.

Anyone wishing to assist in the production by working on one of the many small aspects connected with it, are to contact John Lucey in the Field House any evening after 7:00 p.m.

William Peterson To Lecture To Campus Conservative Club

The Villanova Conservative Club has announced that Dr. William H. Peterson, Associate Professor of Economics at New York University, will lecture on Thursday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. in room 209 C & F.

Dr. Peterson will speak on "The Wonderful World of Modern Economics," and the lecture will be open to all who wish to attend. A question and answer period will follow.

A weekly contributor to the Wall Street Journal, Dr. Peterson is also author of several books, including The Great Farm Problem, and a contributor to the Harvard Business Review and Business Horizons.

At this meeting, a booklet by DuPont, "The Profit Motive," will be distributed to all in attendance. The book Soviet Total War will also be passed out to Conservative Club members.

On Monday, March 25, the Conservative Club and Student Council sponsored a lecture by Dr. William Kintner, Professor of International Relations and Political Science at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Kintner, who is Deputy Director of the Foreign Policy Research Institute, spoke on "National Security Policies." A question and answer period followed his lecture.

He has served as Deputy Commandant, National Security Seminars, National War College during 1959 and 1960. He also served as Chief Planner, element of the Central Intelligence Agency and Special Assistant to the President, Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Dr. Kintner is the author of The Front is Everywhere and co-author of Atomic Weapons in Land Combat, Forging a New Sword, The Haphazard Years, The New Frontier of War, A Forward Strategy for America, and Protracted Conflict.

Students who wish to go to Fort Lauderdale during Easter Holidays, please contact Ron Kurtzberg, 1915 Spencer Street, Philadelphia, or phone LI 9-6512. I will leave April 10 and return April 17.

Villanova's Brassmen Attend Band Festival

Peter DiBona and Joseph Rink, members of the Villanova University Band, have been selected to participate in the sixteenth annual Intercollegiate Band Festival. The event will be held at Bloomsburg College, Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, on March 30.

DiBona and Rink will be among the group of representatives from thirty-six colleges and universities throughout Pennsylvania. All will be united under the direction of the well-known conductor, Dr. Willim D. Revelli.

DiBona, a senior physics major, occupies the position of first trumpet in the University Band and has been a member for the past four years.

Rink, a junior accounting major, and member of the band for three years, holds the position of first trombone in the band.

Student Council

Elections Committee announced that six of the membership had incurred three absences. Three of those ousted apparently did not apply for reinstatement.

Through recommendation from the Ways and Means Committee under the Chairmanship of Parliamentarian Joseph McCarthy, legislation establishing two Student Council mixers per scholastic year was referred to committee for investigation and implementation.

Senior Bill Armstrong, representing the Turf 'n' Tinsel Society, addressed the conclave and sought the support of the Council in putting on their annual show. He also offered several caustic comments regarding the refusal to permit the use of sponsors and patrons in the program, which was the major means of raising money to stage the show.

Among other legislation introduced was a motion by Vice President Jim Howley seeking the establishment of a Book of the Month program. After minor debate and comment on past performances of this type of project, the Congress passed the resolution.

Howley also sponsored legislation that would ask the Administration to be responsible for having a doctor on call at all times during every athletic event. Another resolution inquired into the possibility of having examinations on Ascension Thursday. Both received passage, the latter by a margin of one half vote, 19-18½.

Council elections will take place on April 9. This Congress will seat both the new and the old class representatives.

Bob Strong Elected Station Manager For Next School Year

Bob Strong was elected Station Manager of WWVU last night at a meeting of the staff heads and co-ordinators.

He will be officially instated on Saturday, May 4, at the WWVU Villanovan Dinner Dance, to be held at the Bellevue-Straford Hotel in Philadelphia. At this time, the staff heads and co-ordinators for 1963-64 will also be announced.

Station Manager is the radio station's only elected post. He appoints the Program Director, Chief Engineer, Business Manager, and Personnel Director, the first three of which name in turn, their respective staff co-ordinators.

At the Shamokinski Dance last Friday, Rev. Edward Hatrick, OSA, Prior of the Augustinian Community in Nagasaki, Japan, hands the winning stub to Rev. Robert M. Burke, OSA. John Franciosa, freshman arts major from Norristown, won the tea set.

Junior Concert Ticket Sales To Be Opened To Student Body

Tickets for the Junior Concert featuring Peter, Paul, and Mary will go sale tomorrow for the general student body. Today is the final day of ticket sales for the special Junior section.

The Dinner Dance ticket sales met with great response and it has been suggested by the Dinner Dance Committee that all those Juniors who have not purchased their tickets do so as soon as possible.

The dress for the evening shall be formal - white dinner jacket and black tie. Fittings will be made on April 9 and 10 in the center lounge of Dougherty Hall for those interested in Tuxedo rentals for the Dinner Dance. Total cost of the rental will be $6.00.

Further information in regard to Junior Week, such as the final plans for Junior-Senior Muff day and the athletic smoker will be released next week.

Dinner Dance Queen Rules Are Announced

The climax of the Junior Dinner Dance, which will be held on April 27 at the Sheraton Hotel, will be the crowning of the Junior Dinner Dance Queen.

Students who wish to place their date in the competition should submit a (5x7) photograph with her name and address and the student's name and address on the back of the photo, to the Student Council office.

The four princesses (semi-finalists) will each receive an engraved charm bracelet and the Queen a tiara and a spring bouquet. Richard Maltby and his orchestra will play an appropriate piece as the queen descends the staircase of the main ballroom.

The Queen will be selected from these five semi-finalists. James Quinn is Chairman of the Queen contest and John Sperger and Sue McDonald, co-chairmen.

Society Plans Lecture

The Literary Society will sponsor a lecture by George D. Murphy, of the Villanova English Department, tomorrow morning at 10:30 in 204 Vasey Hall.

Recently appointed moderator, James J. Mitchell, also of the English Department, announced that the election of next year's officers will take place immediately before the lecture.

Mr. Murphy, an alumnus of University of Notre Dame, will speak on some aspect of nineteenth century American fiction.

Following the lecture, the new Student Council representative will be named, and the Society's agenda for the remainder of the semester will be announced.

Theatre Department Schedules Third Play

The Graduate Theatre Department has scheduled its third and last production of the semester, The Private Life of the Master Race, to open on Friday, April 19, in the Playbox.

The play, written by Bertolt Brecht, is a dramatization of the rise and fall of Hitler's Third Reich. It is composed of a series of satirical episodes, bound together by a group of Nazi soldiers singing on a tank.

Bertolt Brecht is considered one of the best playwrights of the Twentieth Century. Among his works are The Three-Penny Opera and Mother Courage and Her Children, which is currently on Broadway.

The play, announced director Richard A. Duprey, will open on April 19 and run on consecutive weekends until May 5.

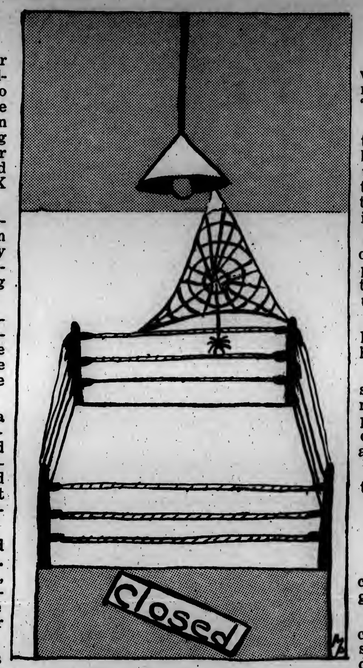
Less Politics

Congressional investigations play a major role in our government's "checks and balances" system. Their primary function is to maintain a check on the decisions of the Executive Department. However, they often overlook an issue in favor of investigating the politics and personnel of a particular department. This leads to inefficiency and has been recently exemplified in the TFX hearings.



The original question was whether Defense Secretary McNamara did wisely in awarding a TFX plane contract that may ultimately reach $6.6 billion to General Dynamics Corporation rather than to Boeing Aircraft Company.

The Senatorial subcommittee, under Senator McClellan that is supposed to be investigating this issue, has zoomed off into the wild blue yonder. From the beginning, the proceedings have been dominated by side issues.

The subcommittee has insinuated a charge of conflict-of-interest against an important subordinate of McNamara; it heard critics of McNamara before a full scale explanation could be made by McNamara; and it raised doubts as to the integrity of the cost estimates submitted by the Defense Department.

Actions such as these have accomplished very little while damaging everyone involved. They characterize McNamara as a tyrant, Boeing Company as a sore loser, and the investigating senators as "prima-donas". The central issue has been engulfed by minor issues.

The defense responsibilities of Congress are obviously enormous and entitle it to conduct investigations. Yet, if it pushes its inquiries to the point of harassment and interference of the Defense Department, it is not helping the defense effort.

The Solution?

A Moderate Stand

The death of Davey Moore in his unsuccessful featherweight title defense has aroused public sentiment across the nation. The same stir was created a year ago when Benny "Kid" Paret died in a similar manner.

Any discussion of the subject inevitably brings forward two views. The first is that the sport is immoral and should be banned. People of such opinion are behind the proposals to outlaw boxing by means of legislative action. In regard to this, it may be said that history has shown that any attempt to regulate morals by government action has been ineffective.

Prohibition and gambling are two prime examples. If one admits that there will always be men who will want to pursue a pugalistic career, then there is always the possibility that, being banned by the government, the sport will come under the direct control of the underworld.

The second point of view, that boxing as it is should be left alone, holds no water. We cannot be content to see more human beings killed in the ring.

All partners concerned might be adequately satisfied if some moderate course is taken. Foam rubber padding on the mat, as well as head gear and larger gloves for the participants are desperately needed safety measures. Boxing officials should see to it that the opponents are well matched and that each follows a rigid training program.

Unless some safety measures such as these are taken, the downfall of boxing can be expected.

Longer Campaigns

Along with the more welcome transformations of Spring come the annual class elections. The selection of our student government currently involves the entire campus.

Since present regulations permit less than four days of campaigning the candidates have difficulty in exposing themselves, let alone their views to the entire class, especially day students.

A solution which other colleges employ is to have each candidate deliver a campaign speech to a general class meeting. This idea is adequate to a certain extent, but nonetheless constitutents of many a victor have no idea who their representative might be.

The lengthening of the campaign period is the only solution. Many other universities allow at least two weeks. The results of such a change would first provide a far greater system of competition instead of the machine-run system that now favors our campus and secondly provide the campus with the atmosphere and feeling that elections should develop in the student body.

In the candidates' general address to the class, there might be engendered a greater appreciation of his speaking ability (if he has any), and this is a primary pre-requisite to a good student officer. But, by a lengthened campaign period, it is with the candidate themselves and their platforms.

With this extended campaign period, there would be no more necessity of campaigning all through the wee hours of moring and resorting to tactics such as awakening one's constitutents and informing them that you are your opposition.

This selection of officers would be much more representative of their class.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

It is quite obvious that our recently successful musical event, such as the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, the Vienna Choir Boys, and the Chamber Music Concert Series have all brought to the University an unprecedented amount of favorable publicity in addition to showing our Main Line neighbors a slightly different side of campus life.

The question which the administration, faculty, and Student Council must now answer is whether or not this is going to be the beginning of an expansion to broader scopes or a concept that will die with the graduation of a few empathetic seniors.

Villanova has long neglected to fill this gaping deficiency in the undergraduate life that she offers her students. Almost every other American college conducts a series of lectures each semester which feature not musical offerings alone but internationally known figures in the fields of public affairs, literature, science, politics, and the arts.

Such a series here would most certainly prove entertaining and stimulating to the members of the University's community but to the residents of the Philadelphia area to whom we also have an obligation.

Action must be taken now, if Villanova is going to fulfill this vital liability by supplementing planned academic, athletic, social, and campus activities with such a program during the '63-64 school year.

Barry Thornton, '64

To the Editor

Shortly we will be coming to the end of another Student Council Assembly. It is fitting at this time that the members of this Council as well as the entire student body take cognizance of its accomplishments as well as the problems which beset it. I do not intend to delve into any long dissertation concerning these matters in this snort article. However, there are some points well worth mentioning.

No one can doubt the progress which we have made in the past few years. The Council has gradually, and not without some difficulty, evolved into a coordinated, moving machine. But still there is much to be desired in the perspective of the members. The object of this Council should not be "today," but "tomorrow." Too many times have great dreams started high in the sky and have ended in a quick grave. Too many times has a prone or literally prostrate Assembly gone along with a few sonorous phrases, only to abjectly repudiate them later or passively watch them crumble or die. Too few times have members really taken the time, or perhaps have had it allowed to them, to truly consider the pros and cons of a situation. All too frequently have members hurried to get out of "today's" meeting forgetting "tomorrow's" complications.

What sounds so good today may not be so gratifying tomorrow. Notable "duds" are the "Book-of-the-Semester" program and the fact that the Council of two years ago inadvertantly eliminated the means for any new organizations to be recognized by the Council. It seems ludicrous that any Assembly be occupied with a revision of the previous year's work. One may justly wonder in what direction we are headed.

However, a more salient question in this regard is this: How many people who voted "aye" to these questions really know what they were doing. How many were thinking of the easy way out "today" instead of "tomorrow's" complications. How many people last Wednesday night really knew or tried to understand the arguments presented? Or perhaps, how many of those few people who take it upon themselves to lead the debate were objective and logical in their thinking? I can not help but wonder if certain legislation concerning cuts from meetings will not be revised by March of 1964. History, unless corrected, will only repeat itself.

This is the type of problem we will have to face in the future if we are going to really reach our potential. This is what is going to be our next "line of demaication," — that thin line between proficiency and mediocrisy.

I sincerely hope that through continued progress on our part and more expository articles in the future we can, once and for all, make mediocrity a thing of the past.

LEO GOODREAU

Caught In Passing

Rt. Hon. Martyn Green... 'Ruler Of King's Navee'

by Jon Dyroff

Martyn Green was born in England, the son of William Green, a noted tenor of the English stage. As a boy, he received vocal training from his father. Later, he studied with the late Gustav Garcia at the Royal College of Music.

Since 1952 he has made his home in New York and devoted most of his time to the American theatre. His early fame rested on the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, and to many Martyn Green is synonymous with Gilbert and Sullivan.

Martyn Green

It is in connection with the latter that Mr. Green has come to Philadelphia. He is to open at the Forrest on April 15 with Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore," a Dan Rosen presentation.

The production will be directed by Mr. Green himself and there is every reason to think that it will be one of the high points of the theatre season.

I saw Mr. Green in his suite at the Warwick last week and we talked over the coming run in Philadelphia. Mr. Green will play Sir Joseph Porter, Right Honorable First Lord of the Admiralty.

Update Dress

One of the innovations to "Pinafore" will be the updating of the costumes to 1913. The only other change is a minor one to the libretto, that is "the King's navy," since Edward was monarch in 1913.

This change enables a marvelous transformation to occur costumewise. Mr. Green terms the effect "delicious," when speaking of the ladies'.

As First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Green will suggest the First Lord of '13, replete with brief case, cane, cigar, and "V For Victory" sign.

No Favorite

When speaking of his various G&S roles, Mr. Green said that he had no overall favorites. "I simply can't afford it," he said. "Whichever character I happen to be playing at the time, that one is my favorite."

Recalling his younger days, Mr. Green spoke of meeting Gilbert. "He came to our house, as he was a friend of my father's. I can remember sitting on his knee once. He was a kindly, charming man, not at all the martinet he is sometimes pictured as being."

For the week of April 15-20 while "Pinafore" is in town Mr. Green and company promise G&S at its best with "added excitement and zit to the show."

Philadelphia Brass Quintet Featured At Second Concert

by Norb Dusyn

The Philadelphia Brass quintet, composed of members and graduates of the Curtis Institute of Music, were featured at the second concert of the Villanova Chamber Music Concert Series on Sunday, March 24. The series is sponsored by the Villanova Music Society.

I do not think I have to dwell very long on the unique sounds produced by a group of brass instruments. The sharp, percussive notes of the trumpets, the smooth, mellow tones of the French horn, and the deep brash sounds of the tuba and trombone all blend together to produce a finely knitted harmony close to that for a full orchestra.

Edwin F. McCoyon, first trumpet, Glen Bowling, second trumpet, Robert Moore, trombone, David Gray on the French horn, and Donald Blakeslee on tuba performed flawlessly throughout the entire concert to produce such a harmony, not commonly alien to an amateur group.

Effect of Dissonance

An important quality to listen for when dealing with brass instruments is the effect of dissonance-the sounding together of tones so close together, that if done improperly, will produce a soundly grossly out of balance with the others.

I am happy to say that these musicians carried themselves gracefully through the portions of the music that required dissonance-especially in the "Come Sweet Death" (from Cantata # 161) by J. S. Bach, whose slow long-noted passages most certainly taxed their abilities in this regard.

Thus we have the second, and so far the most successful concert in the Chamber Music Series. The turnout was greatly improved in attendance.

Frank Thornton, as Don Juan, displays his seductive smile to confused and apprehensive Kathleen Harshberger, as Donna Anna, in the production "Don Juan in Hell." The production was under the sponsorship of the Graduate Theatre Department.

Grads Present 'Don Juan In Hell', Shaw's Hellish Feast Is Lenten Fare

by George Welch

The Villanova Graduate Theatre's serving of "Don Juan in Hell" proved a heady diversion from the usually meatless Friday fare. The play, if it may be called such, offers a liberal portion of typically Shavian irreverence, a diet not recommended for those with poor digestive faculties, or for those whose appetite will not tolerate lengthy speeches, and little action. The menu, however, can be considered as varied, and providing ample sustenance for the mind.

Hell has been pictured in many ways, by Dante, by Milton, and now by Shaw; each in the peculiar style and imagery of the artists. However, they all share one common characteristic; in spite of their varied trappings they are 'Hell', and there is no other way to describe this most human of miseries and afflictions.

The Hell that Shaw depicts is a personal and intimate place. It is easily accessible through the powers of the mind by means of a mere lapse in the individual's will. As the playwright so modestly puts it, "they derive their notions of it (Hell) from two of the greatest fools that ever lived, an Italian and an Englishman."

Cocktail Party

Shaw means to correct these earlier misrepresentations by creating a "place of eternal pleasures". At first glance then, it seems appropriate that the Graduate Theatre's director (George Herman) has made the setting for the play a cocktail party, replete with drinks for the actors, and hors d' oeuvres for the audience.

The setting of the cocktail party integrates the action of what used to be a 'dream' segment from the longer play "Man and Superman". Although the play loses its character of being a dream, and the modern dress of the actors makes it difficult to visualize their Spanish heritage in anything but name, it gains a life of its own, intimate and modern in tone.

This shift in setting and costume necessarily obliterates some of the original meaning, but in no way destroys the interest or impact of the dialogue; rather, it complements it, allowing the piece to stand alone as an integrated work.

Lucifer Plays Host

Lucifer (played by Dick Harshberger) has invited three guests to his satanic soiree, Don Juan (played by Frank Thornton), the statue or Senor Commander (played by Ed Weinheim), and Dona Anna (played by Kathleen Harshberger). In the course of the evening's festivities the Devil gains an adherent, and loses one of his company. This reviewer gained much the same impression, of 'win one, lose one' after seeing the performance of the actors.

Dick Harshberger was a fine devil, playing the perfect host to all his guests, audience and players. Without him, the party would have been much less of a success, as he kept the conversation interesting, modulating his voice to stress the bite and wit of a Shavian alliterative passage, and acting enough with facial and hand gesture to keep the guest from closing his eyes and just listening to the words.

Unfortunately, this cannot be said for one of his guests. For all of his supposedly dashing character, and often acid observations, Don Juan seemed to be dishing out a diet of strained sarcasm fit more for cure or prevention, than cultivation of the ulcer Shaw intended. Admittedly, the length of Juan's speeches would prove a difficult chore for any actor, but they are no less a chore for the audience.

Casual Don Juan

The actor's role is to entertain, not to just deliver up the sometimes monotonous metaphysical observations in a monotone of voice and expression. Somehow the character of the famous Spanish lover became subdued, giving more the impression of Madison Avenue casualness than that of a romantic scoundrel turned philosopher. Perhaps this interpretation of character is consistent with this production of the play; if so, we can only regret that the twinkle has gone out of Juan's eye, and that he's less a devil than he used to be.

Don Juan's terrestrial, amatory exploits ended abruptly one night while he was . . . was with a lady, Dona Anna. These many years later they meet again, marvelously changed in all but name into an Irish colleen, Kathleen Harshberger, but Anna loses none of her femininity and fierce pride in the transformation.

The most interesting transformation of the evening was that produced by Ed Weinheim, and an illusory quantity of wine. By the end of the performance he and Satan tipsily leave the stage, slapping each other on the back, and presumably heading for a smoker, (Hell's version of indulgence, all smoke, no fire) in some other region of Tophet. It provided a pleasant touch of humor on the groaning board of wit.

Spring At Villanova

by Liz Kovach

With the advent of welcome spring weather our campus displays sights which were formerly absent, or at least uncommon, during winter's frigid months.

Everywhere one looks there are innumerable signs of spring—the countless spots of refreshingly green grass or the budding of the daffodils.

But for those who are not too aware of nature's subtle signs, there are many sights which can be noted by merely walking across the campus—the renewed frequentation of the outdoor basketball tennis courts behind St. Mary's Hall.

The long neglected benches on campus are again occupied for a few moments of rest, talk, or perhaps some peaceful study.

Sitting in the classroom is twice as difficult now—gusts of warm breeze swirl through the open window, rays of sunshine blind you amid feverish note-taking. The desire to go outdoors. To walk and let the wind blow through your hair. To bask in, be overcome by the sun.

A few of the luckier students can and do enjoy this. But for the most part the students must remain in the clutches of the classrooms and vainly struggle to listen to their teachers, who also wish they could be outside.

People seem happier and friendlier in the spring. They lose their affectations and pretenses in simple things—a cleric pauses to entice a frolicking squirrel with some tidbit or other.

In time the squirrel overcomes his shyness and fear, and jumps on the shoes of the rising cleric. It seems as if he is trying to repay the kindness and thoughtfulness of the man — as we too, try to repay the thoughtfulness of spring.

Archives Contain School's History; Responsibility Lies With Mary Cary

by John Roberts

Most Villanovans are familar with the Library; that pretentious little building they pass on their way to ostentatious Mendel Hall.

Of the many departments in the Library, perhaps one of the most interesting and yet least known is the Archives.

Located in a screened-in section of the fifth floor of the Library, the Archives is where the recorded history of Villanova, from before the purchase of the Belle Air estate to the present day University, is preserved in the form of documents, manuscripts, programs, letters, back issues, momentoes and what not.

All of these things are meticuloously classified, arranged and cared for by the Library's Archivist, Mary Cary.

In late 1959, Mrs. Cary was retiring from her job at Swarthmore College as Archivist at Friends Historical Library. Mrs. Cary, who trained in the National Archives in Washington, and at various times had studied Penn's, Yale's, and Swarthmore's Archives systems, had distinguished herself in her field and when the always alert Fr. Falvey heard that she was leaving Swarthmore, he seized upon the opportunity to call Mrs. Cary and propose that she come to Villanova.

Despite her protests that she was retiring, Fr. Falvey finally succeeded in convincing Mrs. Cary that Villanova was suffering from the lack of an Archives department and when a satisfactory working agreement was decided upon—Villanova had an Archivist.

On January second, of 1960, Mrs. Cary reported to the Villanova Library and began an almost impossible job.

First she made a general survey of the vast amount of material that had collected over the years and arrived at the conclusion that there was not the slightest bit of order in the contents or location of the material.

Past students' academic records lay along side of programs of the now defunct Villanova-Rosemont sing society. Football banners were enclosed in the same envelopes as old Student Council records.

Undeniably, the job was one of endless sorting, classifying, and arranging.

Now, after three years, and thanks to Mrs. Cary's diligent work the Archives has a definite semblance of order in the arrangement of material, making it possible to locate, almost immediately, such things as the records of the first board of trustees of Villanova College, the the program of the 1933 Turf 'N Tinsel production, the original school seal or your father's marks if he graduated after 1895.

A great deal of credit is due to Fr. Falvey for his foresight and also to Mrs. Cary, who, with the help and cooperation of Fr. Falvey's capable successor, Fr. Louis A. Rongione continues to do a fine job; always ready to help someone locate something from Villanova's past.

We went to the mountain to make 1963 Ford-built cars go 30,000 to 100,000 miles between major chassis lubrications

Quite a task faced Ford Motor Company engineers when they set out to eliminate the traditional trip to the grease rack every 1,000 miles.

Like Mohammed, they went to the mountain—Bartlett Mountain on the Continental Divide in Colorado. More molybdenite is mined there than in the rest of the world combined. And from molybdenite ore comes the amazing "moly" grease that helps extend the chassis lubrication intervals for Ford-built cars. This grease sticks tenaciously to metal, stands up under extreme pressures and resists moisture, pounding and squeezing. It is slicker than skates on ice!

New, improved seals were developed. Bushings, bearings and washers of many materials were investigated. Slippery synthetics, like nylon and teflon, were used a number of new ways.

The search for means to extend chassis lubrication also led to New Orleans—where experimental suspension ball joints tested in taxicabs in regular service went two years without relubrication.

It took time. And ingenuity. But the effort paid off when Ford-built cars were the first to build in chassis lubrication good for 30,000 miles or two years—whichever came first.

Another assignment completed—another "Ford First" and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

Look Backstage For The Theatre

by Art Molitierno

Want to see the real theatre? Then don't go to it. Instead, try going back stage. You'll be amazed at the acting.

Recently I had the pleasure of seeing a truly enjoyable comedy," "Enter Laughing." I went back stage to interview one of the stars of the play, Vivian Blaine. She made the remark that the comedy is enjoyable because it has no message.

Backstage Does

Maybe the play didn't have a message, but the backstage of the theatre did. It's one that has been talked about often enough, but can not be fully comprehended until you experience it for yourself.

The message is that the theatre is in the people. When we think of the theatre we usually think in terms of the characterization of life as it is now, as it was then, or what life is really like or should be.

What better place is there to learn of the theatre than from the people who are an every day part of it? And the best place to acquire this knowledge is not from interviews, but by watching the "characters" as they leave the "stage."

Standing backstage with a friend of mine, I noticed a man who, from his appearance, looked as if he owned the Chase-Manhattan Bank—as he stood there in his velvetine-collared top coat. In a short time who should come prancing down the stair but curvacious Miss B.

She nonchalantly extended her hand and looked in my direction. It was too good to be true. The man in the velvetine top coat was standing directly behind me. Needless to say, she didn't leave the theatre with me.

Star's Entree

Then the star of the play made his entree down the rickety stairs, clad in no less than the garb of a cowboy, blue jeans and all. Closely following the star was the lady who played opposite him in the comedy.

Beautiful to see on stage, with her blond hair giving off radiant highlights as the theatre lights made their effect, she had all the appearances of a beatnick off stage.

I could go on describing the entire list of "characters," but you must see it for yourself. You must see what the "real" theatre is like. You must experience it, or you will never know why the theatre is in the people.

STUDENT COUNCIL MEETING TUESDAY, APRIL 9

It Oughta Be Here Someplace, Or The Case Of The Missing...

by Fred Cogswell

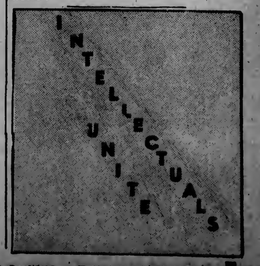
It oughta be here . . . someplace. Have you ever said that when you couldn't find something on this campus? I know I have. So I follow the instructions when I'm going someplace around here.

However, it strikes me that anytime you want to locate something, you can't just go up to someone and say, "Hey, where is.....?" because he more than likely won't know the answer.

The other day this reporter was sitting up in Tolentine Hall waiting for the check-cashing office to get some money, when he noticed the directory of offices and activities for the school.

Second Floor?

At the top of the second part of the directory was the listing for the Lynx, supposedly on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. This was news to me. I spend quite a lot of my time up there and I had never heard that this organization was up there. But not being one to jump to conclusions, I made a mental note to find out for sure.



Not discouraged by this small mistake, I read further. To my astonishment, I learned that radio station W V I L was also located on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. Now I was really confused. I had been working for WWVU since the beginning of the school year, but I had no idea that there was another radio on campus too. Figuring that WWVU would be next, I proceeded to read. It wasn't there.

After I got back, I did some checking up. It seems that the Lynx is located on the top of Tolentine Hall, and that up until three years ago, the campus radio station was under the name of W V I L.

Informed Strangers?

Perhaps you are wondering why I have taken up so much of your time with such a pointless story. Its simply this—I was under the impression that the directory was supposed to inform strangers, which includes prospective students, where they might find points of interest to them on the Villanova campus.

Keeping a simple directory up to date should be a relatively simple task. Why hasn't it been done?

Symposium On Rhodes Scholarship Features Student Qualifications

A symposium to acquaint potential candidates with Rhodes Scholarship regulations was chaired last Tuesday evening by Dr. Joseph George, Jr., Postgraduate Study Advisor.

The guest speakers included the Rev. Robert J. Welsh, OSA, Dean of Arts and Sciences; Anthony R. Turner, Department of History, and Dr. Gilmore Stott, Deputy American Secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust.

The recipients of these awards must show promise of future achievement in life. They must be male citizens of the United States and unmarried. By October 1 the candidate must be eighteen years old and not over twenty-four and by the time of application he must have reached junior standing.

Servants and Suites

Mr. Turner, a graduate of Oxford University, where the Rhodes Scholars study, related that the University is composed of twenty-six colleges. The students reside in suites, where there is a servant for every six students.

The tutorial system is used and only one examination is required. This takes place at the end of their two or three years and lasts for three weeks.

Mr. Turner continued, "Studies are only part of your life at Oxford." Many people take part in sports, and there are many clubs and societies. There are many private parties, some given by the tutors. The vacations are very long and school is in session approximately six months a year.

Fr. Welsh spoke next and said that the candidates must have the endorsement of the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University.

Potential Leaders

Specific qualifications given by Fr. Welsh are that the individuals be good students, potential leaders, and be poised and articulate.

Dr. Stott said that the screening of the candidates is done by former Rhodes Scholars. The person is judged on the potential he is thought to possess. He must be a person of dedication and desire.

Referring to the sports criterion, he assured those present that they do not have to be "name" personalities in sports. He did say that they have to be interested in the competitive life.

Dr. Scott said that the University may nominate as many individuals as it wishes.

Francis Coughlin Is Last Speaker Of Year In Lecture Series

Mr. Francis Coughlin, Assistant Professor of History, was the last speaker in the History Department Lecture Series.

Mr. Coughlin received his bachelor's degree in Economics from London University in 1949; he received his master's degree in Political Science from Notre Dame in 1956. Currently he is working on his doctoral dissertation at Bryn Mawr College.

Welsh Introduced

Father Robert J. Welsh, OSA, introduced Mr. Coughlin as an able historian an interesting lecturer, and a fellow Welshman.

He spoke on "Theodore Roosevelt and the New Nationalism." In his lecture he refuted Roosevelt critics who claimed he was a "pseudo-progressive," militarist, and a "bogus liberal," or as Mark Twain said ,that he "had no principles."

Mr. Coughlin traced Roosevelt's career from his Phi Beta Kappa days at Harvard to his three terms in the New York State Legislature to his two terms in the White House as the famed "trust-buster".

Coughlin States

Mr. Roosevelt, Coughlin stated, resented his "presidency by accident," and fought for the strong use of the executive power. He became a defender of the open shop and government regulation of private industry.

Mr. Coughlin stated, "His radicalism may be explained by the fact that he was a fighter — he fought sickness in his youth and business as an adult."

He said that the president conceived the New Nationalism as national efficiency and national power in line with his theory that an elected official was a "steward of the public welfare."

The lecture was followed by a question and answer period.

As another example of why it has become increasingly difficult to have additional telephones installed in the dormitories Rev. George J. McLaughlin, OSA, has posted a list of several students who owe the telephone company money. The charges were incurred in the various telephone booths on campus. Some of the unpaid bills are as high as $20.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: MIKE HARRIS

Mike Harris (B.S.E., 1961) is an Engineer with New Jersey Bell Telephone Company in Trenton. Mike reviews the day-to-day problems of the Red Bank District which arise in building space planning and central office equipment programming.

Since his solutions to these problems bring about improvements in speed and quality of telephone service, his recommendations are welcomed by his management.

Earlier training assignments prepared Mike for this job. And proved he was ready for it!

Villanova Student Engineers Host ASCE Convention April 8

The Villanova chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers will host the Twenty-Fifth Annual Student Chapter Convention on April 8.

It will begin at 9:30 on that Monday morning with registration and Coffee Hour in the Villanova Field House. Following registration there will be an invocation by the Rev. William E. Farrell, OSA, BCE, assistant to the President.

The Welcome address will be given by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, BS in EE, MS, DSc, and President of Villanova.

The presentation of the Keynote Speaker will be made by Prof. John F. Gallen, Dean of Engineering, Villanova University, and the Keynote Address will be given by Mr. Samuel S. Baxter, Commissioner, Water Department, City of Philadelphia, who will speak on "Public Works Engineering — Today, Tomorrow and the Future."

Other speakers will include, Raymond R. Hunter, Richard E. Mabry, William Moeller, David Eugene Wojik and Salvatore Bucolo.

Luncheon will be served at 1:30 p.m., followed by a tour of the laboratories at 2:45 p.m. and a presentation of awards at 3:45 p.m. The presentation of awards will be made by Mr. John I. Cahalan, Jr. Chairman of the Association.

The judges are John I. Cahalan, Assistant County Engineer of New Castle Delaware. R. Leland Durkee of the Bethlehem Steel Company and Robert R. Dickey of Gordon and Associates.

Many colleges and universities will participate in the convention.

Certificate Of Merit Granted Junior Dunne For State Internship

Frank H. Dunne of Brooklyn, New York, a junior at Villanova, received a Certificate of Merit in the 1963 competition sponsored by the James A. Finnegan Fellowship Foundation.

This recognition was given at special ceremonies in the State Capitol at Harrisburg by the Secretary of the Foundation, Pennsylvania's Secretary of Internal Affairs, Genevieve Blatt.

Along with the thirteen other winners, he will receive an opportunity to serve a summer internship in the various departments of the state government at the Pennsylvania State Capitol or in a political party headquarters.

The James A. Finnegan Fellowship Foundation was organized in memory of the late Secretary of the Commonwealth, James A. Finnegan, who managed Adlai Stevenson's National Campaign for the Presidency in 1956. It has been making annual awards since 1960, and has already provided summer internships for 45 college student winners in the annual competitions.

Nominations Held

Battling for C and F Representative on the Senior plane are Joseph Perna (D), Robert FitzGerald (D), Joseph Tysowski (R), and Richard Greiner (R). The Juniors are Dave Moore (D) Tom Furst (R). and Mike Stofolino.

Senior Engineering Representative is being contested by Frank McBrearity (D), Mike Pelletier (R), and Tom Russo (R). The Junior contest is open to Joe Carradino (D), Jim Murphy (D), Dick McCormack (R), and Barry Greenwood.

On the distaff side, Meg Sullivan, Faith Conner and Justine Nebus are running for Nurses' Representative.

For the Arts and Science Representative in the Senior contest are John Hagerty (R), Pete Schmidt (D), and Bob Goldberg (D). For the Juniors, Ned Sperr (D), Bill Manfred (D), John Roberts (D), Ernie Abate (R), and ed Gornowski are nominated.

Contending for the post of Alumni Representative are Neil Stoneback, Jack Helm, and Bob Beattie.

Campaigning started officially at midnight last Sunday as signs were placed on the lawn adjacent to the Classroom Annex and handbills distributed througout the dormitories.

Nominations for the election took place on Thursday March 21, in various room throughout the campus. Junior class nominations were closed that day but the preliminary balloting for the Freshman and Sophomore classes remained open. The delay in the close in nominations for those classes was necessitated by the apparent lack of interest shown by the two classes.

At the original meetings only one set of candidates was put up by each class. The lengthening of the nominating period allowed better publicity to be circulated and brought about an additional slate from the Class of '66. There were no additional names added to the Sophomore ballot.

Psych Department Slates Open House With Exhibits

The Psychology Department of Villanova University will present an open house including laboratory demonstrations and a panel discussion beginning today, April 3 at 3 p.m., and continuing till Saturday April 6 at 6 p.m.

The first activity begins today with a laboratory demonstration in the Psychological laboratories, room 361 Mendel Hall. The demonstrations will be on "Perception, Human Learning, and Animal Learning." All members of Villanova's Psychology Department will be present for questions and explanations.

All students are invited to attend these demonstrations as well as the panel discussion which will be held this Saturday at 2 p.m. in room 350, Mendel Hall. The topic of the discussion will be "Reflections on Psychology as a Profession."

The three speakers who are scheduled to talk are: Dr. Zygmund Piotrowski, Clinical Psychologist, Jefferson Medical College and Hospital; Dr. Arthur Siegel, Director of Applied Psychological Services, Wayne County; and Dr. Eliot Stellar, Professor of Physiological Psychology, Medical School, University of Pennsylvania.

These activities are all a part of Psychology Week sponsored by the Psychology Department and undergraduate Villanova Psychological Society.

WIP General Manager Speaks On Careers To Station Staff

Harvey L. Glascock, General Manager of Philadelphia's WIP and Vice-President of Metropolitan Broadcasting Company, addressed a group of Villanova students last Wednesday night.

The radio executive explained to the gathering, most of whom were staff members of campus station WWVU, the workings of a professional radio station and the rigors of breaking into the professional aspect of the industry.

A question and answer period followed the talk and several aspiring radio men had their problems relating to radio cleared up.

Glascock was the second in a series of speakers telling WWVU about the broadcast industry. The first was WIP newsman William Paine.

Jesters Edge Magnificent 7 To Capture Intramural Crown

by Dennis Gildea

The Jesters won the 1962-63 Villanova Intramural Basketball title by edging the Magnificent 7's 40-36 last Thursday in the Alumni Hall gym. Capturing the crown for the second straight year meant an undefeated season for the Jester. It was their tenth consecutive victory without a defeat.

Bill Barbaro sparked the Jester's attack in the title game just as he had all throughout the tournament.

The game was marred by frequent foul calls. In the second half alone there was a total of 25 calls made on both teams. The entire game saw the opposing five step to the charity line 42 times.

Semi-Finals

To reach the finals the Jesters swept over the JK's 40-34, and then downed the Swishers in the semi-finals to the tune of 63-47.

The magnificent 7's nipped the L. Hangers 38-35, and followed that up with a 46-37 victory over the Frosh 5 before meeting defeat at the hands of the Jesters.

Excluding the championship game, the tournament was characterized by an exciting, clean brand of basketball. Perhaps, an explanation for the excessive amount of fouls called in the final contest was the intense desire on the part of both squads to be crowned Intramural Champs.

Additional Tourneys

Intramural directors have recently announced that there will neys held. The tennis tournament, which started Monday, began with an opening field of forty hopefuls.

A volley ball tournament is slated to get underway following the Easter vacation. Nets have been placed in the fields near Sullivan and Fedigan Halls. Jim Murphy and Al Lupcho are handling the entries.

Golf Tournament

Although nothing definite has been mentioned as yet, it is likely that an Intramural Golf Tournament will be held sometime this Spring. A meeting is scheduled this week to pick a possible site and date for the tournament.

In the meantime the softball league is flourishing with four leagues and 41 teams in operation. The circuit ,which had its opening game last week, is already making plans for its playoffs later in the season.

The latest development on the Intramural scene is a Senior Red Cross Life Saving and Water Safety Course which starts today in the Field House pool.

Rugby Squad Vanquishes Penn State To Advance Season Record To 2-1

Villanova's rugby squad came back from its first defeat of the season to defeat an improved Penn State team 25-3 last Saturday. The game played before a large crowd on the Wildcats' homefield put them back into the victory column after a 9-3 defeat the previous weekend to the New York Rugby Club, the top team in the East. In the "B" game Villanova defeated Penn State 17-8.

Villanova jumped off to an early lead in this contest which saw the 'Cats put on their most impressive offensive show in the last two seasons, moving the ball the length of field on several occasions for scores. Bob "Bulldog" Shayer started the scoring when he ran over for three points. Shortly thereafter Bert Lombino's try, the first of two three-pointers for him, gave the home team a 6-0 lead.

Following Lombino's score Tom James had to be removed from the game with a knee injury. Because there can be no replacements the Wildcats were forced to continue with only 14 players. The fine running and passing of the Villanova backs was mainly responsible for the offensive surge which saw the Wildcats open up a 19-3 halftime advantage. Tries by Pete Triolo, Lombino, and Ed Wilkinson, conversions by Shayer and Don Crouthamel accounted for the other 13 Villanova points.

The second half saw the Mainliners continually pressing toward the visitors' goal; but having difficulty getting across. The 'Cats managed to score only twice during this half, which featured the strong play of the defensive line spearheaded by Don Canava and Triolo. The scores were on a penalty kick by Crouthamel and a 40 yard breakaway run by Tony Tramontozzi.

The win upped the Wildcats' record to 2-1. They face a stiff challenge this coming Saturday when they take on Columbia at home. A large crowd is expected to turn out for the contest.

LaCrosse Squad Is Victorious Over Georgetown Team, 14-4

Villanova's lacrosse team racked up its first win of an infant season with a 14-4 victory over Georgetown last Saturday at the loser's home field. The Cats were never in trouble as led 7-1 at halftime and gradually pulled away in the second half.

Jim Burke contributed four goals for team high while Bill White and Mike Sweeney had three goals each. Mike Shepard had two goals and Dave Dunn and Herb Fixler rounded-out the scoring with one goal apiece.

Bowdoin Wins

On March 26, the VU stickmen dropped a 10-3 match to Bodwoin on Villanova's field. At the end of the first quarter, the score stood at 1-1 but the New Englanders rallied for three goals in the second period and that was it. White, Dunn and Jim Jones took care of Villanova's scoring.

In the season's opener on March 23, the Wildcats dropped a 13-4 battle to C. W. Post. A 2-2 first period tie was broke by Post as they ran off seven goals in the second period. Jones, Dunn, White and Burke handled the Villanova scoring.

This Saturday Villanova plays Cattonsville Lacrosse Club of Baltimore on the Main-Line campus with the game beginning at 2:00 p.m.

Swimmers Finish Seventh In NCAA; McDonough Sets Butterfly Record

Led by NCAA record breaker Dick McDonough, Villanova's swimming team finished seventh in the NCAA swimming Championships held last weekend at Raleigh, North Carolina.

McDonough won the 200 yard butterfly event with a time of 1:57.3, breaking the 1:57.8 clocking of Indiana's Mike Troy set in 1961. This mark ties him with Troy for the NCAA and American records. The following day, he finished second in the 100 yard butterfly with a 0:52.5 time.

Relay team wins

The 400 yard relay team of Paul Winn, Jack Geogehgan, Rick Girdler and McDonough finished in third place with a 3:14.3 time, two-tenths of a second behind Minnesota. Southern California, the meet winner with 81½ points and favorite in the 400, came in fourth with a 3:14.5 time.

In finishing seventh in the NCAA's, Villanova is now rated seventh in the nation out of approximately 30 schools. The Cats finished behind Southern Cal., Yale, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio State, and Stanford. It is interesting to note, the VU's fourman squad finished ahead of all Big Ten schools but three and the Ivy League schools except Yale.

All-Americans

Recently seven of the local mermenwere named All-Americans: Winn, Geogehgan, Girdler, McDonough, Chris Fisher, Frank Keim and Alec Hicks. At the National AAU meet held recently at Yale, McDonough was named to the Pan-American team that will compete in Brazil.

36 DAYS THAT CHANGED THE PERFORMANCE PICTURE IN AMERICA

In 36 days, starting with the Monte Carlo Rallye in January of this year, our products have posted a series of competition wins that have made performance history. Here's what has happened:

Three V-8 Falcon Sprints were entered in the Monte Carlo Rallye. This is not a race. It is a trial of a car's total capabilities. We did it (nervously) for the experience and with practically no sense of expectation, because we had not entered an event like this before. One Sprint ended the experiment in a snowbank. But the others finished 1-2 in their class with such authority that they moved the good, grey London Times to say: "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country in the world." That was Number One.

Number Two was a double win in the Pure Oil Performance Trials. Fords captured Class 1 and Class 2 (for high performance and large V-8's). Both of these trials were for over-all points rolled up in economy, acceleration and braking tests.

Then, at Riverside in California, in America's only long-distance stock car event that is run on a road course (as opposed to closed circuit, banked tracks such as the track at Daytona), Dan Gurney pushed a Ford to first place.

The latest news comes north from Daytona. There in the open test that tears cars apart—the Daytona 500—Ford durability conquered the field. Fords swept the first 5 places . . . something no one else had equaled in the history of the event. In a competition—which anyone can enter—designed to prove how well a car hangs together, 9 Fords finished out of 12 entered . . . a truly remarkable record considering that over 50% of all cars entered failed to finish.

Why do we keep such an interested eye on competitions such as these? Is speed important to us? Frankly, no. The speed capabilities of the leading American cars are now grouped so closely together that the differences have no real meaning. To us, who are building cars, success in this kind of competition means just one thing: the car is strong. This kind of performance capability means that the car is so well built that it can stand up to normal driving—the kind of day-in, day-out demands you put your own car through—for thousands of miles longer than less capable cars.

In tests like the Daytona 500 and Riverside, we find out in an afternoon what might take us 100,000 test-track miles to discover. We learn how to build superior strength into suspension systems, steering systems, drive train, body, tires. Anyone can build a fast car. What we're interested in is the concept of "total" performance.

We believe in this kind of total performance because the search for performance made the automobile the wonderfully efficient and pleasurable instrument it is today—and will make it better tomorrow.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

SPORTS ROUNDUP

On Saturday, March 9, the Villanova Rifle Team emerged the victor in a triangular rifle after taking second place in the match with Bucknell and Lehigh. Rifle Sectionals of the previous week.

Art Blades, Team Captain, fired the highest overall score of the afternoon with a 285. He, in turn, was supported by Lou Stengel 278, Bill Anderson 274, George Walko 273, Ed Casper 271. The final score for Villanova was a 1381 which surpassed Bucknell's 1366, and Lehigh's 1371.

Villanova's bowling team, made up of Andy Razzore and John Brennan, finished third in the annual Eastern Intercollegiate doubles bowling championships. The bowlathon was held on the past two Saturdays at the William Penn Lanes. Pennsylvania and St. John's finished first and second, respectively, while St. Francis of Brooklyn finished in the number four spot.

The Wildcats led going into the finals with a total of 5464 pins in 28 matches, followed by St. John's, St. Francis and Penn. On Sunday the Quakers made their move.

Gaw at second, the relay to first was not in time to double up Morse.

Here's where heads-up play took over. Nelson scored easily from third on the ground ball, but Coughlin, who had been on second, hit third and just kept coming for home. The play caught Villanova's defenses napping and the play at the plate wasn't even close.

The Mainliners picked up a trio in the third to knot the count. With one out Lynch blasted a triple into center and scored on Bob Hall's Texas-leaguer into right. Richie Richman walked and Mike Zaia dropped a blooper into center to load the sacks. Mike Kiley walked to force in Hall and Richman scored when the shortstop booted Jack Emery's grounder.

Then, just to build up the tension, the home forces let Maine pick up four tallies in the fourth on four hits and an error and take a 7-3 lead.

Villanova rallied for four runs in the ninth to tie the score at nine and send the tilt into extras. Mahan's two-out, two run single sent the game into overtime. The Wildcats rallied from a 9-5 deficit on a walk to Zaia and consecutive singles to Kiley, Emery, and Andy Camello.

Villanova sewed it up in the tenth when Richman singled, stole second, went to third on Kiley's single and came home with the bacon when Maine failed to come up with an inning ending double play on a grounder hit by Richie Redziak.

Wildcat Batsmen Outslug Bowdoin In Capturing Opening Day Win, 10-8

by Richard Paxden

Villanova's vasity baseball team opened it's 1963 campaign by downing Bowdoin, 10-8.

Three Villanova pitchers scattered seven hits while the Cats raked a like number of visiting hurlers for thirteen safeties to cop the victory. Bill Smith worked the first three innings, giving up three runs on one hit, to pick up the victory.

Tony Candelmo hurled the middle three frames, yielding a run on only one hit while Pete Connors finished up, charged with four runs and five hits.

Frank Nicolia, John Giesler, and Dave Nelson toiled for the losers, Nicolia being tagged with the loss.

Bowdoin picked up three quick runs in the initial frame on only one hit, but Villanova came back with a trio of their own in the second, making use of four hits and an

With two out in the third, Mike Zaia slammed a home run over the left field fence to get the Cats'offense rolling. Mike Kiley was safe on an error by shortstop Pete Fink and came around to score when Jack Emery dropped a texas-league double into left.

The big blow in the fourth was Bob Hall's single to left, which scored Candelmo and Art Mahan with the victor's sixth and seventh runs.

On Saturday the 'Cats made it two in a row, again picking up the victory the hard way. They spotted the University of Maine a 7-3 lead and then went on to rally for a 10-9, ten inning victory.

Frank Smith, the last of six Villanova pitchers, picked up his initial victory of the season. The victory was Villanova's second in as many games while the setback was Maine's opening contest. Ed Thomas was the loser.

Maine picked up a quick two counters in the first inning, making use of starter Vic Majewski's wildness and some heads-up baseball. Vic Nelson and Larry Coughlan both received free passes and Connie Nisbit flew to center to call a momentary halt to the parade.

Larry Gaw then walked to fill the bases. Phil Morse then hit a ground ball to V.U. second baseman Art Mahan. Mahan flipped to shortstop Jack Lynch to force Compare! Compare!

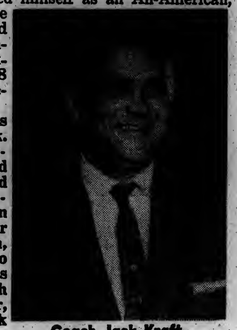
by Tom Bruderle

Ten days ago, Villanova's second seccessful basketball season in the same number of years came to a close. Like last season, the 1962-63 cagers were expected to have a poor year and, like last year, they didn't.

Although it is not rare for a team to have two successful back-to-back seasons, it is not common to have two surprising campaigns as the Cats had. And now, fortunately, VU fans have the luxury to choose the most surprising.

What did the 61-62 aggregation have going for them, on better still, what did they have going against them?



As far as personnel went, the Wildcats weren't in good shape. Of the five starters, only one, Hubie White had any game experience. Jim McMonagle had not played since his freshman year while Jim O'Brien had some experience in his sophomore year. At the guard positions there were a couple of sophomores by the name of Wally Jones and George Leftwich. Out of these five individuals had to come a single well-functioning unit.

To make matters even more interesting Villanova was in the market for a new coach. After 25 years and more than 400 victories, Al Severance stepped down as head coach. This seemingly uneviable yet challanging task eventually was given to Jack Kraft, basketball coach at nearby Augustinian-run Malvern Prep.

And if that wasn't enough, Villanova opened with a schedule that saw them play four games in one week with little time for practice!

In summary, Villanova had a starting team composed of one senior, two juniors and two sophomores who had never played together as a unit, a new coach and a schedule fit for the pros.

So what did they do? They won their first 12 in a row (four in one week), captured the first annual ECAC Tournament Championship, took the Big Five title with a 4-0 mark, went to the NCAA and finished with 21-7 slate. In the process White established himself as an All-American, Jones and Leftwich became one of the East's most feared back-court duos while McMonagle and O'Brien turned in exceptional seasons with 18 points and 17 rebounds between them.

Coach Jack Kraft

If last year's prognosis was dim, this year's was bleak. White had graduated, Leftwich was in an accident and had not returned to school and Jones had a serious knee injury. Soph Jim Washington was expected to fill in for White while another soph, Eric Erickson, was tabbed to fill Leftwich's spot. Kraft was in his second year as coach and the scheduling was better, yet the future didn't look good.

Playing off-again-on-again basketball, Villanova split their first twelve games and seemed to be going nowhere in particular. Then it happened!

The turnabout began with a 63-62 win over the Penn Quakers, the favorite to win the Big Five title. Duquesne fell 49-45 and Memphis State was beaten 59-54 in their own backyard. Thanks to an almost air-tight defense and timely shooting, Villanova won 11 of their last 13 games. To close the regular season on an ironic note, Wally Jones tallied 38 points in the win over Seton Hall, bad knee and all.

The Main-Liners then accepted a bid to the NIT and here the cynics believed the bubble would finally burst. It did break, but not until DePaul had been knocked out 63-51 and Wichita stunned 54-53. Then came the needle in the form of Canisius as they dumped the Cats 61-46. Villanova brought the curtain down on its 19-10 season with a 66-58 loss at the hands of Marquette.

Which team was more surprising. From here it looks to be the 1962-63 squad. Last year's team had the horses and it seemed to be a matter of getting them to work together. This year's squad had four men returning who knew one another's moves but lost one of its starters and had another handicapped before the season even began.

Although White, at 6-4 was jumping center last season, he had experience at this and fantastic spring that enabled him to battle taller opponents on even terms for his replacement Jack Kraft had the 6-7 Washington. Before the season began Kraft said, "Much of our success will depend on how fast Jim adjusts to varsity competition." He adjusted fast enough to average 13 points and 12 rebounds per game.

Another hurdle to clear was finding a man for Leftwich. "Substitute" isn't the word, however, as Erickson played like anything but a sub as he had the best field goal percentage among the starters.

Does lightning strike twice? Well Coach Kraft said before the season opened "we don't expect to have as successful a season as we had last year. You don't lose an All-American like Hubie White and a guard like George Leftwich without hurting your team and its chances for success." What do you think?

Kraftmen Bow Twice In NIT Finals; Season Closes With 19-10 Record

by Ed Farrell

Tony Gennari, 6-3 Canisius guard, and 5-11 reserve Pat Turtle combined their respective offensive and defensive abilities to stop Villanova's surprising National Invitational Tournament drive during the semifinal round.

Gennari's 21 points, mostly on highly accurate jump shots and Pat Turtle's outstanding second half defensive performance against red-hot Wally Jones made the difference as the Cats bowed to the Grifs, 61-46.

Win Not Easy

The Buffalo squad had its troubles, however, in defeating the only unseeded team among the final four teams in the classic. A hustling Villanova defense limited Grif star Bill O'Connor to 15 points, enabling the Main Liners to hold a 28-25 edge at the half.

But the inability of the rest of the Wildcat point-making machine, both before and after Jones was contained, caused their downfall as Gennari, O'Connor, and Frank Swiatek hit for 48 of the Grifs' point production on 61.3 per cent of their field goal attempts.

The usually air-tight Villanova switching zone defense was relatively ineffective against an accurate jump shot, as it has been several times this past year.

Offense Halted

In the latter moments of the game the Wildcat offense ground to a halt. In the last ten minutes of the contest, Canisius outscored the Kraftmen 21-6, after a tie at 40 all.

Jones, hitting fantastically in the first half was high for Villanova with 24, and was the only member of the Blue and White squad to hit double figures.

The loss was a disappointing one but, nevertheless, the team has still made a mark for itself in the annals of Villanova basketball as the first Wildcat team to advance to the semifinals round of the NIT.

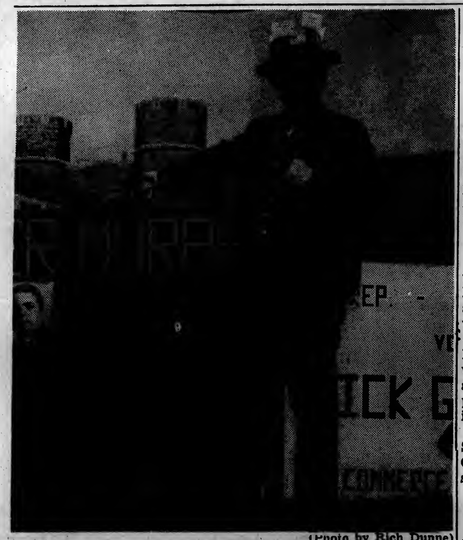
The battle for third place resulted in another setback for Coach Jack Kraft's quintet as they went down in defeat at the hands of Marquette, 66-58.

In the consolation contest the Cat offense functioned more smoothly than they had the previous Thursday against Canisius. But the jump shot once again plagued the defense as Ron Glazer poured in 26 points to lead the Warriors in the scoring column.

The Warriors took the lead with 3:08 to go in the first half after it had seesawed most of the initial period. They managed to hold it for the rest of the game, never enjoying a really comfortable lead until the contest was obviously decided with approximately four minutes to play.



34.8 Per Cent

The Villanova offense made 34.8 per cent of its field goal attempts, a decided improvement over their 27.3 percentage against Canisius. The Marquette squad made 44.2 per cent of its attempts.

The box score was more evenly distributed after this contest. Jim O'Brien had 14, Jim McMonagle 13, and Jones 13. For the opposition Bob Hornak had 13, Dave Erickson 10, to accompany Glazer's 26.

Jim Murphy, John Emery and George Valva won the Presidency of their class in elections held last Thursday in Alumni Hall.

The new Class of 1964 president, Murphy, who won by 68 votes over Joe McGill was followed into office by John Hohenadel who scored a 13 vote victory over his opponent for the vice-presidency, Peter A. Murphy.

Jim Murphy

Chuck Gnilka was elected treasurer by the Juniors by 11 votes. Jim Napolitano was elected Secretary.

The Juniors added seven names to the Student Council. They were: Neal Stoneback, Alumni; Bob Fitzgerald, C & F Day-Hop; Joe Tysowski, C & F Resident; Tom Russo, Engineering Resident, Frank McBrearity, Engineering Day-Hop; John Hagerty, Arts and Science Resident; and Bob Goldberg, Arts and Science Day-Hop.

Most interest was generated by the Freshman class where 72% of the students cast their ballots.

Valva was followed into office by his Voice running mate John Graziano whose 512 vote total was the largest of the day. Betsy Grabowski was elected Treasurer and Pat Mahady, Resident Representative. Rite winners were Treasurer Jim Griffin who was also supported by the Challenge Party and Day-Hop Representative Bob Gallo.

Both Valva and losing Presidential Steve Freind (CQ) congratulated their classmates for their excellent turnout, the largest for a single class in the school's history.

A little over 500 votes were cast by the Sophomore class electing John Emery as President and Charlie Zaccaria, Vice-President. The pair ran unopposed. Carl Dolente was elected Treasurer and John Smock Secretary.

Sent to the Student Council from the Class of 1965. They were: Dave Moore, C & F Day-Hop, C & F Resident, Tom Furst;

Fifth Annual Panel Held By Local ACES On Business Today

The fifth annual panel discussion had as its central theme; The social Obligation of American Business Today. But during the course of the evening the panel members found difficulty in keeping their discussions to the topic at hand.

Sub-Topics

They tended rather to discuss their individual sub-topics at length and the question and answer period contributed to the wide variety of topics discussed.

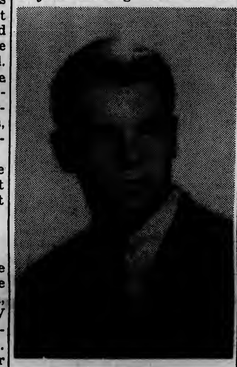
William Walker, Executive President of the first Pennsylvania Bank discussed the desirability of corporation mergers, particularly in the field of banking.

Eugene Swift, President of the Sharples Division of Pennsalt Chemicals discussed the current squeeze on corporation profits.

Other Members

The other panel members were Russell Ball President of the Philadelphia Gear Corporation, James Quirk, Publisher of TV Guide magazine, and David Schmid, President of Techalloy, Inc.

A lively question and answer period followed the panel discussion, which in turn was followed by a chance for the students to meet with the panel members discuss their individual questions.



The discussion was preceded by a dinner for the panel members and invited guests.

Martin G. McGuinn Elected To Chairmanship Of Council

by Ed Farrell

Marty McGuinn was elected chairman of next year's Student Congress last night. McGuinn is presently Vice Chairman of the Council. He defeated Jim McErlane, the present Vice-President for educational affairs.

The election was held during a joint meeting both the old and new members of the Congress. It was the first meeting for the new members who were elected last Thursday during the general class elections.

McGuinn was nominated by James Howley, present vice-president for Student Affairs. His seconding speech was delivered by Leo Rattigan, present Council Treasurer.

McGuinn is the Arts and Science Resident representative and is a general arts major. His permanent home is in Princeton, New Jersey. He is active in the Blue and Delta Pi Mu fraternity. He is currently chairman of the Peter, Paul and Mary concert, a part of Junior Week activities.

The new chairman held the position of sophomore class president and was influential in the operation of the Student Government conference held at Villanova last fall. He is presently chairman of the Student Cabinet and is a member of the Student Senate.

Joseph Tate, outgoing chairman, announced, that the official change of power will occur at the Student Congress meeting scheduled for April 24.

Last night's meeting was the next to the last for the old members of the Congress. The meeting of April 24 will be their last and the new Congress will begin functioning on their own at the nert scheduled meeting.

Elected at last night's meeting was Tom Furst to the position of vice-chairman.

Also elected was Joseph McCarthy to the position of secretary to succeed Jay Delany.

Jim O'Connor was elected treasurer to succeed Leo Rattigan.

Maltby, Mother's, Muff Days, Highlight 1963 Junior Week

by Mike Magro

The annual Junior Week will open Monday, April 22, with a salute to the mothers of Junior Class members.

On Monday morning, the students, with their mothers, will register in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. After registration there is a mass at the Grotto of Our Lady Good Counsel in front of the Augustinian Seminary, weather permitting.

Following the Mass there will be the planting of the class tree, after which everyone will proceed to the Field House for luncheon. The winner of the Diaper Dan contest will be announced after the luncheon. A prominent mother will select the winner.

Concerts Conclude

Concluding the luncheon will be a concert by the various glee clubs of Villanova and the concert band. At that time the Junior Week edition of the newspaper will be distributed. Benediction in the Grotto will close the day.

The following day, Muff Day, is the opportunity for the juniors to wreak vengeance on the seniors who devestated them two years ago. Indoor and outdoor athletic contests will begin in mid-afternoon with the Muff Ball Game as the biggest event of the day.

On Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., the Athletic Smoker will be held in the Day-Hop Cafeteria in Dougherty Hall. The junior athletes will be presented awards for their accomplishments. The entertainment will include movies and brief talks by the coaches. Refreshments are free and admission to the Smoker is by junior matric card.

P. P. & M Concert

On Friday, April 26, at 8 p.m. the Junior Concert will present one of the most popular folk groups in the nation today, Peter, Paul, and Mary. The West Chester State Criterions, who recently placed second in Villan-

Tate And Rattigan Head Senior Festival, Norristown Outing

General co-chairmen for the Senior Parting Festival, Joe Tate and Leo Rattigan have announced the various committee heads for the event.

Entertainment will be handled by Jim Kropke and Pat Raley; special effects by Marty Whalen and Jim Delaney; tickets and publicity by Phil Bosche and Andy Dempsey.

The Festival will consist of a picnic on Saturday, May 25, at Fischer's Pond near Norristown.

This event, probably one of the biggest outings of any class at Villanova, will be open only to seniors.

The facilities of the park include three softball fields, volleyball courts, basketball courts and a pavilion for dancing. The entertainment committee will attempt to provide bands for continuous entertainment.

Liquid refreshments will be included in the price of the ticket. Students may bring their own lunches. Barbecue facilities and a refreshment stand will be provided on the grounds.

Final Graduate Theatre Show Scheduled To Open April 26

The last Graduate Theatre production of the season, the Life of the Master Race, will open in the Villanova Playbox on Friday April 26.

Written by Bertolt Brecht originally under the name Fear and Misery of the Third Reich, it is a play about Germany under Hitler's domination. It consists of a group of some fifteen short sequences of the life with the Nazi soldiers, tied together by a narrator and some Nazi soldiers singing on a tank.

Richard A. Duprey, the play's director, plans to have actual recordings of storm troopers and of Hitler's speeches to play in the background of some segments.

Because of the many individual sequences, there will be no leading role. There will, however, be sixteen actors most of whom play in many roles throughout the play, totaling over 40 parts.

The more outstanding roles will be played by Willam l'lynn, who is the narrator, Mike Tanney, Allen Willig, who appeared in many Belle Masque productions in the past, David Rabe, who may be remembered from his lead role in Kataki, and Fran Krueger, who is a Graduate Department assistant. The stage manager and assistant director will Jerry Paonessa, also of the Department.

The play will run on weekends from April 26 to the middle of May, with dates to be announced at a later date, according to Director Duprey.

Sauers WWVU Director Announces Program Featuring E. Ormandy

Frank Sauers, Program Director of WWVU, recently announced the complete programming schedule for the final week of the station's "April Festival of Music."

"Mario Lanza, and Music from Italy" is the special slated for the 2 to 4 p.m. time slot on Sunday, April 28. From 8 to 11 on the following evening, "An Ellington Biography" will highlight the music and story of the career of the "Duke" on his birthday, 1963.

On Tuesday, April 30, from 8 to 9:30 p.m., "The Philadelphia Orchestra: A Perspective," will feature music by the world-renowned orchestra as well as an interview with Eugene Ormandy, conductor.

To climax its April Festival on the same evening, WWVU plans to let loose disc jockey Eddie Bride for ninety minutes of uninterrupted swingtime beginning at 9:30.

Ruggiero Announces Belle Aire '63 Debut

Editor-in-Chief Joseph Ruggiero has announced that the 1963 Belle Air will be in the hands of all Villanovans by May 16.

Although similar in style, size and format to previous editions, the new yearbook will devote more attention to details and over-all quality. Organization and description will be improved, as will the quantity and arrangement of the photography.

The Villanovan reminds all students that the cost of the Belle Air is included in the students activities fee and is distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis at time of publication. Further details will be published in the Villanovan as they become available.

Committee Announces Junior Queen Contest Deadline And Rules

The committee in charge of the Junior Week Queen Contest has announced that the official absolute deadline for reception of all entries and photographs is Thursday, April 18, at 3 p.m.

No other contest entries will be considered after this date. The deadline date was announced by James Quinn, Chairman of the Queen Contest.

Quinn, in an interview, noted that the final selection will be made along somewhat definite lines. He said that this year's Queen "will not be picked for her talent, parental influence, or 'All-American Girl' personality. She will be chosen strictly for her beauty."

He also announced that the committee, including Co-Chairmen John Sperger and Sue McDonald, decided, after lengthy deliberation, that five finalists will be chosen.

The Queen will be selected at the dance from among these five. The four semi-finalists will be Princesses for the Queen's Court.

After the selection is made, awards, including an engraved Villanova charm bracelet, will be given to all of the finalists.

All photographs (5x7) must be submitted either to the Student Council Office or 114 and 117 Sullivan Hall. On the backs of these photos should be printed the name and address of both the student and his date.

Psychology Open House Hosts Speakers Plus Experiments

"Psychology Week," which ran during the week of April 1, consisted of a series of laboratory displays to inform and to stimulate the Villanova student's interest.

The Psychology Department held open house on Wednesday. and Thursday, April 3 and 4, in rooms adjoining 361 Mendel Hall.

The laboratory display consisted of equipment used by a modern psychologist. Most of the equipment displayed was, however, also used to illustrate and to conduct many psychological experiments for the visitors.

The experiments pertained mainly to human behavior, but also to animals.

Two typical experimental animals were rats and goldfish.

In addition to various animal tests, the Psychology Department demonstrated Industrial tests which included clinical work.

The Psychology Department held the last open house on Saturday, April 6, from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., with a panel discussion at 2 p.m. in 305 Mendel Hall. The participants of the discussion were: Dr. Arthur Siegel, Director of Applied Psychology Services, Wayne, Pa.; Dr. O. Stellar, Professor of Physiological Psychology, Medical School, University of Pennsylvania; and Dr. Z Piotrowsky, Clinical Psychologist, Jefferson Medical College and Hospital.

Blue Key Interviews Primary Prospects, President Elected

The Blue Key Society of Villanova University has been holding membership meetings for the past week. New members are being chosen from over 100 prospective candidates.

Because the society is composed of only 30 members only five members from each class will be chosen.

Through personal interviews and group discussions, the present members and officers will choose those students who best exemplify the Blue Key ideals.

The society conducts many campus tours and visits to other colleges where they present slides and films of Villanova.

This year they were in charge of the Parents' Night Show. In the future, they will try to orientate this event toward bringing culture to Villanova.

During the freshman orientation period, the members of the society avail themselves to the freshmen for counseling purposes.

History Lecture

The History Department will sponsor a lecture by Dr. Robert L. Bloom, Chairman of the History Department at Gettysburg College. Dr. Bloom will speak on "Maintaining Home Front Morale in the North During the Civil War."

This event, which is open to the public, will take place on Wednesday, April 24 at 4:30 p.m. in 110 Commerce and Finance.

Hillbilly Comedy Produced By Eighteenth Turf 'n Tinsel

The dates for this year's Turf and Tinsel production, Jessica James, have been changed to May 2, 3, 4, and 5, announced president John Lucey.

This will be the eighteenth comedy presented by the Turf and Tinsel club whose existence dates back to 1933.

In that year, Mr. Martin L. Gill, a Villanovan alumnus and former faculty member, and Mr. Harry Stuhldreher, formre Villanova head football coach, with the aid of Rev. Bernard McConville, OSA, the club's first moderator, put together the first T 'n' T production on May 4 and 5.

The title was Look Who's Here, and the show was directed by Raymond C. Baratta, who was assisted by Robert W. Whelan, associate director in charge of music. Mr. Whelan is now secretary to the athletic director at Villanova.

On April 26, 27, and 28, 1934, the club presented its second show, Let's Go Places. During the next several years, the club was disbanded.

In late Fall, 1943, the club was reorgainzed under the moderator of Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, OSA. With the assistance of musical director Robert M. Whelan and with George W. Noake in charge of choreography, John Smith, Esquire, was presented.

From then until the present T 'n' T has put on a comedy every year. Several productions, including Piper-Heidsiek '98, John Smith Esquire, The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga, and finallyJessica James, were presented in two diffirent years.

Since 1947, Turf and Tinsel has had five moderators; Rev. M. J. O'Donnell, OSA, Rev. John P. Maher, OSA (1954), Rev. James Werne, OSA (1957), Rev. Henry Syvinski OSA (1958), and Rev. Rymond E. Geisser, OSA (1961).

This year's show will be directed by Betty Green, who has directed the past five comedies. Music was composed by Bob Whelan, Secretary to the Athletic Director.

The setting for Jessica James is the hillbilly section of the Appalechians. T 'n' T officers urge all Villanovans to patronize and advertize the production, since increased ticket sales are needed to offest financial difficulties recenty encountered.

Jim Murphy (left) and Joe McGill exhibit their oratorical talents at the impromptu debate held between the two candidates for the senior class presidency The precedent-setting debate was held last Wednesday the day before the elections. Murphy emered victorious, 340-272.

Student Candidates Debate Presidency Of Senior Class

A significant event in the history of campus politics at Villanova occurred on Wednesday evening last. For the first time two candidates for a major student office met in open debate.

The office was the presidency of the Senior Class, and the debaters were Joseph McGill and James Murphy. The primary object of the affair was to air the candidate's opinion and platforms in open meeting.

Moderator Jim Howley opened by inviting Murphy to challenge McGill. The challenge was primarily to present the opposition platform. Joe McGill promptly took up the gage and the contest was on.

At the outset, Murphy launched into student and Student Council apathy. He proposed a re-evaluation of the Student Council and proposed a new and more powerful function for the Class Steering Committee.

Implying that the Steering Committee as it now exists is somewhat ineffectual, Murphy asked for additional powers for it, including an investigative function. He concluded with the sentiment that if the Council could not, or would not, do something, then the individual classes should take powers into their own hands.

McGill on the other hand, maintained that one of the main problems besetting the Villanov student was lack of communication. He pointed out that this problem could be solved in a constructive way and pointed to the work that had progressed in this field.

He proposed an intraclass activity announcement for the Villanovan. By alerting the student to the activities of the class, McGill held, the problem of apathy would be greatly lessened.

A student advisory committee was also discussed. This would allow for a greater representation from the individual majors in the various colleges. An outgrowth of this would be a program of assisting underclassmen in choosing their majors.

Two of the more salient points that McGill made were that the bookstore should provide books with a more academic interest and in greater quantities. He advocated excused cuts for seniors who would miss classes because of job interviews.

The above is, in effect, what the candidates said, the Villanovan is reprinting what they said so that there will be a permanent record of their remarks. The winners term of office will tell the tale.

Time will also tell the tale o the idea of candidate-debate. Time has already noted the winner of the election in question. The idea that was the outgrowt of this campaign should not be allowed to die.

Belle Masque Stages 'Imaginary Invalid' In Vasey Auditorium

The Belle Masque held its fourth and final performance of Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid on Saturday afternoon of last week in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Argan, the leading character, was portrayed by Villanova's Jim Mason. The part of Toinette, Argan's maid, was played by Carol Schmenkel, President of Rosemont's Jest and Jesture dramatic club.

This production concluded, members of the Belle Masque turn their attention toward future activities.

Tosca's Disarmament and Germain's The Ladded are scheduled to be presented before audiences of Rosemont and Holy Family College in early May.

A number of one-act plays, originals by graduate students, will also be included among the activities scheduled for May. They will be presented through the combined efforts of the Belle Masque and the Graduate Theatre Department. The grads will supply the directing and the Masquers will do the acting.

A Communion Breakfast will mark the close of Belle Masque activities for the year.

Quattrone, Sauers Named New Officers Of Literary Society

At the meeting of the Literary Society held Thursday, April 4, the officers for the coming year were elected. Unanimously elected were Frank Quattrone, President and former Vice-President of the Society, Frank Sauers, Vice-President, and Jan Dyroff, Secretary-Treasurer. Bruce Thomas will represent the Society in the Student Council.

After the election of officers, Bill Gross, President of the Society, introduced the first guest speaker of the second semester, George Murphy. Mr. Murphy is a graduate of Notre Dame where he received his B.A. and M.A.

Mr. Murphy, whose announced topic had been "19th Century Fiction," limited his discussion to "The Tradition of Romantic Love in 19th Century Ladies' Magazines." After his introduction and definition of terms he proceeded with a witty treatment of the subject.

He spoke of the classical tradition of love, courtly love, and related commerce and domesticity to love as seen in these 19th Century magazines.

Continuing in an amusing and satirical vein he quoted from two prominent ladies' magazines, namely, Godie's and Graham's. After the close of the discussion a question period followed.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Last month a publication of interesting knowledge was released upon the students of Villanova. I refer to that ingenious work of conservative students, who publish Libertas.

A magnanimous piece of literature having four sides of paper, which failed to contain one solid idea. Most of the articles expressed shocking disbelief in the crumbling American democracy, amidst pot shots at the present administration.

Their main object is to detract and attack most of all policies, while they propose to revert to methods of years gone by. One example of this regressive thinking is their scathing attack on "Medicare" for the aged.

Which would allow those who are now 60 or over to escape paying into a fund while the younger generations would be highly taxed. It's simple to say "You'll grow old too," but this lack of charity towards our fellow man is unexcusable, since it is part of the state's duty to care for the unfortunate in our society.

What these gentlemen propose is to allow those unfortunates to exist off hospitals that will admit them and health insurance contracts which will accept them.

Thus we'll have thousands unable to receive any beneficial help from society and languish on in poverty.

Several other articles also contained intellectual gems such as a historical fact that no currency has survived 42 years after its intrinsic value was removed. Meaning our economic system has only 18 more years of life then "kaput."

I'd just like to check the author's wallet in 1981 just to see what he is carrying as coin of the realm. Another fairy tale perpetrated by this article was the "balanced budget."

Eisenhower showed the fallacy of surplus money by the recession of '60 and the continued growth of unemployment. These people must think American business can carry the economy without government.

However before you rid yourself of this paper one last article of pure patriotic dribble stirs the soul and tickles the imagination. The article carrys on about the pioneers who fought across the west and set up a free society, that would withstand anything.

"Anything" being mainly Indians in a sample situation without the complex modern world. This anonymous author foresees the American flag being trampled in the mud under Russian boots, because we are becoming weaker.

He titled his article "I Am a Sick American" and indeed you are, sir you and your brood of featherbrains. I can draw only one conclusion from their paper, "Libertas in Liberticide."

Robert Hincken

To the Editor,

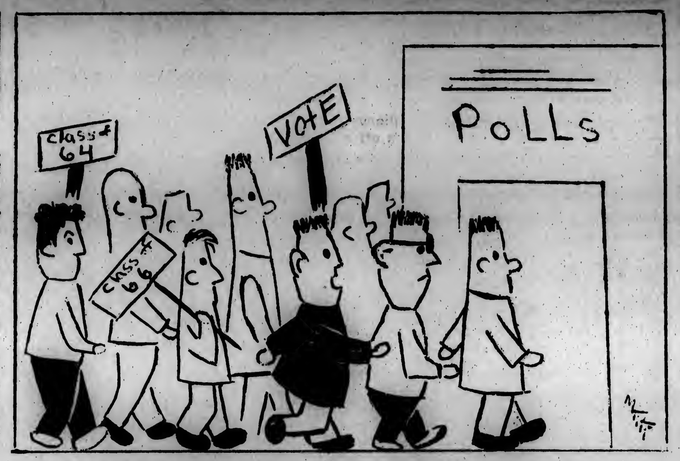
Recently a selection committee chose a limited number of students and honored them with acceptance into Villanova's new organization, the Blue Key. For these "elite" few the selection may prove timely, since it was made just prior to the political ferver.

In principle, I feel, the Blue Key is one of the most worthwhile campus organizations. It has become evident, however, that it has completely lost sight of the principle for which it was founded. It is no longer a student service, but rather a fraternal organization which has set itself up as the cultural apex of campus.

Prior to this year approximately fifty per-cent of the organization was composed of C and F members. I could not help wondering at this figure, since I am under the impression that the majority of the high school students visiting the campus would be interested in either engineering or science majors. Certainly this could be construed as a disproportion in the selection.

I am not attempting to degrade the business division; quite the contrary, I am only attempting to show how much more beneficial the Blue Key could be to the prospective student who is interested in the University's facilities and not the year it was founded; who is interested in what to expect in his new curriculum and not the name of the infirmary.

Upon inquiring about this seeming lack in the service, I was informed by a member, "Neither engineers nor pre-meds can stand on their feet." And here is the crux of the matter: Any group who are so egotistical as to self consciously constitute themselves the cultural standard by which the prospective members are to be judged is in my opinion ludicrous.



Upon inquiring as to the selection I was informed that it was totally objective. Whether or not this is so I will not question; what I will question, however, is just how objective a twenty year old student can be in judging his nineteen year old counterpart. Does a student who is a campus unknown stand the same chance as the flamboyant politician or the campus Who's Who? I think not and yet in most instances the campus unknown has a great deal more time to dedicate to the organization.

To remedy a great deal of the wrong there should be a more objective more of choosing members whether it be through faculty decision or supervision. Certainly there are faculty memebers interested enough to give one week out of the academic year to help decide on the abilities and sincerety of the prospective representatives of the University.

Also, consideration should be given to proportioning the selection among the divisions, where by a certain number of engineers, scince majors, etc, will be chosen not by their back slapping abilities, but rather their overall capabilities. I am convinced that this would manifest itself in a better representation of Villanova.

Sincerely,

Donald L. Laurie

Radical Murphy Rules Roost

"I'm a radical," said James Murphy in the debate which took place last Wednesday night, prior to the Thursday balloting of the general class elections.

The move on the part of James Murphy, newly elected president of the class of '64, in calling for a debate on the night prior to the elections was that of a radical.

It was radical because in a debate both parties are usually aware of the coming encounter. Joseph McGill was warned, but at 6:20 in the evening (the debate took place at 7:30 in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.)

Even though the debate was held under dubious circumstances it has accomplished a good, and this good should not be overlooked. It brought out the issues and aired them before the voters.

What was more astounding about the results of the election was the choice of a candidate who has pledged himself to bypass the Student Council if it proves to be a stumbling block to the aims of his platform.

Perhaps this is the desire of the student body, to get some things done without the aid of Big Brother; to do something totally on their own—even if it means going out and soliciting funds from the Alumni and other sources.

The past election was unprecedented in another respect. Out of 3,131 possible voters, 1,997 students cast their ballots. This is an impressive 64% of the voting eligables. And a word of praise is in order for those who had a hand in the elections.

One fact does mar the large turn-out however. Of the 28 officers, 7 were filled by people who had no opposition whatsoever. It is hoped that this situation will not be repeated in any future elections.

The Role Of A Nonentity

by Ed Farrell

The election of Lyndon Johnson to the Vice-presidency two years ago has resulted in his slipping from one of the most influential positions in the United States, Senate majority leader, to a position of almost a nonentity.

This brings to the fore once again, as it has so often in the past, the question of the usefulness of the vice-presidency of the United States.

Naturally the most important duty of the vice-president is to take over if the president is killed or incapacitated. But should he be doing more now, while the president is alive and kicking?

This question has been hotly debated in many circles and probably will be for many years to come.

At the present time the vice-president is president of the Senate, a position which has true meaning only in the event of a tie vote. He also has numerous minor duties. These involve such matters as attending affairs of state and those activities relating to diplomatic affairs.

In the past the vice-president has generally been adequate in handling the number one position in the United States when the situation called for it. But can we guarantee his competency for the future if he is relegated to relatively nondescript tasks?

Perhaps the answer is to increase the duties of the position. He might be given more power and control in carrying out the decisions of the president.

The vice-president could be given more power in such matters as negotiating in foreign affairs. And he might be allowed to make more decisions which affected certain areas of government where the president is not needed constantly to make decisions.

In any case, the position of the vice-president must be made more influential if it is to attract men of the necessary calibre to assume the presidency.

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," etc.)

NOW YOU CAN BE YOUNGER THAN SHE IS

It is a scientific fact that girls reach emotional maturity earlier than boys. For this reason freshman girls are reluctant to make romantic alliances with freshman boys, but instead choose men from the upper classes.

Thus the freshman boys are left dateless, and many is the night the entire freshman dorm sobs itself to sleep. An equally moist situation exists among upper-class girls. With upper-class men being snapped up by freshman girls, the poor ladies of the upper class are reduced to dreary, manless evenings of Monopoly and home permanents.

It pleasures me to report there is a solution for this morbid situation—indeed, a very simple solution. Why don't the two great have-not groups—the freshman boys and the upper-class girls—find solace with each other?

True, there is something of an age differential, but that need not matter. Take, for example, the case of Albert Payson Sigafoos and Eustacia Vye.

Albert Payson, a freshman in sand and gravel at Vanderbilt University, was walking across the campus one day, weeping softly in his loneliness. Blinded by tears, he stumbled upon the supine form of Eustacia Vye, a senior in wicker and raffia, who was collapsed in a wretched heap on the turf.

We could build a Snowman...

"Why don't you watch where you're going, you minor youth?" said Eustacia peevishly.

"I'm sorry, lady," said Albert Payson and started to move on. But suddenly he stopped, struck by an inspiration. "Lady," he said, tugging his forelock, "don't think me forward, but I know why you're miserable. It's because you can't get a date. Well, neither can I. So why don't we date each other?"

"Surely you jest!" cried Eustacia, looking with scorn upon his tiny head and body.

"Oh, I know I'm younger than you are," said Albert Payson, "but that doesn't mean we can't find lots of fun things to do together."

"Like what?" she asked.

"Well," said Albert Payson, "we could build a Snowman."

"Bah!" said Eustacia, grinding her teeth.

"All right then," said Albert Payson, "we could go down to the pond and catch some frogs."

"Ugh!" said Eustacia, shuddering her entire length.

"How about some Run-Sheep-Run?" suggested Albert Payson.

"You are callow, green, and immature," said Eustacia, "and I will thank you to remove your underaged presence from mine eyes."

Sighing, Albert Payson lighted a cigarette and started away.

"Stay!" cried Eustacia.

He stayed.

"Was that a Marlboro Cigarette you just lighted?" she asked.

"What else?" said Albert Payson.

"Then you are not immature!" she exclaimed, clasping him to her clavicle. "For to smoke Marlboros is the very essence of wisdom, the height of American know-how, the incontrovertible proof that you can tell gold from dross, right from wrong, fine aged tobaccos from pale, pathetic substitutes. Albert Payson, if you will still have me, I am yours!"

"I will," he said, and did, and today they are married and run the second biggest wicker and raffia establishment in Duluth, Minnesota.

'Spires' Visit RPL Camden Studios Show Talents In Recording Album

by Mike DiBenedetto

On Tuesday, March 26, the Spires packed their one bass, four guitars, and twelve vocalists into two-and-a-half cars and, with fingers crossed for luck, proceeded to R.P.L. Camden Recording studios.

The session was scheduled for 7 p.m. and the Spires were on time. For all but one, it was the first time in a recording studio; but this fact was overshadowed by the air of professionalism with which they set about the grueling task of recording.

Bass Caresser

Cases were flipped open and instruments were put in tune with the piano. John, lovingly caressing his bass, slapped a few low notes which resounded off the studio walls and the musicians were ready.

The tension among the performers made its presence known. A few of them smoked cigarettes, some chewed fingernails, and others ate cough drops. The leader-arranger for the group, Tom Picardo, discussed a few details with the engineers, which was followed by a run-through for meter readings and possible rearrangement of microphones.

Cracks Joke

"O.K., STANDBY, 'Spanish Is The Loving Tongue' Take One." And the tape rolled for the first take of the evening. The session was delayed because of balance trouble, and Tom took the oppointers to the chorus. He also noticed the tension among his colleaques and cracked a joke to help relax them. He knew the importance of high morale in a recording session.

"Spanish is The Loving Tongue; Take Two."

Then came the most crucial point in any session, the play back. "Hit a frog in the last line." It wasn't quite up to snuff, so they re-cut it.

'Spanish is the Loving Tongue, Take three, playback and it's good; print it." And so it goes for four energy-consuming hours.

Scope of Spires

Their varsity of songs demon Spires. They went from the scope of talent of the Spires. pounding beat "Greenback Dollar" to the sentimental mood created by the close harmony on "Mary Mild." Complete diversion followed with the Kansas City Blues of "Make Me a Pallete On Your Floor." Then up went the beat again, to the wall-shaking" "This Land Is Your Land."

On all their songs the harmony was close, the enunciation precise, and the blend of instruments and voices wholesomely refreshing. The immense amount of work and time spent in the rehearsing and actual recording of the album are justified in the final product, an album of which Villanova, Villanova students and, of course, the Spires, can and should be proud.

'Oliver' Exhibits Fine Quality

by Paul Norton

Oliver! is great! It's as simple as that. Finally, Broadway has come up with a show of quality this season. Here is a dramatic play with a memorable score, a minority of flaws, and some notable acting. This isn't flashy, gaudy, hashed-out musical comedy junk. It's good theater in the best American musical tradtion.

Ironically, it came to Broadway by way of a two year run in London's West End and was written by an ex-rock and roll composer, Lionel Bart. His music and lyrics fit smoothly into a very free adaptation of the Dicken's classic. The changes in the story many bother a few purists but a good hint is to accept the plot as a new story and not lose yourself in comparisons.

Actually, the changes are minor. Bill Sykes, Nancy, Mr. Brownlow are still holding close to their original counterparts. Only Fagin comes across as a slightly nice old villain, mean enough to make little boys steal, but kind enough to take care of them.

Leads Do Polished Work

Clive Revill as the eccentric thief in a masterpiece of semi-classic acting. His performance is a low keyed witchy-type characterization with only a hint of sinisterness.

Opposite Mr. Revill is Georgia Brown in the role of Nancy. This girl is not a physical beauty, her voice has a throaty torch quality and her mannerisms are jerky and somewhat unsure but her complete part is thorough that the character captivates and controls the stage. She is caught between the heavy brutality of Bill Sykes and the crackly comedy of Fagin!

For relief she has the young thieves to back her up in a refreshing series of comedy numbers. Without a doubt her best moment is a drunked scene that ends with "As Long as He Needs Me. Miss Brown has a fine future ahead of her in the musical stage.

Final Perspective

How should you look at Oliver!? Just sit back and enjoy the magic of its exclamation point. This is not a musical comedy, but a musical play with occasionally tragic overtones. It follows the best in musical theater and remains true to a well written plot, rhythmic and melodic music, and lively appealing production numbers.

Bart, the author, composer, and lyricist is now working on The Hunchback of Notre Dame. Sould like a terrible idea for a musical? Well, pessimistic Oliver Twist making such a hit.

Reply To Spring

by M. I. Winterborne

It seems that the romantic notions of the would-be spring sprites were given full coverage in the last edition of the Villanovan. Some people have the pertinacious attitude and amblyopic tendencies of misguided feelings to go so far as to say that we thank spring as one squirrel thanks one cleric for one nut.

Needless to say, all such prognostications on that unworthy season are anomalously incorrect. Studying is not harder now, nor was it ever. For study and diligence in the acquisition of knowledge do not deviate in their metaphysical goodness merely by a change in the hibernations of animals, or the change in the structure of deciduous trees.

It surprises me that out of the four possible seasons one should happen to pick, at random, the closest at hand, and make such difficile remarks as to the beauty of spring. Even the seasonal odds are against spring as the time of awakened observance of nature.

This renewed awareness of one particular season only exemplifies the blatant blatherings of the unseasoned romantics. For three out of four seasons they are naturally dead. No! Spring is by far the least of the seasons. It is neither hot nor cold—it is that lukewarmness of detestibility. It is the season before life; it is merely the harbinger of things in the seasons of life.

Sure Cure For Ill Humor

by George Welch

A sure cure for the maladrome of ill-humor was the Belle Masque performance of Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid," presented April 3 through 6 in the Vasey auditorium. The easy remedy was concocted in the mortar of the classic French farce, and the slapstick-pestle of the more up-to-date "Three Stooges."

This happy mixture of what might be considered old and new treatments did not lack ofr liveliness and good entertainment. The use of modern design in the stage setting, and the free translation by Miles Maellson served to purge the play of the atmosphere of the salon and powdered wig, considerably changing the original. In effect, the play be came something new, not quite Moliere, but never really losing the touch of the master in the satiric and broadly humorous situation.

The traditional curtain call of three raps, the prologue of the shepherdess (Kathleen Roos), and the costume of the players (although more appropriate to the 15th and 16 the century period- were tangible reminders of the old theater.

The performances of Jim Mason and Carol Schmenkel, as Argan and Toointe (Argan's maid) epitomized the spirit of this performance. Their interpretations combined mannerisms of speech and gesture in the tradition of farce and burlesque.

The character of Argan is a stereotype the hychondriac, imagining himself beset by a mul- the services of a whole staff of physicians and apothecarics - (played Bill Byrne, Paul Wachtler, Richard Pazdan, Larry Miley, Rick Galli, and Mike Kain) This Molierian counterpart to the AMA attends to catharsis of his person and his pocketbook, making the play a kind of 'purgatorio' of malefaction and pretence.

Toinette is Argan's spitfire maid catering to his whims, counseling his daughter, and generally bounding about the stage tying together the various vignettes.

John Meehan and Paul Wachtler created topical interpretations of their roles as Thomas Diaforus and Dr. Purgon. John parodied a character that seemed to combine the funnier features of Yogi Bear and the Three Stooges. Paul's parody was unmistakably that of Bela Lugosi.

The plot of the play is built around a time-worn theme where a girl falls in love with a boy, but is momentarily thwarted by a father who has arranged a marriage of convenience for her. The outcome of such a plot is never really in doubt, but before the happy ending there is a great deal of fun to be had of ruses, rogues, and raillery. Denouement exposes hypocrities and lovers alike.

Cathy Lyons was an attractive Angelica, with a very pretty singing voice. Bill DiPaola, as Cleante her suitor, gave a credible and smooth performance.

The cast for this production was large, including seventeen in all. There's not enough room to mention them all individually, but some note should be made of Bill Byrne's portrayal of Dr. Diaforous, his fine timing and comic emphasis in speech.

(Photo by Rich Dunne)

At a vital juncture in the play, Argan doesn't seem too sure of his wife's plan to have him give her his money. Argan's lawyer stands by in eager anticipation of his ill-gotten gains through participation in the venture.

Assignment: build superior stamina into our cars!

Result: Ford-built cars demonstrate outstanding durability in competitions like the Daytona 500

Results of recent competitive events prove dramatically the durability and reliability of today's Ford-built cars. Our cars swept the first five places in the Daytona 500 for example. More important to you—Ford-built entries had the highest ratio of finishers in this grueling test of stamina! Less than half—just 23—of the 50 starters finished; 13 of them were Ford-built!

Competitions such as the Daytona 500 are car killers. Piston rings can fail, transmissions can be demolished and engines blow up under these maximum efforts. It's a grinding demand for total performance and Ford-built cars proved they could take it better than any of the others.

Quite an eye-opener for car buyers. And conclusive proof that superior engineering at Ford Motor Company has produced more rugged engines and transmissions, sturdier bodies and frames and better all-round durability for today's Ford-built automobiles.

Miro Woodwind Quintet Introduces American Premiere Of 'Furostos'

by Matt Roche

The Miro Woodwind Quintet was the third featured group in the 1963 Villanova Chamber Music Concert Series. The Villanova Music Society sponsored the concert which was held in the West Lounge, Dougherty Hall, on Sunday, April 7.

The quintet is composed of Dean Miller flute; Frederick Greuenbaum, oboe; William Winstead, bassoon; William Kapps, French horn; and Moren Kitt, clarinet.

This was the American premiere of "Furostos," by Szervansky, a rythmic composition reminiscent of Austrian mountains and influenced by peasant folk songs.

William Winstead, Mico Woodwind basoonist, was the composer of "Two Short Dances" which was first performed for the Young Audience Association. The light, breezy piece was short, accompanied by a pleasant surprize ending, perhaps in imitation of Francaix.

The Miro Woodwind Puintet performs "Furostos" by Szervansky at the third Villanova Chamber Music Concert series.

The group showed great versatility adapting themselves as easily to worksby Mozart ("Divertimento") and Reicha ("Quintet in E flat major") as to the more modern Piston ("Three Pieces"). The emphasis seemed to be on the flute, since it kept the counter melodies.

The group is named in admiration of John Miro, the impressionistic painter whose delicate scenes resemble the woodwind's fragile sound.

Experience

The quintet has been playing together for two years. They have performed at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, and schools in the Delaware Valley area. They are studnts at the Curtis Institute of Music, members of the Young Audience Association, and they comprise the only other woodwind quintet in the Philadelphia area beside the onefrom the Philadelphia Orchestra. The quintet has played over eighty concerts together.

Bryn Mawr Hospital Blood Program Seeks Donors For Research Tests

The Laboratory and the John S. Sharpe Research Foundation of the Bryn Mawr Hospital with grants provided by the national Institute of Health and by contract with the Army Research Development Board have pursued for years, experimental work to improve blood transfusion, and particularly to develop better methods of preservation of blood in the frozen state.

For this work healthy donors, who also act as recipients of token transfusions are needed. Briefly, the donor-recipient at a date established by appointment, is bled of 100 ml. (3 ounces) to 450 ml. (one pint) of blood.

In some experiments the donor-recipient returns the next day, or after a few days to receive 10 ml. (1/3 ounce) of his own blood; in other experiments the period of time between giving and receiving is longer, up to about one month.

It is essential for the donor-recipient to return 22 hours after transfusion to have a small sample of blood taken for determination of the survival of the red cells transfused. Occasionally, extra sampling is necessary beyond the first 24 hours post transfusion.

Before receiving the token autotransfusion of tagged blood, the blood volume of the volunteer is determined by routine procedure. Compensation is offered to the donor-recipient as follows: For a donation of 100 ml. of blood, $10.00; for a donatin of 500 ml. of blood, $20.00: for blood volume and transfusion, $15.00; for collection of specimen 8-10 days after transfusion, $5.00. Total compensation for experiment involving 100 ml., $35.00; and total compensation for experiment involving 500 ml. of blood, $45.00.

Donors who wish to present themselves by appointment should call Lawrence 5-1800 and ask for Miss Elizabeth Burns. For a donation of 100 ml. of blood, a schedule must be arranged so that the donor will report early in the day. He should not eat fatty foods or dairy products and should have at least 1 pint of fluid before he arrives (fruit juices, tea or coffee without cream or milk).

For a transfusion, the donor should be prepared to stay about 1½ hours. If the donor is not 21 years old, he must bring with him a signed permission from his parents both for the blood donation and for the experimental work to follow.

SAM Elects Officers

At the meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Management, on Thursday, April 4, the following were elected to offices: President—James Buckley, Vice-President — Ray Ritter, Secretary — Joseph McCool, Treasurer — Robert Williams, Publicity Director — Gene Bovo, student Council Representative—Dennis Addanizo, and Liason Officer — Gerald Cain.

These offices will be effective at the next meeting which will be held somctime after Easter.

Buckley and Ritter had no specific plans as to membership and speakers for the coming year, but they did say that emphasis will be placed upon getting "top rate speakers" and trying to coordinate activities with other clubs on campus.

Senior Class Honors Fathers On May 11 With Luncheon, Games

Every year the Senior Class of Villanova sets one day aside to be dedicated to their Dads.

Jim Howley, Chairman of this year's Father's Day, has announced that the event will take place on May 11, and that tickets will go on sale beginning April 29 in the Pie Shoppe.

The affairs will begin at 10 a.m. with the registration of the Fathers and sons. At 11 a.m., Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Richard D. Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student activities. Luncheon will be held at 12 noon, at which time the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, will appear as guest speaker.

Afternoon activities will include the Villanova Seton Hall baseball game, the track meet between Villanova and Quantico, and lacrosse and rugby games between the Villanova teams and their opponents.

Father's Day will be brought to a close by benediction at 4:30 p.m.

US Congressman Schweitzer To Address Political Union

Congressman Richard Schweiker will lead off a Political Union Debate on Cuba on Thursday evening April 18 in the Chemistry Lecture Room of Mendel Hall at 8:30 p.m.

The Montgomery County Congressman, a member of the House Government Operations Committee, will speak in support of the debate resolution: "Resolved that this House favors much stronger measurers against Castro's Cuba."

Urgent Problem

Members of the Union's three parties are looking forward to debating one of the most urgent foreign policy problems facing the United States in the presence of a member of Congress.

Congressman Schweiker, a 2nd term Republican, entered Congress in January of 1961. He is a graduate of Norristown High School, where he was valedictorian in the class of 1944 and of Penn State, 1950, where he achieved membership in Phi Betta Kappa.

Business Man

A successful businessman before entering Congress, Representative Schweiker was voted the outstanding young businessman in Pennsylvania by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The Union debate will, as usual, be open to all Villanovans. Before it Union officers and party leaders will dine with the Congressman and Union members will meet him at a special reception.

Chemistry Professors Return From Important Conferences

Two professors of the Villanova Chemistry Department, Dr. Domenic Roberti and Dr. Thomas Doyne have recently returned from important chemical conferences.

Dr. Domenic Roberti, returned from Los Angeles, California, after attending a meeting of the national convention of the American Chemical Society.

At the convention, Dr. Roberti participated as a member of a special panel on "The Student Affiliate Chapters of the American Chemical Society." The Student Affiliate Chapters are in reality the chemistry clubs of the colleges and universities across the United States.

At the same time Dr. Roberti also attended a special session on "The Molecular Structure and Chemical Bonding."

Also returning from a special assembly, was Dr. Thomas Doyne who attended a computer conference held by the American Crystallographic Association.

The American Crystallographic Association, held its conference here at Villanova last summer but this year the conference was divided into two sections. The other section in which Dr. Doyne participated, held a discussion on "Structure of Molecules by X-Ray Diffraction."

Dr. George Announces Senior Recipients Of Graduate Awards

Dr. Joseph George Jr., Post-Graduate Study Advisor, annouced that a number of senior have received fellowships for graduate studies.

John J. Collins, a senior history major, received a fellowship in the Graduate School of Business at the University of Pittsburgh.

A senior English major, Frank J. Murphy, was the recipient of a fellowship in the Creative Writing Department of Purdue University.

A history major, James H. Powell was granted a fellowship at Brown University.

Wilfred J. Quigley, an accounting major, received a fellowship at the University of Chicago.

Niel Bergeron a graduate assistant at Villanova, was awarded a fellowship at Catholic University for his Ph.D.

The race between McCormack and Barry Greenwood was one of the closest of the day. McCormack came out on top 60-58.

The other race decided by two votes was in the Freshman class in the race for Day student representatives between Bob Gallo and Brian Banmiller. After two recounts Gallo was declared the winner, 372-370.

Meg Sullivan will represent the Nurses in Student Council. She polled 31 of the 75 votes cast.

Villanova Delegates Of ICG To Attend Harrisburg Meet

Twenty-five delegates of the Villanova chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government will participate in the thirty-fifth annual State Convention April 18-20 in the state's capitol, Harrisburg.

Heading the Villanova delegation will be the Southeast Region's candidate for Speaker of the State, Thomas F. Burke. Burke was elected as the Speaker of the region at regional convention held at Ursinus College, March 9.

Address By Governor

The convention keynote speech is scheduled to be delivered by Governor William Scranton. The Director of the of the state-wide organization, which esentially instructs the college students of the commonwealth in political procedure and function of government, is Miss Geniveve Blatt, the Secretary of State for Pennsylvania.

At Harrisburg each delegate serves on a committee that relates to the topic of the year. The effort to be undertaken this spring is the revision of the Pennsylvania state constitution.

Rev. J. Burns Speaks On 'Education', Heitzmann, Delegate

The Rev. Joseph A. Burns, OSA, recently spoke to the Pennsylvania Student Education Association on the topic "The Catholic Philosophy of Education."

In his speech, Father Burns defined education as "a vehicle for a final end, the Beatific Vision." He declared that Catholicism correctly orientates education. Thus, the student should not confuse the process with the product.

Several members of the PSEA were guests at Harriton High School, Rosemont, on April 2 and 4. They observed classes in fields which they plan to teach.

William Ray Heitzmann, Richard Bardet, and Gerald Flood, the moderator, will be delegates from Villanova to the state-wide PSEA convention which will be conducted at Penn State University on April 19 and 20.

At 6:30 cocktails will be served to begin the evening and dinner will be served at 7:15. The Junior Dinner Dance Queen will be crowned at the dance, climaxing the week.

Intellectuals Express Yourselves!

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Record Set By Pistol Team Against Bucknell Shooters

by Jim Brennan

The straight-shooting, level-firing crack Villanova Pistol Team set a new school record of 1,361 points against Bucknell University of Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

Bucknell only managed to score 1,142 points, while Villanova bested by ten points the previous school high of 1,351 points also set this year.

Following their defeat of Bucknell the squad traveled to Shingleton, Pennsylvania for the Pennsylvania State Championships.

Individual Matches

This event was held at the Seven Mountains Pistol Club, where the team entered in the individual matches.

Team Captain Joe Hack announced that the squad took fourteen trophies in the individual categories. Those receiving awards were George Sinclair, Charles Sinclair, James Durborow, Dennis Wolfe, Martin Brennan, Ted Laven, Richard Hunter, Jim Castello, and Sandy Lockwood.

First place at the Championships was won by the reigning national champion, but Villanovans can be proud of their own accurate shooting George Sinclair who came in third. George, a member of the All-American Pistol Team for two years in a row, scored a total of 852 points out of a possible 900.

Overall Season

The overall season for the team has been a pleasant one indeed. With an eight and two won-loss record, they hope to take third place in the Delaware Valley League, which is composed mostly of sportsman clubs.

In collegiate competition they have defeated such schools as Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Merchant Marine Academy but lost to two perennial powers West Point and Annapolis.

The last meet of the year is tentatively scheduled with the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers University.

Lose Coach

After this season the team will be without the capable services of their present coach, Sgt. John J. Reilly, USMC.

It was under Sgt. Reilly that four members of this year's squad shot over 280. Previously this had been done by only three men in the school's history.

Spring Practice Begins For Fifty Football Hopefuls

by Richard Pazdan

Ya say it's 85° outside and supposed to get hotter? Ya say your goin' to the shore next week? Tel it to the football team. Spring practice starts on Easter Monday and ends on May 11.

Coach Alex Bell will take the long look at some fifty varsity hopefuls in the month-long workouts. Bell has plenty of holes to plug, especially in the backield, trying to replace the likes of Billy Joe, Lou Rettino, Bob Merenda, Larry Glueck, Ted Aceto, and Richie Richman.

With these gaps in the lineup that definietly have to be plugged, the 'Cat mentor will be especially interested in halfbacks Tom Brown and Joe Santomamo and quarterback Dave Connell, all from the frosh team. Coach Bell also said that junior quarterback Bill Sherlock will get a good workout, in hopes of putting a little experience at the vacated quarterback slot.

Size Lacking

Bell said that the 1963 edition of his weekend warriors pro bably will not possess the size that they have in the past few years. However, he feels that the line will have adequate size and hopes the additional speed will make up for the loss in beef.

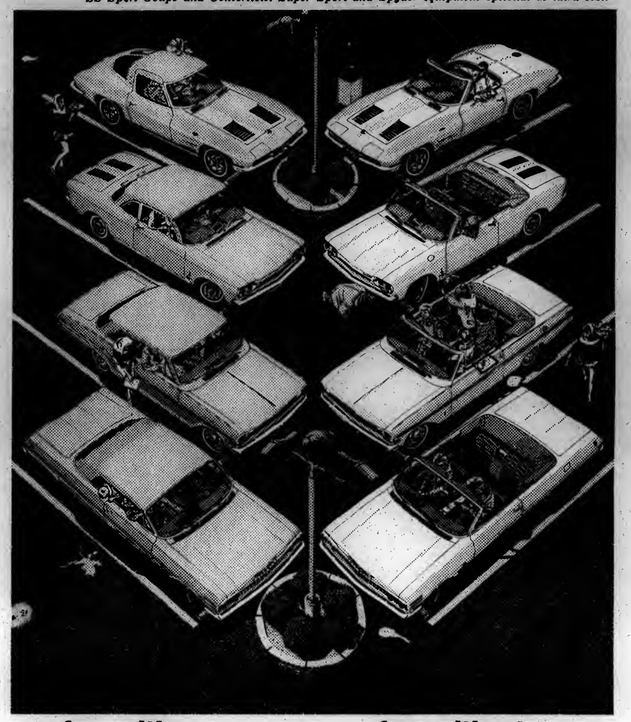
Intramural Softball League Commences With Moran Antics

by Larry Everling

Spring is here again, we think. The few warm days last week ushered in another of 'big' Jim Moran's spectaculars, the softball season. Having seen the last of the basketball season, and the Jesters thank goodness, Jim tossed out the first ball and reached the mound from behind the plate.

'Ringers'



An addition to the scene this year is the appearance of two of the more athletic priests from the monastery. Fathers Reilly and Burke play for the Beauties, a club in the 4:30 Mendel League.

Jack Duffy seems to have a powerhouse in the 3:30 Austin League with Bud Gianatassio doing the hurling. Jay McManus and Jerry Doyan lead the U.S. Bonds in the Mendel League.

With 41 teams in four leagues softball is upon us, complete with rhubarbs and the usual error-ridden afternoon spectaculars. A nurses league would make the picture complete with a boy-girl series for the championship.

Deadline for the next VILLANOVAN (Issue of April 24) is April 17, the First Day of Class after Easter Vacation.

From the top—Corvette Sting Ray Sport Coupe and Convertible, Corvair Monza Spyder Club Coupe and Convertible, Chevy II Nova 400 SS Sport Coupe and Convertible, Chevrolet Impala SS Sport Coupe and Convertible. Super Sport and Spyder equipment optional at extra cost.

four with... four without...

ALL TO GO!

Chevy's got four entirely different kinds of bucket-seat coupes and convertibles to get your spring on the road right now—the Super Sports! With a choice of extra-cost options like electric tachometers, 4-speed shifts and high-performance engines, they're as all out for sport as you want to go!

First, the Jet-smooth Impala Super Sport with your choice of 7 different engines that range up to 425 hp and include the popular Turbo-Fire 409* with 340 hp for smooth, responsive driving in city traffic.

Then there's the Chevy II Nova 400 Super Sport. Special instrument cluster, front bucket seats, full wheel discs, three-speed shift or floor-mounted Powerglide automatic* and other sporty features.

Two more cures for spring fever—the Corvair Monza Spyder with full instrumentation and a turbo-supercharged six air-cooled rear engine. And if you want to pull out the stops, the Corvette Sting Ray, winner of the "Car Life" 1963 Award for Engineering Excellence.

If the promise of spring has been getting to you, we can practically guarantee one of these will, too! *Optional at extra cost.

'Cats Drop 9-3 Contest To Columbia To Even Up Season's Slate At 2-2

by Roy Baron

The Villanova rugby team suffered its second defeat of the season last Saturday, being defeated by Columbia 9-3. The game, played before an enthusiastic crowd on the 'Cats home field, was a fiercely contested defensive battle. The loss evened the Wildcat record at 2-2.

The first half was played almost entirely in Columbia territory. It featured many thrusts at the Lion goal by the 'Cats. But these attempt were gallantly repulsed by the visitors. Bob Shayer, Pete Triolo, and Luke St. Onge all came within inches of scoring.

St. Onge's attempt came on a thrilling breakaway run in the closing minutes of the half. But he was hauled down from behind just short of the goal. Thus, the two squads left the field at halftime without scoring.

In the second half Columbia took to the offensive. Using a strong kicking game the visitors penetrated into Villanova territory. On a couple of occasions Lion backs broke loose. At these times it was only the sure tackling of fullback Ed Wilkinson that prevented scores.

Score on Kicks

Columbia, however, was able to keep the pressure on the Wildcats. This was especially due to their consistent controling of the ball on lineouts. The taller Lions, time after time, were able to tap the ball to the quick backs.

Keeping the ball in 'Cat territory the visitors hit the scoreboard on a penalty kick and a spectacular field goal by Pat Malone. This put the Lions ahead 6-0.

Villanova refused to give up, though. On the running of sophs Tony Tramontozzi and Bert Lombino they brought the ball into Columbia territory. There they set up a penalty kick, which Rich Guinan made to bring the score to 6-3. However, the Lions were able to compensate for this score in the final minutes with the only try of the game. This gave them their 9-3 victory.

Rugby Captain Picked To Join All-Stars Against Canadians

The Eastern Rugby League announced that Luke St. Onge, captain of the Villanova Rugby team, has been selected to its All-Star team. This group is preparing to face a similar group made up of Canadian stars this Saturday in New York.

St. Onge is one of 15 ruggers selected from approximately 30 teams on the East coast. It is a tribute to him because many of those selected were Englishmen with several years of experience. Luke, however, has been playing only for the past four years. He is the first Villanova rugger to appear on such a team.

The fact that a Villanovan has been selected is a good indication that the Wildcats have truly arrived on the rugby scene.

As captain of the Cats, St. Onge has shown all the qualifications necessary for the job. In addition to his regular duties, Luke also has the task of arranging the team's schedule.

The result is a group of opponents that would help the strength of any squad. However, Luke still has high hopes of capturing the Southern Division title.

McMonagle, O'Brien Receive Drizin Award; Jones Named Captain

Villanova's surprising 1962-63 basketball season came to a close last Wednesday night at the annual basketball banquet sponored by the Villanova Club of South Jersey.

Senior co-captains Jim McMonagle and Jim O'Brien were recipients of the Herman "Chuck" Drizin award for sportsmanship. This award is given out annually in memory of Chuck Drizin, a Villanova scholar-athlete who died on Iwo Jima in 1945.

Jones Named Captain

The Villanova cagers named Wally Jones as their team captain for the 1963-64 season.

In addition, the 6-2 junior was voted the team's most valuable player and received the Michael Saxe Memorial Trophy, which is awarded to the Big Five's outstanding player selected by ballot of the city coaches. Last year's winner was Hubie White.

In addition to McMonagle, O'Brien and Jones, letters were awarded to Richie Richman, Butch Winterbottom, Eric Erickson. Jim Washington, Ben Kenny, Sam Iorio and managers Jack Duffy and Denny Corcoran.

'Cat Players Win Three At Home But Drop Away Game For 5-1 Slate

by Dennis Gildea

Last Saturday's 7-1 victory over Vermont finished a four game week for the young Wildcat baseball players. During the week, the 'Cats fared well as they defeated West Chester, Rider and the Vermont nine.

They suffered their first and only loss of the young season as they sojourned to Rutgers and were defeated 14-6 in a game called in the middle of the seventh inning, making their record to 5-1.

Villanova picked up its third victory of the current campaign by rallying for three runs in the ninth to edge visiting West Chester, 8-7. Down 7-5 the Mainliners rallied to pull the game out of the fire.

Richman, who had homered earlier, started off the big inning with a long double to right-center. Following a walk issued to left fielder Mike Zaia, Mike Kiley reached base on an error and took another on a wild throw which scored both Richman and Zaia. Another West Chester error put Jack Emery on first and advanced Kiley to third. A wild pitch by the Ram moundsman gave Kiley the opportunity to come barrelling home for the winning run.

Bill Smith started for the Cats, but Pete Connors got credit for the win in relief.

Riders Falls Next

Bermuda clad fans watched Wednesday as Rider College dropped a 7-5 decision to their Mainline host. Villanova built up an early lead and held on to it throughout the tilt behind the efforts of hurlers Andy Candelmo, Pete Connors and Don Albino. Candelmo, who twirled the first seven innings, was given the win.

Art Mahan broke a scoreless game in the third by driving home Andy Candelmo from second on a sharp single.

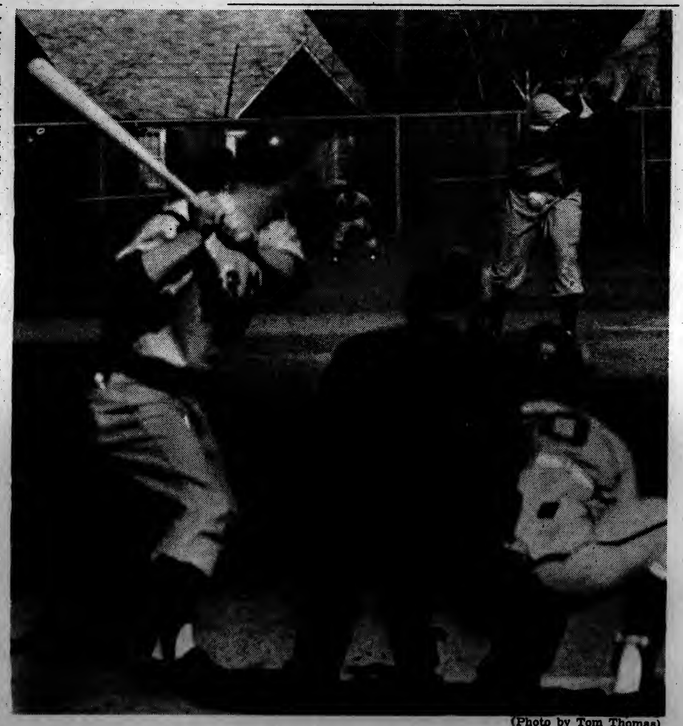
Rider burst into the lead in the sixth stanza by putting together a couple hits which put two runs on the scoreboard for them.

The Wildcats countered in the same frame on a single by Mahan and a booming double by Jack Lynch which brought Mahan scampering across the plate. With one out in the seventh pinch-hitter Joe Freynick came through in the clutch by clubbing out a single scoring baserunners Mike Kiley and Jack Emery.

Hall's double, which scored Lynch, and Zaia's sacrifice fly scoring Richman were the big blows in a two-run eigth. These runs put the game on ice as the Wildcats had the insurance necessary to weather a last inning storm by Rider.

Rutgers Dumps Wildcats

Villanova dropped its first of the season last Thursday by falling at the hands of Rutgers, 14-6. Heavy winds lashed the Jersey campus making playing conditions quite difficult for both squads. Conditions were so bad that the game was called in the middle of the seventh inning.



The big noise on the Wildcat side of the ledger was caused by a pair of home runs which accounted for all the VU scoring. In the first Bob Hall unloaded with a smash that scored Mahan and Lynch before him.

With Kiley and Hall on in the third it was Jask Emery's turn to clean the bases with a big blast.

Vic Majewski got the loss in a game which may not be official due to the fact that play was suspended before the completion of the seventh inning.

The forces of Coach Art Mahan had an easy time with a visiting nine from Vermont. A good Saturday afternoon crowd was on hand to witness the battle taken by the Cats, 7-1.

A scorching triple along the third base line by Mike Zaia was the big blow in a first inning which saw three Wildcat runners cross the plate.

Fixler Paces 'Cat Lacrosse Club With Three Goals For 6-5 Win

by Tom Finan

The Villanova Lacrosse team, in it's last competition before the Easter holidays, defeated a strong squad from Cottonsville, Maryland in a fierce Saturday afternoon encounter.

In the 6-5 contest, the Main Liners tallied their first varsity win of the season.

Throughout the game VU managed to lead the Marylanders by a slim margin of one or two goals, despite a constant counterattack by Cottonsville.

High scorer for the 'Cats was Herb Fixler who helped mightily with his three goals.

Offense

The offensive strategy of the team was based on basketball type passing and positioning for the good shots.

In addition to this, the Villanovans took advantage of the good shots.

In addition to this, the Villanovans took advantages of the various penalities incurred by the visiting squad, and scored two of their six goals while the opposition suffered from the loss of one their players due to the penalty box.

The injury o fteam captain Gene Melcher has spured on the Lacrosse squad to renewed vigor and enthusiasm coupled with a desire to "win for Gene."

Injuries

The C. W. Post-Villanova contest was the first game of the season and belatedly the last for the hapless Melcher, whose femur was broken in three places, and is forced to use crutches.

On Thursday afternoon, the University of Pennsylvania "B" team fell to the Blue and White, in a one-sided 7-3 rout.

The 'Cats led all the way and concentrated on working the ball well on offense, while maintaining a tight defense.

Scorers

Leading scorers for the Wildcats were Dave Dunn, with three goals, John Shephard with two and Mike Sweeny with two also.

The sport of Lacrosse is a comparatively recent addition to the athletic scene at Villanova, having been developed here only three years ago.

The sport is coached by Mr. John Smythe, a teacher at Haverford High School, and it is recognized officially by the University.

Members

The various members of the team are active in conducting the entire business and affairs of the team themselves. They arrange for all scheduling, coaching and other details themselves. The financial obligations are all met through the assessment of mmebership fees and dues.

The University itself provides mainly for a playing field and for jerseys.

The opening game with C. W. Post College of Long Island, and the second game of the season with Bowdoin were the only losses of the year for the team. A win over Georgetown, together with Thursday's victory over Penn and Saturday's triumph over the Cottonsville club put the team in the .600 bracket.

Schedule

The regular season is scheduled to return after the completion of the Easter holidays when Villanova will oppose Bucknell on the Main Line campus. Following that on the succeeding Saturday, April 27 the 'Cats oppose Dickinson in another home game.

JUNIOR WEEK

Hagerty Guides Class Through Junior Year

by Gerald Trippitelli

The Junior Class officers are presently culminating their service to the Class with the presentation of an extremely well-planned and successful Junior Week.

John Hagerty, Class President and a graduate of Archbishop Stepenac High School in White Plains, New York is a Psychology major. Before assuming the office of President, John's abilities were portrayed in his position as Vice-President last year.

Known as "The Boss", John has been described by the those closet to him as loquacious, sincere and persevering.

Hagerty feels that his position has afforded him a great deal of experience in meeting and working with many different people. In pertinence to the office he stated, "It is perhaps the toughest and most rewarding experience of my life." He also said that the class's co-operation has enabled the tremendous success of his term in office.

"The Vice-Presidency is what you make it. You are in a position to help an already overburdened President or you could hold the office nominally. I hope that I have been able to do the former." These are the feelings of vice-president, Joe McGill towards his term in office.

Besides holding the office of vice-president this year Joe held two chairmanships during Junior Week Athletic Smoker Chairman and Chairman of the Patrons Committee for the Junior Concert.

Jim Murphy noted for his good disposition, filled the position of Secretary. He believes that it can be expanded because the clerical duties aren't that demanding. He also stated that he thought the secretary should assume the chairmanship of one of the various committees set up by the executive committee.

Rich Conners, the Class Treasurer, feels that his job entailed more work than he anticipated. Described as mild-mannered and patient, Rich is president elect of Blue Key. He is also the Student Council representative for Delta Phi Mu.

Gabriele, Burns Lead Class Academically

by Frank Sauers

Since academic achievement is one of the salient marks of a class leader, it is only fitting that each year during Junior Week, the men who lead the class academically be accorded special commendation.

Commanding the top position this year is Andrew M. Gabriele, Junior Mechanical Engineering major, with a cumulative average of 3.88. Gabriele is followed closely by John A. Burns, Civil Engineering major, and Andrew D'Arcy, General Science major, both with 3.86.

Leading the Arts division in seeking the highly respected A.B. degree is English major Edward R. Wilkinson with a 3.57. Ed is followed by History major Walt Bailey with a 3.49, Classics major Edward F. Jaworowski with 3.40, Edward C. Coffey with 3.36, Roy Baron, General Arts major with a 3.16, and Philosophy major James R. Murphy with 3.04.

Setting the pace in the Science division of the Arts and Science program is Biology major Thomas J. Gal who commands a cumulative 3.77. High honors in the Sciences also go to Chemistry major Peter F. Lyons holding a 3.70 average, Sociology major Arthur B. Chappell with 3.67, Physics major Francis M. Gasparini with a 3.50, Mathematics major Anthony R. Stojak with 2.88, and finally Geology major John W. Roup, achieving a 2.65.

Overall honors from the school of Commerce and Finance are shared by Accounting major Richard G. Bacon and Economics major Donald H. Nicklaus Both Bacon and Nicklaus boast a cumulative 3.73. Stephen Cabot leads General Business majors with a 3.55.

Commerce and Finance leaders in other major fields are Cosmo Giovinazzi of Industrial Administration with 3.29 William Spanfelner of Finance with 3.22, and Peter W. Rea of Marketing with 3.04.

Turing to the slide rule set, we find a number of fellow classmen with notable achievements in the academic field. The aforementioned Andrew Gabriele dominates with his commanding 3.88. Laurence Elias leads Electrical Engineering majors with a cumulative 3.80, Michael J. Bell, the Chemical Engineers with a 3.72.

Francis A. Stolfo leads those seeking the Bachelor of Science degree in social studies with a praiseworthy 3.60. Honors also go to David L. Di Romualdo, who leads Sociology majors with a 3.24, Political Science major Gary V. Smith who boasts a 3.14, and leader of the Psychology majors, Stephen J. Pawlowski who touts a cumulative 3.10.

Finally, we've saved the 'best 'til last' in regard to honors in the Division of Nursing, since they are certainly in a category all their own. Dominating that branch is Carol Burton with a noteworthy 3.60.

Class Functions Carried By 'Unknown' Heroes

by Jim McErlane

In addition to the class officers and the well-known "names" of the class, there are a great number of "unsung heroes" who operate out of the limelight but without whose constant and steady contributions no activity could have been successful.

The problem here is this vast amount of students who have given unselfishly of their time and energy. Here, but a small percentage of these individuals can be mentioned. . .

Four of the most reliable men in the junior class are Bob Cardone, Frank Shering, Jack Hohenadel and Chuck Gnilka. Cardone is an active class politician and his credits include the prize-winning Junior Class Homecomming Float, the Junior Steering Committee, and a section for the Belle Air.

Chuck Gnilka is of the same calibre. Chuck has become one of John Hagerty's right hand men because of his fine work with the Charity Week-end collections and the tickets for the Junior Dinner Dance.

Frank Shering is co-chairman of the upcoming Muff Day and was active on the float and "Missing Link" committees. Frank has also worked well with the publicity committee.

Jack Hohenadel has been connected with many activities. The Steering Committee, the Orphan's Outing, Spring Project, and the prize-winning Sophomore Float are a few which come to mind.

Publicity is always an important factor in carrying out any class activity. With the likes of George McKeon, Chuck Stockinger and Pete Smith doing the job, our class publicity has always been extremely well executed. George is also working on the Dinner Dance this week-end as well as being a reliable man in the past, Chuck Stockinger's credits include the Communion breakfast, Charity week-end and Friday night's— Concert. "P. J." Smith needs no introduction - Pete is one of the best known Belle Masque players and Villanova's answer to Mickey Shaughnessy and Joe the Bartender.

Ed Wiley and Bob Rose are also active in many affairs. Ed is a member of the Steering Committee and was connected with Charity Week-end. Bob headed a Cotillion Committee Cast as well as many Junior activties.

Thanks also to those "better" known men so responsible for the success of the class as Neal Stoneback, Ed Coffey, Maurice McCarthy, Paul Norton, Barry Thorton and others.

Also as a member of the Junior Class I would like the class to take cognizance that the weekly campus newspaper has been almost the exclusive work of members of our class. Ed Farrell, Joe McCarthy, and Frank Quattrone are "unsung heroes" in the truest sense.

While passing out laurels we must not forget our "unsung heroines." Marti Podolsky is a committee of one for "Cartoons for Everything" including the Villanovan, Lynx and Concept.

Jackie Greco is the only female member of the band, which is a fete in itself, as well as Treasurer of Pi Theta Chi Sorority.

Kathy Roos, Chairman of a very successful Nurses Dinner Dance, works diligently for Belle Masque.

Pat Blake who is a member of the Steering Committee, worked on Charity Weekend and is co-copy editor of the Junior Week Villanovan.

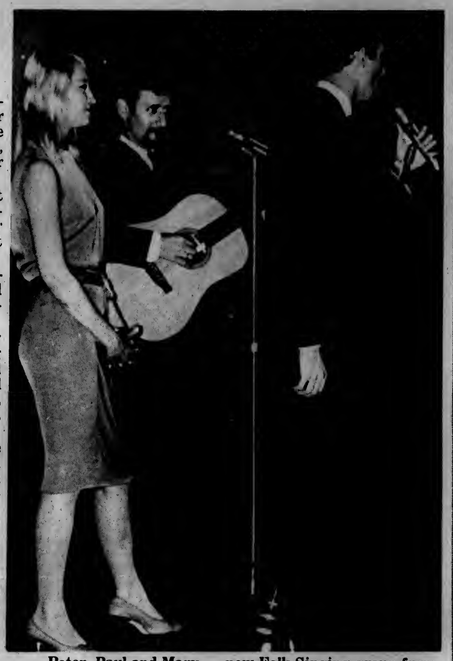
Trio Highlights

by Frank Quattrone

To prefix the Dinner Dance — the traditional climax to Junior Week — the Concert committee under the chair of Marty McGuinn has brought in one of the fastest rising folk groups in the country — Peter, Paul, and Mary — to entertain at Friday evening's Junior Concert.

Beginning at 8 p.m. in the Field House, the Concert will last approximately three hours. Prior to the appearance of the trio, the Criterions of West Chester State will swing out with solid jazz sounds, "red hot and cool."

The Criterions, led by talented trombonist, arranger, and composer, Bob Curnow, captured second place in the big band division of Villanova's Intercollegiate Jazz Festival on February 22.



The popular Peter, Paul, and Mary — a highly commercial folk group, complete with beards (and long blond hair, in one case). Biblical-sounding names and songs to match, and a tightly-knit and perfectly refined harmony — are unique in their field in that a woman, Mary Travers, has joined voices with the male singers, Paul Stookey and Peter Yarrow.

All three vocalists, who met in Greenwich Village about four years ago, are twenty-five years of age, and possess the closeness and zest for life that have been so vital to their skyrocketing to the top and their continued success.

The group's second long-playing album, "Movin'," has already sold over 500,000 copies, and may eventually outsell their first LP, which still ranks high in Billboard's nationwide music survey.

Tickets for the April 26 Concert are still on sale in the Pie Shoppe for all those who have not yet procured them. Over 800 members of the Class of 1964 will be seated in a special section on the gym floor.

Judging by campus and off-campus response thus far — actual ticket sales included — there is no reason to suppose that this Junior Concert will not be the most successful in the thirty-nine year history of Junior Week.

Peter, Paul and Mary — new Folk Singing group from Greenwich Village — enliven Villanova's campus Friday night with zesty and harmonious melody.

Dear Mother

Today is your day. We have dedicated it to you to show in our small, but very sincere way how very much you mean to us. Our entire lives have been shaped and guided by your examples, your sacrifices and your love.

Many times we have taken these sacrifices for granted, perhaps because we always knew they were there. Any gift of love is never fully appreciated.

But now as maturity is approaching we realize more and more fully the magnitude of the gift which you have given us. With this realization, Mother, comes gratitude . . . not the gratitude which we can verbally express, but rather that which can only come from the depths of our hearts.

Never will we be able to repay that which you have given us. The gift is too great; but perhaps because of having been your son or daughter we may be able to give to our children the wonderful things which you have given us. To make even the feeblest attempt at regenerating a little of your devotion and warmth will be our goal.

If we never say those weak words of gratitude, please know that we are blessing your very existence and praying for you, nevertheless.

Very truly yours,
John R. Hagerty
President

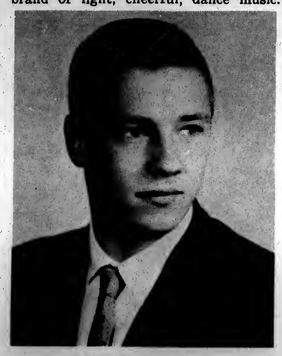
Mothers Honored By Class Of 1964 In Tribute Today

by Rich Panati and Joe Pensabene

Tradition will be upheld today as we of the Class of 1964 pay a small but sincere tribute to our honored guests, our mothers. It seems fitting that we begin our Junior Week activities by honoring those to whom we owe so much but can repay so little. So it is with great pride that we, on this the silver anniversary of Mothers' Day, say, "Thank you, Moms, and welcome to Villanova."

Through the untiring efforts of co-chairmen Ed Coffey and Tom Stanley, we have prepared what we think will be a day you will cherish and recall frequently. Your day, on campus will begin formally with a 9 AM registration in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. At this time, you will be given corsages and individual favors—white demitasse cups with an appropriate Mother's Day inscription.

After this, a full schedule of events has been planned. At 10:30.A.M. Reverend Michael J. Gallagher, O.S.A., class moderator, will celebrate mass at the Shrine of Our Lady of Good Counsel. The mass will be sung by the Villanova Singers. In the event of inclement weather, however, the mass will be celebrated by Father Gallagher in the University Chapel.



Immediately following mass, in accordance with the traditional aspects of Junior Week, class president John R. Hagerty will make the presentation of the class memorial the class tree, to the university. At 12:45 all will gather in the Field House for a luncheon prepared by Smythe Caterers. At this time, the honored guests will include the Rev. John A. Klekotka. O.SA., Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., and Rev. John. Curran, O.S.A.

Following the luncheon, the class of 1964's Diaper Dan, selected by a prominent mother, will be announced. As in the years past, the contest has proved to be one of the highlights of Mother's Day. Later you can return to Dougherty Hall to review pictures of the Diaper Dan entries, which will be on display in the Center Lounge.

Junior Dinner Dance Set For Sheraton

by Paul Norton

This Saturday night Richard Maltby and his orchestra will move forward to the Villanova bandstand for the second time in recent years with their own brand of light, cheerful, dance music.

Neal Stoneback

Mr. Maltby's appearance will climax the highlight of Junior Week, the annual Dinner Dance to be held in the beautiful main ballroom at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia. This is the long awaited and much planned for formal evening attended only by Juniors.

There will be a cocktail hour at 6:30 P.M., and dinner will be called at 7:00 P.M. It is hoped that the Juniors will arrive on time so that the dinner and dancing will begin on schedule.

At 9:00 P. M. the queen and her court of princesses will decend the staircase and officially open the evening for dancing.

Richard Maltby was arranger and member of many dance orchestras during the "Big Band" era. Since forming his own group in the early '50's, he has rapidly risen in popularity, especially at college proms and society parties.

His 1957 "Swingin' Down the Lane" album caused a mild sensation in the record industry.

During the past years the Maltby Orchestra has received national acclaim for their unique sound that is adaptable and pleasing to any audience.

The band is no stranger to the Villanovan campus. On May 6, 1960 they did the honors at what was then called the Junior Prom. Since that time the prom has given way to the dinner dance and now once again they will hold the spotlight.

Tickets will remain on sale in the student council office until Thursday at 4:30 P.M. All unfilled tables will be completed this week.

Chairman for this year's Dinner Dance is Neal Stoneback. His committee includes: Jim Dwyer, Chuck Gnilka, George McKeon, Paul Norton, Rich Corona, Jim Quinn, Pete Cassidy, John Sperger, Marianne Ortepio, Sue MacDonald, and Kay Uribe.

An Editorial

This special edition of the Villanovan is dedicated first to the mothers of the members of the Junior Class and then to the Junior Class itself.

It was conceived, written, and put together with the sole intention of giving the members of the Junior Class and their parents something tangible through which to recall one of the most memorable weeks of their college careers, Junior Week.

In this issue we have attempted to capture, in print, some of the spirit which enables a group of 900 students create the best Junior Week the campus has ever had.

Lack of space has precluded mentioning everyone who has worked on Junior Week and this special edition. Therefore I would like to thank all those whose diligence and untiring efforts have made this work possible.

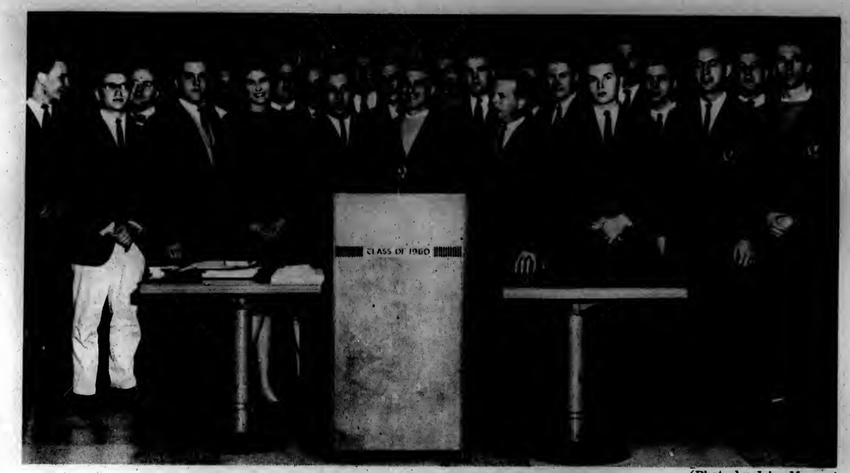
Father Gallagher Guides Juniors In Class Efforts

by Joe McGill



This past year the Junior class has had Father Michael Gallagher, O.S.A. as moderator of the class. He may be considered a guiding force in the spirit exemplified thus far in the class of '64.

Father was born and lived most of his life in Bryn Mawr, Pa. and went to grammer school in the area. His devotion to God was shown by his studying for the priesthood immediately following his elementary education. He graduated from Villanova in 1957 with an A.B. in Philosophy.

Four years later Father was ordained into the priesthood at the National Shrine in Washington, D.C. Father also has a Master's Degree in Theology and studied graduate sociology in Catholic University.

Besides being the Junior Class moderator, Father teaches freshman Theology. He is also the faculty advisor and chaplain for the Alumnae Division, Chaplain of the Valley Forge Alumni Club, and Chaplain for the Knights of Columbus in Ardmore.

Even with all these duties. Father Gallagher still finds time to be a member of the famous " Monks" basketball team which has re-written the Field house record books.

The Junior contingent of this past year's Student Council poses after an arduous session.

Juniors Shine On Council

by Terry Cooney

A voice in government, representation for the governed, has been the idea which has inspired men down thru the annals of history. Here at Villanova this idea has become a reality and is personified in the Student Council.

Speaking quite loudly for their constituents are the members of the Junior Class who make up a vibrant 32% of the Council.

The Council is divided into two sections — the full votes and the half-votes Examining the full votes first, Marty McGuinn heads the list as the number two man on the Council with the title of Vice-Chairman. He is the Arts and Science Resident Representative and is a General Arts major who makes his home in Princeton, New Jersey.

In the number two slot for the Junior Class is Jim McErlane, the Arts and Science Day-Hop Representative from Malvern. Jim served in exemplary fashion as Executive Vice-President for Educational Affairs this year and also as a member of the Student Senate for the past two years.

Coming up in the number three position is John Hagerty. A Psychology major, John moved from Vice-President in his Sophomore year to President in the Junior Year.

Batting clean-up on the Student Council team, is a distinctive member of the Junior Class, Betsy Massaniso. Betsy, as Nursing Division Representative, is the only female member of the Junior Class on the Council. She is a native of Lafayette Hill, Penna. and is currently a member of the Student-Faculty Committee.

For our fifth and sixth members in the line-up we turn to the Commerce and Finance Division and Jim O'Connor and Peter Theiss, Resident and Day-Hop Representatives respectively.

Jim, an Industrial Administration major, who hails from South Orange, New Jersey, is presently Co-Chairman of the Student Activities Committee of the Student Council.

The Day-Hop Representative Pete Theiss, is a Marketing major. On the Council he holds the post of Co-chairman of the Religious Affairs Committee.

In seventh and eighth position for the Junior Class are the Engineering Representatives George Marcino and Terry Cooney who represent the Day-Hop and Resident Engineers respectively. George, a member of the Academic Affairs Committee of the Council, is a Mechanical Engineer who makes his home in Havertown.

Terry is a Mechanical Engineer who makes his home in Brooklyn, New York. His activity on the Council centers around the Student-Faculty committee and as the Alternate Delegate of NFCCS. Outside the Council he is currently president of the Beta Gamma Debate Society.

Turning the spotlight now on the half-votes of the Council, we find many prominent Juniors.

Leading the list of half-votes is Corky Giovinazzo, an Industrial Administration major from Vineland, New Jersey, who represents Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity. Corky is a member of the Religion and Publicity Committees of the Student Council.

Next is Rich Connors, Junior Class Treasurer and Delta Pi Mu Fraternity Representative. Rich, a History major, who hails from New Haven, Conn., is President-elect of the Blue Key.

The Sanctuary Society's Representative is Dick McDonough, South Orange's contribution to Villanova. Dick is noted more to his fellow Villanovans and to the world as an All-American swimmer who recently tied the record for the 200 yd. butterfly.

Representing the publication, the Villanova Engineer, is Andy Gabriele a Mechanical Engineer from Queens, New York. Next is Tom Menchin, the Pre-law Society representative and Junior Delegate of NFCCS. Tom resides in Newark, New Jersey and is President-elect of the Pre-Law Society.

Havertown's contribution to the Council is Mike Lowenstein, the Marketing Society Representative.

The voice of Beta Gamma Debating is John Callaghan, a Chemical Engineering major from Philadelphia.

Dick May an Industrial Administration major from Rosemont, represents the NROTC Drill Team. He is a member of the Religious Affairs Committee.

John Nelson represents the Semper Fidelis Society. John is an Electrical Engineer and member of the Ways and Means Committee.

The Villanova Singers Representative is Bob Goldberg. Bob is an outstanding student and is a member of the NROTC Color Guard.

Representing the Villanovan is it's Editor-in-Chief, Edward Farrell, a native of that thriving and prosperous metropolis, Bayhead, New Jersey. For the past year Ed, an electrical engineering major, has borne the burden of the many poisonous arrows and darts that befall his position and his paper each week. As a member of the Council, he has been active on the Ways and Means Committee.

The last man on the half vote team is the Council's illustrious and infamous Parliamentarian, Joe McCarthy, the Intercollegiate Conference on Government representative. On his shoulders fall the responsibility of the Chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee. Joe, a native of Newton, Massachusetts, is also a member of the Student Senate and the Student Cabinet.

Movies, Awards Highlight Smoker Wednesday Night

by Jim Murphy

A flickering movie film, a low filmy cloud of Marlboro smoke, and the bantering comments of April evening quarterbacks will constitute the atmosphere of the Junior Smoker this Wednesday evening in the Day-Hop Cafeteria. The Smoker will begin at 7:30 in Dougherty Hall.

The 1963 Smoker, under the direction of class Vice President Joe McGill, is an attempt to continue and improve upon all the past programs. The agenda is headlined with two sports films, one from the grid-iron scene and the other from the Palestra hardwood floor.

Following the films there will be a presentation of awards. Three of the athletic Oscars will be presented to Junior members of Villanova teams for outstanding achievement in their individual sport.

Two special awards will be given to members of the Class of '64 who are not necessarily involved in sports competition.

An added inducement for attendance has been continued by the class officers. Free refreshments will be served during the evening, consisting of hoagies and tonic. Admission will be for juniors and only upon presentation of their junior matriculation card.

Hey Frosh!

by John Cahalan

Hey Frosh! You know that guy in front of you? Upon receiving a negative answer, that delightful, effervescent fellow with the funny-looking white hat, would forcibly introduce you to not only the guy in front of you, but also to the whole section in that first day registration line. Some of the other privileges that we were allowed at that time were serenading the group, and leading spirited cheers.

Such were the activities that began our period of "Freshman Orientation," the transition from hot-shot high schoolers to mature university students. Our parents, beaming with pride (and a few snickers) watched as their little boys were transformed from neat, well dressed students, to "frosh" complete with shorter pants, attractive lids, becoming ties, and official big name buttons.

We were then hustled through registration, our first taste of Villanova tradition: red tape. The first taste was like garlic, all right the first time, but each repeating time, it got progressively worse. The group then filed through that jungle of desks, secretaries, advisors, muck, papers, IBM cards, solicitors, and guardians of our security.

We then proceeded on a guided tour of the campus, led by one of these fearless big brothers. Upon the completion of the safari, you piled your four hundred pounds of luggage, tennis rackets, bats, gloves, desk lamps, and tins of momma's home-made cookies on the official campus truck, and ceremoniously passed on the dorms, with the parents close, by, a la coffle.

It's at times like that, that Pop turns orator. While putting the key in the lock he said, almost with a tear in his eye, "Well, son, this is going to be your home for the next year." When the door opened, his mouth did the same.

Your home—complete with Louis XVI bunk beds and two exquisite, chippendaled desks, complete with chips, initials carved ever so carefully, and some "bathroom poetry." Imagine! All of this furniture stuffed into an oversized closet. If you were lucky enough to beat your roommate to the punch you piled your junk on the lower bunk, and beat a hasty retreat.

When your parents left, you went to find your roomate, and there he was — Joe College. You probably said to yourself, "Golly, I've got to room with this fink for a year (that is, if any of you ever said "golly" before).

But what you didn't know, was that he was saying the same thing about you. However, after a while you found out that he wasn't quite as finky as he appeared, and the two of you wandered around the palatial abodes meeting the neighbors.

The next three days were filled with carrying upperclassmen's luggage, attending meetings, reciting revered school songs, paying fines, paying fines, and then paying fines. These meetings were the highlights and will remain in our minds for a long time.

Our class did something that Villanova students have wanted to do for years, that was-hit some of the nurses with eggs. Of course, we-oops, they weren't aiming at the nurses.

The plan was that a few of the tyrannical "O.C.'s" were to' receive these little missiles of joy; however, the dead-eyes missed the target; It was then discussed that this be the start of a big collegiate tradition and bomb the nurses with eggs, but unfortunately '65 didn't follow through.

The enterprising white hats, besides instilling in us a great school pride, spotted the talent in our class: one of the all time greats in the art of singing, "Mr. Custer."

The end of this period drew to a close swiftly, but not silently. A few of the more ambitious frosh, (probably after discovering such places as Kelly's and Thum's) decided that a panty raid was in order. The object of their quest was someplace called Rosemont, wherever that is.

This fiasco ended with the arrival of lower Merion's finest, wielding shot guns, tear gas bombs, and hard wooden sticks. It was at this point, that our class distinguished itself, by successfully escaping back to the home base, although it was later reported that a few of the new students had lost their matric cards while on an afternoon stroll.

Orientation might have seemed trivial at the time, but when we look back on it, we see that it pulled the class together and left is with a great deal of fond memories.

Sweet College Days Of Yore

by Roger Sheehee

Dear Bob,

I was rummaging through the attic this morning, trying to assist my good wife with her spring cleaning, and what to my wandering eyes should appear but a V.U. yearbook and eight tiny receptacles made for beer. Needless to say, my wife finished the attic while I looked through the rest of the junk for your address.

It seems that springtime is the appropriate time to write because all the old memories come back then, and anyway it does mark the anniversary of our last days at good old V.U. Of course, I was more brilliant than you, for the administration wrote and told me that I didn't need to come back for my senior year. There was some bit they tried to feed about not being able to curve cumulative averages. We did have a blast for those first three years, though. How in hell did you graduate anyway?

Remember that first year? Man, did we ever look funny in those regs. The bit that got me was when the OC's filled us with enormous lies about the blind dates we could get from Rosemont for that first Student Council Dance of the year. They must have all been on the Council because that female Gargantua you were set up with couldn't have looked worse if a freight train had hit her. And dance. I hope no one ever told her she could, because anyone looking at her from the knees up could have sworn she was trying to do a soft shoe routine in football cleats. Well, let bygones be bygones and just be glad you didn't appear in the papers for "Animal Care Week."

Another thing, I wasn't quite sure whether that room we were in Austin Hall was a one-man restroom or a linen closet for the convenience of the maids, but live in it? I had to laugh when they said we would both share the room. I hadn't even found a way to force my bag and myself in there at the same time.

Believe me, Bob, there was never anything more pleasing than waiting on that ramp in the cafeteria and reading those menus, some of which Sam Coleridge couldn't have bettered in his wildest opium dream. Then come those ladies-in-waiting that served your food, commonly known as the "power squad," headed by at least two good All-American fullbacks and a woman with the rank of sergeant. It was rumored that the one could press 350 pounds, but that was only hearsay. The dexterity with which they served us for three years could be paralled with that of a stateroad crew shoveling gravel and many times there was difficulty in locating certain portions mentioned.

Then there were the birds of prey lurking at the end of each chute in search of those who dared thwart law and order by attempting to conceal an extra milk or ripe olive on their tray. And contrary to popular belief the canine specie of the cafeteria was not a walking trash receptacle, but actually one of Pavlov's dogs trying to condition itself against the food.

In the spring time of each year up would pop the Legions of St. Thomas, just as a milkweed returns each year with more added to its faction in a field of wheat. These brave men numbering a little over a thousand would each year combine to fight the leaf and litter on campus. However, I could not see the need for upwards of 500 of these men raking for days on the small plot of land between Dougherty Hall and the road in front of the annex. It seemed the administration should fear a possible recurrence of the Peasants Revolt of 1524.

Then there were other factors that seemed to point at old V.U. as a place set back in the middle ages. The snow shovel couldn't have been invented while I was there, for the only thouroughfares between dorms during the winter were foot-stomped, bobsled runs. And take those isolated fortresses called Sullivan and Sheehan, cut off from communications with the world because they were seemingly oblivious to the fact that Alexander Graham Bell had invented the telephone. The only glimpse of civilization here came during our sophomore year when the south end of Sheehan was beseiged by a chlorophyll fire truck from Bryn Mawr, but this too could have been symbolic of the fertility of spring as was the Green Knight from the days of yore.

These were the good old days as I remember them, but there are a few recent things I've heard that might be of news to you. Captain Murphy has been promoted to General now and another of his stalwart force has just celebrated his 105th birthday. Also Alumni Hall finally cracked so badly that the building separated into two complete parts. Last year's climax to the football team's 10-0 record proved to be the best event in years. They had a pep rally to cheer the players and for the ceremonial bonfire, they burned the Annex to the ground.

Right now I must be on my way. I hope to hear from you soon and give my regards to any of the old crowd you may meet.

Sincerely,
Al

Steering Committee Sets Class Plans

by John Behan

This year's Steering Committee has played a very active role in the formulation of class policy and has upheld its long-honored tradition of planning Junior Activities. Throughout the year the Committee has functioned as a significant voice in assisting the Junior Class in making their functions become a reality.

The members of the Steering Committee were selected last Spring after applications were submitted to a four man panel. These men were selected for their personal enthusiasm and ability by the officers of the Junior Class. Their work has been manifold. To this able body of men we owe the well-organized and enjoyable Ring Mass and Communion Breakfast, the highly successful Charity Weekend, and lastly, the Homecoming Float.

Their work, however, is culminated in the Junior Week activities. Beginning on Monday with Mother's Day and continuing through Saturday evening the efforts of these men will be realized. Most important this year was the selection of two very well-known groups, Peter, Paul and Mary, who will entertain Friday evening at the Concert, and Richard Maltby and his orchestra, who will grace the Junior Dinner Dance in the Sheraton Ballroom on Saturday evening.

President John Hagerty, Chairman of the Steering Committee, has stated several reasons for the selection of these people. He emphasized the importance of the Junior year in the undergraduate's days at Villanova.

He has also stated that the functions of the Junior class are the most well-attended in the school. The selection of two big name groups, then, is necessary. This is the first time this has been done but reviewing Hagetry's reasons there is no need for criticism.

Of all the organizations presently active on campus the Steering Committee has been one of the most enthusiastic and well-attended. Of this year's committee the following are members:

John Geoghegan, A&S; James Napolitano, C&F; Robert Rose, C&F; Frank Sauers, A&S; Arthur Chappell, A&S; Chuck Gnilka, A&S; Patricia Berry, Nursing; Peter Cassidy, A&S; Barry Thornton, A&S; Joseph Triarsi, C&F; Robert Cardone, A&S; Gerald Campana, A&S; James Buckley, C&F; Patricia Blake, Nursing; John Degnan, A&S; Richard Corona, A&S; James Croney, Eng.; Edward Coffey, A&S; Peter DeLiberty, A&S; Michael Ferrara, A&S; John Gottsman, Engineering; Maurice McCarthy, A&S; James Friel, C&F; John Hohenadel, A&S; William Hart, A&S; Richard Greiner, C&F; Richard May, C&F; Robert McGarry, C&F; Robert Mitchell, A&S; John Nelson, Eng.; Kevin Shea, C&F; Marianne Ortepio, Nursing; Frank Quattrone, A&S; Peter Smith, C&F; Thomas Stanley, A&S; Neal Stoneback, A&S; Kay Uribe, Nursing; Edward Weille, C&F; Warren Winterbottom, A&S; Paul Norton, A&S; Joseph Kudless, A&S.

Also members by way of office held: John Hagerty, President of the Junior Class (Chairman of the Steering Committee); Joseph McGill, Vice-President; James Murphy, secretary Richard Connors, treasurer.

A devilishly efficient looking organization, eh? Thats our Junior Steering Committee just getting ready to move in and tackle some of the problems which they have been so successful in working with this year.

Zenith Achieved!

by John Cooney

When we were young and innocent, we heard about Junior Week. We listened and learned about the fun to be had, so we went to our parents and asked them to send us to college.

"Parents," we said "now that we are finishing high school how about sending us to college?"

Our parents eyes went bright with hopes for the future. Then with tears coming from her eyes our mother said, "Up until now, son, we had been worried that you didn't show an interest in education. Of course, you can go to college."

Our father placed his hand on our shoulder and said in a gruff voice, "Why is it you want to go to college? Maybe you want to be a doctor, huh?"

"No," we replied, 'we want to go to Junior Week."

Disgustedly our parents bought us a bow tie and a beany and sent us to college.

When we arrived at the University, we were asked by someone in a white hat what we expected to do. We expect to go to Junior Week, we happily replied.

"But you can't," replied our interrogator, "You have to through a waiting period."

"How long is the waiting period," we asked?

Two years was the reply from our new found friend. When we asked what we should do in the meantime, he told us that we must attend school. This took us quite aback.

"But, but," we went sputtering to him, "we want to go to Junior Week now!"

"C'est impossible," replied our friend in a stange tongue. Then he fined us for not knowing a school song.

For the past two years, we have been biding our time; we fulfilled all our obligations which make us qualified for Junior Week. We bought a blazer, we bought a ring; we voted in elections; we even went to school. Now at last our letter has arrived saying that we are now suited to attend Junior Week. Even our parents realize that it hasn't been a waste.

THREE WONDERFUL YEARS

by Kay Uribe, Gil Sheehan and Jim Brophy

It was about 8:00 that September morning when I stepped on to the Villanova campus for the first time. The sky was blue with not a drop of rain in sight. What a beautiful day!

Before me lay Lancaster Pike, a road that I was to travel many, many times in my first three years at Villanova. Beyond the "Pike" one could see hundreds of cars parked in a most disorderly fashion.

Was I ever a bewildered individual! Did I ever feel lost! Everywhere that I looked there were "frosh" like myself trying to comprehend all that was going on around them. Like myself, however, they seemed to be having little success.

It did not take long for me to realize the the female set was well represented on the Villanova campus and I was almost immediately informed that these were the the famous Villanova nurses. It was through the years that I was to fully realize how important a part they played in our college life.

By noon I must have met fifty different individuals but forgot their names as quickly as I met them—naturally.

Freshman Regalia

"Hey buddy where's your dink at?"

"My what?"

"You know, stupid, your dink."

It was quite obvious that I did not know what this loudmouth was talking about and when I was just about ready to raise the white flag of surrender when one of the upperclass nurses came to my rescue. She infomed me that I had just spoken to an "infamous" O.C. It was my duty as a lowly "frosh" to stand in line with the rest of my classmates and buy the standard apparel that all Freshmen must wear during orientation period. Sure seemed stupid to me but that was tradition and I would have to undergo a little embarrassment, temporarily, anyhow.

This certainly was a day of "firsts" for me for I was initiated in the famous Villanova line that was to consume so many happy hours of my time.

Dink and Button

When I emerged from the line an hour later I was sporting a blue and white bow tie, dink and big button. I definitely looked like something out of the pages of a men's fashion Magazine.

One of the O.C.'s condescended to talk with me but as I recall he ended up screaming at me instead.

'Roll up those pant's cuffs twice" was a phrase that I was to hear constantly for the next few weeks.

After all of us had received our outfits we were herded into Vasey Hall auditorium where we were informed that the purchase of tickets for all the dances, socials and parties of the first semester were to be bought by us. Oh, and of course it was taken for granted that we would be patrons for the Senior, Junior, and Sophomore class functions. . . Naturally.

Muff day finally arrived and were we ever ready for it. The sophomore's didn't stand a chance, well at least we thought they didn't. The class of '64 failed to "move up forward" much to our disgust. We lost the football game and what a hotly disputed affair that was. Oh well we really didn't care if we lost. Not much!

Coming Out Party

Within a few weeks the initial shock of being a freshman in college began wearing off, or at least we thought so. A certain faction decided that as Freshman we should meet the young ladies at Rosemont. What a meeting it was! Emily Post more than likely would have frowned upon the manner in which we decended upon Rosemont but it was our coming out party and we all enjoyed the more informal atmosphere anyhow.

The Student Council dance officially opened our fall calendar and with it came pandemonium and spirit that are so much a part of Villanova.

The football season opened and our first adversary of the season was Marquette. Well we lost to Marquette and seven more teams like them. We ended with a record of 2-8 but next year promised much bigger and better things.

1960 also saw the retirement of Al Severance as head basketball coach for the Wildcats. Severance finished his "silver season" with a team headed by Jim Huggard.

George Leftwich and Wally Jones helped lead the freshman basketball team to a first place position in the freshman Big Five Championships.

Dick McDonough took fourth place in the U.S. Olympics that year. This was also the year that our track team featured such memorables as Frank Budd, Paul Drayton and Rolando Cruz.

In the early part of our second semester politics made a grand entrance into our college life. Election day saw a record number of voters turn out to put the "Right Party" in power. Marty McGuinn became president and found capable assistance in vice-president John Hagerty and treasurer Walt Dulski. Trish Berry set a precedent that year by being elected secretary of our class. Our nurses were not in the background that year or any year for that matter.

Now It Is Our Turn

Summer passed by quickly and when we returned to begin our sophomore year it was our turn to do the orientating and that we did. The class of 1964 led some 1125 freshman through Orientation Period. Truly the best one in the school's history, or at least we thought so.

Over the screaming of the freshman rose the ever commanding voice of Barry Fitzgerald—outstanding "white hat" of that orientation period.

As ominous grey clouds lurked in the distance we plunged into the homecoming activities. The University of Buffalo went down to defeat that day and our class won first prize in the float contest but the float looked very bedragled for it rained and rained all day. Better luck next year!

No — this famous Wildcat hasn't lost his head. Maurice McCarthy, the Spirit of Villanova, is merely resting up for another one of his historic pleas to the crowd to "Give me a 'V'!"

Remember the frosh and the peanut? This was just one of the many gags and tricks to which we were submitted during Truth or Consequences might some 32 months ago. (Photo by Mike Pastore)

Many classmates made the trip to Boston College in their sophomore year for the semi-annual invasion of the city. B.C. proved to be our first defeat of the season but otherwise we had quite a "smashing" weekend.

If we were ever to set precedent we did so at the Sophomore Cotillion. The class of '64 definitely put it's best foot forward on the social scene that weekend. It was a success due to the combined efforts of many. Marty McGuinn, as chairman, was assisted in the production of the Cotillion by Joe Trairsi and many others. Needless to say a most enjoyable weekend was had by all.

Early Christmas Presents

Just before Christmas we received our blazers. It was a very happy moment for many of us. As in previous years a record number of blazers were ordered, well over the 500 mark. Villanova was really growing and it was fun growing with her.

Well, we went to the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Texas during the Christmas vacation prouder than ever. Not only had we won the game 17-9 but we had racked up an 8-2 record. What a pleasant change from last year.

March and April saw class elections dominating the scene for the most part. We wanted to elect the best officers possible for our Junior year and that we did.

Hagerty for President

A real hard fought battle was waged and after the dust had cleared away we found John Hagerty to be our new president. Good leadership was to be found in Joe McGill, Jim Murphy and Rich Connors who were elected vice-president, secretary and treasurer respectively.

Truly our sophomore year had been an enjoyable one. There never seemed to be a dull moment all year. Now, however we anxiously awaited the beginning of our Junior Year.

Where Did Everyone Go?

The greater majority of us were anxious to find out what was new around campus. We were surprised to learn that of the original 1200 classmates that only some 900 remained. Quite a drop-out wasn't it?

It didn't take us very long to get down to Kelly's to see if the old faces were there and for the most part they were. Ted was still tapping the keys a still checking I.D.s but it didn't matte any more for we soon would be "legal."

By now we were a little bit older and wiser. No more of those 8:30 classes if we could possibly avoid them. Not all of us were successful in our endeavors.

The first two years had been wonderful ones but Junior Year looked like the greatest imaginable. Parties were in abundance for a week or two and it seemed as though the picnics would never end.

It was not to long before the "bomb" was dropped. Classes had to be attended once again if we ever planned on graduating.

Football season was soon underway and it was not long before Homecoming Weekend was once more upon us. For the third year in a row the Junior Class won the float contest and true to form it rained. This was the fifth year in a row it had rained on Homecoming weekend. Detroit went down to defeat that day at the hands of Alex Bell's Wildcats. It was a cold wet day but many of our "spirited" Juniors turned out to see the game.

Before Thanksgiving we received our class rings. The day was one of the biggest of our lives. Father Gallagher celebrated the annual Ring Day Mass in the University Chapel after which many of the Juniors had a delicious breakfast at the Treadway Inn.

Orphan's Weekend

After Thanksgiving recess the charity and good will of the class was expressed once again for it was the annual orphan's weekend. The weekend began with the Charity Ball sponsored by the class. The new sound of the Villanovans under the capable direction of Art Cebrowski lent a pleasant atmosphere to the evening The next day some 200 Villanovans visited St. John's Orphanage and showed the "Johnnies" the true spirit of Christmas — that giving was more important than receiving. The Orphan's party climaxed a very memorable weekend. Many a Junior might be tired after walking endless miles so it seemed, with his charge but at the end of the day he could justifiably feel rather proud of himself.

Needless to say gratitude and heartfelt thanks go to Paul Norton and all the Juniors who gave of themselves to make this weekend a great success.

Now our attention begins to focus on the biggest event of the year — Junior Week.

Junior Week

Truly this is the week that we have been looking forward to since we were freshmen. Months of preparation have gone into making this the greatest Junior Week ever. Few, very few, are as fortunate as we are, Junior class. Let us take advantage of our opportunity!

Look around for yourself and judge the Class of '64 on its own merits. This is not the end, not by any means. Let us keep a promise we made to ourselves the first day we set foot on this campus — to make the Class of '64 the greatest ever!

Desert Island Home Is A Real Blast!

by Jan Dyroff and Ed Wilkinson

'Twas the summer of 1990, when I was steaming along through the south seas, lolling in the sun, reading comic books, and just thoroughly enjoying the last year of my twenty-year sabbatical leave (teaching is a real great career!).

Our ship was a modern merchantman, designed by a Villanova engineer who was a classmate of mine, ED FARRELL. Imagine my shock when the ship suddenly exploded. The next think I remember is waking up on a secluded beach.

Expecting to be alone, I was stunned to see signs of life in the underbrush. I was even more stunned when I saw that it was MARGIE STUPAK. Instead of asking me how I was, a silly question for a nurse, she tried to sign me up for the limbo contest PAT BLAKE and BETSY MASSANISO were running that night.

Next I was greeted by a strangely ornamented native; he wore a Blue Key around his neck — it was RICH CONNORS. He offered to show me around the island.

Orating Parrots

On the way to the village we saw TERRY COONEY teaching a group of raucous parrots the finer points of speaking. DAVE GALIE was there too, teach the parrots just the opposite.

As we reached the outskirts of the village, we saw the local industries. There was the JOSEPH A. McCARTHY gavel factory, and a beer mug manufactory run by NEIL STONEBACK and JACK HOHENADEL. The sole retailer for these goods was DAN BUCKLEY.

Entering the village we stopped at the Glo-Bar for some refreshment. The friendly barkeep was none other than BOB COWAN (he brewed his own stuff in a lab out back). Lined up at the counter were WALTER BAILEY, BOB BURKE, BOB McGARRY, and JOHN COONEY.

There was a group of singers gathered round a piano: MIKE FERRARA, ART CHAPPELL and JOHN FINNEGAN. Playing the piano was NICK SALVATORE, while over in the corner JIM FRIEL was trying to limbo to their efforts.

On the wall of the pub was a radio. We wondered why anybody would listen to such horrible rock 'n' roll and we were informed that it was the only radio station around, and besides it came with the electricity, so what could you do?

Our next stop was the studios of the number one station in town (the only station in town) WWVU. On the lawn was MR. WILKE who was making some sort of tower out of bamboo shoots. He was mumbling something about going FM. Meanwhile FRANK SAUERS was censoring all objectionable music, being sure to exclude such trash as Beethoven, Bach, and Brahms. FRANK QUATTRONE was in the control booth featuring Sinatra on his mood music show.

At Least Some

Taking a poll on the island we found that people did listen to the radio station, at least eight people: KEN KILMARTIN, JOHN GLYNN, LOIS GREYSON, CAROL BURTON, ROY BARON, BILL SMITH, PETE LYONS, and HARRY BAUER.

Learning that a sports event was about to take place, we headed for the field of contest. The sport was native to the island and included all the better points of football, basketball, track, swimming, and pinochle.

We bought our tickets from KAY URIBE. The refs were RENNY GIORGINI and MIKE BEVENOUR. JIM MURPHY was selling popcorn, JIM NAPOLITANO was selling ice cream, and CHUCK GNILKA held the money.

As the game got under way JACK CLIFFORD putted a football to WALLY JONES, who dribbled around RICK CORONA and passed off to ROLANDO CRUZ. The ball was driven wild and DICK McDONOUGH had to swim for it. BILL SHERLOCK put the ball back in play but it was quickly stolen by DICK BERTOZZI, who was tackled by VIC ZWOLAC. BUTCH WINTERBOTTOM recovered and handed off to JOHN MYLOTTE who made the first score of the game.

MAURICE McCARTHY did a handstand. DICK TUCKER led the cheering section composed of BUDDY NASK, RALPH RUSSO, BOB DUNN, JACK GHASTLY, JACK BOYLE, JOHN DINAN, and JACK GEOGHEGAN, who were also playing pinochle, lacking anything better to do.

Wishing some light-hearted entertainment we dropped in at the local parliament. There was a heated argument in progress on how many mugs there were in a court. The session was a standstill. For the past fifteen minutes JOE McGILL had been asking a question.

NFCCS

One side was mumbling against NFCCS. The other side was just mumbling. In one dark corner PETE DeLIBERTY and MIKE MAGRO were arguing over the framing on the constitution and had been doing so for the past twenty years. JERRY CARDAMONE, representing ICG, was threatening to take his constitution and go home if they didn't play the game his way. JOHN PUTRE was fed up by the whole mess along time ago and had already gone home.

MARTY McGUINN was standing at the head of the table smiling, while JOHN HAGARTY, JIM McERLANE, and JIM O'CONNOR were playing a game of tag with the Villanova nurses.

Resolving nothing at the meeting, we all retired for dinner. We went to the best restaurant in town, the Purple Palm Tree, owned by former English professor turned racketeer, ED WILKINSON, who amassed a fortune by smuggling rugby balls in from New Zealand.

The menu for the dinner was suggested by TRISH BERRY who had returned recently from the interior of the island where she had been sent by the Peace Corps. Of course, we followed the rules laid down by JACK KRUG in his latest book on etiquette.

Dinner was prepared by Cordon Blue chef BOB ROSE and consisted of stewed pigeon, shriveled peas, rissole potatoe, and hearth hard bread. The specialty of the house is to make the bread as hard as the hearth stones, that way they know its done.

High Point

The high point of the evening was provided by pencil-seller DON NIKOLAUS. In order to catch our attention he played the 1812 Overture on a harmonica, turned loose twelve thousand white doves, shot off a Centaur rocket, brought out Virginia, rang all the church bells in town, and did a somersault and landed on one finger. We were all set to buy a life-time supply of pencils, when he discovered that he left his stock at home.

ART MOLITIERNO and JIM CIARROCCHI provided after dinner entertainment by doing card tricks and impersonations. The trick they did that broke up the audience was to imitate insects. Jim was a cricket and Art was a tick. Too bad the act ended promptly when someone, I think it was JOE SALERNO, shouted "Raid!".

We thought it was the insecticide type but it was the constabulary. Chief-of-police JOHN NELSON, led his boys in blue. JOE KUDLESS, RAY RITTER, BILL VAUGHN, and TOM BERGEN, tried to get in, but doorman TOM STANLEY wouldn't let them pass without ties and coats. We all ducked out the back door.

Our next stop was the Glob Theatre where Romeo and Juliet was being given. Cast as Romeo was CHARLES DiDOMENICO, and as Juliet DIANE BIZUB. As the good hearted Friar Laurence was the jolly, rotund WAYNE SANNER. JIM MASON was seen as Mercutio.

Bard

Acting as the Bard of Avon and directing the play was PETE SMITH. A New Jersey farm lad, TOM GURCHICK, was passing out nematode-infested tomatoes for either throwing or eating, depending on your taste.

Skulking in the orchestra pit was the most famous drama critic of all ages, PAUL NORTON, representing the New York Times. When we asked him what he thought of the play, he told us that the actors were all right but the playwright must have been some sort of a nut.

A Sneak

We noticed JOHN CAMIOLO trying to sneak backstage in order to observe the working of the movable scenery. PETE MOCCO saved the lad from being crushed by the falling scenery and tenderly ejected him from the stage door.

During the intermission we chanced upon the editor of a local magazine, BARRY THORNTON. Barry seemed distraught because he had been unable to locate his magazine's office for the past three years.

GERALD TRIPPITELLI, noted columnist reported that he saw the famous actor, John Wilkes Booth, leave suddenly murmuring that he was in the wrong place. It was conjected that Mr. Booth was looking for a pistol range since he was armed.

As we left the theatre we heard a "PSSSST!" from the shadows. Who was it but ED COFFEY trying to sign up recruits for his extra-legal reform movement. We signed our membership cards in blood and moved on.

Our hansom cab was driven by JOHN BLANGIARDO who had the most articulate horse in town. He took infinite pains in instructing him in Blungian rhetoric. Any of John's 17 buxom secretaries will verify the fact.

JOHN CAHALIN was on his way to the limbo party, so we joined him. As we entered the door, somebody asked who is that on the stage with the plaid lined coat and paisley scarf leading the band? That's JAN DYROFF, can't you tell by the orange and purple tie?

There was a huge bonfire going out on the sand and people were burning books enough to delight Hawthorne. Throwing their magnificent libraries into the conflagration were JOE TRIARSI, PETE TRIOLO, and DON CROUTHAMEL.

As we looked about we noticed NORM PIESCHALSKI standing at the fire roasting a Polish sausage, and by his side toasting marshmallows were JIM BUCKLEY, BILL CHARLTON, and JACK DEGNAN. We were nearly bowled over by two rough-looking characters wrestling for muffins, DOUG DRYBERG and JOE SAVITSCUS.

Just then we were taken by the arm by BRUCE HAYES who was eager to take us over to the outside bar. On the way we were passed by GEORGE NICOLAUS who was square-dancing to the delicate strains of JOE TYSOWSKI's violin.

As we got to the bar, there was this chap standing there in a bowler. It was MARTY MACKOWSKI, and he was trying to tell us that a concert would be better for us than a Limbo party.

We thanked him kindly and placed our foot on the brass rail. We were just in time to catch PETE MURPHY tapping a keg while BILL HART went out back to run off a new supply of gin.

As we stood there sampling the punch, JERRY CAMPAGNA came running through the bar being chased by a large gaggle of girls in bikinis. We were interrupted from our contemplation on why Jerry was fleeing when TERRY McSTRAVICK came up with a suitcase and tried to sell us some Fuller brushes.

We dashed away from him and moved over to watch a group building a pyramid on the sand. The latter day Egyptians were JOHN VAMOS, ED FLORAK, MIKE STEFFORA, MIKE DONAHUE and BARRY FITZGERALD.

They appeared to be an unstable group of builders, and as their eleventh pyramid collapsed for the last time (they get two tries per pyramid) we went off looking for their Cleopatra.

Instead of the Nile we found a large fight. TONY CARBONE was kicking sand in DON CANNAVA's face, and Don had called out his Marine commando unit to even up the fray.

As the fighting became widespread we retired to our grass hut to enjoy the tropical night. We were admiring the cool blue sky and the brilliant stars of the southern cross and had nearly gotten off to sleep when we noticed an odd orange glow.

It seemed to be coming from the center of the island. It took almost no time to realize that the island was volcanic and was erupting — the lava burning the huts at the edge of the village helped in drawing this conclusion.

As the island exploded and once more I was flying through the air I thought to myself, "This is where I came in!"

Class' Athletes Show Prowess

GRADUATION TOOK a heavy toll in the football circles of Villanova this past season. The brunt of the blow was felt in certain spots along the line but more specifically in the backfield. To meet the challenge of next season, the Wildcats must rely on a number of semi-seasoned veterans. These gridiron warriors include a variety of Juniors.

The most vital question that must be answered lies in the quarterback position. The burden of this challenge falls on the shoulders of Bill Sherlock, the defensive specialist of the past year. The extent of his offensive experience creates a dilemma that must be eradicated. This six-foot one-inch 185 pounder also handled the punting chores averaging 43.2 yards a kick.

Jack Boyle, Bob Dunn and Elmer John Eastley lead in the race for the halfback slots that were nearly stripped bare. Jack, a native Philadelphian, proved to be the most consistent performer of this trio averaging 3.3 yards per carry. He has gained the most game experience of the three and thus will serve as the mainstay at this wing position.

Bob played sporadically this past season. His most outstanding performance occured in the Buffalo encounter. Here he scored on a 40 yard jaunt and averaged over nine yards a carry.

The Gettysburg flash, better know as Elmer, has been hampered by injuries throughout his stay on the Main Line. However he showed some promise with long runs in the West Chester and Buffalo games. Charlie Noona and Joe Cawley have been included in the revamping plans of next year.

The workhorse of the backfield must literally be a battering ram. Junior fullbacks, Ralph Russo and Lou Chiarolanza, meet these prerequisites even though both remain untested.

Ralph sat out all of last season with serious knee damage. He did see limited action as a Sophomore and handled the kick-off duties in the Sun Bowl. Lou was switched to fullback after playing quarterback for two years. Both must fullfill the demands of next season to insure more victories for head coach Alex Bell.

The situation on the forward wall is more stable. Leading the end position is the two year veteran, Jack Clifford. This past season, "Cliff" finished second in pass receptions with 183 yards and three touchdowns. No one will ever forget his vital fourth down grab in the Liberty Bowl.

John Dinan was a pleasant surprise who blossomed late in the season particularly at Rutgers. He individually led a second period scoring drive with four consecutive receptions. Ted Kompa, a six footer from New Jersey, can be counted on for service in the flat next year.

The tackle slot became the most reliable position of the line this past season. One of the stalwarts leading this resurgence was Buddy Nask who originally played guard during his Sophomore year. After recovering from a knee operation last spring, he developed into one of the pleasant surprises in the latter half of the schedule.

Frank Culotta and Norm Pieschalski are two of the "smaller" boys of the squad at 240 and 230 respectively. Frank, a hard worker, typified the spirit of last year's squad. For this attribute, he was voted the "Unsung Hero" award by the coaching staff.

Performers at the guard and linebacking spots are led by Rich Bertozzi, the only other two year veteran. This mastermind, a Dean's List student majoring in Chemistry, called defensive signals for the Blue unit. Hampered by a recurrent ankle injury most of the season, he returned to play outstandingly in the Rutgers and Oregon State games.

Rick Corona started off with a respectable showing in the initial ball game. However a knee injury at Buffalo forced him to spot performance for the rest of the season.

The key point of the line belongs to the centers, and Buddy McCurran capably meets the requirements for this vital post. After playing his first two years at tackle, he was switched to center to meet the demand that arose last year.

AND THEN there's the Rugby boys. Our Rugby team at Villanova is bolstered by a rugged pack of Juniors who find release by mixing it up in this fast growing English sport. The "Big Fellows" who play the line positions are those ferocious ruffians Don Cannava, Pete Triolo, Jim Buckley, John Cameolo, Hal Canty and, of course, Jack "The Bear" Krug.

The Junior Class has also wrought a bruising set of backfield Ruggers, who frighten opponents under the names of Tom James, Walt Schaerer, Bob Shayer and Ed Wilkinson.

IN THE growing sport of lacrosse, key contributions have come from Junior stickmen. With the captain being injured, Dave Dunn a three year vet, has taken over the team leadership. Dave is the key man on the attack. Teaming with him is John McFadden, who hails from the heart of lacrosseland, Baltimore.

Behind them in the midfield are John McGranaghan and Art Grant. Walt Morris makes up two-thirds of the team's hefty defense. He tips the scales at 215 pounds.

MR. EVERYTHING to the 1962-63 edition of the Wildcat basketball squad was Wally Jones. He led the team in scoring with a 16.7 average. This combined with his great team leadership and defensive prowess led to his selection on the All-Big Five team for the second straight time.

Wally carried the team to a championship in the Quaker City tournament his sophomore year for which he was selected Most Valuable Player. In the recent N.I.T. his all-round brilliance again led to an all-star berth. He's truly an All-American.

The big difference in two of Villanova's upset victories was Butch Winterbottom. In both the Memphis State and Wichita triumphs, Butch came off the bench to pump in key baskets. Other spot performers were Joe McGill and Gerry Stefanic.

McGill, hampered by an ankle injury most of the season, expects to be back in the thick of things come next season. Stefanic at 6-5 could be a big help next season in forecourt hit hard by graduation.

FOR THREE years the big story in swimming at Villanova has been Dick McDonough. The current team captain recently led the 'Cats to a 7th place finish in the N.C.A.A. championships with a record-breaking 3:14.3 in the 200 yard butterfly. An All-American he is currently in Brazil competing in the Pan American games. His goal is a gold medal in the 1964 Olympics.

Number two man on the team has to be Jack Goeghegan. Known for his versatility and consistency, he was a member of the freestyle relay team which took first place honors in the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. and third place honors in the N.C.A.A.

Dan Hurley in the back stroke and Frank Keim in the breast stroke as consistant point getters for the 'Cats in a dual meet. They along with diver Dick Feron were essential contributors to the Wildcats record.

Distance free-stylers Bill Gallagher and Phil Maher, along with breaststroker John Leidy are all potential point scorers, Gallagher being the 'Cats most improved swimmer this season.

THE VILLANOVA bowling team sports a junior captain and a couple other top grade bowlers. The captain, Chuck Williams, consistently scores above 190. He rolled 1020 for five games in the Eastern Invitational Tournament for a 204 average.

Along with Williams are Dennis Henderson, who sports a 190 average and 230 pound Andy Razzoie, two consistent scorers. Andy, in particular, was a standout in late season matches.

Other juniors are George Youches, Howard Riley and Tom Redmond, all of whom have contributed to the success enjoyed by the team this year.

CAPTAIN ART BLADES led the rifle team to a 8-4 record and a second place finish in the N.R.A. Sectionals. Junior Blades sported the highest average of the squad, 283 out of a possible 300. He in turn was supported by George Walko and Lou Stengle. Stengle, in addition to firing on the varsity team, served as captain of the NROTC rifle team.

THIS YEAR'S Ice Hockey team, composed mostly of freshman and sophomores, lacked experience and struggled through a dismal season. Three Juniors, however, Hal Canty, Ken Kilmartin, and Frank Driscoll, helped compensate for this lack of experience through their fine efforts. Canty, the team's captain and unofficial coach, proved quite versatile playing at the forward, center, and defense positions.

Kilmartin, a center, and defenseman Driscoll will return as starters next winter with high hopes for an improved season.

AL ADAMS is one of Villanova's most dependable half milers when he is healthy. Al, a native of Jersey City, missed the 1963 indoor season when he was striken with mononucleosis, but he will be an important part of any two-mile relay team the Wildcats field this spring.

Probably the most versatile runner on this year's Wildcat track team is John Angevine from Glen Ridge, New Jersey. John has been part of winning Villanova efforts in two and four mile relays while also being a threat in the two mile and cross country in the fall.

Within three years Rolando Cruz has done the impossible; he has replaced Don Bragg as the number one pole vaulter in Villanova track and field history. Coming to Villanova from Puerto Rico by way of Mercersburg Academy, Rolando has improved more than a foot over the 14' 11" which he cleared to finish fourth in the 1960 Olympics in Rome. Highlights of his career at V.U. so far include three IC4A championships, two 16 foot vaults, and a victory over Bragg in the 1961 Penn Relays.

George Reynolds is a victim of poor timing. For the past two years this javelin thrower from nearby Interboro High School has labored in the huge shadow of Doug Kerr, IC4A champion and Villanova record-holder. A consistent 200 foot thrower when he is healthy, Reynolds is second only to Kerr in Villanova annals.

Harry Smeck, a tremendous high school miler at St. James of Chester, has yet to realize his potential here at Villanova. Harry has run on shuttle hurdle relays while also showing some promise in the steeplechase.

While not achieving any spectacular collegiate successes Jim Smyth is probably one of the hardest working and most dedicated long distance runners in the Philadelphia area. Jim, a Monsignor Bonnor alumnus, is a consistent contender in AAU and club sponsored races from three to ten miles.

Villanova knew it was getting a good runner when Vic Zwolak entered the schoool in 1960, and he has proven the point. Zwolak, a truly dedicated athlete who previously ran for Salesianum and the U.S. Marines, achieved his greatest success when he won the IC4A cross-country championship last fall.

MIKE KULZER, now acting secretary of the Sailing Club is an experienced skipper who sails a red Comet for Ocean City Yacht Clrb.

Gil Sheehan is the newest apprentice to the club and is learning the technique of sailing.

Bob Stevenson cruises in his father's Yawl and combines with Marv Fox for the Dixie Conference Lightning Championship. He hails from Baltimore Yacht Club.

Jim Friel another Maryland sailor takes the helm of a Penguin and sails out of Corsica Yacht Club.

Dennis Lucy sails a Comet on the Metedeconk River and Barneget Bay in New Jersey.

Dave Branning is a former South Jersey Moth Champion, and he hails from the Avalon Yacht Club. Dave hopes to sail a Comet this summer.

Dan Hurley, Commodore, was a member of the team that was runnerup in the 1962 North American Men's Championship. He hails from Mantoloking Yacht Club and races an Olympic Finn.

WILDCAT DIAMOND hopes this season rest mainly on the shoulders of the pitching staff. Returning from the successful 1962 squad are junior hurlers Bill Smith and Don Albino. Smith, the only one in the class of '64 to letter last year, was the starting and winning pitcher in this year's opening contest.

With his sidearm delivery, Bill hopes to keep hitters off balance enough to become top Cat on the mound this year.

Albino, a left-hander, picked up some experience as a sophomore and, with the improvement of his blazing fast ball, looks to improve on his 0-1 soph record.

Reserve outfielders for the 'Cats are Frank Sheerin and Dick Seethaler. Sheerin saw limited duty last season hitting 3.33 but at present he is being plagued with a sore arm. Seethaler on the other hand, is new to the team this year, but he should make his presence felt before the season ends.

JUNIORS SEEK REVENGE

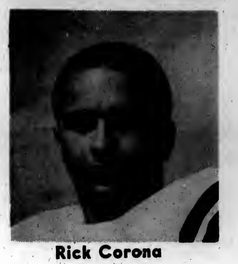
MUFF DAY 1960

Juniors! at last the time has come for us to revenge our freshmen defeat. We cannot forget Muff Day 1960 when we led throughout the afternoon in many events only to be edged out in the end by our present seniors.



Junior-Senior Muff Day will be held in conjunction with Junior Week and is scheduled for Wednesday, April 24. The events are under the direction of two distinguished athletes of the Junior Class, Frank Sherin and Dick McDonough. Both men have been working diligently on the events.

Fists will fly and bodies meet during the traditional push ball contest. This event has proven to be one of the most popular. A baseball hitting and throwing contest, horse-shoe and foul shooting are slated. A water polo match will also be held in the University pool.

In the stadium a mile relay will be held for all athletes over 210 pounds. The afternoon would not be complete without feminine representation. Our girl's team will challenge the senior girls in a basketball game which should prove to be a deciding factor in the day's activities.

All games will be played according to intramural rules and will be refereed by the intramural staff.

Brecht's Play Debuts At Graduate Theatre In German Vignettes

The Private Life of the Master Race, written by Bertolt Brecht, will open this Friday, April 26, at 8:30 p.m., in the Villanova Playbox.

This play, directed by Richard A. Duprey of the Graduate Theatre Department, is Eric Bentley's adaptation of Brecht's play which was originally entitled Fear and Misery of the Third Reich.

As the title indicates, it is a story, or, more properly, a group of stories of Germany during World War II. The stories, about 15 in number, are short, satirical vignettes of life under Nazism.

Mr. Richard Duprey, chairman of the Theatre Department, has announced that the production will run as scheduled despite the loss of two of the actresses. Francis Krueger and Mary Moesel were injured Monday night in an automobile accident.

Brecht is considered one of the top playwrights of this century. Among his previous works are Three Penny Opera and Mother Courage and Her Children, which is currently on Broadway, and Good Woman of Setzwan.

Play Dates

Production dates are April 26-28, at 8:30 p.m., May 3-5, and 10-11, at 8:30 p.m. The April 27 production is already sold out.

The tickets may be purchased at the door or at the Graduate Theatre office in the Classroom Annex Building.

ICG's Convention Appoints Burke First Parliamentarian

by Mike Magro

The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government ended on a joyful note for the delegation from the Villanova chapter.

Tom Burke of Villanova was appointed to the position of First Parliamentarian, which is second only to the Chairman. Originally, Burke had been the Southeast region's candidate for the Chairmanship, but was defeated in the state-wide elections by Pete Lanshanski of Mansfield State.

Reverend John A. Klekotka, President of Villanova University, presents the Mendel Medal for "Distinguished Service in the Advancement of Science" to Major Robert M. White, pilot of the X-15 Rocket Research plane. Major White became the 21st recipient of the Mendel Medal during a dinner at the Warwick Hotel on Monday evening (April 22nd). Major White established the world altitude record for winged aircraft during a historic flight in the research craft last July.

Marion Burns of Immaculata College, who was strongly supported by the Villanova delegation, was elected Secretary.

The three-day affair began on Thursday, April 18, when the delegates from over ninety colleges and universities in Pennsylvania registered in the Penn Harris hotel in Harrisburg. Throughout the day there were meetings on the various committees which would control the conference.

Governor William Scranton of Pennsylvania was on hand at the first meeting of the assembly in an education forum to address the delegations. The resolution before the Conference was the adoption of a Model State Constitution. Governor Scranton, a known advocate of this state's need of constitutional revision, expressed his desires that the State Legislature do what the Conference would try to solve within the next few days.

Mrs. Genevieve Blatt, Executive Director of the ICG, also addressed the assembly of schools. The principle speaker of the night was James Graves.

Science Round Table To Hold Conference; Rossini To Speak

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Catholic Round Table of Science will take place at Villanova University on Saturday, May 4.

Over two hundred professors of science and mathematics from over twenty-five Catholic colleges and universities in the state will participate in the meeting.

The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova, will welcome the delegates at 9:45 a.m. in the Chemistry Lecture Hall, Mendel Hall.

The general chairman, Dr. Bernard J. Downey of the Villanova Chemistry Department, has announced that the keynote speaker will be Dr. Frederick Rossini, internationally known chemist and Dean of the School of Science, University of Notre Dame.

His topic will be "Education for Science in the World Today." Dr. Rossini will speak in the Chemistry Lecture Hall at 10 a.m. Dr. Dominic M. Roberti of Villanova University is the Secretary-Treasurer.

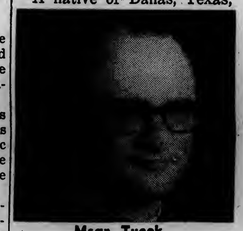
Holy Mass will be offered up by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, Provincial of the Order of St. Augustine. Weather permitting, Mass will be celebrated at the Grotto at 11:30 a.m. Otherwise it will be held in St. Mary's Hall Chapel.

Following the luncheon, separate meetings will be held for the various scientific disciplines; namely: biology, chemistry, physics, and mathematics. There will be a tour of the campus at 3:30 p.m., and a closing social hour at 4:15.

The sections and individual chairmen are: Biology, Dr. John Penny, LaSalle College; Chemistry, Mother Mary Coleman, SHCJ, Rosemont College; Physics-Mathematics, Dr. Felix Beiduk, Villanova University.

Professor Emil Amelotti, Chairman of the Mathematics Department, will speak on "Modern Trends in the Applications of Mathematics," to be given on May 4.

St. Augustine Award Given To Monsignor James I. Tucek



Monsignor James I. Tucek, who served as Press Director for English Language Countries during the first session of the Ecumenical Council in Rome, has been named the winner of Villanova University's St. Augustine Award for 1963.

Announcement of his selection as this year's winner of the journalism award was made by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, Villanova's President.

Presentation will be made during a dinner at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel on Saturday evening, May 4. Members of the staffs of the University's weekly paper, The Villanovan, and radio station WWVU are also traditionally honored at the function.

Monsignor Tucek's role in translating the meaning and complex activities of the historic conclave into fascinating, colorful, and informative journalism helped make Vatican II one of the top news stories of the year.

A native of Dallas, Texas,

Msgr. Tucek

the 40-year old prelate attended San Antonio Seminary and was ordained in 1947. He later studied journalism at Northwestern and Fordham. He worked for the Fort Worth Star Telegram and several Catholic papers.

In 1955 he joined the Rome bureau of the NCWC, world wide Catholic News Agency. He later became bureau chief. During his Rome assignment Monsignor Tucek covered the last illness of Pope Pius XII and the election and coronation of Pope John XXIII.

In his coverage of the Ecumenical Council, Monsignor Tucek helped the Vatican take a major step in the field of public relations.

In addition, the Monsignor kept in continuous touch with Council officials and was a constant source of information for reporters.

Villanova's St. Augustine Award is named for St. Augustine, one of history's great writers and the patron saint of printers.

JUNIOR CONCERT TICKETS ARE SOLD OUT!

Singers And Glee Club Tour Pittsburgh And Points West

By John Sperger of the VU Singers

On Wednesday, May 1, at approximately 10:30 a.m., the Villanova Singers will leave on their two hundred mile bus trip to Chicago. This will be the first Mid-West tour taken by the Singers and members of the Glee Club.

Their first stop will be Chatham College, Pittsburgh, where they will hold a joint concert under the direction of Mr. Lorenzo Malfatti. Chatham is a non-sectarian college with an enrollment of six hundred young women.

On May 2, the boys will find themselves entertaining five hundred girls at Notre Dame College, Cleveland, Ohio. After the concert and an overnight rest, they will leave for Chicago.

Friday is a free day, but a guest set will be performed by the Spires at the Gate of Horn, a folk night club in Chicago, followed by a broadcast on WBBM Radio and a possible television appearance on Sunday. On Saturday the men will be the guests of the twelve hundred co-eds at Saint Xavier's College.

Before an expected crowd of fifteen hundred, the Singers will give a joint concert with their glee club, which is under the direction of Austin Garrels.

Sunday evening, the Singers will perform with the band of St. Rita's, a high school in the Chicago area.

On Monday the tour will be completed with a concert at Mendel High School, after which the group will return home.

Jack Blake, tour manager for the Villanova Singers, is responsible for making the tour possible.

who pointed out in greater detail the problem of this state with its outmoded constitution and how it could be corrected in the light of previous attempts made by other states.

Following the forum there was a dance in the Grand Ballroom of the Penn Harris Hotel for the benefit of all the delegates

The following day there were meetings of all the committees in charge of the various aspects and articles in a new state constitution. A delegate from Villanova in each of these committees presented and defended the Villanova proposal for a particular revision.

Elections

The polls opened for the election of the Secretary and the Chairman from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Penn Harris Hotel. At 8 p.m. there was a General Session of the Model State Constitutional Convention, in which the bills proposed by each of the committees were reviewed the combined assembly then and the following day till all nine committees had presented their articles before the assembly.

Friedman To Deliver Medical Care Lecture To Conservative Club

The Villanova Conservative Club has announced that Dr. Paul S. Friedman will deliver a lecture on Wednesday, May 1, in room 110 C&F at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Friedman, who is Consulting Radiologist of the Valley Forge Army Hospital, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, will speak on "Medical Care for the Aged." The lecture is open to all students and a question and answer period will follow.

A past president of the Philadelphia County Medical Society, Dr. Friedman received his A.B from Columbia University in 1933, and his M. D. from New York University College of Medicine in 1937.

Societies to which Dr. Friedman belongs include the American Roentgen Ray Society, the American Medical Association, the American College of Radiology.

The Offices of the Postgraduate Study Advisor and the Foreign Student Advisor have been moved to quarters on the second floor east in Galberry Hall. (Adjacent to the football stadium.)

Christmas Jobs

The Placement Office has just been informed by the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board that all positions for Christmas jobs in the State Liquor Stores will be filled only from lists of eligibles, resulting from an examination.

The next examination for liquor store clerk will be held in August, 1963. There will be no other examination prior to the Christmas holidays.

Students must be citizens of the United States, legal residents of Pennsylvania for at least one year, and twenty-one years of age as of April 24.

Interested students should leave names and addresses with the Placement Office in the basement of Sheehan Hall.

Literary Symposium Slated To Discuss Brave New World, 84

"Symposium: Brave New World vs.1984" will be presented by the Villanova Literary Society tomorrow, Thursday, April 25, at 4:30 p.m. in 110 C & F.

Various aspects of these renowned British utopian novels — the former by Aldous Huxley, the latter by George Orwell — will be discussed by the four participating members of the panel.

The speakers and the moderator of the symposium, Society president Frank Quattrone, will discuss such topics as the concept of love and freedom in these utopian societies, their relation to the contemporary world, and other relevant points of literary and philosophical interest.

The floor will be open to questions following the talks and the concluding comments by Dr. Neil Brennan of the Villanova English Department.

All members of the faculty and studentry are invited to attend.

Admissions Office Announces New Record Enrollment In '64

The Admissions Office has announced that it is running ahead of last year on acceptances and deposits. Last September 1250 students comprised the Freshman Class.

The University has already received close to 4000 applications. The Admissions Office expects to handle 2500 interviews and has already visited about 200 high schools. It has sent out film strips and records to 500 selected high schools.

These film strips were sent to schools from which the University gets students regularly and also to large high schools in key cities throughout the country. The distribution of these films was balanced geographically across the country.

The United States is now in the last year of the war babies and a large increase in applicants is seen for the fall term of September, 1964.

War Babies

Admission qualifications can be expected to become more rigid as the influx of the post war babies arrive on the college scene. Richard F. Harshberger, Assistant to the Director of Admissions, stated that Villanova is trying to skim the cream of the crop in its selection of students.

The University is certain of getting ten National Merit Scholarship finalists for its Freshman Class of this September. This is a large number to attract to any one school in a year.

Upper Tenth

Most of the scholarships the University has granted for next semester were awarded to boys in the upper tenth of their class and with college board scores of over 1400 in the morning tests.

Mr. Harshberger heaped special praise on the alumni members who aid his work.

Williams And Carlisle Interviews Featured In Spring Term 'Lynx'

Frank Murphy, 1962-63 editor-in-chief of the Lynx, has announced that the spring edition of the campus literary magazine will be on sale during first week in May.

The edition will contain ten short stories, many poems, and two interviews, one with Olga Carlisle, author of Voices In the Snow, a novel of Russian writers, and the other with Emlyn Williams, the actor who plays "God" in Robert Bolt's play, A Man for All Seasons.

Murphy commented, "This should be one of our most interesting issues. With each edition the Lynx improves in quality, striving to bring literary excellence to the Villanova campus."

Pre-registration for juniors (Class of 1964) will take place during the week of April 29.

The Sophomore Class will pre-register during the week of May 6, and the freshmen during the week of May 13.

Sophomore Class Plan College Tour, Picnic For Spring Outing

Tickets have been on sale in the Pie Shoppe for over a week for the Sophomore Class Charity Spring Project, scheduled for this Saturday, April 27.

Under the direction of Bob Spellmeyer and John Cambria, several children from St. Mary's Home in Ambler and St. John's Asylum in Philadelphia will be the guests of members of the Class of 1965 and their dates.

The events, to be held on the Villanova campus, will include a demonstration of gunnery by the NROTC midshipmen. Also scheduled are a tour of the campus, a show in the Villanova Planetarium, movies, a picnic, and various athletic events.

The picnic will be held on Sullivan Field. Later in the afternoon, the group will move to the Vasey Hall Auditorium for movies and a magic show.

The day will close with Benediction celebrated by the Rev. Thomas C. Kenny, OSA, class moderator.

Resident Room Reservations Currently Held In SC Office

Resident student room reservations will be conducted by the Student Council in cooperation with the Office of Dean of Men.

Number drawings are currently being held in the Student Council Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Members of the class of '64 drew their numbers on Tuesday, April 23. Those in the class of '65 are drawing their today and students of the class of '66 will draw their numbers on Thursday, April 25.

Numbers will be called for in succession and presented in the Dean of Men's Office at 221 Tolentine for room reservations in this order: April 30 the class of '64, May 1 the class of '65 and on Thursday, May 2 the class of '66.

Students who wish to retain their rooms must claim them before 10:15 a.m. on the day assigned their class.

Permission to reside off campus must be acquired from Father McLaughlin.

THERE WILL BE NO VILLANOVAN NEXT WEEK. DEADLINE FOR MAY 8 ISSUE IS MAY 1.

Turf And Tinsel, To Produce Annual Play 'Jessica James'

The twenty-third annual Turf and Tinsel club production, Jessica James, will be presented in the Field House on May 2-5.

A cast of approximately fifty characters and dancers, twenty-five percent larger than last year's, will perform. Barry Thornton will star in the leading role of Jessica.

Former T 'n' T stars Joe Ruggiero, Al LaMastra, and Ed Jaworowski will perform, and football players Bob Merenda, Mike DeLone, Jim Thomas, and Bill Armstrong will be featured in a ballet.

The setting for the show is the hillbilly section of the Appalachians. Jessica, the main character, is attending a finishing school as the comedy opens.

Jessica's father was a bank robber and was killed during a holdup. He was later allowed to return to earth as a ghost to right himself by locating the money stolen by his gang and returning it to its rightful owners.

Pursuit Helped

Assisting him in his pursuit is a Pinkerton man whom Jessica met at school. A train robbery is included in the adventures.

This year's show is directed by Betty Green, who has directed the past five comedies. Music was composed by Bob Whelan, Secretary to the Athletic Director.

Officers Advertise

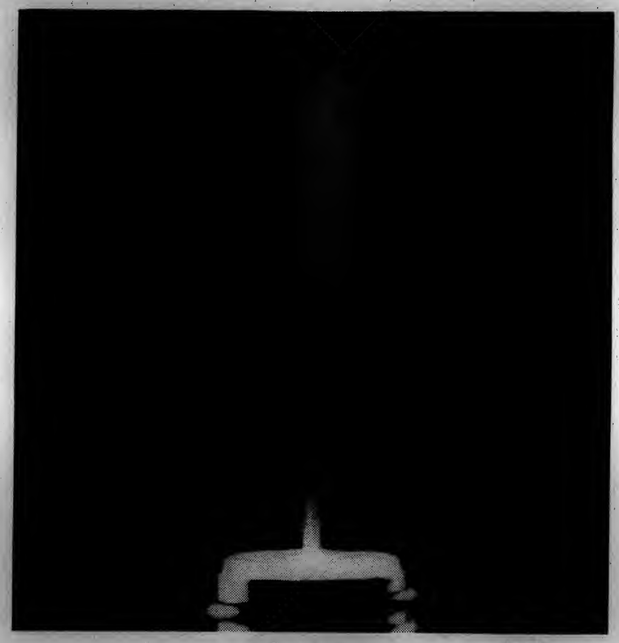
Officers of the Turf and Tinsel club urge Villanovans to patronize and advertise the traditional affair even more this year than they have done in the past, since increased ticket sales are needed to offset financial difficulties recently encountered.

Tickets are presently on sale in the Pie Shoppe, and all dormitory rooms will be canvassed by ticket salesmen. Members of the cast will also carry a supply of tickets.

Paraplegics, K of C Sponsoring Program To Install Seat Belts

The Pennsylvania Paraplegic Association and Bishop Corrigan Council of the Knights of Columbus, in conjunction with the Student Council of Villanova University, will sponsor a safety belt program in the University parking lot on April 25-27, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

This non-profit group will provide on the spot installation of the highest quality seat belts. They are the floor bracket type, 100 percent nylon, 6,000 lb. tested, and government approved material.



The price for one set of belts is six dollars. They may be installed in any combination desired, two sets in front, two sets in back, or one set in front and two sets in the back, etc.

A choice of plain buckle or St. Christopher type at $1.00 extra is available; in addition, a variety of colors is offered to match the decor of any car. The colors are red, blue, green, yellow, white, black, or brown.

In order to take advantage of this offer all payments must be made by the twenty-fourth of April. Checks must be made payable to the Pennsylvania Paraplegic Association.

Each year thousands of Americans lose their lives unnecessarily because of automobile accidents. It is a proven fact that many of these fatalities would have been prevented if safety belts had been installed.

Neal Stoneback and James O'Connor, Co-Chairmen of the Student Activities Committee stated, "It is our earnest hope that each and every person will recognize the necessity of this safety measure."

Poor Decisions

A week ago we had another spectacle of needless ruthlessness. This case involved the indefinite suspension of two National football League players, Paul Hornung and Alex Karras.

It is true that these men have violated their contracts and are subject to stern discipline from that standpoint. But must the discipline be so stern as to destroy the man for the remainer of his life.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle takes upon himself a grave moral responsibility in using his authority to ruin these men. Neither player can ever attain any sort of affluence during the rest of his life. For each, this lone incident will be an enormous impairment for getting a future job (even if one is available to him), let alone the means to adequately support his family.

Perhaps in the future the men who make these decisions will consider the reality of the situations. In a league as tough as the NFL, no one man, regardless of whoever he might be, would ever be so important that his performance could effect the outcome of the game.

None of these men have been accused of throwing a game or even shaving points. Offenses such as this might possibly warrant "indefinite supension" but the mere betting on ball games might well be treated with more moderation.

The fines slapped on five other Detroit players are a much better way of enforcing authority and contracts. So too, a stiff fine on the persons of Hornung and Karras would be a far better remedy than complete ruination and character defamation.

Campus Politics

During the past year, the activities of several campus organization have attracted much favorable comment. Much of this is well deserved. These clubs have attempted to adesuately express the political sentiments of the student body.

Public congratulations are due the Villanova Political Union and its moderator Mr. John Logue. If every campus moderator could be half as interested and active as this one man, much of the student apathy and inactivity would be non-existent.

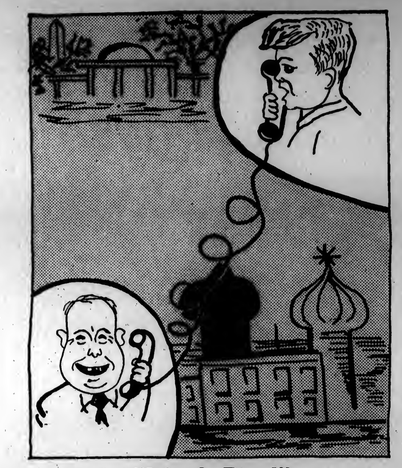
For it was he who originally fashioned the Union, a society based on those of Oxford, Harvard, and Yale. He alone saw the need for such an organization and put his every effort into realizing his intentions.

Another organization worthy of note is the Conservative Club. During the past year, its activities in bringing to the Villanova campus leading nationally-known speakers deserve commendation.

The Intercollegiate Conference on Goverment, although far from new on the Main Line, has continued its excellent work in attempting to educate its members in dramatizing the activities of government in a non-partisan manner. At this time, the club has just completed its 29th annual Harrisburg Convention and appointed a Villanovan, Tom Burke, First Parliamentarian.

There remain only two questions. Why is there no activity on the part of liberals on campus? And when will the Villanova campus condescend to allow the formation of Young Democratic and Republican Clubs, as do nearly every other major university in the country?

The solution to this interrogation is of vital interest to Villanova. It is also our hope that they will be soon remedied.



Revision And Public

With experience comes knowledge; and in regard to state constitutions, no experience could have been more rewarding than the recent I. C. G. convention in Harrisburg.

It has become common knowledge that state constitutions tend to deteriorate and become out-moded over the years. But the main problem rests not in the revision but in acquainting the public with articles which need revision.

Speaking at the convention, Governor Scranton stressed the need for revision and cited the case of a law outlawing dueling.

It should be the design of lawmakers to make the general public aware of all necessary revisions, and not only select conventions.

"It's A Boy!"

Mr. K Going?

by Ed Farrell

It is rumored that the big "K" is finally about to retire, probably within two years.

Whether credence an be put in these rumos is a matter subject to much debate. A London newspaper quoted "reliable" Communist sources for its information. In any event, the 69 year old spiritual, political, moral, economic and social leaders of the Communist block is obviously getting tired.

It is also very probable that he may be subject to internal pressure from his own underlings in the Keemlin to step down.

Kruschev's probable successor, Frol Kozlov. His succession to power hinges of conrse on several fartors, whether or not he has been invited topermanently inspectt salt mines or power stations by that time, and whether or not Krdsrhev himself will be in a position to dictate his shccessor when the time comes.

Regardless of when the change of power comes in the Soviet Union, or who takes over the reins, there almost definitely will be a change in relations between the Soviet Union and nearly every one that it has relations with.

For Khruschev definitely has had and still has the power to make his will known and followed throughtout the Soviet bloc and in many a neutralist nation as well.

True he has had his troubles with the likes of Mao Tse-Sung but even in that ideological dispute the Soviet Union still has the upper edge.

The projected change of power could have serious repercussions if Kozlov (or whever steps in) decides to take dratic action to force the Soviet Union's policies upon the Western world or its rebellious Chinese neihbors. History is waiting for the result of the first major change of power in the Soviet Union since Stalin died. Let us hope that history lnds this change to be one for the better.

LEO GOODREAU

PRICE SPIRAL

by Ken Croney

What effect will the recent steel price increases have on the steel industry and the nation's economy? Most economists are currently concerned with this vital question. But most of them are overemphasizing the effect of these selected price increases.

The primary motive of the steel industry was to increase profits so that it could hold its own with the competitive market. This intensified competition has come from foreign steel producers, from plastics and other metal industries, especially aluminum. The increased profits can be used to offset rising labor costs and to provide for growth and development.

But actually none of these objectives are to be achieved by a small selective price increase. They will only give a price edge to competing industries. Due to these increases, labor will only ask for more wage increases when the old contract expires in June.

They will aid development, but how can the steel industry grow when the demand for steel is decreasing? In other words, the only purpose that their increases can serve is to gain a little profit from the stockpiling of steel currently in process due to the possibility of a steel strike in the near future.

Officials are worried about inflation due to price increases but actually in its present status the steel industry cannot determine the nation's economy. Besides this fact, with a recession being predicted, why worry about inflation? Also these price increases are not across the board and do not amount to more than three per cent of present steel costs.

What should steel manufacturers do? They should realize that the United States steel industry has seen its peak in production and profits. The market simply does not rely as much on steel as it has in past decades. They adequately supply the steel market now and are operating at only about 60 per cent efficiency. The solution is therefore to produce less with greater efficiency in production and labor costs.

Population Control

by Joe McCarthy

Last Monday saw the publication of an intriguing editorial in the New York Times. Its topic was indeed controversial and of importance to Catholic College students. The column was titled "Population Control."

It stated that the need for effective population control will soon be an overwhelming problem for the governments of the world. By the year 2000 the global population is estimated to be about 6 billion.

And to accentuate the difficulties, the greatest increases will occur in the underdeveloped areas of the world, Asia, Africa and South America, where their is already a low level of subsistence.

Three examples of the changing world opinion and the pressing need for action come to focus immediately. The United States Government has switched from a hands-off policy to one that now offers information and other assistance to interested countries in combating the problem.

The Ford Foundation has also granted $2.8 million for a research program in family planning. The National Academy of Science last week urged voluntary family planning in one of its reports.

Of more interest to the Catholic student, however, is the report of Dr. John Rock of Harvard, a world-renowned authority on human fertility. His volume is entitled "The Time has Come: A Catholic Doctor's Proposal to End the Battle Over Birth Control."

Cardinal Cushing of Boston disagrees with Dr. Rock on the acceptability of oral contraception by the Church, but, nonetheless, commends the author for "having clearly demonstrated that the Catholic Church is not opposed to birth control as such" and for having "rightly criticized the excesses to which some Catholics have gone in this matter."

All of which brings about the hope that all Catholics and in particular Villanova students will consider the problem in an adult light.

FRED'S FORUM

By Fred Cogswell

Send your questions in care of FRED'S FORUM, Villanovan Office, Dougherty Hall. Fred will be answering your questions right here every week.

Dear Fred,

I have two dates to the Peter, Paul, and Mary concert. I can't make up my mind which one I should take. What do you suggest?

J. B.

Dear J. B.,

I don't have a date to the concert yet, which one would you like me to take?

Fred

Dear Fred,

I have a girl named Pat. Five days after I left for school, she wrote me that she was going with another fellow. What do you think I should do?

Pat B.

Dear Pat,

I think that you are the subject of a very dirty trick. Try again somewhere else.

Fred

Dear Fred,

I know a fellow who dated a girl that worked in the cafeteria. He stopped dating her and then she quit. He can't decide whether to call her up and straighten things out. What do you think he should do?

J. V.

Dear J. V.

If he thinks that it is worth straightening out, then he should do it. If he doesn't, then he shouldn't even be worried.

Fred

Dear Fred,

I am a freshman and my roommate is infatuated with a sophisticated sophomore nurse (there is one he tells me), but he is too shy to try and meet her. Should I encourage him and try to help him out or not?

Tony

I think that if anybody can find a Sophisticated soph nurse, he should advantage of it.

The Genius Of Ray Charles

by Mike DiBenedetto

The phrase "the genius of Ray Charles" has been and still is used to describe the internationally known fire-ball of talent, "Baby Ray Charles." But why is he so named?

The possible qualifications for his so called "Genius" are: blindness since the age of six; his self expression as a composer; his innate talent and ability as a musician to feel at ease playing piano, organ, and clarinet; and most important, the manner in which he can and does "feel" a song; that is, singing a song as it is, without adulteration.

Why blindness?

Usually when a person is left totally blind at an early age he can adjust to the outside world, but in many cases adjustment is the termination point. This is not so in the case of Mr. Charles.

He was born with God-given talents and has been continually perfecting those talents until the present day and his attainment as indisputable trend-setter in the world of modern popular music.

Is he respected for his composing?

His well known hit, originally recorded by him, "I Got A Woman," has been and still is performed and recorded by great artists such as Peggy Lee. The same thing happened with "Hallelujah, I Just Love Her So." The unchallenged best of all of his compositions is "What'd I Say." This song has won international acclaim and has become a legend in its own time and for times to come.

What can be said of his talents as a musician?

Mr. Charles has released approximately fifty or more record albums during his career as an entertainer, even without considering his singles, this is an impressive figure. What is even more impressive, is that with each recording he has shown a different facet of his inexhaustible talent.

The album "Genius Plus Soul Equals Jazz" exemplifies his ability at the organ. "The Great Ray Charles" demonstrates his artistry as a pianist and again as a composer. His performance at the Newport Jazz Festival, which was recorded as "Ray Charles at Newport," gives evidence to his dexterity as saxophonist.

His ability with a clarinet is testified to by his early associate, Quincy Jones, who is one of Mr. Charles's arrangers, and by his music teacher at a school in Florida where he took lessons until he was fifteen.

It is a known fact that at a recording session, Ray stopped to correct a wrong note which he had perceived among the 21-piece band backing him up; this is true sensitivety to music.

Finally, what about his so-called singing?

Ray Charles cannot sing in the strict sense of the word; that is he does not have a cultured voice. But, I doubt if anyone can treat a song with such tender, loving care, and express the meaning of the words so clearly and forcefully, whether they are ballad or upbeat, as does "Baby Ray."

He can perform a song like the soul-rocking "What'd I Say," and then a ballad such as "Don't Let The Sun Catch You Cryin," with equal prowess, feeling, and ease.

The "Genius" of Ray Charles can not be adequately expressed in words; it must be heard and can be heard in every note he utters or plays. Once it is heard, then there can be no denial of the fact that the great "Baby Ray," the "High Priest," is a "Genius."

BREAKFAST IN BED NEXT YEAR?

Or are you mature enough to help others—in a well—paying job? Enough social conscience to be willing to help care for neglected teen-age boys in a residential home-and-school in Connecticut—starting at $80 a week with room and board? Unselfish enough to take responsibility for the daily needs of others—about 125 miles from Boston, and 100 from New York. Have you leadership ability to help direct the extra-curricular activities of boys in a group living program? Are you athletic enough to play and coach team and other sports? Are you outgoing enough to like people and to enjoy working with them? Are you docile enough to accept direction and to work as part of a team of young men alongside a psychiatrist, psychologist, caseworker, and teachers? Are you mature and secure enough to have no need for excessive nightly social activity after hours? Are you a convinced Catholic, willing to live your faith and to share it with boys who lack religious formation? If you are such a man, you are the kind we urgently want for prefects for this coming September. Let us hear from you.

WORK IN EUROPE

MORE TRAVEL GRANTS

Apr. 19, 1963 — The American Student Information Service, the only authorized placement service for American students seeking summer jobs in Europe, has increased from 1500 to 2000 the number of travel grants it will award students applying for positions in Europe.

Job openings now available in Europe include positions at factories, resorts, hospitals, farms, summer camps and in offices. Applications are received until May 31.

Interested students may write (naming your school) to Dept. H. ASIS, 22 Ave. de la Liberté, Luxembourg City, Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, for a 20-page prospectus, a complete job selection and application. Send $1 for the prospectus, handling and an airmail reply.

The first 5000 inquiries receive a $1 premium for the new student travel book, Earn, Learn and Travel in Europe.

BOOK REVIEWS

In his book The Growth of American Foreign Policy, Richard W. Leopold, Professor of History at Northwestern University, subordinates the period of United States foreign policy prior to 1889 and concentrates on its development to date.

The major and primary aim of this book is to illustrate American foreign policy. In the interest of brevity and to allow room for more important events, Mr. Leopold has omitted details of treaties and agreements which have since been resolved, abrogated or superseded.

The book begins in the formative years of the United States, through its emergence as a world power, its involvement in two world wars and the present cold war. It traces American foreign policy through these years and the men who made it. In short, Mr. Leopold has given a political and diplomatic history of the United States from 1775 to the inauguration of President John F. Kennady.

Policy, Politics, Men

Policy, politics, and men shaped the diplomatic relations of the United States in the rest of the world. The roots of American imperialism during the 1880's, the Open Door policy in China, the First and Second World Wars with their ensuing treaties, the Korean conflict, and the cold war are some of the topics which Mr. Leopold has gone into in depth to ascertain their causes and how they influenced succeeding American foreign policy.

Mr. Leopold has presented a thoughtful, penetrating and critical analysis of the history of American foreign policy.

Jazz and the White American. By Neil Leonard, University of Chicago.

Neil Leonard's book is a book for scholars more than for jazz fans. He subjects the scope of jazz to the scrutiny of a researcher's microscope and like all living specimens in such conditions, jazz dies.

Leonard tries to trace the effects of jazz; at times he comes up with interesting ideas, such as the correlation of jazz to surrealism, but at times he falls flat. Much of his source material, as far as stories concerning early jazzmen comes, I feel, from the apocrypha of jazz.

There was a wide amount of reading, and I feel listening, put into this work, as is evidenced from the bibliography. Too much reading can often give the wrong impression, and this is one of Leonard's problems. One doesn't trust a ladies journal too far in dealing with the effects of jazz.

A little more accuracy in the information concerning some of the early jazz groups could be desired, but the lack is more than made up in his consideration of the thirties. If the effect of jazz is studied, there should be a continuity up to the present. Mr. Leonard's book leaves off detailed treatment in the late forties and barely mentions the fifties and sixties.

This book is of interest not to the general reader but to someone who is doing special work in jazz and fairly well acquainted with the subject, as well as with academic methods.

How Ford economy won for Tiny Lund at Daytona

The Daytona 500 is one of America's toughest stock car events. It measures the toughness, stability, over-all performance and economy characteristics of the cars that take up its challenge—in a way that compresses years of driving punishment into 500 blazing miles. This year mechanical failures claimed over 50 per cent of the cars that entered. That's why Tiny Lund's victory in a Ford (with four other Fords right behind him) is a remarkable testimony to sheer engineering excellence.

Lund attributed his victory in part to the "missing pit stop." He made one less pit stop for fuel than his competition—proving that Ford economy can pay off in some fairly unlikely situations!

Economy and the winner of the Daytona 500 might sound like odd bedfellows at first. Yet economy is basic in every car we make . . . yes, even the Thunderbird is an economy car in its own way. Here's what we mean . . .

Economy is the measure of service and satisfaction the customer receives in relation to the price he pays for it. It does not mean, however, austerity . . . you have taught us this. Americans want—and we try hard to give them—cars that are comfortable to ride in, fun to drive, and powerful enough to get out of their own way. Not many Americans want to settle for basic transportation. You see this in our sales figures—more than half of our 1963 sales are coming from the top of each model line. We're selling convertibles, hardtops, the jazzy cars . . . the bucket-seat, high-performance, luxury editions are going like hot cakes.

Yet for all the fun that people are demanding in their cars, they still are very conscious of the element of thrift—of avoiding unnecessary expense. This is the kind of economy we build into every car from the compact Falcon to the luxurious Thunderbird.

There's a special economy, for instance, in Ford's freedom from service. Every car and virtually every wagon can travel 36,000 miles before it needs a major chassis lubrication. Other routine service has been reduced, too—because these Fords are simply built better—and of better materials—than ever before.

In its own elegant way, even the Thunderbird gives you economy. It will travel 100,000 miles or 3 years before you have to lubricate the chassis. Thunderbirds have a way of becoming classics—as a look at their remarkably high resale value will quickly tell you. This, too, is economy.

Once, long ago—before the arrival of the Income Tax—a wealthy lady was asked to comment on the solid gold plumbing of her latest villa at Newport. "So thrifty, my dear," said the dowager . . . "it will never, ever rust."

Economy then, is many things to many people. Whatever economy means to you, you're pretty sure to find it in a Ford.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Three Unearned Runs Help Owls Down 'Cats In Fourth Loss In Row

by Roy Baron

Villanova's Wildcats went down to their fourth straight diamond defeat last Saturday, losing a 9-6 decision to Temple. A 9-5 victory over LaSalle on April 8 had brought the Cats to a 6-1 peak record before they went into their slump. The LaSalle contest was followed by loses to Princeton, 6-4; St. Joseph's, 4-3; Penn State, 3-1; and Temple.

Against LaSalle the visiting Wildcats were down 4-2 in the fifth inning. Then with two out Richie Richman singled. Mike Zaia then doubled him home. Mike Kiley followed with a two-run homer to give the 'Cats a 5-4 lead.

The Explorers tied the score in their half of the fifth, but the visitors came back to take the lead for good in the seventh on doubles by Zaia and Kiley and a single by Jack Emery. Two more runs in the ninth iced the Big Five victory for reliever Don Albino.

'Cats Slump

For six innings against Princeton the Mainliners were shut out by Tiger pitcher Anton Schoolwerth. Then, in the seventh, a walk to Kiley, a double to Emery, and a single by Art Mahan Jr. brought the Wildcats to within two runs of Princeton at 4-2.

However, the visiting Tigers got those two back in the eighth. That was enough as Villanova could only get another pair, those coming on a two-run double by Emery in the home half of the eighth. The loss ended starter Bill Smith's victory string at three games.

"Junk Man" Joe Tracey was the St. Joseph's pitcher who held Art Mahan's Wildcats in check. Behind his succession of slow curves the Hawks were able to hold off the Blue and White for a 4-3 victory.

The 'Cats went ahead 3-2 on a triple by Richman and a single by Zaia, but they were not able to hold on. The last Villanova threat ended when Emery was thrown out at the plate while trying to score from second on a single by Mahan.

In the 3-1 loss to Penn State the Wildcats were held to just four hits. The Nittany Lions got victory with a three-run outburst in the sixth inning.

Second Big Five Loss

Temple got off to an early lead in the first inning with three unearned runs. These were scored when the Wildcats committed three errors following a leadoff double by the Owls' Stan Ostaszewski. After this Temple went on to build up a 7-1 lead, the only 'Cats run coming on a homer by Bob Hall.

Mahan's Mainliners staged a comeback attempt in the seventh inning. With two out Jack Lynch and Hall singled. Then Richman clouted one over the right-center field fence for a three-run homer. However, the 'Cats could get no closer as they could only match Temple with single runs in the eighth and ninth innings.

The loss dropped Villanova's Big Five record to 1-2. Their overall record is now 6-5.

Sports Roundup

With bats swinging, dust swirling, and tempers flaring the softball league has wended its merry way to the close of the first half of the season with the final games slated for Friday, April 26. Hostilities will be rekindled on Monday, April 29, as Jim Moran hurls out the first ball, commencing the final half of the season. The playoffs have been scheduled for Thursday, May 16.

Golf Tournament

On Monday, April 29 the annual intramural golf tournament will be held at the Main Line Golf Course in St. Davids. For further information contact Jim Brant, 13 Sheehan or Chuck O'Reilly, 323 Sullivan.

To round out the spring season the Intramural Department has designated May 7 as the day for the annual track meet. More in formation will be forthcoming.

Villanova's lacrosse unit absorbed its third setback of the campaign last Saturday when the Bucknell Bisons eked out a 10-9 victory. The loss evened off the Wildcat's season mark at 3-3.

The Mainliners started off fast when Bill White flipped in the first score of the contest in the initial quarter.

The remainder of the half saw both clubs trade scores. The half ended with Villanova holding a 5-4 advantage.

The third quarter was a big one for Bucknell. In that stanza the Bisons cashed in for four markers while the best VU could do was a single tally by Jim Burke.

A last second rally on the part of Villanova fell short, and Bucknell copped a 10-9 win.

Dave Dunn led VU with three scores.

Next Saturday the Wildcats host Farleigh-Dickinson.

Villanova's "better guys," from radio station WWVU were downed by WIBG's "good guys" last Saturday on dust-swept Austin Field, 23-17, in, believe it or not, softball.

WWVU's starting and losing pitcher Terry Cooney and WIBG's Ray Gilmore knew they had an an old fashioned pitcher's duel on their hands when WIBG jumped to a 9-5 lead after three innings. The score stood at 14-all after eight innings when the "good guys" exploded for nine runs in the ninth.

The game was marred by numerous errors, particularly by the local heroes, on the hard dust bowl known as Austin Field. Although no accurate statistics were kept for Villanova, it was estimated that Cooney gave up no more then ten hits and had them more than matched by his fielders errors.

Only in America could it happen. Only in a country like the United States could the Mets and the Villanova golf team both win their first games on the same day.

Winless in their first four matches the 'Cat linksmen turned back Delaware by a 7-0 count.

Scott Schwartz picked up a 2 up triumph and Bob McMahan and Ben Kenny followed with 6 and 5, and 2 and 1 victories respectively. John Driscoll went 1 up in nineteen holes followed by Pete Cassidy's 3 and 1. Bill Lotze and Steve Milazzo closed things out with 4 and 3 and 2 1 wins.

The team faces a heavy schedule this week, facing Penn, Princeton, LaSalle, and George Washington.

Classes And Athletes

There is a small but, nevertheless vocal movement on the Villanova campus this spring. It is something that is not just beginning; rather a feeling that has been on the Main Line campus for the past several years. Despite rumblings in such faraway places as Arizona and Texas, the Conservative movement is not now in question. Instead, it is the criticize-the-athlete movement

"What, criticize the athletes," you indignantly ask, "after the Liberty Bowl, the indoor track season and the recently completed basketball season?"

Despite the achievements of the Villanova athletes one on occasion hears some disparaging remarks about their scholastic prowess.

So and so's cumulative couldn't match his IQ, so and so won't be coming back next year, so and so is in his third sophomore year or so and so is going to East Dakota A&P next fall. These and many more rumors bounce off the walls of the lounges, dorms and chem labs. These are rumors, idle rumors to be sure, but exasperating just the same.

To TIME Magazine it is the contrary, Villanova is not an implied sports factory. It's students may not be chosen for anybody's cabinet in 1964, but they do not disgrace themselves or their school. The same is true of the athletes in the classroom.

At Villanova there are 123 athletes on full and partial scholarships, some without scholarships at all, participating in football, basketball, track and baseball. Attendance is a good way of picking up a sagging cumulative, yet, a surprising number of students seem to take pride in cutting as many classes as possible.

Although classes missed due to away games are excused, absences due to practices are not. After what seems and feels to be hours of knocking heads, running up and down a retangular shaped floor, shagging endless fly balls or strength-sapping running on a track, it's not easy to study. It's even harder to get up for that CENSORED 8:30 the next day. Nevertheless, 87 A's and 24 B's were distributed while only three athletes received failures.

The Dean's List is a good gradient for measuring academic results which, in this instance, are somewhat surprising. According to the first-semester marks released in the Villanovan in February, 15.7 per cent of the student body (which also includes our heroes) were on the honored scrolls. In comparison, approximately one out of six of the athletes were on these same lists.

Class Breakdown

In breaking down the classes, 80% of all freshmen athletes had at least a 1.50 cumulative average, the minimum set by the University, after their first marking period. Eighty eight per cent of the sophomores had the necessary 1.75 after a year and a half. After two and a half years, 81% of the junior athletes had the required 1.90 while 86% of the seniors had that magic 2.00 to graduate.

Nearly every academic day at Villanova is taken up with at least three hours of intense practice in at least one of Villanova's four major sports and still 74% of the athletes are able to maintain at least a 2.00. To the critics: it sure would be interesting to see the four year Pie Shoppe majors.

VU's Track Team Opens 1963 With Loss To Naval Academy

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's track team opened its 1963 outdoor season on a sour note with an 80-69 loss at the hands of the Naval Academy. This is the first loss in dual meet competition that a Villanova squad has suffered in the past eight years. Ironically, the loss was inflicted by the Middies. The Cats captured eight of nine running events but dropped all but one of the field events.

Tom Sullivan, Pat Traynor and Vic Zwolak swept the mile as Sullivan ran a 4:12.4. Traynor and Zwolak tied for first place in the two-mile run. Dave Hyland finished second.

Sweep in 440

The VU cindermen had a clean sweep in the 440 as Stan Koslowski and Larry Livers pushed Don Webster to a :49.0 performance. Marshall Uzzle captured the 100 yard dash with a :09.9 and finished second in the 220. Webster captured the latter event in 21 seconds.

In the 120 yard high hurdles, Charlie Hammock found a :14.6 good enough to win. He also finished third in the 440 intermediate hurdles and second in the hop-step and jump. Noel Carroll won the 880 with a 1:53.3.

Villanova's soph laden mile relay team composed of Uzzle, Livers, Koslowski and Carroll prepped themselves for the Penn Relays this Saturday with a 3:15.4 in downnig the Middies. In the Queens Iona Relays held last Saturday, a future opponent, Morgan State reeled off a 3:14.2 in winning the mile relay.

Maryland State's quartet, anchored by triple winner Charlie Mays, finished second in the relay. Manhattan and Oregon State will also give the locals a tussle.

Field Events

Other than Hammock's second place in the hop-step and jump, Doug Kerr and Rolando Cruz also placed. Kerr finished second in the javelin and Cruz broke the Academy track record in vaulting 15.6. He also broke his own school record of 15-4.

Parting Fete Slated For Fisher's Pools On Saturday, May 25

The last social function of the senior year will be the senior parting festival which will be given on Saturday May 25 at Fisher's Pools, located on the other side of Norristown.

Tickets for the affair will go on sale on May 13, at five dollars per couple, in the Pie Shoppe, the C&F and Mendel cafeteria. The festival will begin at 2 p.m. with a picnic. All seniors are asked to bring their own lunches and refreshments will be provided by the senior class.

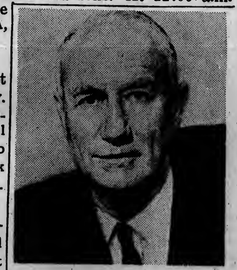
Fisher's Pools is equipped with a baseball field, basketball courts and a swimming pool. For those students who are not acquainted with the location of Fisher's Pools, there will be maps handed out with the tickets.

Enthusiastic participation in this event will mark the closing of the Seniors' story at Villanova in a truly splendid and fitting manner as is worthy of such a class.

Annual Father's Day Events Scheduled For This Saturday

One of the final activities of the members of the Class of 1963 previous to their graduation will take place next Saturday, May 11 in the annual Father's Day festivities.

The Chairman for this year is Art Wolf, who has announced that participation will probably be at peak.



Father's Day Activities will commence at 10:00 a.m. with registration of the fathers and sons. At 11:00 a.m. Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, dean of student activities.

Luncheon Schedule

There will be a luncheon at which time the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, president of Villanova University, will appear as guest speaker. Also scheduled to speak is Mr. Jack Kraft, head coach of the Villanova basketball squad.

Afternoon activities will include the Villanova-Seton Hall baseball game, the track meet between Villanova and Quantico, and lacrosse and rugby games between the Villanova teams and their opponents.

Benediction at 4:30 p.m. will mark the close of the festivities at St. Mary's grotto, outside the seminary, if the weather is fair. Otherwise, the benediction will be held in the St. Thomas of Villanova Chapel.

Sen. Strom Thurmond

Conservative Club To Sponsor Lecture By Strom Thurmond

The Villanova Conservative Club will present Senator Strom Thurmond (Democrat of South Carolina) this Friday, May 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Vasey Hall Auditorium to speak on the "Muzzling of the Military."

Senator Thurmond has spoken out on this controversial topic on the Senate floor seventeen times during the official Senate investigation on this subject.

At this meeting many startling facts on the subject were presented by Senator Thurmond and Senator Bartlett. The Senator will present his views on the situation and what he thinks should be done to correct the problem. Following the speech there will be a question and answer period.

Senator Thurmond is one of the few Senators who has ever been elected on a write-in ballot. He was born in South Carolina and attended Clemson College

Eugene Ruane Director of Public Information, has announced that the rumors concerning a rise in tuition and/or room and board fees are ill-founded.

Mr. Ruane stated, "At the present time the administration of the University has no plans for raising either the present cost of tuition or the present $500 per semester fee for room and board."

Library Rededicated By Board Of Trustees As Falvey Memorial

The naming and rededicating of the University library in honor of the late Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, OSA was held on May 5.

Presiding was Mr. William T. Cooke, chairman, friends of Falvey Memorial Library, who began with a few opening remarks. Mr. Cooke then went on to introduce the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, who gave the invocation.

The welcoming address was given by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, president of the university. Father Klekotka told of Father Falvey's contributions to Villanova, especially in his library work.

Continuing on, Father Klekotka said that Father Falvey saw the library as the future of Villanova, and that this bookroom is a great tribute to him.

In ending, Father Klekotka related that by order of the board of trustees the library is being dedicated the Father Falvey Memorial Library.

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, librarian of the university welcomed the friends of the library and stated that his staff hus the deepest respect for Father Falvey.

The keynote address was given by the Very Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, OSA, president of Merrimack College.

Father McQuade, a dear friend of Father Falvey, opened his discourse by stating, "I feel honored to have this opportunity to participate in this ceremony today."

Joe Tate Handed Ovation In Joint Congress Session

In a joint meeting of the old and new congresses, outgoing President Joseph T. Tate accorded with a standing ovation drew the curtain on the past year with a capsule summary of the activities that have engrossed the Congress.

His comments delved both into the satisfactory and unsatisfactory aspects of his administration. In evaluating the year he stated that "I consider this to be a better than average year for our Student Council, but only that." In further qualifying his evaluation, he noted that "we did not reach fifty per cent of our true potential."

His concluding remarks bade the new Congress officers and members to "utilize the talent that you have." Tate's remarks came after the final reports of all the other outgoing officers.

Also at the previous meeting, elections for the Student Senate were held. Elected from the Class of 1964 were James McErlane, Neal Stoneback, Richard Connors and John Hagerty.

The representatives from the Class of 1965 will be Meg Sullivan and Ernie Abate.

Mike Gill and John Graziano received the nod from the Congress as their received the nod for the Class of 1966. In addition to these, the officers of the Council and the newly elected Presidents of each class will serve on the Senate.

Motions

In addition to the yearly reports submitted at the last meeting, the Congress also passed resolutions dealing with the graduation of seniors and bidding for an NFCCS Secretariat.

The former received passage and sought to seek administra-

Msgr. Tucek Honored At Dinner
'Villanovan'—WWVU Staffs Related

Msgr. James I. Tucek, head of the Rome Bureau of the National Catholic News Service and Director of the English-Speaking Press at the Second Vatican Council, received the eighth annual St. Augustine Award at the Villanovan-WWVU Dinner Dance on Saturday.

The award, presented at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel gathering, is named for the patron saint of printers. The recipient is voted by the members of the University Board of Directors.

Also honored at the banquet were the senior members of the Villanovan and the Radio Station. They received awards from their moderators. Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA and Raymond Wilke, respectively.

The annual gathering also heard the naming of new staffs of both organizations.

Named by Edward Farrell, who will continue as Editor-in-Chief of the Villanovan, were Arthur Molitierno, Managing Editor; and three Associate Editors: Frank Quattrone, Jan Dyroff, and Tom Bruderle.

James Brennan will be News Editor for 1963-64. John Roberts will be in charge of the feature page and Joe McCarthy will head the sports section.

The new Station Manager of WWVU announced the names of the new staff heads. Art Chappell is the new Program Director, John Finnegan takes over the business end of the station, and Bill Madden moves up to Chief Engineer.

After accepting the St. Augustine Award, given annually to the Catholic man who has done the most for journalism, Msgr. Tucek spoke on the Council and its coverage by the various news media.

He said that the press arrangements for the first session were admittedly confusing and, for that reason many of the pronouncements were badly interpreted by reporters. In order to bring about better liason daily news conferences with top Vatican officials will be initiated.

Midshipmen To Be Reviewed At Annual Spring Ceremony

The annual Spring Review and Awards Ceremony will be held on Tuesday, May 14, at 3:30 p.m. on Austin Field.

The battalion of midshipmen will be reviewed by the Very Reverend John A Klekotka, OSA, president of the university and Rear Admiral Denys W. Knoll, Commandant, Surface Fleet Atlantic, and Brigadier General J. S. Reynaud, Commanding General, Supply Activities, Philadelphia Area.

Among the several high ranking offiers on the reviewing stand will be Rear Admiral Norvel G. Ward. Admiral Ward's son, Alexander, is the current drill team commander and will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps in June.

The afternoon's activities will include a demonstration of trick drill presented by the drill team under Midshipman Ward and the presentation of 20 awards to the outstanding NROTC students for the closing academic year.

These awards were donated by national and local business and fraternal organizations.

Faculty members, prominent civilians, and Armed Forces officers will make the presentations.

During the presentation of awards, Rear Admiral Knoll and Captain Boyle, commanding officer of the Villanova NROTC unit will present to the team commander two of the six trophies which the drill team, champions of the Greater Philadelphia area, won in recent completition.

Editor Butler Cites New Mendel Bulletin As Largest In Years

Charles Butler, editor of the Mendel Bulletin, announced that this years issue of the Bulletin will be the longest and most complete publication to be produced since its resumption after World War II .

The purpose of the Bulletin is to stimulate student interest in scientific research and to present the student's work to the world of science.

The Mendel Bulletin is dedicated to Our Mother of Good Council. The booklet is named in honor of Gregor Mendel, the renowned Augustinian geneticist of the nineteenth century.

Thirteen of the fourteen articles in the Bulletin will be in the biology field, while one will deal with chemistry.

The Bulletin will be distributed to all Villanova science majors. The fee for the publication is included in the student's tuition.

Villanova Singers Elect Officers
Quinn And Goldberg New Leaders

by John Sperger
of the Villanova Singers

The Villanova Singers elected officers for the 1963-64 school year at a recent meeting. The elected officers, along with other members of the club appointed for specialized tasks, assure that the administrative chores of the organization are effected.

The elected officers include the following: James Quinn, President; Robert Goldberg, Vice-President; Frank Matricardi, Secretary; Joseph Prestileo, Treasurer; and John Graziano, Student Council Representative.

Rev. Edward C. Doherty, OSA the moderator of the Singers, and the elected officers appointed Michael Ferrara as tour manager with Michael Neuman as assistant tour manager, as well as John Sperger and Daniel Seltzer as publicity directors.

During the past two years, the Singers have experienced a remarkable growth. In addition to performing in the immediate area this year, the group has entertained audiences in Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington D.C., and New York. Because of this increase in the number of prolonged tours the Singers have been making and the resulting increase in paper work, it was decided that there was a need for additional help. Consequently, Robert Muir, Joseph Ptak, and Thomas Westhoff were appointed as secretarial assistants.

Mr. Herbert Fiss, the director of the club for the past six years, will continue in that capacity. Nicholas Salvatore, a Villanova student, will continue to function as accompanist next year.

The Villanova Singers traveled to Washington, D.C. to present a concert at Trinity College on a recent trip. The joint concert was given on the evening of April 6, with the Trinity College Glee Club.

Early that afternoon the group performed for the seminarians at an Augustinian seminary located in Washington. Following the seminary visit, the group toured the nation's capital, taking in such sights as the National Shrine to the Immaculate Conception, the Capitol Building, the Washington Monument, and the White House.

Before the evening concert the Singers enjoyed dinner with the girls of Trinity College. Included in the concert were Crucifixus, Shenandoah, Malaguena, The Gloy Road, and selection by soloists John Ferrazzado and Joseph Prestile. The Spires also performed.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.
Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.
So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?
Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.
How intelligent!

Harvard Professor Freund Featured At Villanova Law Review's Dinner

Paul A. Freund, Loeb University Professor at Harvard, and renowned authority on Constitutional Law and author of On Understanding the Supreme Court and The Supreme Court of the United States was the featured speaker at the eighth annual dinner honoring the editors of the Villanova Law Review. Professor Freund spoke on "The Law and the Future.'

Mr. Thomas F. Caffrey of Lawrence, Massachusetts, the editor-in-chief of Volume 8 of the Villanova Law Review served as toastmaster of this event which was held in Garey Hall on April 27.

In addition to Professor Freund, the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, president of the university, Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, dean of the law School, and Professor William Hall Painter, faculty advisor to the Law Review spoke briefly in appreciation of the work of the Board of Editors.

The officers of the current Board of Editors in addition to Mr. Caffrey are Thomas A. Hogan of Edgewater, New Jersey, Case Editor; Matthew F. McHugh of New York, Comment Editor; Ned W. Manashil of Elkins Park, Articles and Book Reviews Editor; William F. Coyle of Philadelphia, Managing Editor.

At the dinner the newly elected Board of Editors for the Law Review for the scholastic year 1963-1964 were presented. The selections were made from among the present second year members of the Law Review by the outgoing Board of Editors.

Mr. C. Clark Hodgson, Jr. has been named the new Editor-in-Chief. He is a native of Philadelphia and received his undergraduate degree from the College of the Holy Cross.

Tucker, New Editor Replaces Ruggerio For '64 Academic Year

Joe Ruggerio, 1963 Belle Air editor-in-chief, has announced, in a release to the Villanovan, the appointments for the 1964 academic year. Richard Tucker, a junior Political Science major in the Arts program, will succeed Joe Ruggerio as the 1964 editor-in-chief.

The other appointments are: Bob Cardone, assistant editor; Don Nikolaus, business manager; Chuck Stockinger and Patricia Berry, Senior Class co-editors. Also announced were: Rich Carona, sports editor; and Bob Williams, divisions editor.

Yearbooks will be distributed on May 14-16 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, in the football training room. The fee for the Belle Air is included in the Activities fee charged by Villanova University.

South African U.N. Leader Speaks Before VPU Tomorrow

A South African diplomat will defend his country against United Nations interference in a talk before the Political Union today (at 8:30 p.m. in the Chemistry Lecture Hall, Mendel Hall). Hugo H. H. Biermann, Information Advisor to the South African UN Delegation, will be the first speaker on the resolution before the Union: "Resolved, that this House deplores United Nations' interference in the affairs of South Africa."

A World War II veteran, Mr. Biermann worked on English language newspapers before starting work with the information services of the South African government in 1950.

His wartime service took him to Africa, the Middle East, and Italy, where his unit was attached to the American Fifth Army.

Mr. Biermann's ancestors have lived in South Africa for more than 300 years.

Philadelphia's NFCCS Elects VU's McCarthy As Regional Leader

Joseph A. McCarthy, a junior Arts major at Villanova University, was recently elected to the 1963-64 Presidency of the Philaphia Region of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

His election was one of three won by Villanova students. Bob Dean, a freshman NROTC Arts student was elected to the position of Vice President for National Affairs. Don Nickolaus, a junior economics major, will succeed to the office of treasurer in the region.

Opposition

McCarthy will succeed Frank Brennen of LaSalle College as president. During the previous year, he had served the region as its parliamentarian.

The election was held at a regional meeting at Immaculata College. McCarthy was opposed by Bob Bella of LaSalle, who was later elected as Vice President for Regional Affairs.

The election McCarthy will constitute the second time within three years that a Villanovan has been elected to the same office. Two years ago John Simone held the position. He is presently the National President for the Federation.

Comment

Among the duties of the new executive board is proper representation at the national congress in Minneapolis during the last two weeks in August. McCarthy commented: "The region will concentrate on two primary facets, financial solvency and the implementation of a speaker program for each college in the region."

There are seven colleges from the Philadelphia area federation. Plans are now underway for the participation of two or three

Wolf Engineer Of Education

Perusing the past annals of the PORTRETTE, one may notice that all its victims, if you will, have been rather vital cogs in the wheels of campus activities.

Many of these fine young gentlemen derive their motivation from pure pleasure and patriotism to the old alma mater, while others pursue purely pragmatic purposes.

But upon closer scrutiny, one discovers one student who, since his freshman year, has actually developed and rounded himself by the most carefully-laid design since the days the Allies took Normandy.

That noble Villanovan is senior Art Wolf, a mechanical engineering major, who is Murray Hill, New Jersey's, most prominent junior citizen.

Currently here on a Scott Paper Company scholarship, Art is acting as co-chairman of the forthcoming Senior Fathers' Day.

Art has been treating his education like a precious pearl in a sea of darkness, and has chosen his extra-scholastic interests so carefully as to enable himself to concentrate on the many facets of his personality and education.

As a member of the Sanctuary Society for four years—he is this year's president—Art has fulfilled his voluntary religious obligations to Villanova and himself. To develop his speaking abilities, he did a weekly broadcast for three years behind the mikes at radio WWVU.

In line with the planning, organization, and execution of class activities, Art has exhibited leadership through his participation on the Junior and Senior Steering Committees of the Class of 1963. Evidence: his work on the committee which handled the successful Senior Dinner Dance contributed to his being named co-chairman of Fathers' Day.

Earlier this semester, as patron's co-chairman of the Inter-collegiate Jazz Festival, Wolf helped secure the largest number of patrons the Festival has gotten since its introduction to the campus three years ago.

Combining the more practical aspects of his education with the political, Art has been active as the Student Council representative for the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. A member of Tau Beta Pi, the national honorary engineering fratenity, he serves also as vice-president of Pi Tau Sigma, national mechanical engineering fraternity.

His 3.08 cumulative average through seven semesters is certainly nothing to scoff at, nor is his selection to the national Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges. He was also one of Villanova's prime nominees for Catholic Youth of the Year.

Upon graduation from Villanova, Art will carry this aspect of his education to his logical conclusion with the IBM Corporation in Newark, New Jersey.

Not one to neglect the physical side of his education, he has also participated in the various fiercely competitive intramural sports for the past four years.

So it becomes readily evident that Art Wolf will have left no small portion of himself and his variegated education behind when he departs from Villanova. A member of another prominent campus organization to which he now alludes, Art says:

"Blue Key allows me the the opportunity to extend the name, benefits, and reputation of the University to the general public, in return for all it has taught in my religious, academic, and social education."

VU Fights Fire At Convent; Rebuilding Drive Underway

Approximately 120 Villanovans courageously aided the Sisters of the Holy Rosary in moving thousands of dollars worth of furniture from a blaze which ravaged the Holy Rosary Convent on Ashwood Road, near the campus.

Several University employees, among them Captain Murphy, have begun a fund raising campaign by which they hope to furnish the sisters with enough financial assistance "to help them get started again . . ."

The April 25 fire, apparently caused by a faulty chimney system, caused an estimated 100 thousand dollars damage to the three-story building.

Reporters covering the blaze for WWVU aired a request, shortly after the fire broke out, for students to help at the fire grounds.

The overwhelming response produced a vigorous array of students and priests who aided the five fire companies in saving the remnants of the structure and its furnishings.

Later another corps of Villanovans was organized to guard the gutted remains against possible looting during the night.

Jim Tate, president of the Senior Class, arrived on the scene early in the afternoon and was able to view and aid in the entire proceedings. His comment after the fire: "The next time someone tells me 'those guys at Villanova are good for nothing' . . . I'll punch him in the mouth."

Barry Thornton Named New Editor Of Lynx Spring Copy On Sale

Barry Thornton, a junior social science major, will succeed Frank Murphy as editor of the Lynx next year. Thornton, a native of Allentown, Pa., has been active in the Lynx for the past two years, serving as poetry editor this year.

The spring edition of the Lynx, which went on sale on Monday, includes two interviews. The first is with Franco-Russian authoress, Olga Andreye Carlisle, who has just published Voices in the Snow with Random House.

The other interview features Emlyn Williams, director, actor, and playwright who is currently starring in the role of St. Thomas More in the Broadway production, A Man For All Seasons.

Editor Frank Murphy reported that he was pleased with the great amount of material submitted. Although this is the largest Lynx ever published, it represents less than one-sixth of the material submitted.

Commenting on the Lynx and its future, Thornton said: "The last few issues have witnessed a radical change in both editorial and layout policy — this 'new look' will continue.

"We hope that with cooperation on the part of the administration and the student body, we will be able to produce editions that will not only be informative and entertaining but representative of Villanova.

"Compared with other college magazines, the Lynx measures up very favorably and we hope it will continue to do so."

Unemployment — A Problem

by Frank Sauers

Failure to recognize the trend of automation and its long-run impact on our economic and social structure is stifling a solution to the problem of persistent unemployment in this country.

President Kennedy, commenting on the recent publication of the "Manpower Report of the President" to Congress, as required by the Manpower Development and Training Act of 1962, declared that "unemployment is our number one economic problem."

Among other things the report indicated that, if in the next five years, employment is provided at the pace of the last five years, "by 1967 unemployment will come to over five and a half million, or more than seven percent of the 1967 labor force."

Not Simple

The problem of unemployment is not a simple one. Nevertheless, pardon the simple explanation. The basic reason for employment — the necessity of man to work—arises from the fundamental principle of supply and demand.

Individual men work to produce things that will be needed by other men, and in return is able to procure the various things produced by many other men, that he needs. As long as there is a balance between the volume produced and the demand for those things produced — stability is inevitable.

But when the balance is distorted, when fewer and fewer men are necessary to provide for the needs of the many, the problem arises of how to compensate.

Thing of Past

Automation, the replacing of men by machines, threatens to distort this balance to inconceivable proportions. There looms in the not so distant future a world where manual labor will be a thing of the past, a world of complete and unfettered leisure.

The ancient Greek aristocrats came closest to achieving such a civilization, one which man is free to think, reflect, speculate, and play. But their was a freedom, a leisure, based on the subjugation of other men.

If present trends continue we can look forward to a time when man's material goods will be supplied "gratis" — the necessity of manual labor virtually non-existant. It will be a world of machines.

And Machines

Machines will plant and gather the harvest (or synthesize it). Machines will process the raw materials into finished goods, then distribute them to the population.

Machines will be produced by machines. Machines will be controlled by machines. A central machine — a "supreme machine" so to speak — will control all other machines.

The insertion of one IBM card each year might be the only act necessary to control the entire means of production and distribution. Perhaps one man, once a year, would be called upon to labor manually. Or — perhaps we could use a machine.

Endless Possibilities

But, back from abstraction. The possibilities are endless, the trends should be obvious. The fact that the number of jobs in this country is continually shrinking in proportion to the population is unquestionable.

The reduction in the average number of working hours per individual, the improvement in working condition and benefits, and the increased leisure gained by the average worker in the past fifty years is surprising. As automation expands so will the rate of the unemployed.

Hollow Arguments

Those who argue against automation will probably be as successful as those who argued against the search for a new world, against giving the serfs and slaves their freedom, and against breaking away from the atmosphere of the earth and exploring outer space.

Regardless of its relative merits, automation is an accomplished fact and is growing. The challenge of course is to make

A Vital Need

If one should wish to evaluate the political activity on this campus (as the Harvard University Laboratory of Social Relations is doing), he wouldn't have to spend too much time or energy on the problem. The attitude of the student body to political activity is as apathetic as a Republican voter in the Philadelphia primary.

Student attendance at the functions of the three political organizations on this campus has been virtually nil (with the possible exception of the Conservative Club). The Intercollegiate Conference on Government, which is a statewide organization, can only claim a membership of thirty in a school of over four thousand.

As far as political papers and magazines go, they just don't. The only such entity is the Conservative Club's LIBERTAS which neither represents the views of the student body nor presents an accurate and unwarped survey of political thought.

Needless to say, students in a university such as this do not have to be forced to know what is going on around them, politically speaking. It is also self-evident that these students should want to express their thoughts to someone else besides the bare walls of the West Lounge.

Someone once said, "what this country needs is a good five cent cigar," and shortly thereafter someone did just that. What this campus needs is a good political paper.

Semester Changes

Recently, there appeared before the Student Council a motion seeking the realignment of the semesters.

In short, the resolution in its implementation would begin the fall semester soon after Labor Day and end just previous to Christmas. The second semester would then begin sometime after the New Year and end about the third week in May.

After passage by the Student Council, the motion was submitted to the Student Administration Committee. There it received a silent approbation, not for the coming year but for the year after.

Accordingly rumors have circulated among members of the student body. And, not only has the comment been favorable but many also would like the alignment to begin next fall.

Unfortunately the latter hope is impossible at the present time due to many technical difficulties. But it would not be too much to hope that the administration would seriously consider effecting the change as soon as possible.

Letter To The Editor

"Last month a publication of interesting knowledge was released upon the students of Villanova." So wrote Mr. Robert Hincken in a letter to the editor, April 10, 1963. Little does Mr. Hincken realize that this "magnanimous piece of literature" is distributed throughout the United States, even to the shores of Europe. For this reason, some of his trite criticisms cannot pass unchallenged.

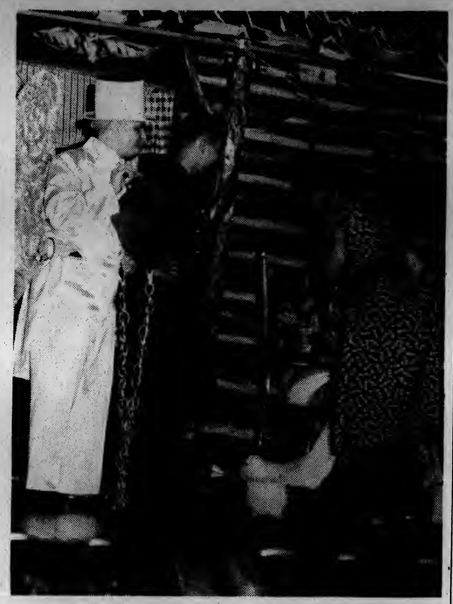
The conservative students who write for Libertas are some of America's "angry young men" who seem to be angry at a system which does too much for the individual and does not allow him to do enough for himself. Since they are young, they seek the advice of older, more authoritative, men. Most of Mr. Hincken's criticisms were not against anything formulated by the student writers.

Mr. Hincken—a mere neophyte—attempted to challenge some of the most respected economists and political analysts in America today; yet, he issued the unfound statement that these men are a brood of featherbrains." An apology on his part would not be out of place.

The men which he has so unjustly attacked are the following:

Henry Hazlitt, author of a number of books, as Economics in One Lesson, has been on the staffs of such publications as "The New York Times," "The Wall Street Journal," "Newsweek," and "The New York Evening Post." He was literary editor of "The New York Sun" and "The Nation," and editor of "The American Mercury."

W. H. Chamberlin, author of a number of economic and political books, as The Evolution of a Conservative, is a contributor to "The Wall Street Journal" and many nationally known magaizines as "Modern Age."



Raymond L. Riccio is a graduate of Providence College in Rhode Island. His essay, "My True Security," won him top honors in the Blackstone Valley finals of the college scholarship essary and oratory contest of the Pawtucket Junior Chamber of Commerce.

William H. Peterson, presently associate professor of economics at New York University, is the author of the Great Farm Problem and weekly contributor to the "Wall Street Journal;" he has also contributed to "Harvard Business Review," "Business Horizons," National Review," and the "Labor Law Journal."

The article entitled "I am a Sick American" was a letter sent by a resident of San Francisco to Mr. Paul A. Terry, Director of Education of the Copely Newspapers.

The 'word' and not the man makes for the truth; it is indeed an honor for Villanova to have the views of these men incorporated into Libertas. Mr. Hincken, like most men who criticize the conservative view, stands in the brightness of the sun of truth and asks for a flashlight to enlighten his way.

T 'n' T Successful

Revision Helpful In 'Jessica James'

by Art Molitierno

The farce opens with Jessica (Barry Thornton) returning to the mountains with a letter from her deceased father (Ed Jaworowski). Pa's an old corn squeezer and bank robber by trade, and relies on Jessica to find his murderer and the money he had hidden for the education of his mountain people.

Of course, no one can see Pa except his duaghter Jessica, who has his 'spirit.' This does necessitate some problems, as Jessica (Barry Thornton) tries to explain her sanity with the song 'Nothing the Matter With

While things are getting pretty balled-up mountain style, Pa's angel friend Wesley (Ken Resinski), who has an affinity for mountain aqueezings, devises some incoherent plan whereby the money and murderer will be found.

Well, it all works out for the best in the end; Jessica gets her man, Pa's man and the money. And as we bid farewell to the mountains, Pa is rising to the heavenly choir, and some enormous ballerinas are prancing around the stage like a herd of bull elephants—hairy legs and all.

With a production such as Tn'T's Jessica James a reviewer runs the double risk—he may become too critical of an extremely comical production, or he may in turn be harassed by such digruntled dancers as Bob Merenda, Emmett Michaels. Al Atkinson, etc.

While the chorous lines can not be critized for obvious reasons (they served as the belly-wrenching and largest comic effect of the entire show), the role of Jessica and certain portions of the show can be justly critized.

The musical score by Bob Whelan was delightful and with a little more 'umph' on the part of the chorus could have been a much greater asset to the show. On the other hand, there were the fine performances of Al LaMastra (Ma), Joseph Ruggiero (Pinky), and Ed Jaworowski (Pa.)

Al LaMastra proved to be the finest Ma Villanova has seen on stage in a long time. She proved that those there mountain folk can also twist. Ed Jaworowski and Joe Ruggiero did a fine job on 'Gates Ajar' 'and 'A Million Stars' respectively.

Jessica's role, however, never realized its potential comic effect. After the main enterance, sun glasses 'a kimbo' the character portrayal by Barry Thornton falls flat and uncomically uninteresting.

The supporting characters of Granny (Roger Sheehy), Fungus (Bob Fratarolli), and Flotida (Bob Spellmeyer) and her murderous beau Zeke (Jim Harwood) did much to bolster up the comic scenes.

After making some major changes over the production as it originally opened on Thursday night, 'Jessica James' showed an almost equal improvement by Sunday night.

The May 15 Edition Of The Villanovan Will Be The Last This Semester!

Nazi Facade Pierced As Reich Relives

by George Welch

It was said that the Third Reich would last for a thousand years; it died in 1945; but, for a few hours each weekend from April 26 to May 12, the human heart which beat beneath the steel plate of the Panzer is recalled in the Villanova Graduate Theater's production of Bertolt Brecht's "The Private Life of The Master Race."

Brecht penetrates behind the romantic facade of the Nazi dream, and presents fifteen episodes which illustrate the confusion and misery that were produced when mere mortals aspired to the status of 'The Master Race'. Each episode poignantly presents a different aspect of German society in this infamous epoch.

Each episode is a miniature drama, some short like the sparks struck by steel on stone, others long and lingering like the slow wasting of decay. Humor and pathos are laid side by side, and then overlaid with the sound of singing, the sign of the swastika, and the distant rumbling of the man-devouring Panzer.

Love and Duty

If it were that this play achieved only an expose of society, a denunciation of the Nazi era, it would demand little attention, but it is more, it is a controlled representation of the unrequited human heart, caught between love and duty.

For how long? It doesn't matter, but for a certain space of time, Carol Schmenkel made the audience hold its breath with her portrayal of fear and love in the personal drama of a Jewish wife.

The Nazi reign was not evil in itself, but it was evil in what it did to Men. It marked them, and drove a blade of fear between them; separating husband and wife; and even invading the home, making a father fear his own son.

Suspicion

With frightening clarity Wendy Somerfield, Ed McCroire, Bill Byrne, and Mary Dee McLaughlin act out a drama of suspicion, while the portrait of Hitler, bedecked in blood-red roses, looms on, unimpassioned unaffected, as a father turns against his son, believing that he is an informer. The Panzer casts its shadow on the scorched earth, and fear casts its shadow on the withered heart.

However, not all of the German people tremble on hearing the pipes' Wagnerian tune. Alan Willig and Mary Dee McLaughlin as the farmer and his wife, represent the defiant ones, people who, like Antaeus, draw their strength from the Earth. "When my sow is hungry, politics will not feed her," shouts the farmer. In the Winter of war the Panzer will gouge a furrow for Death, but, come a Spring of peace, the farmer will again plan and replenish Life.

Factors and Scenes

There are two factors in the play which serve to link the fifteen scenes; the first, the same actor or actress may play several characters, in different scenes; and second, the presence of a German officer, played by William Flynn, who announces the scene changes, oversees the action, and leads the players on and off the stage.

The continuity of action, however, is tenuous, and one cannot help thinking that the theme may have suffered in the seeming irrelevance of one scene to another.

As the play is presently arranged there is a mix between scenes of serious nature and scenes of comic relief. This structure gives variety to Brecht's attack on Nazism, and the humor of the vignettes called, "The Working Man on the Air," "The Physicists," "In Search of Justice," and "The Bakers" ease the tension developed in other scenes, entertaining the audience, and preparing them for the next plunge into pathos.

Alan Willig and Jack Gilhooley play two physicists who have surreptitiously smuggled some 'typical Jewish sophistry', Einstein's Theory of Relativity, into Germany. Frank Thornton interviews the 'happy and prosperous' workers in a state factory, who enjoy the benefits of lower wages, cleaner restroons with fewer facilities, and potted plants in the lounge.

There are two scenes that seem to represent the spirit and theme of the play; the irony of "In Search of Justice"; and the poignant poetic pathos of "Woman's Song."

Michael Tanney as a judge in 'In Search of Justice" finds that it is hard to be 'Solomon' when justice is equated with patriotic duty, and the interest of the government—" Whatever's useful to the German people is just." The judge's powers of reason fail him as he totters and stammers through the chaotic labyrinth of political interest.

He fears not only for his career, but also for his family. His life is balanced on the scales of a corrupt Justice. The agony of his plight is both humorous and pathetic, and Michael Tanney plays it beautifully. In desperation the judge can only scream," "At least I must know what they require!"

Finally, the poetic statement given by Chris Assini hung over the audience like keening. Her eyes were sunk deep in shadow, her cheeks, chin, and brow bathed in a light which fixed the features in a mien of despair, augury of the coming war.

If there had been no other scenes in the play, these two would have sufficed. "The Private Life of The Master Race" is a search for justice and a song, beautifully acted throughout.

Piano Trio - 'The Telephone' End Chamber Concert Series

by Mat Roche

The Villanova Piano Trio and the opera "The Telephone" by Gian Carlo Menotti were featured on Sunday, April 21 and May 5, respectively My reaction magfique.

Comprising the Villanova Piano Trio were Joan Dolgonos, pions ; Russel Smith, cello; and William Harautaunian, violin. The first-half program included "Trio #4 in B Flat Major" by Beethoven and "Trio #1 in G Major" by Mozart.

It was unusual to open the program with Beethoven, but it shocked the listener into never ceasing, wide-awake attention. During the first number the strings could have kept the spotlight to themselves, but by the unorthodox raising of the piano's sounding board the full keyboard tones were brought to the fore to blend smoothly and pleasantly with the strings. In the second number the cellist did more than just keep the time signature; he provided the needed bass depth which the high-pitched violin couldn't give, and which the piano didn't give.

Brahms Piece

After the intermission the trio combined to play "Trio #3 in C Major" by Brahms. This flamboyant piece seemed to be laced with a faint gypsy influence. The violin played the treble part nicely, excelling in the third movement, scherzo. It could easily have become too soft and overwhelmed by the piano, but that was prevented by the piano's lowered sounding board.

The interpretation of this difficult selection, complete with various crescendos and decrescendos showed the pianist's natural talent and training to advantage. The instruments echoed the recurring dominant theme back and forth and finally joined gether in a resounding chorus of the theme.

Joan Dolgonos, Patricia Howett, and John Wiseman were Villanova's guest for the fifth and last chamber music concert of the 1962-63 season. Miss Dolgonos was the featured soloist for the first half of the program playing "Schumann Symphonic Etudes" by Robert Schumann. Joan's superb interpretation of the composer's romanticism relied on her forceful, dynamic decisive, musical viewpoint, while the second movement, "eleven variations," showed her perfection of timing.

After the intermission an opera buffa, "The Telephone", by Gian Carlo Menotti was sung by Patricia Howett, Coloratura soprano, and John Wiseman, baritone, while. Joan Dolgonos accompanied the pair on the piano.

The plot of the one-act light opera concerns the perplexities of life frustrated and dominated by Alexander Graham Bells invention. John Wiseman played an impatient suitor, Ben, who competed with the telephone for the attentions of Lucy, as played by Patricia Howett, The situation is solved by Ben's marriage proposal to Lucy over the telephone.

Lucy's part was sung very well by Miss Howett who showed the realistic animation and acting qualities so useful for her part. Mr. Wiseman interpreted the male role with ease and fortitudes stablizing the impatient suitar. They were almost believable as a romantic couple, but their closing telephone duet was sensational and gave the listener a hint of their capabilities.

The performers' experience is impressive since their credits speak for themselves. Miss Dolgonos has appeared at the Academy of Music in the Junior Concert Series, and has performed at the Robin Hood Dell. She has been the guest on the television program Portraits In Music numerous times, and currently is a studen of Rudoph Serkin.

Miss Howett, soloist at Old Christ Church, has appeared for two summers in Melody Top, a musical comedy playing in Chicago. She also has sung with the Central City Opera Company, Colorado.

Mr. Wiseman, a graduate of Baylor University, has participated in the Marlboro Music Festival, Vermont, and was a finalist in the 1962 Philadelphia Orchestra Contest for singers. He has also sung for the Young Musicians Musical. All three are students at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia.

My criticsm is of the people who knew about the concert but were too busy in Card games, etc., to care enough to listen to talented musical performers.

This season Villanova listened to the strains of the Suzuki Sring Quartet, the Philadelphia Brass Quintet, the Miro Woodwind, Quintet, the Villanova Piano Trio, and last Sunday, "The Telephone'" by Menotti.

Criticism

In summary, the listening was enjoyable, interesting; the instruments, inspired; the timing, precise; the balance, accurate; and the attendance sparse.

Next year we can expect the Harvard—Radcliffe Music Clubs, and the Curtis Symphonic Orchestra, among other Villanova musical treats.

BOOK REVIEWS

Civil Justice and the Jury
Prentice Hall

As a result of the adverse criticism of the civil jury in America, the International Academy of Trial Lawyers requested Professor Charles W. Joiner of the University of Michigan Law School to write a book geared to the average American concerning the civil jury. To say that Professor Joiner has performed this task well would be a gross understatement.

Advancing from the basic premise that the jury method of dispute resolution is superior to the trial by judge alone, Professor Joiner effectively argues for the retention of the jury not only because its members lack the professional prejudices of a judge, but also because jurors deliberate more thoroughly than most jurists. In addition, the jury system provides the average citizen an opportunity to participate in the workings of his government.

One of the many arguments against the jury system which Professor Joiner disproves concerns the problem of court congestion. While many assert that much time is needlessly expended in selecting and instructing juries, the author states that once a jury is impaneled, a trial usually continues to its completion.

In a trial without a jury, however, a judge may discontinue the proceedings frequently, thereby losing the full focus of the case as well as adding to the court congestion.

Anyone who is genuinely interested in the American jury system will discover this book to be worthwhile, and even the untutored layman will find it to be quite readable.

Primitive Art: Its Tradition and Styles — Oxford Press

Paul Wingert, one of the world's foremost authorities on primitive art, presents in his book, Primitive Art; Its, Tradition and Styles, a clear and factual representation of the primitive artist and the pressures and traditions that surround him.

A point that is well made at the outset of the book is the distinction between someone painting in a primitive style and that of a primitive artist, that is, an artist in a culture that is lower on the evolutionary scale than the one we live in today.

Right Focus

This automatically cuts off consideration of some of the contemporary modern western artists, and places the focus of attention where it belongs by discussion of the work that such cultures as Africa, Oceania, and the American Indian, have produced.

It developes that a good deal of the artwork connected with these cultures evolves either from a practical need, such as a carved stool, or a religious or sacrificial use, such as ceremonial masks. This practical use was almost always connected with an aesthetic need that gave pleasure, both to the user and the artisan.

Force Point

To bring out more forcefully the points he is making, Mr. Wingert has profusely sprinkled the book with photographs of various examples of the individual art types. These photos graphically illustrate the skill and craftsmanship of the primitive artist as well as the author's point. Standing by themselves, the illustrations give a note of added beauty to the work.
